CLIFF HOUSE GONE.

LANDMARK BURNED.

Famous Cliff House Razed By Fire.

San Francisco's Historic Structure Now Black Heap of Ruins.

City of Sorrows Loses World-famed Resort, Which Was Closed for Repairs.

Well-Known Building Part of Sutro Estate, Worth Fifty Thousand.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 7.—The famous Cliff House of this city, San Francisco's first attraction for tourists, was burned to the ground this evening.

The Cliff House.

Fire broke out in the building about 4:45 o'clock, and an hour later a blackened heap of ruins was all that remained of the historic structure.

The house was built of wood, and, fanned by the ocean breeze, the flames made such headway before the nearest fire company arrived that it was soon seen that the place was doomed, and more attention was paid to saving adjoining property than to the burning building.

The Cliff House had been closed for some time, as the new lessee, John Tait, was remodelling the interior.

Workmen were about the place until noon and then departed for the day. How the fire started is a mystery.

This was the second Cliff House to be destroyed by fire.

The building which was burned today was erected about twenty years ago by Adolph Sutro. It was owned by the Sutro estate, and was valued at $50,000.

Tait estimates his loss at $50,000, on which there is $35,000 insurance.

WELL-KNOWN RESORT.

The Cliff House was ranked as one of the best-known resorts of America.

Located on a rocky promontory, beyond the Golden Gate, directly above the lashing waves of the Pacific Ocean, and affording a close view of the seals disporting on the rocks, near shore, it was a strong attraction for visitors, and from its broad porches hundreds of thousands of people obtained their first view of the mighty waters.

At the time of the earthquake in San Francisco, the report was erroneously sent out broadcast that the Cliff House had tumbled into the ocean; but the building remained intact through the big temblor and fire.

It was one of the famous landmarks of San Francisco, and contained a valuable and world-wide collection of curios and scientific exhibits from many nations.

The Sutro Baths, near by, were not damaged.

WANTS BOYCOTT RAISED.

Cincinnati Concern Sues San Francisco Labor Union for Heavy Damages.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] To raise a boycott on its goods and for damages incurred in the boycott the John Douglass Company of Cincinnati today filed action in the United States District Court against the Journeymen Plumbers, Gas and Steamfitters' Union of San Francisco. W. E. O'Connell, president, and other officers are made defendants.

The Douglass company asks $25,000 damages, a permanent injunction against the union compelling it to raise the boycott and a temporary restraining order.

The Douglass company manufactures patent water closets. Because it is alleged it sold its wares to Lamping Bros. of Cincinnati, who are rated by the union as an unfair concern, a boycott on its goods was effected in San Francisco. The Lampings are said by the local union to employ non-union labor.

Affidavits of many architects and contractors in San Francisco are attached to the papers in the suit, which allege that the defendants have refused to allow members of the union to work on buildings in which the Douglass goods are used. This, the plaintiff says, is ruining its business. Before the placing of the boycott the plaintiff alleges it was doing business amounting to $10,000 a month here, which has practically ceased since the boycott. It says the boycott is an unlawful conspiracy. It asks that the boycott be removed and that members of the local union be allowed to use its wares without being subjected to fines and expulsion by the defendants.

AIRSHIP TO TRAVEL FAST.

Milwaukee Man Thinks He Has One That Will Go Like a Bullet.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There will be shown at the opening of the Wisconsin State fair next week an airship now being completed in a local machine shop by Dr. Rudolph Silverston of this city.

With this ship, Dr. Silverston says he will be able to navigate the air with the speed of a rifle bullet, and expects to have no trouble making a trip to Europe in a few hours.

The propeller of the new airship is said to be eight feet in diameter, constructed of a new metal, exceedingly light and strong.

A Milwaukee capitalist is financing the project, and many thousands of dollars have been used in constructing the ship.

PRESIDENT'S TOOTH RING.

Executive's Molar Set With Gems and Now for Sale in Curiosity Shop.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Any trust magnate desiring to have one of the teeth of the trust buster who bit him is now presented with the opportunity of a lifetime. Daintily set in a woman's gold ring, studded by two pure white diamonds, is one of the molars of President Theodore Roosevelt, and the relic is for sale at the curiosity shop of Robert Jordan, in Lexington avenue.

Mrs. Lulu B. Glover, an eccentric old lady, who lived at No. 2098 Lexington avenue, adored the President. She also loved cats, and these facts were known to all of her friends. She had cats by the dozens.

Not knowing what else to do with the molar, the President presented it to Mrs. Glover. She had it set for a ring, and had the two little diamonds inserted in it. Then she passed quietly away one night in her apartments. Her will proved to be a remarkable document, leaving all of her possessions to the President. He ordered the property sold and the proceeds given to charity. Mr. Jordan got the ring at the auction sale.

Negro-wife Hunter Forced to Leave.

Denver Man Who Advertised for Coal Black Bride Makes Getaway.

Mob Who Visited His Room at Night Advised Him to Quit the City.

Friends Declare He Is Moral, But Admit That He Is "Eccentric."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

COLORADO SPRINGS (Colo.) Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Rescued by a woman from the hands of a mob, who threatened rough treatment, at an early hour this morning, George T. Wells, the Bible student and sociologist, whose advertisements for a negro wife startled the community today, took the advice of those who threatened him, and left for parts unknown.

Wells was aroused from his sleep early this morning by a mob of men who gathered at his rooming-house at No. 207 East Huerfano street, and, after forcing an entrance, ordered him to leave town.

Mrs. Flora Hoag, his landlady, appeared on the scene, and pleaded with the mob leaders to disperse. The leaders finally agreed to go on condition that Wells promise to leave town, and, after much parleying, left the place.

Wells had already been ordered by his landlady to leave her house, and would have done so today, regardless of the visit of the mob.

He talked with some of his friends this afternoon, and, on their advice, decided it were best to get out of Denver. He took a late afternoon train west.

Wells's friends say he is a man of strict morality and high sense of duty, but holds peculiar views on physiolo— and sociology. His wish for a negro wife is in-[illegible]

Wells, who is a deep student of the Bible, declares that Adam was a red and not a white man, and gives his authority for making his assertions. He says:

"I am entirely sincere in my wish for a black wife, as I believe that I could make a woman of that color happier than one of my own. Furthermore, I would be happier myself. I wish to marry and be happy and I also wish to have children and healthy ones. I believe that if I marry a colored woman as dark as possible and of a calm, pleasant temperament, the children of such a union would be mostly strong and healthy. Those who doubt this should read Luther Burbank's 'The Training of the Human Plant.' He arrives at the same conclusion that I do.

"The human race has, as a whole, declined in strength and vigor, and has degenerated more and more the last few centuries. The reason for this is that the members of each race have been marrying among themselves, and, since no fresh blood has been brought into each race, they have lost their primal vigor. Every one knows that the reason why the Americans are such hardy people is the great amount of immigration we have. Does that not prove that when new blood is introduced into a race the people as a whole are benefited by it?"

FREAKS OF FATE.

FAMED BEAUTY NOW A WRECK.

MRS. AUREL BATONYI SIGNS SEPARATION PLEDGE.

Noted Whip Leaves Her to Save Family from Disinheritance—Aged Invalid Forces Obedience—Wife Deeply in Love With Husband. Strange Tale of Sacrifice.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEWPORT (R. I.) Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It has been learned that Mrs. Aurel Batonyi has parted from her husband, the former professional whip.

Mrs. Batonyi, who was once Mrs. Burke Roche, wife of the son of an Irish peer, and before that, Miss Frances Work, acknowledged in her girlhood to be the most beautiful debutante of New York society, is a physical wreck. Suffering and worry have left hardly a trace of her former beauty.

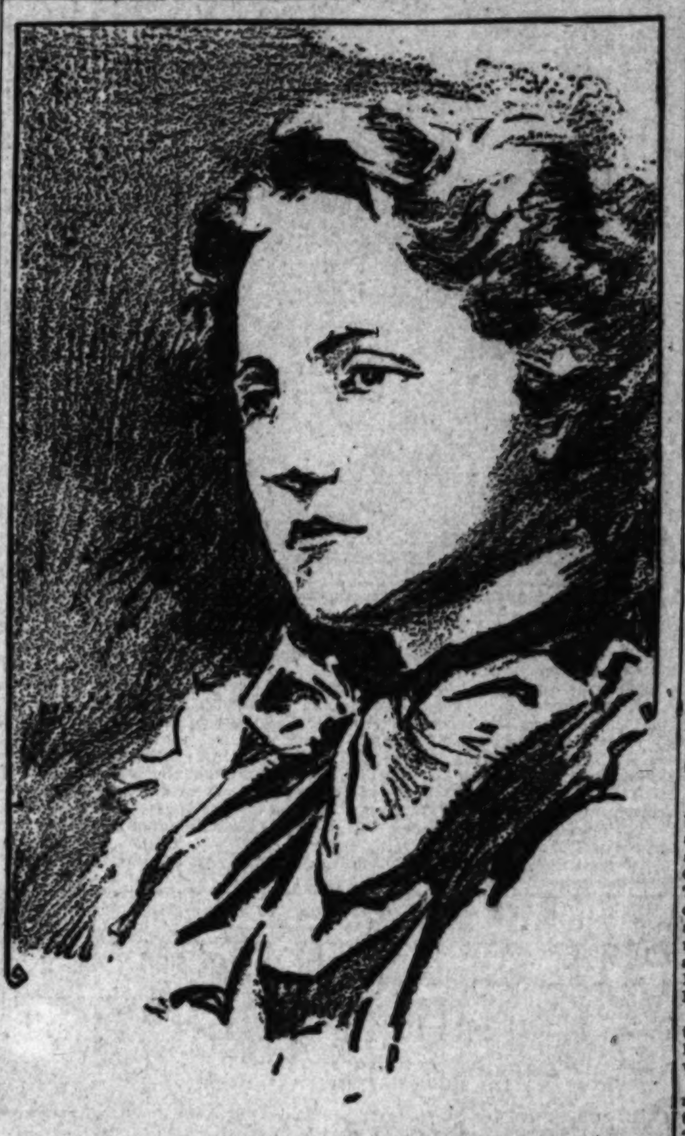
Tomorrow night she will go to New York to meet her aged father, Frank Work, the multi-millionaire.

It is the father who has brought about the separation of the Batonyis. Although deeply in love with her husband, she has consented to make a living sacrifice of herself for the sake of her two sons, Maurice and Francis.

At Frank Work's Madison-avenue home on Monday, a lawyer representing the aged millionaire will draw up a pledge which Mrs. Batonyi will sign, and in which she solemnly promises never again to live with the horseman, whose name she took years ago.

She was warned weeks ago that the penalty of her refusal would be disinheritance for her and her two sons under the terms of Frank Work's will. Thus does the old, but still resolute invalid, now stretched upon his dying bed, force a daughter's obedience to his desires by the threat of beggaring her children.

To save his wife and her sons, Batonyi has voluntarily left Mrs. Batonyi's roof. He is living at Newport.



Mrs. Richard Mansfield.

READY FOR WORK.

ROOT REGAINS HIS HEALTH.

SECRETARY FRESHENED, MENTALLY AND PHYSICALLY.

Tomorrow He Will Leave Billy Muldoon's Farm, and, in Opinion of Celebrated Trainer, "He Can Hold His Own With Any of Them Down There in Washington.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Secretary of State Elihu Root will leave William Muldoon's Hygienic Institute at White Plains on Monday, freshened mentally and physically and ready to take up the routine of his arduous duties at Washington.

Mr. Muldoon asserts that Mr. Root is in better shape than he has been for years, because of the little more than three weeks of discipline, exercise, rest and regular sleep he has enjoyed.

"He can hold his own now with any of them there in Washington," is the opinion of the man who makes men over.

"Even with President Roosevelt?" asked an inquirer.

"I said with any of them," replied Muldoon, "but you must remember that Secretary Root is 62 years old."

Those who have seen the Secretary of State riding about the roads in the vicinity of White Plains say that there has been a great change in his personal appearance. He is tanned and strong looking. He was an ideal patient, obeying every rule, and coming to the close of the course without a single mark against him.

Two of his fellow-patients were Maj. Maude, late of the English army, and Paul Potter, the playwright. Maj. Maude and Secretary Root were shining marks of neatness and obedience. Mr. Potter, on the other hand, appears to have been the bad boy of the party. It is reported that he would sneak off behind the summer house to smoke a cigarette, and that Muldoon and Dick Jared, his drill sergeant, found peaches and peanut brittle in a drawer of the dresser of Mr. Potter's room.

SORROW'S SOLITUDE.

ACTOR'S WIDOW IS IN SECLUSION.

MRS. MANSFIELD NOT YET RECOVERED FROM SHOCK.

Wife of Late Famous Thespian Has no Plans for the Future—Husband Left Her Nearly $900,000 Worth of Property—Play Rights Very Valuable.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Richard Mansfield, wife of the deceased actor, is living in seclusion in New London, Ct.

Mrs. Mansfield has not yet recovered from the shock following her husband's death, and the only callers she receives are her immediate relatives and a few friends who are doing everything possible to comfort her.

She has been urged to take a long trip, but it is difficult to induce her to leave the place so intimately associated with her husband's last hours.

Mrs. Mansfield's physician says that aside from the shock from which she is suffering, she is in good health.

Mrs. Mansfield has made no plans for the future. Her friends expect her to lead a very quiet life, and to turn her thoughts exclusively to the education of her son, Gibbs, her only child.

In the last five years, Mr. Mansfield deeded to his wife real and personal property amounting to nearly $900,000.

In estimating the property left by the actor, no mention has been made of the stock rights to the plays in the dead actor's repertoire. These rights are very valuable, and will bring into the estate an annual income of many thousands of dollars. Arrangements have just been made with Selwyn & Co., a firm of play brokers, to handle the following plays, among the stock companies: "Ivan the Terrible," "Don Carlos," "The Scarlet Letter," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," "The Misanthrope," "A Parisian Romance," "The Merchant of Venice," "Friend Fritz," "Julius Caesar," "King Henry V," "Richard III," "Peer Gynt," "Prince Karl," "Napoleon," "Nero," and "Don Juan."

"Beau Brummel" will not be leased to the stock companies during the present year. It was in this play that Mr. Mansfield was appearing when he married, and, as a matter of sentiment, it will not be included among the other plays for the present.

A LESSON LEARNED.

STANDARD OIL SHIES AT WORD "REBATES."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Standard Oil Company shies when a railroad company or association tenders its officers money, unless it is accompanied by papers showing the tender is legal and cannot possibly be construed into a rebate.

The mileage bureau of the Western Passenger Association attempted to return the Standard Oil Company $1776.50 for the redemption of 187 mileage credentials, which has been recalled, but the draft was returned pending an investigation by the legal department of the Standard Oil Company.

When the Western lines made the interstate rates on the basis of 2 cents a mile, the mileage credentials was no longer necessary, and notice was given that such credentials would be redeemed by the bureau at their face value, without regard to the number of miles traveled.

The Standard Oil Company returned 187, which had been in use by its representatives.

In due time the bureau sent the company a check, but the fine recently imposed by Judge Landis made the company look at the refund in a different light, and the draft was returned, and the legal department, wrote to the general passenger agents of the various lines asking for copies of the circular announcing the redemption and if such circulars had been regularly filed with the commission, if so, when, and if the action had official cognizance.

In the meantime, the mileage bureau is holding the draft for the refund.

STUMP TALK.

ANSWERS BRYAN.

Taft Accepts Gage of Battle.

He Admires the Democratic Candidate's Monumental Courage.

Cites a Few Examples of the Nebraskan's Postponing Proclivities.

Defends His Own Position on Tariff Revision in Very Few Words.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

TACOMA (Wash.) Sept. 7.—Secretary Taft twice today lifted the gage of controversy hurled at him by William Jennings Bryan. He spoke at Olympia and Tacoma to two big audiences, under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce of Tacoma. Mr. Taft traveled from Portland to Tacoma today, and was the guest of the same organization at a banquet tonight. During his stay in this city he and his family were the guests of S. A. Perkins, proprietor of the Ledger and News.

Ten thousand persons cheered him this afternoon in this city at Wright's Park, where he spoke in the open air, when he said in part:

"Mr. Bryan, in discussing some of my views on the tariff and other matters, has done me the honor to call me 'The Great Postponer,' with respect to the tariff. I was in favor of revision last year and I am still in favor of revision, but I am a party man and, I hope, a practical man, and I realize the lack of wisdom and the danger, both to the party and to the country, in attempting a revision of the tariff in the midst of a Presidential campaign.

"I am convinced that the Republican party, as a party, will come to a revision of the tariff immediately after the next Presidential election, and I am in favor of practical results, not of theories and platforms of doing the thing which should be done. If it cannot be done this year, I am in favor of doing it next year.

BRYAN AS A POSTPONER.

"For two Presidential campaigns Mr. Bryan urged, with all the force possible, the free coinage of silver at 16 to 1, but now he is postponing the issue until he can bring it forward again as a panacea in times of financial disaster, for which it is fitted—not as a real remedy, but as a means of getting into power.

"Secondly, he is now emphasizing the subject of anti-imperialism and the oppression of the Filipinos, but he postponed the issue of anti-imperialism until by his effort the Treaty of Paris was adopted and the sovereignty of the Philippines was transferred from Spain to the United States.

"And this is really the only piece of actual, affirmative, constructive statesmanship with which Mr. Bryan's name has been connected, and he has now for eight years been engaged in attempting to explain that away. He postponed his anti-imperialism until he has fastened the Philippines to the United States by bonds that will not be dissevered until we have discharged our full duty in those islands.

NOT YET SAFE AND SANE.

"Mr. Bryan went round the world. It was fondly hoped by the Democrats that, by reason of this experience, he had become 'safe and sane,' and would unite again the different elements of the party. Instead of that, he demonstrated that the trip had not produced the hoped-for result, and he delivered in Madison Square Garden his famous speech in favor of government ownership.

"The effect was to destroy the rosy anticipations of his triumphal candidacy. In many Democratic quarters the government-ownership platform was repudiated, and so what did Mr. Bryan do? He postponed that issue indefinitely.

"In the face of this record, I submit that his courage in calling another a 'postponer' should command the greatest admiration."

ROBBERS AT FUNERAL.

Mixed and Motley Throng Attend Last Rites of Head of Pinkerton Detective Agency.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A poorly-dressed man, gray and prematurely aged, stood on the corner of Jackson and Ashland boulevards today and with bared head gazed at the people entering the home of William A. Pinkerton, to pay final tribute to Robert A. Pinkerton, detective.

The policeman on duty ordered him to move on, and as he obeyed the command, he remarked: "That man was square."

The speaker was Jere Driscoll, old-time bank thief and safe-blower, one among the many criminals whom the head of the famous detective agency had tried to lead into an honest life.

There was a cosmopolitan house, where the minister of the Fourth Presbyterian Church was conducting the funeral. Actors, old-time thieves, gamblers, capitalists, detectives and politicians were in the throng.

"Jim" McParland, the Denver detective, whose activities in the Haywood case brought him into national reputation, stood by "Blind" John Condon. Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Chalmers of the Lake Shore Drive, C. K. G. Billings, "father of the stockyards," and Alexander Sullivan, were among those occupying seats in the stricken home.

RATE ON FRUIT EXORBITANT.

Growers Pay Twice as Much as Meat Shippers.

Western Jobbers to Formulate Complaint.

Instances of Discrimination Are Pointed Out.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OMAHA, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The railroad rates on fruit all over the entire country are quite out of proportion to the rates on all other commodities, according to allegations to be made by the Western Fruit Jobbers' Association in a complaint that will soon be filed before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

For the purpose of formulating this complaint, a meeting was held here today of the Executive Committee of the association presided over by President H. M. Jones of Sioux City.

There were representatives present from a number of large western cities. The committee decided to employ a number of experts to formulate the complaint, which probably will require about sixty days.

FAR-REACHING EFFECT.

That its effect will be far-reaching is indicated by the fact that the rates on fruit from Canada to the Gulf and from Maine to California will be the subject of complaint.

Particular stress is to be laid on the charges between the trans-Missouri country and the Pacific Coast. Allegations of rank discrimination will be made.

President Jones cited as an instance that the charge for icing a car of fruit from Los Angeles to Chicago was $60, while the same charge on a car of meat from Chicago to California was only $15.

RATES UNPROPORTIONATE.

"Powerful corporations and trusts have forced the railroads to reduce the rates on their commodities until they are out of all proportion to what fruit jobbers pay," said President Jones. "The result is that we are not only discriminated against, but we are actually forced to make up the differences in railroad receipts on account of low rates on these other commodities."

The case will be of as much, or more, importance than the grain rate case, or any other which has been brought to the notice of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

HARRIMAN FIGHTS FISH WITH BANQUETS AND WINE.

Charge That His Representatives Are Pandering to Holders of Illinois Central Securities for Their Proxies to Be Used at Next Annual Meeting.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] E. H. Harriman is determined to reduce Stuyvesant Fish to the ranks at the next annual meeting of the Illinois Central road, when the stockholders assemble in Chicago, October 18.

His representatives, it is claimed, are entertaining holders of Illinois Central securities lavishly, and at the same time pandering to them for their signature on proxies to be used when the annual meeting is held.

Champagne is being bought with prodigality, it is alleged, by supply men who dispose of their wares to the Harriman roads for Illinois Central stockholders.

Invitations to dinners and theater parties are extended with the glad hand, and La Salle street is in a whirl of pleasure, incident to the efforts of the Harriman interests to oust Fish from the directory.

Mr. Harriman arrived in the city at 3 o'clock this afternoon on a special train from the West, and left two hours later for New York. While here he was in conference with President Harahan and other Illinois Central officials.

GOULD BACK OF PLANT.

ELECTRIC ROAD-NET PLANNED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 7.—The Chronicle says this morning that the Western Pacific Railroad Company is behind the Western Power Company, which will soon build one of the largest electrical power-generating plants in the West.

While officials refuse to discuss the matter in detail, it is said that the Gould railroad company intends to construct a network of electric lines through the State. The water of the Feather River is to be utilized by the Western Power Company for the generation of at least 500,000 horse power. Of this 50,000 horse power will be available by October next, and it is claimed that within a year this will be quadrupled.

Harriman Returns East.

OMAHA, Sept. 7.—E. H. Harriman, en route from his vacation in California to New York, passed through Omaha early this morning. Mr. Harriman occupied a special train on the Union Pacific, which continued running as special on the Northwestern to Chicago, where he arrived late this afternoon.

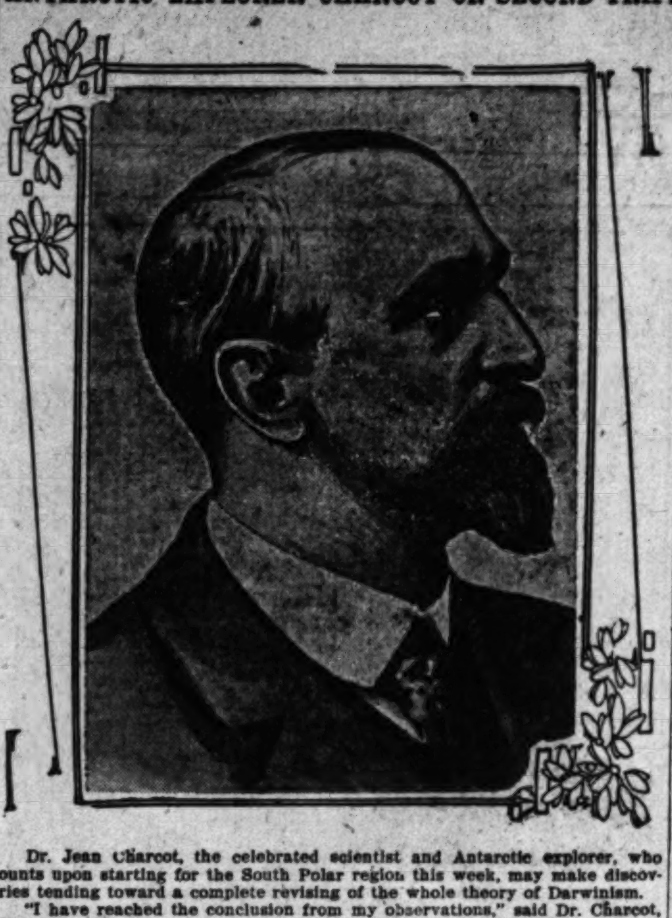
ANTARCTIC EXPLORER CHARCOT ON SECOND TRIP.



Dr. Jean Charcot, the celebrated scientist and Antarctic explorer, who counts upon starting for the South Polar region this week, may make discoveries tending toward a complete revising of the whole theory of Darwinism.

"I have reached the conclusion from my observations," said Dr. Charcot, "that the southern hemisphere developed life independently from the northern; that, in fact, these two hemispheres were separated—if not actually in space, yet virtually by an impassable zone of molten material—for some time after life had begun to develop in the cooler regions toward the separate poles.

"After the earth cooled animals from the north migrated toward the south, and those from the south to the north. Their meeting took place about the latitude of Buenos Ayres. The law of the survival of the fittest caused the southern animals to succumb.

"I am convinced that in the South Polar regions new types of animals may be found in fossil remains."

RUSHING NEW RAILWAY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SUPERIOR (Wis.) Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Having finally obtained the permission of the State authorities to build and operate a railway from the steel plant site at Spirit Lake to the docks on Allouez Bay, the United States Steel Corporation is rushing preparations for the work.

FEATHER BED CAUSES SUICIDE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEVADA (Mo.) Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Following a quarrel over a feather bed, Mrs. James A. Wilson, wife of a farmer living twelve miles north of here, left home yesterday and last night Wilson committed suicide by shooting himself through the head.

URGES AGAINST MOBBING.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ezekiel Paddleford, president of the Township of Monroe, N. Y., this afternoon called upon the clergymen of all the churches in Monroe to make an earnest Sunday appeal from their pulpits to the township people to abandon their preparations to tar and feather Ferdinand Pinney Earle, should the artist apostle of "soul freedom" return to his home there.

Mr. Paddleford said he had been forced to make this request because he, himself, had been unable to pacify the angry citizens, who have two barrels of tar and some twenty pounds of feathers awaiting the man who sent his wife to France to be divorced so he could marry his "affinity," Miss Julia Kutner.

"We have only one constable," said Mr. Paddleford, in discussing the situation, "and my attempts to swear in twenty special policemen, so that order could be restored in the town, have proved futile. I tried, but could not find twenty men who were not among those determined to inflict violence upon Earle should he return here."

STRANGE HALLUCINATION.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

JOPLIN (Mo.) Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A strange form of hallucination came to light here today when L. D. Roberts, a middle-aged man, living in Central City, was arrested and sent to an asylum for the insane in Nevada.

Roberts formed the opinion that he was a "David Harum." The first demonstration of his horse-trading ability was given when he bartered his house and lot in Central City for an old half-blind gray mare. Afterward he bought a blind, crippled animal and paid several hundred dollars for it.

TILLMAN IS ARRAIGNED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BURLINGTON (Iowa) Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] By an overwhelming vote the Iowa Methodist conference today refused to go on record as favoring the appointment of bishops to represent the different races in the church. Fervid oratory characterized the debate, and several of the speakers severely arraigned Senator Tillman for his stand on the race question.

TO ESCAPE BLACKMAILERS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] George C. Sedgewick, postmaster at Martins Ferry, O., was yesterday found unconscious under the window of his bedroom, in the hotel at which he was stopping. After being revived in the hospital, he said that he leaped from the third-story window to escape two girl blackmailers who had invaded his room with a male companion. Federal secret-service detectives are working on the case. His injuries, while serious, are not considered fatal.

ROBBERS DYNAMITE BANK.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FRANKFORT (S. D.) Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Robbers dynamited the James River bank at this place early Friday and secured $8000 in cash, and escaped. Seven charges of dynamite were used in blowing up the vault and the safe. Persons aroused by the explosion were prevented from interfering by guards, who were stationed in front and rear of bank.

BUSINESS MAN A FUGITIVE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Bankruptcy proceedings, resulting in the appointment of a receiver today for the Erie Heating Company, with offices in the Railway Exchange building, caused a sensation and disclosed Frederick A. Gale, a well-known business man, in the light of a fugitive, accused of appropriating $100,000 of the firm's funds.

LAYS IT TO THE MOON.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DES MOINES (Iowa) Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The rays of the moon in the first quarter made a boy tramp out of Halsey Bussing. That, at least, is the remarkable story told by the boy's father, in the Juvenile Court here. Young Bussing, at the age of 9, has covered several States in boxcars. He was picked up in Des Moines and held in the Juvenile Court. His father said the boy had a hard fall when very young. "Ever since that time when the moon is in the first quarter he has run away from home," testified the father. "I cannot explain what effect the rays have on my boy, but the influence is noticeable."

ROBBED WHILE BURYING CASH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LINCOLN (Neb.) Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Fearing to trust banks, and burying $675 in his cellar last night, Sam Westerfield, a negro restauranteur, was attacked by two robbers and his money taken from him as he was digging the hole. His head was badly cut and he was kicked into insensibility. Two negroes who worked for him during the last week have been arrested as suspects.

ACCIDENT CAUSES BLINDNESS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] As the result of a street-car accident in Chicago in 1892, in which he lost a leg, Henry L. Hertz, Collector of Internal Revenue, is threatened with total blindness, according to word which has been received from Copenhagen, Denmark.

Mr. Hertz went to Denmark two months ago to receive a decoration of honor from King Frederick VIII. His eyes were troubling him at the time of his departure. They grew worse after he arrived in Denmark. In a short time he had entirely lost the sight in his right eye. Hoping to save the left, which was failing rapidly, Mr. Hertz underwent an operation by the court physician to the King.

IRRIGATION CONGRESS.

KEEPS ON GOOD SIDE OF NATIONAL CONGRESS.

Resolutions Declaring for Free Timber and on the Philippine Sugar Question Are Withdrawn at Closing Meeting of Irrigation Congress.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 7.—When the Irrigation Congress convened this mornnig, John C. Fox, secretary of the Committee on Resolutions, who was about to speak at adjournment yesterday, was recognized, and moved the previous question on the committee report. He was opposed to considering the resolution which Judge Raker sought to have added, providing for free timber, until after the main report was adopted.

W. R. King of Oregon criticized the effort of Mr. Fox. He told of the defeat of Raker's resolution on timber in the committee, and characterized the manner of handling the vote as rather unfair.

Mr. King then turned his attention to ex-Gov. Pardee, who, he said, was an able committee chairman, but that he forgot politics in the committee, and only remembered it yesterday, when the thought occurred to him that he must vote for tariff, he being a Republican. He said that politics was the cause of the opposition to Raker's resolution.

Judge Nave of Arizona agreed with Mr. King as to the political feature, and said he was inclined to agree with Raker and to the merits of the proposition to admit timber free, but it would be unwise for the congress to place itself on record on political matters and thus stir up strife and lose the favor of Congress. For this reason, and to clear the situation, he suggested the withdrawal of the resolution relating to the Philippine sugar. He moved the adoption of the report eliminating the resolution in question.

After some further discussion, in which several delegates spoke more or less warmly on the subject, the committee report was adopted, with the exception of the section relating to the Philippine sugar tariff, and Judge Raker's resolution was withdrawn.

PRESIDENT'S POLICY INDORSED.

The policy of President Roosevelt and his administration, in relation to reclamation, conservation and other matters, is thus indorsed.

Arthur Briggs then succeeded in having passed his resolution calling upon the Department of Agriculture to promulgate a new and less arbitrary ruling in connection with the use of sulphur in drying fruit. A special resotion, which opposes over-grazing, was also passed.

The report of the Committee on Permanet Organization as to officers was then adopted, as follows:

Frank C. Goudy of Denver, president; George E. Barstow of Texas, first vice-president; John E. Raker of Modoc county, Cal., second vice-president; Herbert E. Strain of Montana, third vice-president; B. A. Fowler of Arizona, secretary.

TO MEET IN ALBUQUERQUE.

On the question of the next meeting place, Albuquerque, N. M., won easily, all the States represented voting for Albuquerque, with the exception of Washington, Oregon and Idaho. California was excused from voting, Chairman Estudillo saying that, as the delegates from both Albuquerque and Walla Walla, which was the only city in opposition, were guests of this State, there was no desire to injure their feelings.

After adopting resolutions of thanks to the various members of the California delegation and citizens for their splendid work for the congress, the adjournment of the Fifteenth Irrigation Congress was had at noon.

ALLEGORICAL PARADE CLOSE OF CONGRESS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 7.—A fitting close to the Fifteenth National Irrigation Congress was the splendid allegorical parade which was held tonight.

Throngs filled the streets to view the pageant and enthusiastic applause greeted the many beautiful floats and other features that marked the big display. Floats appropriate to the occasion were numerous.

In connection with the work of the congress, the Executive Committee held a meeting after the adjournment of the main body. It was announced that $10,000 worth of trophies remained, owing to the failure of exhibitors to show in all classes at the interstate exposition, and a subcommittee on the matter was appointed.

It was the sense of the meeting that the committee should confer with the donors and learn if it would be agreeable to present these trophies to the next congress.

The California Rivers Promotion Committee was organized today by the election of Miguel Estudillo as chairman and A. R. Sprague as secretary.

There are twenty-five members representing the varied interests of the State, and it was decided to meet again November 11.

BLAME PLAGUE ON RAT FLEAS.

One More Bubonic Victim in San Francisco.

Five Suspects Isolated and Under Guard.

Health Officers Issue First Public Statement.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 7.—One additional case of bubonic plague was [illegible] today by the Board of Health, and four more suspects have been isolated and are under observation.

The board has authorized establishing a temporary hospital camp at Ingleside, where the inmates of the City and County hospitals will be moved, and the latter buildings, which are old frame structures, long ago condemned, will be burned down.

[illegible] McConkey, Harvey, Manning, [illegible], and President Simons, composing the Board of Health, have submitted their resignations to Mayor Taylor, and it is understood that their successors will be appointed next week.

Dissension in the board as to the advisability of certain measures proposed for the eradication of the plague, a feeling on the part of at least one member that the new Mayor should have an opportunity to appoint a board of his own choice, actuated the resignations.

The board's meeting was today attended by President Ragensberger of the State Board of Health, and by Dr. Austin of the Marine Hospital Service, who adopted a report of the plague situation prepared by Health Officer Watkins. It is, in part and substance, as follows:

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

"Because alarmist reports which are unwarranted by the facts regarding the public health of San Francisco have appeared in the public prints of other cities, it is deemed expedient to give out officially to the Associated Press a statement of the facts which have been from the first visible on the bulletin board of the Central Health Office.

"The first case of bubonic plague appeared on May 27 at the United States Marine Hospital in a Finnish sailor taken from the tug Wizard. Thereafter no cases appeared in the city until August 12, when two cases were reported from the North Beach district. Immediately the officials of hospitals and dispensaries were warned to be on the lookout for similar cases, with the result that to date eighteen authentic cases in all have been found. Of these eighteen cases, [illegible] are still living and in a fair way to recover.

RATS ARE THE CAUSE.

"There exists today no doubt of the origin of the so-called bubonic plague, or of the means by which it may be [illegible]. Wherever international commerce exists, and in proportion to the volume of the commerce, the rat and the diseases of the rat, one of which is plague, are bound to appear. There are said to be some five varieties of the rat flea, of which two transmit the plague. The plague bacillus is carried by the flea of these two [illegible] to men. Other modes of infection exist, but are very much less frequent.

"The common rat is said to propagate every few weeks, and thrives in proportion as its surroundings are unsanitary.

"In consequence of the unusual conditions which have obtained in San Francisco since the fire, rats have increased to an unusual degree.

"The problem which confronts the health authorities, then, is plain and presents no insurmountable difficulties. Sanitary nuisances must be abated and rats caught or poisoned.

"It is proposed to go about getting results in the following ways, which proved highly effective here in stamping out the similar outbreak of plague several years ago:

MODE OF PREVENTION.

"Every vessel which leaves or enters a California port is fumigated with sulphur. As a result, no rat which enters a ship in San Francisco or elsewhere leaves it alive. The lines which hold the vessels to the wharves are fitted with rat guards.

"When a person presents the symptoms of plague, he is at once removed to the isolation pavilions. The house previously occupied is rendered vacant and fumigated with sulphur, washed and sprayed with carbolic acid solution. The contents of the rooms are burned. The rest of the house is thoroughly disinfected. The names of all persons residing there are taken, and of all persons who had come into recent contact with the patient, in order that they may be kept under medical supervision during the following ten days, the period in which the disease, if present, would make its appearance.

"It is deemed wise the place of habitation, if a shack, is destroyed by fire, as such shacks are maintained in violation of the law, and it is the intention to destroy all of them which lie within the board's jurisdiction.

RATS POST MORTEM.

"All rats caught or found dead are [illegible] and microscopically examined. When plague infection is found, the place and locality from which the rodent came is at once subjected to sanitary attack. For this purpose the city has been districted [illegible].

"The International Congress of [illegible] at Lisbon, Portugal, in 1906 declared that the safeguarding of communities against plague should be an international function. Recognizing the validity of this [illegible] the Mayor of San Francisco [illegible] the Federal government to [illegible] control of the situation here. [illegible] has been granted."

Dr. Rupert Blue of the Marine Hospital Service, [illegible] authority on plague, who has had charge of [illegible] of the Jamestown exposition, will arrive here from Washington on Tuesday or Wednesday and [illegible] official charge.

CLEAN BILL OF HEALTH.

NO PLAGUE AT SAN PEDRO.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN PEDRO, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There are no cases of bubonic plague or any other kind of a [illegible] in San Pedro.

There have been no indications of [illegible] other such disease here, and [illegible] of those in charge of [illegible] health, there is hardly a [illegible] the disease will appear [illegible] of the action of the officials of the United States Marine [illegible] at this port, in taking the precautions which always are taken to safeguard the health of the port, the report became current today that two cases of plague had been discovered here. This rumor originated outside San Pedro, and the source of it is not known. There are those here who would be willing to pay something to ascertain definitely who started it.

Dr. W. A. Weldon, who is in charge of the Federal staff of physicians here, stated tonight in as emphatic language as it is possible to use, that the rumor was false, groundless and probably malicious. He explained what has been done here, and what precautions are being taken constantly to preserve the public health, and concluded by saying that there was not even a suspicion of plague in San Pedro.

ANGLER MEETS ODD MISHAP.

Falls from Bank and Is Rendered Partially Paralyzed, Remaining Unconscious in Stream.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] W. T. Keyes, a prominent insurance man and an old-time resident of Stockton, is stretched helpless on a bed in a resort in Placer county, as a result of an accident while enjoying his vacation.

Keyes was sitting on a rock about fifteen feet above a stream, fishing, and either became excited over hooking a large trout or overbalanced and fell to the gravel on the waterway.

The concussion so injured his lower limbs that he could not move, and also rendered him unconscious. For hours he lay with part of his body in the stream.

A woman who happened to walk down the creek late in the afternoon discovered him, and, after pulling him out of the water, secured aid and had him moved to a hotel.

The physicians are not certain whether or not he is paralyzed. This is his fourth accident while hunting and fishing. He will be brought home as soon as he can be moved.

Special Session of California Legislature Sought to Change Indian Basin Act.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Chairman Andrews, of the Seawall and Harbor Improvement Committee of the Mission Promotion Association, has been instructed to request Gov. Gillett to call a special session of the Legislature to remedy the defects of the Indian Basin Act, passed at the last session.

TO PREVENT FRAUD.

CITIZENSHIP GUARDED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 7.—Asst. Atty.-Gen. Alfred W. Cooley and Richard K. Campbell, chief of the Bureau of Naturalization of the Department of Commerce and Labor, have come to San Francisco to establish an office where applications for citizenship can be investigated and fraud prevented. Mr. Cooley said today:

"Under the new naturalization laws we have an opportunity to have uniform requirements of citizenship and to keep an eye on the class of people who are being admitted.

"The frauds that have been practiced in the past will be put an end to by the new system of examination, and no one will be admitted to citizenship of the United States until he has been thoroughly investigated and a report made to the Naturalization Bureau."

Man Whose Sentence Was Deferred Until He Could Provide for Family to Appear Tomorrow.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. John E. McCaffrey, 20 years old, declared today that next Monday morning her husband would leave her and their 1-year-old baby boy, and at 10 o'clock a.m., would knock at the barred doors of the Bridewell for admission.

Once inside the prison, McCaffrey, who is only 22 years old, will begin serving a sentence of one year's imprisonment which was imposed upon him two months ago by Judge K. M. Landis in the United States District Court for rifling the mails.

When he imposed the sentence Judge Landis, who fined the Standard Oil Company the maximum amount in his power, took pity on the poor young man and gave him sixty days of freedom in which to provide for his wife and baby while he was in prison.

Mother's Death Produces Odd Case of Insanity.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RACINE (Wis.) Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Crazed with grief at the death of her mother and suffering from an insane desire to attend funerals, of which she herself wished to be the cause, Miss Adelaide Korizek, aged 28 years, has been sending poisoned candy through the mails to various families of her acquaintance in this city.

For a week she has craftily prepared chocolates, doctored with arsenic, and in that time has almost caused the death of two women, a mother and daughter, living near her own home.

The young woman, after her confession to Chief of Police Baker, was examined by a board of physicians and was pronounced insane, with marked homicidal tendencies. She will be committed at once to the State Hospital for the Insane, at Oshkosh.

The physicians learned that ever since the death of Miss Korizek's mother, which occurred six weeks ago, the young woman has been possessed by an uncontrollable desire to attend funerals. Her explanation of this was that she revelled in the grief of the mourners, as it soothed her own poignant grief to see others suffering as she had suffered at the burial of her mother.

DYNAMITE CAP WOUNDS BOY.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S SON VICTIM OF COWARDS.

Explosive Placed on Doorstep of Arkansas Official's Home, and Blows Up in Hands of Five-Year-Old Lad, Injuring Him Severely. No Clew to Culprits.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LITTLE ROCK (Ark.) Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A dynamite cap, with eighty pounds' explosive pressure, was found in the entrance to the home of Atty.-Gen. F. W. Kirby, by his five-year-old son, and blew up in the hands of the boy. It was placed there, the police believe, to kill the official.

Chief of Police Frank McMahon and Sergt. McDaniel think there is no doubt that the murder of the Attorney-General was the object of whoever placed the cap at the entrance, but they have not the slightest clue to the would-be assassin's identity.

The boy was seriously injured by the cap. His clothes were torn, and the pieces of copper covering on the cap flew into his hands, face, neck and chest.

The cap undoubtedly was placed for a murderous purpose, said Sergt. McDaniel. It was in a position, according to the boy's story, where any one entering would probably step on it, and made so that the slightest shock would explode it.

It is suggested that the Attorney-General has probably made enemies through his recently-expressed opinions on trusts, railroads, the Capitol appropriation, and other subjects. He is candidate for Governor of Arkansas, and has the backing of United States Senators Jeff Davis and James P. Clark.

COMPANY IS WRECKED.

Charge Made That Concern's President Diverted Large Sums to His Own Use.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—A petition of involuntary bankruptcy was filed today in the Federal Court against the Erie Heating Company, and a receiver was appointed for the concern. The liabilities are placed at $100,000, with little assets.

Charges are made in the petition that F. W. Gale, the president of the company, diverted large sums of money from the company to his own use.

BROKER'S WIFE MURDERED.

Husband Also Unconscious, With His Throat Cut, and Police Believe Latter Committed Deeds.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—Mrs. Fred M. Fish, wife of a wealthy retired broker, was found murdered in her home at No. 423 Davis street, Evanston, at an early hour today. Her husband was found with his throat cut, unconscious on the floor of the bedroom, in which the body of Mrs. Fish was lying.

It is the opinion of the police that Fish murdered his wife and then attempted to commit suicide. He was hurried to a hospital but has not yet recovered consciousness and it is doubtful if he revives sufficiently to make a statement.

The cause of the tragedy is unknown. Mr. and Mrs. Fish were heard by their neighbors in a violent altercation late last night, and it is believed that Fish arose early today and after discharging a shot into his wife's head mutilated her in a horrible fashion with a butcher's cleaver.

A servant girl declared that she heard the report of a shotgun early this morning and the cleaver was found lying on the bed beside Mrs. Fish. Mr. Fish formerly was associated with a prominent commission house but had recently retired from business on account of poor health and attacks of despondency.

It was later declared by the physicians at the hospital that Fish will undoubtedly recover. Late today he became so violent it was found necessary to remove him to a sanitarium. It is said by physicians that he is insane.

EXCLUSIVE LABOR DISEASE.

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Labor has a new and exclusive disease. Labor has enjoyed painter's colic and plumber's nerve and housemaid's knee, and other specialized complaints for centuries. The new disease is said to be the result of using modern tools and machinery, where a firm grip is required almost constantly. As a result the tendons of the forearm contract and the fingers and hand are drawn out of shape, much the same as results from rheumatism. There are said to be no less than seventy-five or eighty cases in the city which have come to the attention of physicians, and they are not confined to any special trade.

The National Letter Carriers' Association elected the following officers yesterday: President, W. E. Kelley, Brooklyn; vice-president, E. G. Gainer, Muncie, Ind.; secretary, E. W. Cantwell; treasurer, J. F. Munger, Chicago. St. Paul was chosen as the next meeting place. The installation of officers closed the convention.

IMMIGRATION.

TO KEEP OUT "UNDESIRABLES"

United States Commission Closes Work Abroad.

European Countries Opposing Drain of Populace.

Hints at Important Revision of Present System.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Immigration Commission appointed by the American government to inquire into the whole question of emigration from Europe to the United States has finished its labors in London and left for home.

When interviewed, Senator Dillingham, chairman, was unwilling to anticipate the commission's report, but it was inferred from his remarks that several important changes are likely to be the outcome of the visit.

It is safe to say that the report will indicate to Congress that any further restrictions which may be imposed upon immigrants will meet with little or no opposition from Europe. Germany and Austria-Hungary at any rate have set their faces against the continual drain on the best of their people and will almost welcome any restrictions upon its continuance.

Italy is neutral on the subject. The government regrets emigration but bears in its mind that a large proportion of the working capital in the country is made up of money which Italians have brought back from other countries.

The average peasant going to America seldom stays more than six months at a stretch and in that time makes more money than he could in two years at home.

Some countries, like Russia, Turkey and Greece, are indifferent to the whole matter and would probably take no steps should severer conditions be imposed upon their subjects wishing to enter America.

The commission has been much interested in the working of the English Aliens' Act. The commission's view, moreover, is that in its present form it is of little use in any sense, but the members strongly approve of the power of deportation of criminals given to judges and magistrates and will almost certainly recommend its adoption in America.

KNIGHTHOOD IN FLOWER.

KING EDWARD IS CHIVALROUS.

PAYS COMPLIMENT TO "THE FRENCH MARQUISE."

British Ruler, Entertained by Lady Cunard at Marienbad, Declares the Luncheon the Most Enjoyable of All—American Artist Ignores the Whims of Royal Patron.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MARIENBAD (Bohemia) Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "I have enjoyed this little luncheon more than any since I have been in Marienbad this year," most graciously said King Edward to Lady Cunard, his hostess, at a delightful dejeneur the other day in His Majesty's honor, before he left to return to England after taking the "cure" here.

The King's expression was so plainly sincere that Lady Cunard (who was Miss Burke of New York,) expressed her pleasure in making her prettiest courtesy and by lightly kissing the royal hand extended to her.

"The French marquise," is the name by which Lady Cunard is best known here. King Edward gave her the sobriquet when he met her on the promenade one morning. She wore a gown of oldest, daintiest, flower-sprigged muslin, with shoulder knots of blue ribbon and a deep blue ribbon waist belt. Her hat, or rather her coal-scuttle bonnet, was held with blue streamers, which, tied in a big bow under her dainty chin, made a most becoming setting for her pretty face and golden hair.

At her farewell luncheon to the King Lady Cunard wore another quaint costume of much gathered silk mouseline, thickly dotted with pink roses. On her tulle hat was a wreath of rosebuds, and roses composed her belt. The day before the King had expressed to a flower girl his admiration of the brilliant roses she had for sale. Lady Cunard happened to overhear the remark, so the same lovely flowers decorated the luncheon table, and the King recognized them.

"Thank you," His Majesty said, turning with a smile to his hostess. "This is one of the prettiest luncheons I've received during my visit." So saying, the King took a small bunch of the roses from a silver vase, divided the cluster and presenting one half to Lady Cunard, placed the other in his coat buttonhole.

The sittings for his portrait, which the King gave to Miss Leslie Colton, were very successful. The American artist's frankness equally amused His Majesty. She yielded to none of his whims. 'I know better about it, sir," Miss Colton said one morning, taking her royal visitor by the shoulders and rearranging the pose he had chosen. "This position shows your profile and figure to best advantage. The position you wish to take, sir, shows your figure to more advantage than is artistic."

"You are quite right," said the King, humbly, and he assumed the pose she wished.

FAMOUS ENGLISH BEAUTY.

New Duchess of Pless Is Daughter of Col. William Cornwallis West.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BRESLAU (Prussia Silesia) Sept. 7—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Prince Henry of Pless XV., who has just succeeded his father as Duke of Pless, is the husband of a famous English beauty, daughter of Col. William Cornwallis West.

Her brother married an even more famous New York beauty, Lady Randolph Churchill, and her handsome sister is the Duchess of Westminster.

The new Duke of Pless becomes by inheritance one of the great territorial magnates of Germany and enters into possession of a fortune estimated at between $20,000,000 and $25,000,000, mainly derived from Silecian coal mines. The new English Duchess of Pless becomes chatelaine of the fairy-like, sumptuously furnished and modernized seventeenth century castle of Fuerstenstein, one of the show places of Germany, situated on the east side of the valley of the Pellabach, or Polsnetz, and surrounded by extensive grounds.

She also becomes hostess of a palace in Berlin on Wilhelmplatz, known from its tall chimneys as "The Chimney Academy."

Princess Louise, of Belgium, who has evinced literary talent of a high order.

ROYAL TALENT.

COMEDY IS WRITTEN BY PRINCESS LOUISE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BRUSSELS, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When Princess Louise of Belgium threatened to publish her memoirs in Paris, after having been rescued from an Austrian madhouse by the lover for whom she deserted Prince Philip of Coburg, most people doubtless thought she merely wanted to make her royal father, King Leopold, pay her a good round sum not to do so.

But Princess Louise really is one of the most accomplished of royal Princesses. She has always had a predeliction for writing, particularly dramas and it is stated she recently completed a comedy which is to be played in Brussels next season. One who professes to know says:

"The scene of the play is held in a Balkan principality and the hero is a gypsy chief, who, after many stirring adventures, becomes the sovereign of the principality. Princess Louise has given a vivid insight into Hungarian gypsy life in her play. She has lived among the Tsiganes herself and therefore is well qualified to describe their strange customs and mode of living.

"The Princess is held in high esteem by the gypsies and is one of the very few privileged persons who have been elected honorary members of a gypsy tribe. She was lately received into a tribe at Nagy Karpad, and on the strength of this she decided to write a play depicting the chivalrous aspect of gypsy life."

DE RESZKE AS REFORMER.

Noted Tenor Is Appointed Vocal Director by the Management of the Paris Opera.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The new management of the opera has appointed Jean de Reszke to the post of director of singing, in which connection he has enumerated the reforms which he will endeavor to realize. He will first use his influence to react against the tendency of nearly all tenors to always sing with the full force of their lungs irrespective of the meaning of the passage sung.

He will teach those under his jurisdiction to adopt a style of singing true to the nature of the music sung in a rational manner.

Mr. de Reszke also points out that great operas of repertory are, through lack of proper direction, now sung very differently from the manner in which the composer intended them to be sung.

Mr. de Reszke received instructions from Gounod himself which will enable him to give valuable indications as to the interpretation of that composer's work. Also his experience in singing Wagner's operas enables him to speak with authority on that subject. He says Rossini's "Barbier de Seville" is now sung too respectfully, and that it needs much more vim in execution.

USE CATCHY PHRASES.

French Shopkeepers Are Beginning to Learn the Value of Live Advertising.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Parisian shopkeepers are finally realizing the value of catchy advertising phrases. Boardings all over the city have been obtained by enterprising sartorial artists, whose advertisements, illustrated with stylishly dressed young men, read:

"If you have a good tailor don't change on any account. If you have an unsatisfactory tailor come to me."

The same firm utilizes adaptations of French proverbs. For instance, "A well dressed man's worth two boot firms."

A poster which is attracting considerable attention shows a tender foot being fitted by easy footwear, with a text, "Place your feet in our hands."

"BLUELANDERS" BEATEN.

Mimic Warfare at Salisbury Results in Defeat for Invaders of English Soil.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SALISBURY (England) Sept. 7.—The war in "Redland," or the army manevers which began last Monday, have come to a close with victory for the defenders of the fortified territory.

The invaders from "Blueland" were neither overwhelmed nor captured, but were compelled hastily to flee to their ships in an imaginary ocean and steam away to their own country.

The spectacle was a fine one for the on-lookers, as the final struggle was attended by abundance of shooting.

PARIS SOCIETY AMAZED.

Beauty Is to Wed Wealthy Banker of Brussels Instead of Brilliant Young Dramatist.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Parisian society gossips are all agog over the forthcoming wedding, which is affording gossip at all the social functions of Paris and at the watering places.

Several weeks ago the engagement was announced of Mlle. Dietz Monnin, one of the most beautiful girls in town, the daughter of a well-known family, to M. Francis de Croisset, a brilliant young dramatist. Not only the dailies but the periodicals were filled with the account of the approaching marriage, and portraits of the couple. Then suddenly came the announcement of the breaking of the engagement.

The reasons were never disclosed. Friends of the couple and the social world in general was amazed to learn a few weeks after of the announcement of Mlle. Dietz Monnin's approaching marriage to M. Lowenstein, a wealthy banker of Brussels, who is said to possess the finest horses on the continent. The date is set for September 5. Meanwhile society is wondering.

SOMBER SHADES RELEGATED.

SILK MARKETS PROSPEROUS.

INCREASE IN DEMAND FOR LYONS COLORED FABRICS.

Consular Report Shows America to Be Tremendous Consumer Second Only to the United Kingdom—The United States Bought $12,190,000 Worth During 1906.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] According to consular reports just received by the British Foreign Office, the silk markets of Lyons are more prosperous than they have been since M. Jacquart introduced his famous loom by means of which a single workman was enabled to produce elaborate fabrics as easily as the plainest web, and, by changing cartoons, to make the most different textures on the same looms.

During the year large orders were cabled from the United States and European manufacturers, and at the end of last year America bought heavily in Japan, and stocks became light in all producing centers.

The British Consul reports that a characteristic of the year has been an increase in production of colored and a falling off in black silks.

There was an increase of £216,000 ($1,080,000) in value in these tissues over the previous year, wholly due to the growth in the demand for colors.

TAFFETAS DECREASE.

Black failles and taffetas decreased by £80,000 ($400,000,) while the same articles in colors rose by £200,000 ($1,000,000.)

In fancy stuffs and brocades, also, the tendency has been toward light tissues, as opposed to the rich, heavy and sumptuous fabrics which were so long in vogue.

The output for the year of silk muslins shows an increase of £200,000 ($1,000,000) over the preceding year.

Foreign countries, which are the best customers of Lyons's silks, bought during the year £800,000 ($4,000,000) worth of silks, ribbons and trimmings of pure and mixed silks more than in either of the two previous years.

FOREMOST CONSUMER.

The United Kingdom still holds the foremost place among the customers of Lyons, and is followed at some distance by the United States.

It must not, however, says the Consul, be forgotten that much of the silks shipped in British ports, though entered in the customs statistics as destined for the United Kingdom, come to us, not for consumption at home, but for reshipment all over the world to real consumers, many of them in the United States and South America.

Nearly five-sixths of the total exportation of Lyons's silk products went in 1906 to the United Kingdom, the United States, South America and other non-producing European countries, while scarcely more than one-sixth was taken by the whole of Europe put together.

The value of the silk taken by the United States in 1906 is given as £2,438,000 ($12,190,000,) as compared with £1,653,010 ($8,265,200) in 1905.

New York Woman Wins First Prize in Beauty Competition in Bohemia.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FRANZENBAD (Bohemia) Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A Mrs. Burckardt of New York has won the first prize in a "fashionable beauty competition," arranged by the Town Council.

Mrs. Copen of Berlin took second prize.

Only private visitors were allowed to compete, actresses and other professional beauties being barred.

EDWARD FAVORS MARRIAGE ACT.

BRITISH RULER DISCUSSES LAW RECENTLY PASSED.

On His Return, to London from Marienbad He Expresses Himself as Pleased With Enactment Legalizing Union With Sister of Deceased Wife.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] King Edward returned to London this evening after taking the cure at Marienbad.

He appeared to be in excellent health.

The King finds the country discussing in a lively manner the recently-enacted law permitting union with a sister of a deceased wife, and he is quoted with making this statement:

"A grievance of long standing is removed by the passing of an act for legalizing the marriage with a deceased wife's sister."

It is easy to imagine that His Majesty gave his assent to the act with particular pleasure, for, on more than one occasion he has supported marriages with a deceased wife's sister. Twenty-eight years ago, as the Prince of Wales, he presented a petition to the House of Lords from 3278 Norfolk farmers advocating this alteration to the marriage law, and in a few strong words spoke in its favor.

AFTER MANY EFFORTS.

The question has undergone remarkable vicissitudes. The proposals embodied in the new act have been passed no fewer than nineteen times in the House of Commons and rejected thirteen times by the House of Lords. Many people have long regarded as amazing the anomaly that while it was legal for a man to marry his dead wife's sister in the British colonies it was illegal in England.

The measure is opposed strenuously by the Church of England clergy and the Archbishop of Canterbury advises incumbents not to solemnize such marriages or further their solemnization.

Columns of letters on the new act are appearing in the press and women novelists are expressing their views. Mrs. Stanhard, the John Strange Winter of fiction, is wholly in favor of the change in the law and sees no reason why any right-minded woman should not remain in the home of her deceased sister's husband now that it is possible for him to ask her to remain by right, because it is possible for him to pay the wife he had the misfortune to lose, the very highest compliment possible for man to pay, the compliment of choosing his second wife from the same stock as his first.

MRS. HARRISON PROTESTS.

On the other hand, Mrs. Harrison, daughter of Charles Kingsley, famous under the pseudonym of Lucas Malet, and Rita, both disapprove of the new act. The latter says:

"Personally I never ceased to be thankful that I possessed no sisters, judging from scenes I have witnessed and stories I have heard concerning those doubtful blessings, but had I possessed one I feel sure I should not have contemplated her as a possible successor with any degree of equanimity. The affectionate and friendly feeling between brothers and sister-in-law would be quite altered if the question on closer and more intimate relationship obtruded itself."

While many men and women express similar views, it is safe to say that if the country were polled on the subject the new enactment would be approved by a large majority.

ROYALTY'S REALM.

KING EDWARD A GODFATHER.

SPONSOR FOR INFANT OF PRINCESS OF TECK.

England's Ruler Has Made Promise to Assume Christian Guardianship of Little Prince—Is Seeking Rest This Autumn Prior to Visiting Friends.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] One of King Edward's first duties on his return to England from Marienban will be to be present at the christening of the infant son of the Prince and Princess Alexander Teck, His Majesty having promised to stand sponsor.

The infant Prince is in the line of succession to the British throne, though, of course, remotely so. Nevertheless, he would come before the German Emperor. It is evident, however, that the contingency of the infant Prince's succession is not regarded as a serious possibility, for none of the great officers of state seem to have been present to "constanter" the birth, to use a French phrase.

It is King Edward's intention to have a thorough rest this autumn, until the arrival of the Kaiser Wilhelm brings him back to state and ceremonial duties.

Upon his arrival from Marienbad the King is to pay a series of country house visits to many of his most intimate friends, and will commence with a short stay with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sassoon at Tulchan Lodge, where the Prince of Wales is having good sport just now.

No public duties of any nature beyond those in connection with the Kaiser's visit will be undertaken by the King this side of Christmas, and shooting will occupy most of His Majesty's attention.

The Duke and Duchess of Skane, who have come to England on a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, have brought their two fine baby boys, the Duke of Westerbotten, who is about a year and a half old, and the Duke of Upland, who was born last June, one day after the golden wedding of his grandparents, the King and Queen of Sweden.

The Duchess of Skane, like her sister, Princess Patricia Connaught, has many attached friends among the great English and Irish nobility, and her marriage to the future King of Sweden has aroused feelings of mingled rejoicing and regret at the thought of losing her.

She is said to be, of all Queen Victoria's granddaughters, both one of the prettiest and the one most like the venerated sovereign was at her age.

I heard a nice compliment paid to Princess Patricia the other day. I was taking a walk in West End, London, with a Canadian, when the Princess came out of the postoffice, and my companion remarked:

"That is the prettiest woman I have seen in England."

The Marquis of Stafford, who has just celebrated his nineteenth birthday, is heir certainly to the most extensive domain, if not the largest rent roll, enjoyed by any subject of King Edward. More than a million acres in England and Scotland are under the lordship of the Duke of Sutherland, while the Marquis of Breadalbane, who is probably the next largest proprietor in the kingdom, does not own one-half that amount of land.

PARIS TO GET THE "WAR CRY."

Salvation Army Lassies to Invade European Capital With Their Paper Printed in French.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] To be seated on a terrace at a boulevard café and be suddenly accosted by a French Salvation Army lassie, who in her own language asks one to buy the French equivalent of the War Cry, is an experience to which Americans in Paris will probably become accustomed, although the custom is not practiced here now to any such degree as in large American cities.

The Paris branch of the Salvation Army is not new, nor has it been inactive in its own way, but it is only quite recently that it has adopted the aggressive tactics so well known in London and New York and in all large cities where English is spoken. In the late hours of the afternoon one is likely to receive a polite salutation from the demure damsels laden with papers, which they'll sell for anything the customer is willing to give. Their costume is practically the same as the American and English. The paper is similar in tone, but is printed in French.

FOR IDLE HOURS.

MANY BOOKS ARE IN PRESS.

LONDON PUBLISHERS UNUSUALLY BUSY THIS SEASON.

Life of the Duke of Argyll Promises to Be Success—Mrs. Aubrey Richardson Is Author of New Work on Queen Elizabeth Soon to Be Issued.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Publishers are making rapid preparations for a busy autumn season and are already well advanced in their announcement of new books.

Memoirs always occupy a prominent place and especially so this season. The Duke of Argyll is this year to produce an account of his life through Hutchinson. As Governor-General of Canada and in many other great positions the Duke had experiences which should make the work well worth reading. He has already proved himself a versatile writer, not only on colonial and imperial politics, but as an author of essays and tales.

A poet's story of a somewhat unusual character will be published before long by Unwin. It is entitled "The World at Eighteen," and the author, Miss Ray Costello, is herself just that age. The books is the story of a young girl, fresh from a school in England, who finds herself suddenly, almost tragically, at war with the world of which she has read so much about but knows so little. The conflict takes place amid the surroundings of a Florentine villa.

AN "ELIZABETHIAN" WORK.

Mrs. Aubrey Richardson is producing, through Werner Laurie, a book entitled "A Lover of Queen Elizabeth," being a story of the life of Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester. We are told that her biography is not a contribution to the streams of whitewash with which many historians have plastered over the crimes of Queen Elizabeth and her lover, but that Mrs. Richardson gives Lord Leicester and the Queen the benefit of all doubts which their words and conduct give rise to.

"Shakespeare's Sweetheart," the title of a work by Miss Sarah Sterling, which Chatto will shortly publish, seeks to reconstruct in the form of romance the story of Shakespeare's marriage with Ann Hathaway. Incidentally the author suggests several theories which are likely to give to the book additional interest, not only to the ordinary reader, but also to the Shakespearian student.

AN ISLAND ROMANCE.

In Quiller-Couch's new story, "Major Vigoureaux," which is about to appear with Methuen, the scene is laid in a group of islands lying in the Atlantic Ocean, off the Cornish Coast. It tells of a middle aged officer left in charge of a destitute garrison and his tribulations and quarrels with the Lord Protector of the island and of a mysterious enemy mysteriously arriving, who at first brought him much trouble but afterward great consolation.

Every book has its history, and pathetic interest attaches to one which Fisher and Unwin are publishing. It is called "Bonaparte in Egypt and Egyptians of Today," and it bears the name of Haija H. Browne as the author. He is an Irishman by birth, but has lived for many years as a Mohammedan among the Mohammeadans. In fact, he made a pilgrimage disguised as a Turk to Mecca, and hence the name Haiji.

Browne's life had been a romance and he died suddenly just as he had finished the book.

Predicts That America's National Capital Will Exceed Berlin for Beauty.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] E. K. Helm, chief engineer of the Department of Public Works of the District of Columbia, who is stopping at the Hotel Monopole, with his wife, predicts that Washington will surpass Berlin in beauty ere the city is one-fourth as old.

"As to the German capital, I am enthusiastic over the beauty and cleanliness of Berlin," said Mr. Helm, "but I pity the poor taxpayer. If American cities would raise one-half as much taxes, every street could be paved with asphalt and the walks lined with flowers and trees."

Mr. Helm is studying the underground railway system of Berlin. He finds that much money can be saved by following the system employed here, namely, not tunnelling, but deepening the street they are on and building a new pavement over the tracks.

COMPOSER IS HONORED.

First Wiengartner Festival Is Held at Bad Wildungen, Picturesque German Resort.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WILDUNGEN (Germany) Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] One of Germany's most picturesque summer resorts, Bad Wildungen, in the ducal domains of Waldeck-Pyrmont, was the scene recently of the first Wiengartner festival.

The idea of commemorating in this way the creative genius of Weingartner originated with the talented conductor, Ferdinand Weister, cappellmeister to the Duke. Visitors in Wildungen, gathered from all parts of the earth, have much to thank him for, because, though Weingartner as a conductor is known to the civilized world, few know to what height he has risen as a composer. The Wildungen festival showed him as a most gifted and learned creator of chamber music, song and symphony, and many learned for the first time that he was also an opera writer, though it was in that field that he first began to compose, at the age of 19.

Among the participating artists America was represented by Theodore Bohlman, pianist, composer and teacher, from Miss Bauer's conservatory in Cincinnati. At Weingartner's request he was asked to play the two sonatas for violin and piano, the sextette for piano and strings and the accompaniments to all songs.

FACTS ABOUT PE-RU-NA

Is There Any Scientific Basis For The Claim
Prevents Infective Diseases?

It is during the months of September and October that some infective diseases are at their height. Malaria and the infectious autumn find these months especially favorable to the growth and of their deadly germs. Why is it September and October when such diseases flourish?

Contaminated Drinking Water.

There are two reasons. air and drinking water especially contaminated months by the germs that such diseases. Whether germs are the cause or comitant occurrence is a matter that need not be discussed here. that a superabundance of these germs is always accompanied of the diseases shows that there is some relation between them, is present the other always appears.

There is no way known to man yet by which the germs can be entirely avoided. Sanitary science is gradually doing partly, but still they remain in great numbers. EVERY PERSON POSED TO THEM CONSTANTLY.

The germs of infectious disease are about us everywhere, but people succumb to their baneful influence.

This brings us to consider the second reason why September are the especial seasons for epidemics. The fact that everybody the germs of disease and yet comparatively few contract the disease yond doubt that there must be some special reason why one person disease and the other does not.

The skin, when unbroken, protects the outside of the body germs, but it is well known that a raw surface or an open wound skin from protecting the interior of the body, and disease germs such occasions.

Diseased Mucous Membranes.

THE MUCOUS when they are healthy, THE INSIDE of the body germs. But the slightest the mucous membranes, ment of the mucous chronic catarrh, renders these membranes powerless to protect the disease germs. Hence they enter through the mucous stomach, of the lungs, the intestines, accumulate in the blood bers, and set up infective diseases that may prove fatal.

Since we cannot protect ourselves entirely from the presence germs, the only thing that remains for us to do is to KEEP THE MUCOUS MEMBRANES INTACT so that the disease germs blood, even though they assail us from within and without.

This explains how it is that Peruna may be regarded as a these diseases, and suggests that it should be taken during the they are prevalent.

Peruna has thoroughly established itself as a catarrh thousands of people have taken Peruna for chronic catarrh, and selves completely restored.

Sometimes the catarrh is in the stomach. Other times in the lungs. Sometimes in the intestinal tract. Peruna seems to act as in all these different forms of catarrh, and thus produces healthy branes.

Even if disease germs do enter the stomach and lungs, the healthy membranes tend to protect the blood from their encroachments. the claim made for Peruna, and the claim is based on science and Pathologists have been aware for many years that A HEALTHY AND MUCOUS MEMBRANE CONSTITUTE PROTECTION FECTIVE DISEASES. This is a well established scientific fact.

The experience of thousands of people in all parts of the has established the fact beyond dispute that the USE OF RESTORE THE MUCOUS MEMBRANES to perfect health, and the body from disease germs.

FRENCH NAVAL HERO DEAD.

Vice-Admiral Franquet Was Commander of the Bauvet Which Rammed the Meteor.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Vice-Admiral Franquet's death recalls the fact that he was the hero of the only naval engagement in the Franco-Prussian War. The scene was Havana, where Franquet commanded the Bouvet, which kept watch on the Prussian ship Meteor. The latter was well armed, though the Bouvet had only light artillery. Franquet challenged the German captain to a naval duel, and the offer was accepted.

The boats sailed from the harbor, followed by Spanish ships as umpires. The Bouvet at once rammed the Meteor. Both ships were badly damaged.

He has opened an academy, where every one who wishes to be initiated in the gentle art of street crossing will receive a hearty welcome.

Being a practical Parisian, M. Brousset does not give instruction for nothing. The fee, however, is so small that the academy is accessible to the poor as well as to the rich. How many pupils M. Brousset has secured is not known, but the idea undoubtedly is novel, and if, as a result, fewer persons are killed and injured in the streets of Paris, he will have deserved well of his countrymen.

ROYALTY ROAMS.

RUSSIAN DUKE NOW MISSING.

Mysteriously Disappears from Villa in Crimea.

Rumors Current That He Has Lost His Reason.

Was Banished Years Ago for Pawning Diadem.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Grand Duke Nicholas Constantinevich, an uncle of the Czar and the elder brother of the poet, Grand Duke Constantine, has disappeared from the villa he occupied in the Crimea.

There are rumors that he has gone crazy and is wandering about alone. He took no money with him, and no clothes except what he wore.

This Grand Duke's story is not generally known. He became infatuated with a brilliantly beautiful French actress, on whom he lavished incredible sums of money. One day he found himself in need of cash, and did something which has blighted the rest of his life. He sold a diadem belonging to his mother to a well-known St. Petersburg jeweler, intending to redeem it. The fact soon became known. A high official let it out over a bottle of champagne at a club, and the news went like wildfire through the city that the Grand Duke had stolen his mother's trinkets.

BANISHED BY THE CZAR.

It came to the ears of the city Prefect, who at that time was the notorious Gen. Trepoff. He felt obliged to report the matter to the Czar, Alexander II, who was not a very wonderful censor of morals, but who nevertheless was enraged at his relative's misdeeds. He banished his nephew from St. Petersburg, and the young man, in the company of an officer who was to act as his guardian, left Petersburg, never to return. That was thirty-five years ago.

The mother of the Grand Duke, who has now mysteriously disappeared, is the Grand Duchess, Alexandra Josephina, a German Princess, who is now 77 years old, and blind. It is said that she wept herself blind because of the great sorrows in her long life. She is a blameless, beautiful character, and has pleaded with three Czars for pardon for her son, but in vain.

A few months ago the son, then in Central Africa, fell very sick, and his elder sister, the Queen of Greece, begged that he might be permitted to visit the Crimea for rest and change. This was granted, and the present Czar, who has never seen him, said that if the Grand Duke wished, he might leave Russia and settle somewhere in a foreign country, but the offer was declined.

Czar Presents to France Map of That Country, Said to Be Worth $1,200,000.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Undoubtedly the most valuable map in the world has just been presented by the Czar to the French republic.

It is a map of France, wholly composed of precious stones and said to be worth $1,200,000. Each stone is from a Russian mine, the ground work of the map is of polished jasper, in which the eighty-seven departments of France in brilliant stones are inlaid. The largest cities are represented by unusually precious jewels. Paris is a brilliant ruby, Havre an emerald, Lille a diamond, Rouen a sapphire, and so on.

The rivers are marked by thin lines of platinum. All the names of places are in solid gold.

The Queen, on learning she had won the toy, said the Teddy bear would suit the little Prince admirably and ordered it sent.

Feed Baby Hippopotamus.

PARIS, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] To provide a wet nurse for a young hippopotamus doesn't seem an easy propostion, but this has just been achieved at the Jardin des Plantes, where for the fourth time a hippopotamus has given birth to a foal. Again, as on former occasions, the mother has refused to suckle the little one. This time, however, life was saved, for goats have taken the role of foster mother. Five goats were sufficient for the first day, but eight goats were required three days later. It is feared the whole stock in the menagerie will be insufficient if the baby's appetite continues to increase in the same proportions.

New Play in Cemetery.

PARIS, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The order of the prefect of police prohibiting diabolo in narrow streets had the curious effect of driving devotees to play the game in cemeteries. The Police Commissary, within whose ward the great Pere Lachaise is situated, was visited this week by a widow occupying a prominent position in Paris society, who protested strongly against the practice. She had taken flowers to her husband's tomb, and, according to the Parisian custom, was kneeling at the grave side saying prayers when she was struck on the head by a missile, which proved to be a stray diabolo projected into space by an amateur player.

$4 For Women's $5.00 And $6.00 Oxfords And Sailor Ties

Delayed shipments of several hundred pairs of women's ties and oxfords came last week—from 60 to 90 days late. These were bought to supply the heavy demand for low shoes during July and August—when they would have brought regular prices. Owing to late arrival, instead of $5.00 and $6.00 a pair, we mark them $4.00.

This illustration shows one of the styles—of patent leather. Same in Russia calf and gun metal calf. It is a one-hole Sailor Tie, wide silk bow, Cuban heel; all sizes and widths.

Here is one of the oxfords—with wide ribbon lace; Cuban heel. Made in patent leather and gun metal calf. Full range of sizes. Other styles included in the sale. Some of them may be seen in one of our show windows.

$5 and $6 Oxfords and Sailor Ties at $4 a pair.

A Thanksgiving Sale At "The Owl" Stores

This Thanksgiving Sale (celebrating the opening of our eighth store) started last Tuesday. The response was instantaneous. Every "Owl" store in California was crowded from early morning until closing time. Each day since has been a busy day. It is unquestionably the biggest success that the "Owl" has ever scored—which is saying a whole lot. Being desirous that every person within reach of the "Owl" stores should be given an opportunity to share in this money saving event, we have decided to continue the sale one week longer. There are now eight "Owl" stores in California—all good ones, and getting better every day. Here is a brand new list of specials for this week. Everything in readiness for easy choosing.

EUROPE'S REPOSE IS MENACED BY MOROCCO.

Powers Face Question as to How Defense Plans of France and Spain Can Be Prevented from Causing Egyptianization of Land of Moors.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Matters are not improving in Morocco, and the Paris government publicly admits that France has a heavy task on her hands.

The tribesmen are fighting with a fanaticism which, as a writer in the Petite Parisienne says, was supposed to be the characteristics of the Moor of fiction only.

Only this is the least menacing feature of the case. What is disturbing Europe now is the fact that Moroccan conditions are no longer those of irregular or desultory encounters between incapably led and poorly-equipped natives and the disciplined regiments of Europe. They have entered one phase of a formidable civil war.

The question before the powers is how to prevent the cautionary and defensive plans of France and Spain as the mandators of Europe and the United States from expanding logically and inevitably to operations which might end in the Egyptianization of Morocco.

For the first time Berlin opinion sounds irritated and London opinion extremely cautious. The suggestion made by M. Jaures that the powers signatory to the Algeciras convention reassemble to recast an unworkable instrument has not met with the approval of the German press, an important section of which holds that the best way out of the difficulty is for Paris and Berlin to get together and settle the new problem without outside coöperation.

door principle respected—that is all. Even should France extend the occupation indefinitely, I believe Germany recognizes that by allowing the French government a free hand it might establish a basis on which to secure return favors elsewhere, at the same time doing much toward allaying the anti-German sentiment in the neighboring country. Even the worst of remaining French Chauvinists, who are still demanding revenge for Alsace-Lorraine, might well be satisfied to accept Morocco as a consolation.

"It is an error to suppose that the German government wants Morocco. It interfered there only as a means of asserting its right to participate in the councils of the European family of nations."

The conviction is expressed here, both in official circles and the press, that the question of settling the damage claims due the German merchants in Morocco will not lead to difficulties with France, it being confidently expected that that country will provide full indemnification for these losses.

RIVAL SULTANS HEAD OPPOSING ARMIES.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

TANGIER, Sept. 7.—Events in Morocco are marching on with great rapidity.

Yesterday both the Sultans, Abdel Aziz and Mulai Hafid, were reported to be leaving the rival capitals, Fez and Morocco City, at the head of armies which had been levied in hot haste and which may decide within a fortnight the destiny of Morocco's monarchy.

The immediate objective of these forces is the ancient city of Rabat, on the Atlantic seaboard, the prior possession of which great center of the Western Islam's national life probably would have an important if not a decisive bearing upon the struggle for supremacy. Half way between Fez and Morocco City, Rabat is the natural frontier port dividing Northern and Southern Morocco, and there the dramatic interest of the situation of the moment culminates.

Both Sultans are sons of the same father and they are daily issuing passionate appeals to the patriotism and religious enthusiasm of the nation, each denouncing his rival as being worse than an infidel, a traitor to Islam. In the meanwhile the powers have not yet decided whether to recognize Mulai Hafid as Sultan, seemingly awaiting the result of the appeal to the arbitrament of civil war. The general impression here that France and Spain have resolved upon the immediate occupancy of all the Moroccan seaports has caused universal consternation, for it is feared that any extension of intervention of France and Spain will infallibly provoke further massacres of Christians and Jews in the coast towns.

A situation never contemplated at the time of the Algeciras convention has developed, and it appears that serious events will follow.

GERMANY WILL HAVE SOMETHING TO SAY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

BERLIN, Sept. 7.—Germany's reply to France's circular note to the signatories of Algeciras convention will not be drawn up before Monday next.

It is understood in the most influential quarters that Germany will not have a negative reply to the suggestion that the international Moroccan police be temporarily constituted from purely French and Spanish elements. Some reserves, however, will certainly be made on the subject. It is fully understood here that the present situation at Casa Blanca and Mazagan was not foreseen at the time of the Algeciras convention, but Germany will consent for the moment to rely on French loyalty to the engagements entered into.

No limitation, therefore, is likely to be placed on the French military movements so long as they are necessary for the protection of Europeans and of Moroccan ports.

REFUGEES APPEAL FOR PERMISSION TO LAND.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GIBRALTAR, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Representative citizens have asked the authorities to allow the disembarkation of Moroccan refugees on their way to Spain, as the Spanish authorities are willing to admit any number of them.

The press comments severely on the restrictions imposed by the local government and its harsh attitude toward the refugees.

The Spanish warships Numancia and Emperador Carlos V. will land part of their crews at Tangier tomorrow.

RUSSIAN DIPLOMAT TAKES HOPEFUL VIEW.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Some important changes in the diplomatic situation in Europe are likely to grow out of this Moroccan affair," said a Russian diplomat, who is passing through Berlin, to the Times correspondent today. "I do not expect that the eventualities will be disturbing to the general peace, but future developments may easily lead to the reopening and a fresh settlement of the Moroccan question along new lines.

"France undoubtedly has underestimated the difficulties that now confront her in that region. Even after she subdues the disaffected elements and restores peace the necessity of collecting an indemnity with which to reimburse herself for the expenses of the campaign may require her to take charge of the customs administration at the various ports and to occupy the country for a protracted period.

"I do not believe that Germany will [illegible] to this. She wants the open-

THANKS OF BRITAIN SENT TO SPAIN.

PEACE NEGOTIATIONS SUGGESTED BY MOORS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

PARIS, Sept. 7.—A special dispatch from Casa Blanca was received here this afternoon, stating that the various Moorish tribes around that place had asked Gen. Drude, the French commander, to suspend hostilities for the purpose of negotiating peace.

The general, the dispatch says, agreed to remain inactive until tomorrow, when he will march on the Addert.

The correspondent who sent the dispatch says it is suspected that the tribesmen in negotiating with the French commander are only seeking to gain time.

Vice-Admiral Philibert cables from Casa Blanca under yesterday's date that negotiations continue at Mazagan on the subject of the disputed ownership of the arms and ammunition delayed there. He adds that all the Moroccan ports remain quiet.

CHICAGO'S STREET CARS.

JUDGE BREWER REVOKES PLAN.

CHAOS REIGNS IN CHICAGO RAILWAY CIRCLES.

Associate Justice of Supreme Court Knocks Out Scheme for Reorganization of Union Traction Company. What Decision of Appellate Court Means.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Chaos reigned in Chicago street railway circles today when Associate Justice Brewer of the United States Supreme Court, presiding in the Circuit Court of Appeals, revoked the plan approved by Judge Grosscup for the reorganization of the Union Traction Company.

In its immediate effects, this decision of the Court of Appeals is more sensational than the one of the Supreme Court of the United States in the "ninety-nine-year case." It means: First, that the Chicago Railways Company will not be able to accept the ordinance given by the city and ratified at the spring election.

Second, that if the present properties of the Union Traction Company are to be rehabilitated, and put in working order, it will have to be done by the Chicago City Railway Company.

In short, it means that the South Side Company will have to extend its service over the entire city, and it will be a case of "one city, one company."

IMPROVEMENTS DELAYED.

But until all this can be arranged there will be no improvement in the street-car service on the North and West Side lines. Cars will have to run, and the Union Traction Company will have to keep on running them, but they will be the same old cars, run in the same old way.

What the effect will be on the owners and creditors of the Union Traction properties nobody could exactly figure out tonight.

As for the stock of the Union Traction and its underlying companies, neither could anybody figure out any definite value for it. The properties must all be sold at forced sale, and with the Chicago City Company, as the only corporation or person able to make a bid, the promise is not good for any high offers.

LETTER OF LAW.

Under the ordinance, it was necessary that the Chicago Railway Company should have possession of the Union Traction properties, so that it could accept the rights granted on September 14, which is next Saturday.

Judge Grosscup had ordered a lease to be made to this company, so the arrangement could be completed.

Bondholders objected to the award of securities which Judge Grosscup and Prof. John C. Gray had made in their arbitration of the division of securities, and the appeal was taken to the Circuit Court of Appeals, with Justice Brewer presiding.

MAIN OBJECTION.

The main objection was that the bonds to be sold for the rehabilitation of the properties were to take precedence over existing bonds.

Judge Grosscup held that this was necessary, because the public interest demanded that this rehabilitation be done, and be done at once.

He also asserted that such an arrangement was better from a financial viewpoint than to have the bondholders stick to their legal rights.

It was here that the judge was overruled.

BIG SHOE SALE MONDAY

Shoes at Half Price and Less at the Mammoth Shoe House, 519 S. Broadway.

Wind-Up of the 17th Annual Clearance Sale of Shoes—A Big Money Saving Opportunity.

MORE TENNIS MONDAY.

Juniors Are Not Able to Finish Their Battle—Sutton Girls Win Ladies' Doubles.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DEL MONTE, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Strahan meets Getz in the finals of the junior tennis event Monday. Both players are members of the Golden Gate Park Junior Club, the latter being still under 15 years of age.

Miss Florence Sutton and Mrs. B. O. Bruce beat Mrs. Farquhar and Miss Golda Meyer in the finals of the ladies' doubles, 7-1, 6-0. There is no change trophy for the event, so that the championship in ladies' doubles for 1907 rests with the winners. Miss Hazel Hotchkiss and Miss Ethel Radcliff, last year's holders, were defeated easily by Mrs. Bruce and Miss Sutton in one of the earlier rounds.

James and Foley took the doubles championship from Foley and Adams in straight sets this afternoon.

Sinsabaugh and Miss Florence Sutton are mixed doubles champions for 1907, for they defeated Bell and Mrs. Farquhar in the finals in two 6-4 sets.

Mrs. Hewett won the ladies' consolation golf tournament today, and Mrs. Loesor the ladies' continuous handicap event.

Venice Bowling Team.

At Venice the initial steps have been taken for the organization of a bowling club. The prime movers in the organization are F. A. Short, Capt. Amos A. Fries and George Valenzuela, who with one other bowler yet to be selected, will form a four-man team. This bunch will issue challenges to like teams from Los Angeles, Santa Monica, Pasadena and Long Beach, and a tournament will be arranged. Venice now has eight maple alleys and two new ones are to be added at once.

TRUST RELATIONS.

NO AGREEMENT, SPRECKELS SAYS.

DENIES MAKING TRADE CONTRACT WITH SUGAR TRUST.

Declares the Western Refining Company Kept Prices on the Coast Low Enough to Keep Havemeyer's Company Out of That Territory.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] John D. Spreckels, president of the Western Sugar Refining Company, testified before United States Commissioner Richards in regard to the relations existing between his company and the American Sugar Refining Company of New York, the so-called Havemeyer sugar trust.

He was closely questioned in an effort to bring out the existence of a territorial agreement between the two concerns, but he denied absolutely that there ever had been any contract or agreement, written or understood, and he declared that his company sold sugar as far east as the freight rates would permit.

It was established from his testimony that Havemeyer and his men own a large minority of the stock of the Western Sugar Refining Company, but he denied that either he or his father, Claus Spreckels, has any interest in the American Sugar Refining Company. He declared that the price of sugar on the Coast was held low enough to prevent competition from Havemeyer, except in a few special grades which the Western does not manufacture.

Attorney Hutchinson went back to the organization of the Western Sugar Refining Company. Spreckels said that at that time there were two refineries in this State—the California and the American. The new company took over both. It was before this, according to the witness, that the Spreckels refinery in Pennsylvania had passed over to the American Sugar Refining Company.

"Was the sale of the Spreckels Pennsylvania Refinery and the formation of the Western company part of one general arrangement?" asked Hutchinson.

"It followed the other," Spreckels replied. "We were operating there, they here. It was only a question of time when one would have to go under. By eliminating competition we could cheapen production."

"Was the price of sugar to the public reduced after competition ceased?" the attorney went on. Spreckels's memory was weak and it happened "so long ago."

"You do not mean, do you," Hutchingson continued, "that you formed the Western company for the purpose of reducing the price to the public?"

"No, I don't suppose so," Spreckels admitted, with a faint smile.

"As a matter of fact," the lawyer persisted, "the price of sugar went up substantially after the competition was done away with."

"It is more than probable," Spreckels replied, "because we had been operating at a loss."

How to Approach Work.

Put the right spirit into your work. Treat your calling as divine—as a call from principle. If the thing itself be not important, the spirit in which you take hold of it makes all the difference in the world to you. It can make or mar the man. You cannot afford grumbling service or botched work in your life's record. You cannot afford to form a habit of half doing things, or of doing them in the spirit of a drudge, for this will drag its slimy trail through all your subsequent career, always humiliating you at the most unexpected times. Let other people do the poor jobs, the botched work, if they will. Keep your standards up, your ideals high.

The attitude with which a man approaches his task has everything to do with the quality and efficiency of his work, and with its influence upon his character. What a man does is a part of himself. It is the self-expression of what he stands for. Our life-work is an outpicturing of our ambition, our ideals, our real selves. If you see a man's work you see the man.

No one can respect himself, or have that sublime faith in himself which is essential to all high achievements, when he puts mean, half-hearted, slipshod service into what he does. He cannot get his highest self-approval until he does his level best.—[Success Magazine.

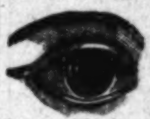
REMARKABLE INVENTION!

"Actina" a Scientific Appliance for Relieving Defective Eyesight—Has Achieved Wonderful Results.

If your eyesight is defective or you have any form of eye trouble that might endanger your eyesight, you should lose no time in investigating "Actina." It is applied directly over the eye and its patient action stimulates, and maintains the circulation of the blood, thereby removing congestion and assisting nature to repair the defects and restore the eyesight to normal condition. Hundreds of people owe the restoration of their eyesight to "Actina." Among them are the following:



Prof. T. S. Sigh, Mansfield, La.
Rev. J. M. Foster, Burton, Wash.
Rev. W. C. Goodwin, Moline, Kas.
Gen. Alex. Hamilton, Tarrytown, N. Y.
Rev. C. Brunner, Bridgeport, Conn.
Rev. Chas. H. Carter, East Springfield, N. Y.
Mrs. S. A. Donnella, Agt. U. S. Secret Service, Louisville, Ky.
Robt. A. Baker, Ocean Park, Cal.

Many persons wearing spectacles might better be without them. Strengthen the eye by improving the circulation and it will not require an artificial lens. If you are interested and desire to know what the "Actina" is and what it is accomplishing, write today for our FREE TRIAL OFFER and OUR POOK—TREATISE ON DISEASE. The book contains most valuable information. A postal card will bring it to you. Address Actina Appliance Co., Dept. 89H, 811 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo.

Fall Opening

It gives us great pleasure to announce our fall opening this season, for never before in our history have we been so well prepared to supply the demands of men who want stylish, perfect fitting clothes at moderate prices.

Our display is immense—thousands of patterns to select from, including all the correct weaves and colors for fall wear. Nobby browns, delicate olive shades, smart gray mixtures, stripes, checks, plaids, plain colors, every conceivable kind of suiting is here for your selection.

We make stylish, perfect fitting suits to order for $15.00—the same sort other tailors ask $25 and $30 for.

At $20 and $25 we turn out extremely fine suits of genuine imported worsted.

You can't match them anywhere else for less than $35 or $40.

Potter Oil Company

Own 2400 Acres of Oil Land

THIS LAND IS LOCATED IN SANTA BARBARA COUNTY
SIX MILES OF SUMMERLAND. ALL OF IT SHOWS INDICATIONS OF OIL. ONE-HALF MILE SOUTH OF THE LAND IS THE HIGGINS WELL PRODUCING 800 BBL. A DAY.

Three-Fifths of the Company's Stock In the Treasury

This stock to be sold to develop oil and for nothing else.

All individual stock has been pooled for one year, or until dividends have been paid on treasury stock sold.

This is the cleanest, fairest offer ever made.

Look around and you will find on all sides many who have made money out of oil and are now living in comfort. You now have a chance to do the same. The prosperity of Southern California depends on its oil production. The demand which is growing day is fast overtaking the production and more wells must be put down.

The Potter Oil Company has the land and the location, being in a well known and proven field, and on the S. P. R. R. and within a mile of the ocean.

Send to us for a map of property. The proceeds of the treasury stock now being sold at 10 cents a share, par value $1.00. Will all be used in putting down wells.

ELEVEN BALLOONS ENTERED IN AERONAUTIC CONTEST.

England, Germany and America Each Have Three Entries, While France Will Send Two Airships to Compete for the Gordon Bennett Cup in St. Louis Next Month.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Eleven balloons have been entered in the Gordon Bennett international aeronautic cup contest to be held in St. Louis, Oct. 21. The entries are two from France, three from England, three from Germany and three from the United States. Entries were made by Italy and Spain, but they were rejected because they were filed too late.

Under the rules of the contest one member of the Aero Club of France was named to act in charge of the contest committee, and that organization has appointed Maurice Mallet. The entries follow.

France—Aero Club of France, two balloons; pilots, Alfred LeBlanc and Rengasiner; aides, M. Mix and Charles Leve. Three entries were originally entered from France, but only two pilots were named up to Aug. 21, after which the pilots could not be filled.

England—Aero Club of the United Kingdom, three balloons; pilots and companions, Hon. C. S. Rolls, Griffith Brewer, Prof A., K. Huntington, J. T. C. Moore, Brabazon, Lord Royston, and Mr. Brabazon.

Germany—Deutcher Luftshiffer Verband, three balloons; "Dusseldorf," "Pommern" and "Schwaben," pilots and aides, respectively; Captains von Abercron and Heidmann, Oscar Erbsloh Mockel.

No companions have been named to go with pilots Erbsloh and Heidmann. Abercron and Erbsloh were pilots in last year's races.

America—Aero Club, of America, three balloons; pilots, Lieut. Frank P. Lahm, alternate, Maj. Henry E. Hersey, in his own balloon "United States." Alan R. Hawtry in his balloon "St. Louis," and J. McCoy in his balloon "America."

ENTERTAINS MAHARAJAH.

Mrs. Chaffee Repays Social Honors Bestowed on Her During Her Visit to India.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LUCERNE, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] William Waldorf Astor has arrived at Schweizerhof, and is occupying his usual suite. He expects to remain some time.

Mrs. Chaffee, who is an American, just returned from a trip around the world, entertained Maharajah Kapurthala, his sons, four young Princes, Col. Massey, Capt. Chatterjee, aid-de-camp, and Mr. and Mrs. Francis Debenham at tea on the terrace at the Palace Hotel Monday.

Mrs. Chaffee was one of a large house party of forty people entertained by the Maharajah at his palace in Punjab, India, during his birthday week.

At the festivities at the Hotel National are Mrs. Raymond Rodgers, wife of Capt. Rodgers, U.S.A., and Miss Rodgers.

Mrs. James J. Brown of Denver gave a large musical reception. The hostess rendered several Tyrolese songs to the accompaniment of a zither.

MONEY IS SENT WEST.

Secretary Cortelyou Attaches Condition That Cash Shall Not Return East for Speculation.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Rumors which have circulated in quarters opposed to the administration that Secretary of the Treasury Cortelyou, under his customs receipts deposits programme for the moving of crops, is secretly placing government funds in banks which were of assistance to the Republican party in the last national campaign, are denied at the Treasury Department.

Although no figures are available and the names of the depositories are being kept secret, it was stated today that the bulk of the deposits are being made in the West, with the implied stipulation attached that the money shall be used for commercial purposes and shall not find its way to New York to be used in speculation.

Intimations are heard that the Democrats will introduce a resolution at the opening of Congress, calling upon the Secretary to inform Congress just where and in what amount this money has been deposited.

It is understood the department will not object to the passage of such a resolution. The deposits made under the Cortelyou plan aggregate about $5,000,000 to date.

"IN 'IGH SOCIETY."

SWELL AFFAIR FOR SERVANTS.

MAIDS, BUTLERS, FOOTMEN AND CHAUFFEURS ENTERTAINED.

Mrs. Walter Farwell, Whose Husband Is Son of Late Multi-millionaire Senator of Illinois, Gives Dinner-Dance That Is the Talk of Colorado Springs.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

COLORADO SPRINGS (Colo.) Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Oh, 'ow I loike society, real society, 'igh society."

That's what the band played for a two-step at Mrs. Walter Farwell's dinner-dance at Broadmoor last night. And nobody even dreamed of smiling.

Mrs. Farwell's dinner-dance will be the talk of the Springs for a good deal longer than nine days. It was given for the maids and butlers, footmen and chauffeurs of Mrs. Farwell's friends. All the servants of the Springs' smart set were among those present, and really, don't you know, the amount of etiquette to the square inch was absolutely appalling. A rash youth who strayed in front the smart set ventured to repeat a little quotation during the elaborate supper:

"Father wasn't content to swing all day long in banyan limb.
"He went into the world to get proper ideas of etiquette.
"He got into the swagger set.
"Look what they did to him."

Mrs. Farwell wouldn't listen to him for a minute. "She—h," she said. "Look around you and learn some manners."

The supper was unusually elaborate and the decorations were nothing short of magnificent. Mr. Farwell is a son of the late ex-Senator Farwell of Illinois, who was a good many times a millionaire. His three sisters are all society leaders in Chicago, and belong to the smartest sets in Paris and New York—Mrs. Reggie DeKoven, Mrs. Chatfield Taylor, and Mrs. Walter Hobart.

College Professor Seeks Shelter at Police Station and Finds Son in Adjoining Cell.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Made desperate by his poverty and to alleged refusal of his relatives to shelter him, J. L. Van Henert, formerly professor at the University of Chicago, applied at the Hyde Park Police Station yesterday, asking that he be sent to the hospital at Dunning.

When placed in a cell, Van Henert found locked in the adjoining cell his son John, from whom he had been separated for years, and who had been arrested on a charge of larceny.

Van Henert has been using the name of J. A. Quossin since he was released from the university. Van Henert occupied the chair of languages at the college from 1896 to 1898.

The following year, it is said, he was dismissed for drinking. The professor was known as the "King of Bohemia," and it is said that he speaks twenty-one languages—thirteen Oriental and eight European.

He won prominence while at school by engraving the Lord's prayer on a Canadian nickel. Prof. Van Henert has been living with his sister, Mrs. Romura Sarker. It is said he had been compelled to leave her home on account of his drinking.

STABS SON TO DEATH.

Father Claims Boy Was Drunk and That Deed Was Done in Self-Defense.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 7.—Locked up in a cell at the police station awaiting the Coroner's inquest, Christian Kelley, 47 years old, grieves over the death of his son, whom he stabbed to death last night.

The son, Christian Kelley, Jr., 20 years old, came home last night under the influence of liquor and was reprimanded by his father. It is claimed by the father that the son attacked him with a chair and that, in the struggle, the elder Kelley, in self-defense, stabbed his son with a pocket knife.

The son fell to the floor and died soon after. The tragedy occurred in the presence of the young man's mother and sister.

HOTEL LA CASA GRANDE TO BE REORGANIZED.

New Management of Pasadena Inn Will Give Best of Service—"Extra Dry" Tract to Be Opened—Improvements Promised for Mariposa Avenue—Gardners t Issue Magazine.

PASADENA, Sept. 8.—That the Hotel La Casa Grande will be a first-class house is the belief of D. M. Linnard, who recently purchased a 49 per cent. interest in the hosteiry on a basis of $175,000.

"The four stockholders of the hotel have not had a formal meeting since I returned from the east and its future has not been considered," said Mr. Linnard tonight. "I believe that the one idea of all four men, is to place it on as high a scale as possible, giving the best of accommodations and service. The manager has not yet been selected but he will be soon. In purchasing an interest in the property I believe that I have made a good investment.

"I would like to correct the impression that I have purchased the Pomona Inn. What I did do was to meet the request of a number of Los Angeles and Pasadena financiers who bought the Inn, to secure for them a manager. I believe that the sort of an establishment they expect to make out of the Pomona Inn is a good thing for Southern California. It would please me to see a dozen good taverns in the counties of Southern California. My associates and myself have a complete chain in the Casa Loma, Maryland, Leighton and Virginia, and we are not looking for any 'missing links.'"

"EXTRA DRY" TRACT.

Three hundred acres of land lying in the northwest section of this city will be opened with water privileges after September 17, if the stockholders of the North Pasadena Land and Water Company approve of the decision of the Lincoln Avenue Improvement Association.

At meeting tonight, the policy of opening up the land west of Glen avenue and south of Dakota street, to the Arroyo banks, was discussed, and by a unanimous vote it was decided to recommend the extension of the North Pasadena Water Company's pipes to the tract. This district has long been known as the "Extra Dry" tract.

Superintendent of City Streets John Beyers was at the meeting, and stated that Lincoln avenue would be graded to Montana street as soon as the rains come.

MAY LOSE HEARING.

H. W. Schafer may lose hearing in the ear that was almost torn off when he fell on the track in the motorcycle races at Tournament Park on Monday. Since his fall, the young man has suffered from deafness.

Schafer was going at a high rate of speed on a track that had not been properly prepared for the races. His wheel skidded and he was thrown to the ground, striking on the left side of his head. His ear was sewed on after he regained consciousness and he was believed to be as well as ever. It was not until later that he discovered he was deaf.

RESCUE CAUSES JOY.

News from London reached here today of the rescue of Ernest Leffingwell and other members of the Anglo-American Arctic expedition. Leffingwell has many friends and relatives in this city. His father has just completed a handsome residence on the banks of the Arroyo Seco.

AVENUE WILL BE EXTENDED.

Mariposa avenue will soon be extended to Fair Oaks avenue. The extension of the Pacific Electric line up North Fair Oaks avenue from Montana street, and the abandonment of the line on Raymond avenue will cause a new road to be built from Fair Oaks avenue to Mariposa avenue, as well as from Raymond avenue over the site of the old electric line to Mariposa avenue.

Fruit Growers in This Exchange Receive Over One Million Dollars for Last Crop.

AZUSA, Sept. 7.—The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Azusa-Covina-Glendora Fruit Exchange was held in this city today. Reports received from the officers showed the season just closed was the most satisfactory ever had. Treasurer W. R. Powell reported gross receipts of $1,010,267.87, with incomplete returns on August shipments sufficient to increase the amount by nearly $100,000; 552,904 boxes of fruit, equivalent to 1454 cars, have been shipped during the past year, and the average f. o. b. price has been about $2 a box for all grades, including oranges and lemons. The past year's crop was the largest ever grown in the valley. The exchange controls the marketing of over 90 per cent. of the crop.

The following directors were elected for the ensuing year: W. R. Powell, C. S. Whitcomb, J. J. West, Glendora; W. W. Heth, W. C. Hendrick, Azusa Citrus Association; James Slauson, J. T. Lindley, Foothill Citrus Association; H. R. Seat, Irwindale; William Bowring, Charter Oak. The directors elected officers as follows: W. R. Powell, president; J. T. Lindley, vice-president; P. C. Daniels, secretary; W. R. Powell, treasurer; P. C. Daniels, representative on the board of directors of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange.

NEWS NOTES.

Miss Hazel Bowden, a Los Angeles elocutionist, gave a dramatic recital at the Azusa Operahouse last evening, assisted by local musical talent. Miss Bowden's recitations were well received as was the vocal solo by George Fuhr. Mrs. Damerel of Covina, Miss Helen Jeffrey, Miss Fanny Granville and Miss Mattie Canavan contributed pleasing instrumental numbers.

There are 103 pupils enrolled at Citrus Union High School, an increase of 25 per cent. over any previous year.

MONROVIA.

MONROVIA, Sept. 7.—J. M. Thomas and Clint Seems brought back the head of a large five-point buck today from their hunting trip in Antelope Valley. Mountain quail were found in unusual numbers and the trout fishing in Big Rock Creek was excellent. They report that not in years have valley quail been so plentiful.

Road Overseer Glenny of the Duarte road district is giving the highways a liberal application of oil. A long delay has ensued since the county placed the order for oil and considerable complaint resulted from the dusty roads. The oil is from the Bakersfield district and is 80 per cent. asphaltum, the heaviest ever used in the district.

A daylight burglar entered the home of Mrs. Catherine Ford yesterday and secured a valuable gold watch and chain and several other pieces of jewelry. It is supposed that the thief observed Mrs. Ford leave the house and forced an entrance through a window at the rear of the dwelling. No trace of him has been found.

The Young Men's Christian Association of the State has arranged to hold a "Young Men's Sunday" in Monrovia tomorrow. The pulpits of the city will be occupied by speakers at the regular morning service. At 3 p.m. a mass meeting will be held in the operahouse and a union service at the Methodist church at 7:30 o'clock in the evening.

F. N. Hawes, cashier of the American National Bank of this city and Mrs. Hawes left today for a three weeks' vacation which will be passed at Palomar and Coronado.

Mrs. Henry S. McKee, with her children, returned yesterday from Santa Barbara, where she passed the month of August at the Hotel Potter.

VENICE FIGHT STILL ON.

VENICE, Sept. 7.—There was a joint meeting of the representatives of the disincorporation movement and the "antis" at the Hotel Decatur last night. The session lasted far into the night, but no decision was made public. No agreement was arrived at, and the battle is still on.

SOCIETY NOTES.

Mrs. R. A. Phillips, wife of City Trustee Phillips, entertained a number of representative society women of Venice at a delightful luncheon Friday afternoon, in honor of Mrs. J. O. Twitchell of Chicago, who has been spending the summer here. The parlors and dining-room were beautifully decorated with carnations and smilax for the occasion, and a most pleasant time was had. Mrs. Twitchell left for her home in the East last evening. Those present at the luncheon were: Mmes. Kinney, Wheatley, King, Dwyer, Thomas, Blagge Cary, Dike Bouck, Sibley, French, Weld, Merry and Miss Slauson.

O. L. Goodwin of Washington, D. C., is among the guests at Hotel St. Marks.

Miss Lelia M. Trickle of Los Angeles is visiting relatives and friends at Venice and Ocean Park.

REDONDO PERSONALS.

REDONDO, Sept. 7.—A very pretty little wedding took place here Thursday evening, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Thomas, when their daughter, Miss Nita Thomas, and John I. Williams were married. Rev. H. K. Vann of the Redondo M. E. Church, officiating. The attendants were Miss Nellie Mowrer and Scott Thomas. The house was tastefully decorated for the occasion. The ceremony was performed beneath a wedding bell of Redondo carnations. The bride's gown was of white silk covered with Val. lace. Refreshments were served after the wedding. The contracting parties are among Redondo's smart set and have hosts of friends. The happy couple left for Redlands on their honeymoon.

Joseph Wheelock of Phoenix, Mrs. Thomas McDougal and daughter of Cincinnati, Mr. and Mrs. Colsher of Douglas, are registered at the Redondo Hotel.

Mrs. J. P. Boulder of Prescott is the guest of her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hanson.

Attorney F. P. Thompson and family of Los Angeles, have taken a cottage on the Esplanade for a month.

W. A. Spaulding was the guest of Judge Groff at his palatial residence on the beach front Wednesday.

Marco Hellman was a visitor here this week.

BUCKEYE DAY.

OHIO SOCIETY OWNS BEACH.

CROWD ENJOYS SPECIAL OUTING BY THE SEA.

Picnic Pies, Speeches and Presidents, Features of the Day; Octogenarians in Force—Death Misses Merchant by an Eyelid — Bad Young Man Beats Mother-in-Law.

LONG BEACH, Sept. 7.—"Buckeye Day" at the beach proved a big success, and hundreds of yellow badges indicated that about 700 former Ohio residents were on hand. They were present from all parts of California, but Los Angeles, Pasadena and Ocean Park sent the largest crowds.

Headquarters were established on the picnic deck of the auditorium, where registration books were provided. At noon the basket dinners of the picnickers were spread and during the next hour one of the most important features of the programme was attended to.

After lunch brief speeches were given in the auditorium, including an address of welcome by the local president, Rev. E. W. Thornton, a response by President Fall of the Los Angeles society, and short talks by Ex-Gov. Powers, Capt. Frederick Cressy, Secretary A. M. Duncan and Attorney O. E. Monnette.

Two large placards adorned the picnic deck. One read "Ohio for Pies, Pikes, Pastures and Presidents," the other "Ohio for Brains, Beauty, Blood and Bravery," large initials P and B serving for the last four words.

Among the visitors were several old people, who greatly enjoyed the day. One was J. B. Beardsley, 88 years old, who lives with his daughter in this city. He is a native of Gallia county and comes from a family noted for longevity, his three brothers and sister being over 80 and still hale and hearty. Mr. Beardsley's children, all over 50, are still living. Another couple was Mr. and Mrs. George Meyers, Mr. Meyers celebrating his 82nd birthday today. The couple have been married sixty-two years.

NARROW ESCAPE.

Joseph Holder, a feed and fuel merchant, had a miraculous escape from death today. He boarded a Pacific Electric car on the side guarded by a gate and before he could crawl under, was struck by one of the center trolley posts and thrown with awful force to the street. When picked up he was unconscious and with his head cut and covered with blood was thought to be fatally injured.

Physicians found only a cut over his right eye and on the back of his head, and aside from bruises, he escaped other injury. Holder was taken to his home and is resting easily. He is about 45 years of age.

BEATS MOTHER-IN-LAW.

Several weeks ago, Dolly Murphy, aged 16, eloped with Elmer Alstedt, but later returned and asked forgiveness, which was accorded the girl, but Alstedt was excepted. Last night he braced his courage, and, going to the Murphy home, thrashed his mother-in-law and then fled, but was arrested this morning by Officer Austin, who found him at a livery stable. His hearing will come up next week before Justice Stiglits.

LONG BEACH NOTES.

The suction dredger at work on the inland harbor completed the dredging of slip No. 5 last night, and today began on slip No. 4, filling in between the two. The slips are dredged to show twenty-one feet of water at low tide.

Harry E. Sauner was today held to answer to the Superior Court for mistreating his step-daughter, Ethel, aged 13, for the past four years. His bond was fixed at $6000. His little victim is being cared for by the County Humane Society.

In a ragged but heavy batting game at the Long Beach Rink, last night, the University Merchants defeated Co. H in the indoor baseball league series by a score of 36 to 34.

The launches Primrose and Clara Bell left Alamitos Bay this morning for Catalina Island, but when they reached the channel were almost swamped by the high waves, and had great difficulty in getting safely back into port.

Mrs. Matilda Moore, aged 82, died this morning at the home of her daughter. Deceased was a native of Ohio, but had lived in California fifty-three years, and in Long Beach ten years.

A lively fight on the Pike today, between a Japanese curio dealer and a white boy, Willis Frink, caused some excitement. The boy was nagging the little brown man, who leaped over the counter and felled the boy. White boys and Japs promptly lined up, and trouble threatened between the two races until Officer Frank restored peace. There were no arrests.

LOOKING FOR LIGHT.

Citizens Will Try to Force Edison Company to Install Lamps. News Notes.

WHITTIER, Sept. 7.—Whether or no this city can compel the Edison Electric Company, operating under a franchise here, to put in lights on South Painter avenue, is causing much speculation. The company declares that a bonus of $500 should be paid to partly defray the cost of building the line along the avenue, and decline to install the lights under other circumstances.

On the other hand the City Council, residents of Painter avenue, and the Board of Trade, all declare just as emphatically that no bonus will be forthcoming. They will investigate the franchise under which the company operates in order to find a way of compelling it to install the desired lights. In the meantime the avenue, one of the most beautiful in the city, continues dark after nightfall.

WHITTIER NOTES.

The Whittier Union High School opened this week with the largest opening attendance in its history. The freshman class numbers sixty, and includes students from each of the seven grammar schools included in the district.

Miss Jessie Reynolds, who is to become the bride of Dr. Arthur Jessup in October, was the guest at a delightful gathering of nearly forty maids and matrons on Thursday afternoon. The pleasant affair was given by Mrs. Hibben Bailey and Miss Stella Edwards, at the home of the former on North Bright avenue. Miss Reynolds was the recipient of many pretty remembrances from those present.

W. B. Webster of Pasadena, has assumed the duties of parole officer, recently created by the State School trustees. He will make his headquarters at the State Reform School until he becomes acquainted with the boys and understands their individual needs. The new parole officer comes to the position with an experience as an officer in the United States army to aid him in organizing his department.

One of the pleasant events of the week was the "at home" given by Mrs. Sarah E. Wing on South Washington avenue, on Wednesday, to about forty ladies. During the afternoon announcement was made of the engagement of Miss Nannie Wing, daughter of the hostess, to Frank C. Owens of this city. This interesting bit of information was imparted during the afternoon in a clever little game. Miss Wing is a charming brunette, and has won a host of friends in this city. The wedding will occur early in October.

Mrs. Samuel Coffin celebrated her eighty-sixth birthday on Monday, about twenty friends aiding her in its proper celebration. In the evening was a delightful dinner, with a big birthday cake upon which glowed eighty-seven candles, as the centerpiece.

DEATH OF PIONEER.

Jacob Washabaugh, "Father of Alosta," Dies Suddenly of Heart Failure in Glendora.

GLENDORA, Sept. 7.—Jacob Washabaugh, 74 years old, one of the pioneers of this district and known as the "Father of Alosta," which was once the name of Glendora, died at his home this morning from heart failure, caused by over-exertion. The funeral will be at the home under the auspices of the G.A.R.; and Rev. Robert Grieve of the Christian church, will officiate. Burial will be in Oakdale Cemetery.

Early in the Civil War Mr. Washabaugh enlisted in the One Hundred and Nineteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry and served until mustered out at the end of the conflict as a corporal. Shortly after his marriage he came to California and settled in what is now Glendora and opened the first hotel in this place. For many years, however, he has been in the real estate business and was probably known personally to every man, woman and child in the district and highly regarded.

Sorrow overtook him in his old age, for it was only a few months before his death that he buried, first his only son, George, and then his only daughter, Sarah. He is survived by his widow.

WOMAN NEARLY DROWNED.

Visitor from San Bernardino Rescued from Waves at Ocean Park. Social Notes.

OCEAN PARK, Sept. 7.—While enjoying a bath in the surf, this morning, Miss Estelle Corbett of San Bernardino was nearly drowned. She had been in the water only a short time when a heavy swell knocked her over. She became greatly frightened and got out beyond her depth.

Her cries for help were heard by H. L. Price, a visitor from Los Angeles, who rescued her and assisted her to the home of her friends, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Kendall, of No. 427 Ocean Front.

SOCIAL NOTES.

The ladies of the Crescent Bay Woman's Club held a sociable and whist party on Thursday afternoon. The honors at the card tables were won by Mrs. L. W. McDaniel, the "consolation" falling to Mrs. J. M. White. In a guessing contest Mrs. R. W. Armstrong captured the first prize, and Mrs. Max Harris, the second.

James Smith and wife, after a tour through Japan, have returned to their Ocean Front home.

U. S. McCoy of Pasadena and his family, have taken a Wavecrest cottage for September.

Rex Unger and bride are enjoying their honeymoon at Paso Robles. On their return they will occupy quarters at the Redondo Hotel.

Mrs. A. R. Fraser was the hostess at a luncheon at her home on the Strand Wednesday afternoon. The table decorations were in pink, the center piece being of baby roses. The luncheon was tendered to the officers and members of the Ocean Park chapter, O.E.S., of which the hostess is the Worthy Matron.

LUMBER COMPANIES MERGE.

New Organization Includes Santa Monica, Ocean Park and Los Angeles Concerns—Mayor Honored.

SANTA MONICA, Sept. 7.—The Santa Monica Lumber Company, the J. S. Billhenmer Lumber Company of Ocean Park, and the J. E. Culver Lumber Company of Los Angeles have merged. The headquarters of the concern will be at Los Angeles. The new officers are J. E. Culver, president; J. S. Billheimer, vice-president, and E. Strong, manager. The title of the new company is the J. E. Culver Lumber Company.

GOLD STAR FOR MAYOR.

Mayor Dudley was wined and dined at the Casino last evening by members of the Council and city officials. City Clerk J. C. Hemingway officiated as toastmaster. The surprise to His Honor came when Councilman R. H. Dow presented to him a handsome gold star, set with diamonds, as a token of the esteem in which he is held. The Mayor responded in a happy manner.

SOCIETY ITEMS.

George L. Fairhead and family of Los Angeles have taken a home on Ocean avenue, and will remain here until next summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kohl and daughter, Dorothy, of Ventura, are spending a short vacation at Santa Monica, their former home.

The "Bi Bi" comedy of toys, given at the North Beach Auditorium on Friday evening, was a most enjoyable performance by the young society folk of Santa Monica, and was much enjoyed by those who turned out in numbers to witness the performance.

The organ recital at the Presbyterian Church Thursday night, given by J. M. Spaulding, organist of the Immanuel Presbyterian Church, Los Angeles, was an event in local musical circles. A. S. Blainger, a tenor soloist, assisted. The attendance of music lovers was large.

Tuna 110 pounds caught at Coronado.

BURBANK SOCIAL NOTES.

BURBANK, Sept. 7.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Luttge entertained a number of friends at their home on the San Fernando road on Tuesday. Miss June Luttge was hostess at a charming party at her home on Orange Grove avenue last evening, the home being tastefully decorated, and a pleasant evening was enjoyed by the young people.

Among those who visited Huntington Beach during the G.A.R. encampment were: Mr. and Mrs. N. P. Ogier, Mr. and Mrs. A. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Davis, Mrs. Bonner and Miss Clara Jones.

Mrs. Ben Davis and daughter, Catherine, returned to their home in Wisconsin Thursday, after a visit of three months with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Avery. Dr. G. W. Avery of Pasadena spent Sunday with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. Avery.

POLITICAL.

SECOND FIDDLE FOR JOHNSON.

Minnesota Governor "It" If Bryan Isn't.

Former's Presidential Stock Now Up a Point.

Nebraskan Would Do All the Eliminating.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Presidential stock of John A. Johnson, Governor of Minnesota, is looking up. Students of the Democratic situation take the view that if William J. Bryan wants the nomination, he can have it. If, perchance, he shall make up his mind, eventually, not to run again, Gov. Johnson is the man upon whom the party can probably unite.

Among some of Bryan's close friends here in the national capital, the impression is growing that he may decide not to take the nomination.

They say he does not desire to lead his party to another disastrous defeat, and he is not at this time certain that he can be elected.

His friends here say he may not give his final decision until next spring. He wants to wait and see what comes of the session of Congress. He may keep his party in suspense until a few weeks before the convention meets.

One thing Bryan has determined on, and that it that the coterie of eastern and southern Democrats, who have been busy for several months trying to break his hold on the party, shall not eliminate him. He proposes to do the eliminating himself, if any is done, and he wants to be in a position to have an influential part in naming the candidate.

The latest move on the part of the eastern and southern representatives of the party in favor of Lieut.-Gov. Lewis Stuyvesant Chandler of New York is regarded by most persons who know what is going on as another effort on the part of the New York conservatives, who have been working with a few southern Democrats, to bring out a candidate against Bryan.

These New York Democrats of the school that nominated Parker three years ago, are determined that Bryan shall not have the vote of the Empire State in the national convention, and they hope to keep him out of support from New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and some of the southern States. They have been at work on their programme for months.

"DRAGON" CAR HITS ROCKS.

D'Arcy Forced to Swerve Auto in a Strenuous Race, and Two Are Injured.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The local automobile enthusiasts who accompanied Charles A. D'Arcy on his "Dragon" run through this city, and as far as Galt, where he was wished all kinds of good luck, were surprised today to learn that he had met with a serious accident at the Summit. While trying to make good time down an incline he lost control of the big, heavily-loaded machine, and it went at a fast clip.

When near a turn, he saw that there was another steep hill to follow, and that the auto was liable to go over an embankment. To save himself and two men with him he turned the machine into the rocks and badly damaged it.

D'Arcy and Ben Turner were thrown out, while Mr. Martenstein was caught by the searchlight and brake and held. It required a lot of work to remove the driver, who was quite badly injured, and Martenstein was so badly injured that he had to retire from the race. Frank Sexton took his place.

Advices from Reno tonight say that the "Dragon" car arrived there today after a strenuous trip over the mountains. The car was repaired by the crew. It is running in record time, and barring further accidents, will be successful.

PROXY IN USUAL FORM.

Provision for Coming Union Pacific Meeting Declared to Be Same as Formerly.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Officials of the Union Pacific Railroad Company state there is nothing novel in the proxy for the coming annual meeting which authorizes "the approvtl and ratification of all actions of the board of directors and of the Executive Committee since the last annual meeting of the stockholders." The following statement was made public today by the secretary of the company:

"There is nothing at all in the provision of the proxy for the next annual meeting of the Union Pacific Railroad Company authorizing approval of the action of the board of directors and the Executive Committee. Precisely the same provision has been contained in all the proxies voted at every annual meeting for five years at least. It is one of the settled forms of the company."

TO DELAY ELECTIONS.

Application Is Made by Oklahoma Attorney for Writ of Supercedeas.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Associate Justice Brewer of the United States Supreme Court, asked tonight concerning a rumor circulated in Oklahoma City that application had been made for a writ of supercedeas to delay the Oklahoma elections, said:

"The application was made today by Attorney Nora of Oklahoma, but it has not been acted on."

He refused to state on what grounds the application was based.

PROBING MURDER MYSTERY.

Former Police Chief of Pittsburgh It at Work on the Phillips Case in Cleveland.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CLEVELAND (O.) Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Roger O'Mara, a Pittsburgh detective and former chief of the Pittsburgh police, who has taken a prominent part in the solution of many noted crimes, is assisting Chief Stamberger of Cleveland in his efforts to probe the mystery surrounding the suspicious death of John J. Phillips, the coal operator and broker, who was found dead at his home last Monday morning and was reported to have been killed by a burglar.

Last night it was stated that O'Mara had been retained by the Phillips family. Today O'Mara denied this statement and said he was working with Chief Stamberger and that he had been employed by a prominent coal operator who desires to know whether Phillips committed suicide or was murdered.

The report is that he is investigating in the interest of the insurance companies that are said to have carried large risks upon his life.

PATHFINDERS REVIEW TRIALS.

Twelve Men Who Joined in Rush to California in '49 Celebrate Admission Day.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Bound together by sentiment and affection because they had made history together, twelve old men who, in their youth, had gone to the goldfields of California in the rush of '49, gathered today at the Home Club, No. 6787 Wentworth avenue, to celebrate the fifty-seventh anniversary of the admission of California to the Union and to tell again the stories of adventure and hardship which they had lived.

Only thirty are left of 500 original members. It was nearly sixty years ago when they turned their faces to the west and left for the glittering unknown. An empire has arisen on their tracks since then and they met a tottering handful to glory in it.

George Custer, president of the association and present auditor of the board of education was one of the first men from the Middle West to cross the plains. He told the story of it again today and his listeners heard it again and thought of their own stories and smiled and nodded their heads in appreciation.

After luncheon, which was served at noon from the baskets which the old '49ers brought, Judge Tuthill addressed them, telling them how the work they had done in those first days had left its print on the empire that arose behind them.

SOPHS WIN IN RUSH.

Class Contest at Stanford Results in Several Bleeding Noses and Scratched Faces.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 7.—The freshmen-sophomore rush here today resulted in a victory for the sophomores, who succeeded in tying 116 of their opponents, while only 63 second-year men were disposed of when the count was made.

About 150 men from each class, armed with lengths of strong cloth, were in the struggle, which waged fiercely for half an hour. No one was seriously injured, though there were a few bleeding noses and scratched faces.

The event drew a large crowd, many coming from San José and San Francisco in automobiles to witness the contest. The victory of today awards class supremacy to the sophomores for the remainder of the year, and will enable them to enforce the set of rules they have drawn up for the regulation of the "babies."

These laws prohibit the freshmen from smoking pipes on the campus or sitting beneath the oaks near the quad, and compel them to always appear in public with the right trouser rolled well up, as a sign of their greenness.

WIRES MAY SOON BE NORMAL.

Government Interested in Restoration of Telegraph Service, and Settlement Is Promised.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Government officials here are interested in the speedy restoration of telegraph facilities and have been informed there is reason to believe that the telegraph service will have reached a normal state within a few weeks, but this assumption is not based upon a probable settlement of the strike.

It is said upon the best of authority that the telegraph companies will not, under any circumstances, agree to treat with their striking employés as an organized body, but will take back their men under the old conditions as business warrants.

SCHMITZ MAY VISIT MOTHER.

Judge Graham Permits Imprisoned Ex-Mayor to Spend Two Hours a Day With Her.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 7.—Superior Judge Graham today issued an order permitting ex-Mayor Schmitz to visit his mother two hours each day at her home. The aged woman is in poor health and has not seen her son since his incarceration.

DROWNED, YET CHILD LIVES.

Washed Down Irrigation Ditch for Fifteen Minutes Before Rescue.

FULLERTON, Sept. 7.—After being under water most of the time for about fifteen minutes, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Godwin was found floating down an irrigation ditch in East Orangethorpe this morning.

The child was unconscious and it was supposed that he was dead, but after hard work upon the part of his rescuers he was revived and this evening was in a fair way to recover unless attacked by pneumonia.

The baby was washed down the ditch for some distance and passed under two bridges.

PLANS FOR BIG SUGAR FACTORY.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE SENDS WORD OF AGREEMENT.

Santa Ana Committees Believe Telegram Sent to Eastern Capitalists Will Mean Big Plant in Operation in Time to Handle Next Year's Beet Crop—More Dairies.

SANTA ANA, Sept. 7.—The committees of the Santa Ana Chamber of Commerce which have been working to secure the establishment of a beet sugar factory in the lowlands southwest of Santa Ana, last night, telegraphed the assurance East that Santa Ana would raise the $100,000 in stock required to bring the factory here. This assurance was given, though there still remained $15,000 in stock to be subscribed.

The representatives of the Michigan capitalists who want to establish the beet sugar factory here are A. Heinze and H. S. Hadsall of Los Angeles, and the proposition made was that Santa Ana would secure the agreement to produce 2000 acres of sugar beets for three years and raise $100,000 in stock. Investigation shows that there are many thousands of acres of beet land on the Irvine ranch and in the lowlands stretching across from the ranch to the coast about Huntington Beach. The factory will be the making of this vast acreage.

The Chamber of Commerce believes that last night's telegram East practically settles the matter and that the factory machinery will be shipped and in place in time to handle a beet crop next year, though Santa Ana's obligations will not cease until the $100,000 is all subscribed. James Irvine, James McFadden, George W. Ford and G. J. Mosbaugh are among the heaviest local stockholders.

BREAK MILK FAMINE.

The dairy situation, which had assumed a serious aspect here with the retirement of a number of local dairymen, who claimed they could not live up to the regulations of the State Dairy Bureau, has been cleared by the coming into the field of two dairies, one from Los Angeles and one from Garden Grove. The Los Angeles firm is the Sanitary Golden Seal Dairy, and the Garden Grove firm is a new firm called the Jersey Dairy Company. The coming in of these firms causes the housewife to heave a sigh of relief.

SANTA ANA NOTES.

The Orange County Driving Club will hold its second free race meet Monday afternoon. Thirty local horses and several from Los Angeles and Riverside have been entered. The club is composed of Orange county horsemen interested in promoting the raising of good horseflesh.

Marriage licenses have been issued to Roderick MacDermott, aged 31, and Mabel Turner, aged 20, both of Los Angeles; Dudley H. Miller, aged 37, of Goldfield, and Fantine A. Boucher, aged 32, of Los Angeles; Edwin E. Weber, aged 25, and Elizabeth B. Rath, aged 26, both of Los Angeles.

ENEMY SPREADS REPORT.

ANAHEIM, Sept. 7.—Mrs. E. Honadel of this city writes to The Times that the report that her son-in-law, W. B. Hutchinson, formerly of Orange county, has been sentenced to twenty years in prison in Arizona on a charge of smuggling, is absolutely false. Mrs. Honadel asserts that an enemy of Mr. Hutchinson is spreading this report. When she left him in Cananea a few days ago Mr. Hutchinson was well and attending to his business, as usual.

Many Society People Ride in Their Machines to Idyllwild—Pine Wood Items.

IDYLLWILD, Sept. 7.—Mrs. Jotham Bixby, Jr., and Mrs. M. H. King of Long Beach are among the prominent people who have arrived at Idyllwild to spend some time. Dr. and Mrs. W. Smith of Los Angeles have also come for a short sojourn among the pines.

Miss Florence Bland of Pasadena, who has spent the past two months with friends at Belvedere, in Northern California, arrived this week for the remainder of the season. Miss Bland has been the recipient of much social attention during her northern visits, and bridge parties, luncheons, dinners and rowing parties have been given in her honor.

Ernest Hewitt of Pasadena, who spends each summer at Idyllwild, was called home this week by the illness of Mrs. Hewitt, who came down two weeks ago.

Dr. F. C. E. Mattison and Miss Mattison, who have spent the past three weeks in the mountains, returned Thursday, and will shortly leave for a short stay at Miramar, going in one of their machines.

Miss Nelye Dickson and Miss Lulu Dickson of Los Angeles, who have been in camp for the past two weeks, returned Thursday to Los Angeles. They motored over from Riverside in the Botsford machine. Miss Estelle Grannis of Los Angeles, who was also of their party, will spend some time at Idyllwild, having been joined by her sister, who will chaperone her.

Miss Mabel Newton of Los Angeles, who has been one of the popular girls at the summer resort, leaves the first of the week for her home.

J. A. Graves, Mrs. Graves and the latter's brother, F. T. Griffith, joined their families Friday, coming up to enjoy the races and gymkhana sports of Saturday. The Graves party leave in their machine Sunday.

Bonds Are Good.

Friendly Suit Decides Value of School Issue—Orange Land Developed. Social Notes.

RIVERSIDE, Sept. 7.—A friendly suit was tried before Judge F. E. Densmore in the Superior Court this morning to determine the validity of the $12,000 bonds recently issued by the Banning school district. These bonds were sold in August to the Los Angeles Trust Company, the company later refusing to accept them on the ground of an alleged technical irregularity in the proceedings. The suit was brought by W. S. Hathaway of Banning against the members of the County Board of Supervisors and the Banning school trustees. Chauncey McFarland appeared as attorney for the plaintiff, and Lyman Evans for the defendant.

After an examination of the proceedings, Judge Densmore decided in favor of the validity of the bonds, and declared that all proceedings in regard to the election had been regular. The Los Angeles Trust Company was released from its bid, and the bid of the Banning State Bank was accepted, for $350 premium, par and accrued interest.

MORE ORANGE LAND.

A tract of about 2500 acres of foothill land above the Box Springs road, recently purchased by Paul H. Blades, W. Mackie and J. Stearns of Los Angeles, will be subdivided into small ranches and put on the market. Heretofore the land has been considered outside of the orange area because of the lack of water. To bring the tract under irrigation, Mr. Mackie has been quietly at work for some time, and has struck a good underground vein about thirty-nine feet wide. Two wells have been sunk to bedrock, and an abundant flow has been secured. The land was formerly known as the Perrine ranch, and if improved, will be an important addition to Riverside's orange area.

NEW HOTEL.

David Cochrane, who for twenty years conducted the Holyrood Hotel in Riverside, has purchased the hotel at Beaumont. The hotel is an attractive three-story building, with fifty-five guest rooms and large dining-room and kitchen. The price paid has not been made public. Mr. Cochrane will open the hotel as soon as he can make the necessary improvements.

SOCIETY NOTES.

Two pretty and popular Riverside girls, Misses Florence and Julia McMahill, will become brides at a double wedding which will take place in the First Methodist Church, Friday evening, September 20. Miss Florence McMahill will be married to G. B. Alexander Rife of Redlands, and her sister will wed Guy Ralph Prior of Hemet.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Warren gave a reception at their home at No. 440 East Fifth street, Wednesday evening, in celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding, which took place at Martha's Vineyard. Roses and magnolia branches were employed in the decoration of the room where the receiving party stood, while scarlet geraniums and pepper berries were used elsewhere. One of the guests of honor was Mrs. I. W. Sweet of Newton, Mass., who was present at the wedding a quarter of a century ago.

Miss Cora Fletcher, a pretty San Diego girl, barely out of her teens, and Charles McLagan of San Francisco, a year her senior, were married at the County Courthouse Thursday afternoon, Rev. W. L. Tucker, pastor of the First Baptist Church, officiating. The young people left at once upon their honeymoon.

Miss Dorothy Wheelock, daughter of Prof. A. N. Wheelock, left Thursday to resume her studies at Rockford College, Rockford, Ill. On her way she will stop at San Francisco, where she will be joined by Miss Mabel Smith of Los Angeles, and Miss Mabel Scott of Riverside.

ELSINORE.

ELSINORE, Sept. 7.—S. G. Kinzer, a Long Beach hotel man, has secured a short option on the Lakeview Hotel. The hotel and the beautiful grounds are being put in fine shape by C. S. Traphagen, the owner, in readiness for the opening, October 1.

The grammar and primary schools open September 16. E. E. Smith is in charge of the grammar, and Miss Josephine Gibson of the primary grades. The High School opens later with quarters in the I.O.O.F. Hall. Prof. A. J. Olsen will be principal, and Miss Katherine McIntire assistant.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church has elected the following officers for the year: President, Mrs. C. D. Pool; vice-president, Mrs. Harris; secretary, Mrs. N. L. Dickson; treasurer, Mrs. James Stewart.

A. E. Stiles, who has large property interests in Warm Spring Valley, is here from Santa Monica.

Miss Luella Root, who has been visiting at the home of her father, W. C. Root, on Riverside street, left today for Pomona.

CHARTER AMENDMENTS.

Proposal to Lengthen Term of Councilmen, Also to Raise Tax Rate. News Notes.

SANTA BARBARA, Sept. 7.—There is a strong movement on foot here to change the term of service of Councilmen from two to four years, and to so arrange the personnel of the board that only half of it shall be changed by the recurring elections. The Councilmen propose to place the suggested amendment to the charter on the ballots at the December election.

The Council ratified the award of the contract for repairing the ocean bulkhead along the Eastern Boulevard to John Williamson, for $27,860. The proposition for raising the limit of tax rate from $1 to $1.50 by charter amendment was also discussed, and it is likely that this question also will be settled in December.

SANTA BARBARA NOTES.

That Santa Barbara is growing rapidly is indicated by the report of post-office receipts during the fiscal year. The business done during the quarter ending September 1 this year shows a gain of nearly $1500, as compared with the corresponding period of last year. The office has earned the rating of first class.

Dr. C. S. Stoddard, quarantine officer at this port, has been appointed assistant surgeon to the Marine Hospital at San Francisco. He has received orders to thoroughly inspect all vessels arriving here from the Bay City, for traces of bubonic plague. So far, Dr. Stoddard reports, nothing of the kind has shown itself.

The course of the proposed Owens River aqueduct runs through the Santa Barbara forest reserve. Yesterday Acting Supervisor Douglas started on a tour of inspection of the southeastern portion of the reserve. He will select a site for the more or less permanent camp of the tunnel drillers who will cut the five-mile shaft through the mountain range.

With a gigantic stage coach, containing a most luxurious and perfectly appointed camp outfit, and accompanied by saddlers and guests in the coach, together with a large retinue of servants, the Banning family, owners of Catalina Island, are encamped near Summerland. They arrived yesterday, and some of the party drove through this city on their way over to the Santa Ynez River for a stop of a day or two in that beautiful section.

At a meeting of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce last night, the proposed amendment to the charter providing for the establishment of a street-improvement commission was discussed at length, together with a general raking over of Santa Barbara's needs in the way of public improvements, principally better streets. The condition of the city's thoroughfares was compared unfavorably with those in southern cities, and it was all laid to the Vrooman Act, which was declared to be unjust. Repeal the Vrooman act, it was declared, and Santa Barbara will get good streets.

The fifteenth annual convention of the Santa Barbara County Christian Endeavor Society opened last night at the Presbyterian Church with addresses of welcome, music, and the naming of committees to handle the work of the organization. Today the real work began with two sessions. Conferences upon the various lines of work of the organization were held, followed by reports from the various committees. The evening was closed with an interesting programme of music.

SAN DIEGO CELEBRATES.

Mayor Starts Grading Work on New Railroad and City Rejoices—Franchise Election to Be Called.

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 7.—In accordance with the proclamation of Mayor Forward, the city indulged in a half-holiday this afternoon in recognition of the celebration of the commencement of the grading work on the San Diego and Arizona Railroad. People flocked here from the country districts.

Two hours of the early afternoon were devoted to a parade of automobiles and carriages, accompanied by two bands. The exercises incident to the turning of the first shoveful of earth were at the foot of Twenty-seventh street, on the water front. The turning was done by Mayor Forward, President John D. Spreckels of the railroad company being out of the city. As the Mayor grasped the shovel all the whistles in town were blown and bells were rung.

Dr. D. Gochenauer, president of the Chamber of Commerce, was chairman for the occasion. After his speech, there was an address by George W. Marston.

Before turning the first shoveful of earth, Mayor Forward spoke a few words. He was escorted to the scene of operations by A. E. Horton, father of the city, and Frank A. Kimball.

Other addresses were made by Rev. W. B. Hinson, pastor of the First Baptist Church, former State Senator M. L. Ward and William Clayton, the last named representing the Spreckels interests.

ELECTION TO BE CALLED.

The City Council, after much delay has granted the petition of E. Bartlett Webster for the calling of a special election to vote on the ratification of the franchise for a pleasure pier at the foot of B street. The date will be set on Tuesday. The City Auditor said that he would not certify to an ordinance calling the election unless money for expenses was in sight, and Mr. Webster has filed a certified check for $2500, with the provision that the election be held before September 30.

SAN DIEGO NOTES.

J. W. Stearns has been appointed a public library trustee, in place of Rev. C. T. Brown, resigned.

"Little Pete" has been fined $200 for operating a lottery at the corner of Second and J streets.

Charles W. Oesting succeeds the late E. E. Shaffer as a director of the Chamber of Commerce.

SOCIETY WEDDING.

Families of Political Prominence in Closer Bonds and Everybody Attended the Ceremony.

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 7.—A wedding of exceptional local interest was solemnized Thursday evening at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, when Miss Martha C. Ward, daughter of former State Senator M. L. Ward, became the wife of Warner Edmonds, son of former City Auditor B. J. Edmonds. Rev. C. L. Barnes of St. Paul's performed the ceremony, which was witnessed by most of the society people of the city.

Miss Helen Sheriff was the maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Misses Stella and Francis Henking and Mrs. Sidney Hill. The wedding was followed with a reception at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Edmonds left on the Owl train for the north, and upon their return they will live at National City in a house which has just been completed for them.

LED MERRY CHASE.

Deputy Sheriffs Harry Wright and Joe Sepulveda were led a merry chase yesterday by Joe Van Neck, who is wanted in Imperial county. He is charged with assaulting a woman at Calexico. Sheriff Mobley Meadows of Imperial county requested Sheriff Hammel to look out for the man, and the deputies discovered him in a cottage on San Julian street. The man, however, escaped by diving through a back window and climbing a high board fence while the deputies were gaining admission to the house.

MAN AND BOY ARRESTED.

In a boxcar, in the Southern Pacific yards, near North Alameda and Alpine streets, last night, S. R. Trout, an old man, and Robert Flemming, 14 years old, were found by an officer, and arrested. The lad is the son of J. M. Fleming of No. 501 Buena Vista street, a Southern Pacific section foreman. He was sent to the Detention Home, on the charge of violating the curfew ordinance. Trout was sent to the City Jail, on the charge of vagrancy. The lad said that Trout was endeavoring to induce him to go to Seattle with him.

CATARRH

This form of catarrh is most common—resulting from neglected colds—quickly cured with little cost by Drs. Shores' famous treatment.

"Is your nose stopped up?"

"Does your nose discharge?"

"Is your nose sore and tender?"

"Is there pain in front of head?"

"Do you hawk to clear the throat?"

"Is your throat dry in the morning?"

"Do you sleep with your mouth open?"

You can be easily cured now—don't let it run into complications.

THE BRONCHIAL TUBES

When catarrh of the head or throat is neglected or wrongfully treated, it extends down the windpipe into the bronchial tubes and after a while attacks the lungs. Quickly cured with little cost by Drs. Shores' famous treatment.

"Have you a cough?"

"Do you take cold easily?"

"Have you pain in the side?"

"Do you raise frothy materials?"

"Do you spit up little cheesy lumps?"

"Do you feel you are growing weaker?"

Don't risk neglecting these warnings—stop the disease before it reaches the lungs.

OF THE EARS

Catarrh extends from the throat along the eustachian tubes into the ears, causing a partial or complete deafness. Quickly cured with little cost by Drs. Shores' famous treatment.

"Is your hearing failing?"

"Do your ears discharge?"

"Is the wax drying in your ears?"

"Do you hear better some days than others?"

"Is your hearing worse when you have a cold?"

Don't neglect this until your hearing is irreparably destroyed.

OF THE STOMACH

Catarrh of the Stomach is usually caused by swallowing poisonous mucous, which drops down from the head and throat at night. Quickly cured at little cost by Drs. Shores' famous treatment.

"Is there nausea?"

"Do you belch up gas?"

"Are you constipated?"

"Is your tongue coated?"

"Do you bloat up after eating?"

"Is there constant bad taste in the mouth?"

Now is the time to be permanently cured. Drs. Shores' are curing hundreds every year.

VERY WET UNDER GROUND.

Water Expert Says Subterranean Supply in This Vicinity Is Increasing. No Famine Possible.

This city need not fear a water famine, prior to the coming of the Owens River, according to M. O. Leighton, chief Hydrographer of the United States Geological Survey. "Recent measurements," he said yesterday, "show that the underground supply of water in this vicinity is greater than it was two years ago."

"In the Owens River," he continued, "the city will have a magnificent water system, and its future value to Los Angeles cannot be measured in dollars and cents. But I believe there is abundant water in this vicinity to tide over the intervening years before the Owens River is brought to the city gates. Of course, a recurrence of dry years would diminish the subterranean supply, but, with proper conservation, there can be no water famine before the Owens River system is in operation.

"In the San Joaquin Valley we have been making daily observations for a number of years. We have a permanent station in the valley, where a record is kept of the flow of all streams. Locations and surveys are made for storage reservoirs, and the capacity, height and character of dams are determined. All such data is published for the benefit of those who need just such information.

"An important part of our work is to determine the character of the water. Some streams are good for all purposes, while in others there are the ingredients which would damage boilers or injure growing crops."

PYROTECHNICS SAVED.

The "destruction" of the Pyrotechnical Display Company was prevented yesterday by some hard work on the part of its promoters and legal counsel. By the agreement of the creditors the attachments were released. Edward L. Payne, attorney for Charles J. Campbell, said last evening that all the creditors will be paid pro rata from the proceeds of the performances.

FOUND DEAD IN ROOM.

John Clare, 70 years old, was found dead in his room at No. 1287 South Figueroa street last night. Dr. Peter McArthur thought that death was due to consumption. The body was taken to Bresee Bros.' morgue, where an inquest will be held today. An effort will be made to communicate with Clare's relatives, who live in St. Louis.

PICNIC OF THE YEOMEN.

Ivanhoe Homestead, No. 1418, Brotherhood of American Yeomen, will give a picnic at Playa del Rey Saturday. Prizes will be awarded to winners of contests. Special privileges, including free dancing in the evening, will be granted to those wearing Yeomen badges.

HOLD-UP REPORTED.

Lloyd Evans of No. 219 South Hill street reported to the police that he was held up and robbed at Sixteenth and Main streets last night about 10 o'clock. After the robber had secured his money, Evans says he knocked him down. Evans gave the police a description of the robber.

UNIQUE INVITATION.

Hotel and Restaurant Owners' Association of Los Angeles Sends Novel Document to Bakers.

The Hotel and Restaurant Owners' Association of this city sent a unique invitation to the National Bakers' Association, which will convene in Chicago Monday, to hold its next annual meeting in this city. The invitation is in the form of a legal document. Surrounding the formal invitation are reproductions of a number of photographs of leading hotels in this city and vicinity.

The text of the invitation is:

"Resolved, by the Hotel and Restaurant Owners' Association of Los Angeles, that an urgent and hearty invitation is hereby extended to the National Bakers' Association to hold its next convention in this city; and, be it further

"Resolved, that we pledge ourselves to coöperate in every possible manner with other organizations to entertain the delegates to this convention, if this invitation is accepted, with true Southern California spirit, and to arrange a programme of entertainment that will have a lasting and happy impression on visitors.

"This is to certify that the above is a true and correct copy of a resolution adopted by the Hotel and Restaurant Owners' Association of Los Angeles, at the regular meeting held in this city, September 5, 1907.

"In witness hereof we have hereunto affixed our signatures.

MRS. KAPUS ALIVE AND WELL.

She Telegraphs from Milwaukee Denying the Report of Her Sudden Death—Family Known Here.

The report published in an afternoon paper yesterday of the death at Milwaukee of Mrs. J. L. Kapus, formerly of Los Angeles, is not true. Where or how the report originated is not known, but upon hearing it some of the friends of Mrs. Kapus telegraphed to Milwaukee for particulars. At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon a telegram was received in reply, signed by Mrs. Kapus herself, denying that she was dead, and stating that she is in good health.

Two weeks ago, Mrs. Kapus departed for Milwaukee, bearing the ashes of her mother and her husband, who died in this city during the past six months. Her husband, Joseph L. Kapus, until his death last March, was one of the city ticket agents of the Pacific Electric Railway Company, and had hundreds of friends throughout the city. It is probable that Mrs. Kapus will return to Los Angeles, and make this city her home.

FIND GUN ON HIM.

G. F. Booth, a street car conductor, was arrested at Malcumson street and Grand avenue last night on the charge of carrying a concealed weapon. According to Booth, he has had trouble with his wife, and went to visit her at her home. He was ordered out by his father-in-law, and remained about the place. The police were called and took him in custody.

UNION LABOR'S WORK.

MARE ISLAND THREATENED.

GOVERNMENT MAY CEASE BUILDING WARSHIPS THERE.

Failure of Commandant to Secure Enough Skilled Labor to Expedite Construction Work May Cause It to Give Up Trying to Build on the Pacific Coast.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—The Navy Department finds itself much embarrassed by the failure of the commandant at the Mare Island Navy Yard to secure enough skilled labor to carry forward the necessary work.

The department undertook to build the large collier Prometheus, but only the materials for the ship have been gathered at the navy yard, and notwithstanding the fact that advertisements have been inserted in most of the Pacific Coast newspapers, calling for shipwrights and other labor needed to build the ship, it has not been practicable to even lay down the keel.

The department requires the services of such colliers very much, and it must decide before Congress meets again whether the attempt to build ships in the navy yards of the Pacific Coast shall be abandoned entirely and the work done by contract.

Wollaber, Local Forecaster.] At 5 o'clock a.m. the barometer registered 29.92 at 5 p.m., 29.94; for the corresponding hours the thermometer showed 57 deg. and 74 deg. Relative humidity, 5 a.m., 83 per cent.; 5 p.m., 58 per cent. Wind, 5 a.m., northeast, velocity, 2 miles; 5 p.m., southwest, velocity, 9 miles. Maximum temperature, 88 deg.; minimum temperature, 56 deg. Barometer reduced to sea level.

Weather Conditions. The pressure has increased considerably over the Pacific Slope during the last 24 hours, due to the inland movement of the high-pressure area central off the coast during the last few days. This "high" has caused fair weather and clear skies at nearly all places west of the Rockies, except along the northern coast, where local cloudiness or fog is reported this morning. The slight depression central over the Dakotas Friday has moved to the upper lakes and rain is reported in the upper Mississippi Valley. The only other precipitation reported east of the Mississippi is at Jacksonville, Fla., where 3.4 inches fell. The Pacific high area will cause a continuation of fair weather in Los Angeles and vicinity tonight and Sunday, with somewhat higher temperature Sunday.

Forecasts.—Local forecast for Los Angeles and vicinity: Fair tonight; Sunday fair and warmer. North to west winds.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 7.—The pressure is falling slowly along the coast of California and rising over Nevada, Oregon and Washington. The weather has been generally fair over the entire Pacific Coast except that fog prevails along the shore. There has been but little change in temperature and conditions favor a continuance of pleasant weather. Forecast:

San Francisco and vicinity: Fair Sunday, with fog in the morning and at night; light west winds, becoming brisk in the afternoon.

Santa Clara Valley: Fair Sunday; light north wind.

Sacramento Valley: Fair Sunday. Cooler, light south wind.

San Joaquin Valley: Fair Sunday; light north wind.

Los Angeles and vicinity: Fair Sunday; light southwest wind.

Arizona: Fair Sunday and Monday.

GREATER ACTIVITY IN THE STOCK MARKET.

WHILE the volume of trade was not large during the early call on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange yesterday, the demand for the various securities was more marked, and prices appeared to be improving slightly.

The sale of fifty shares of the Southern Trust Company stock was a feature of the call. This stock changed hands at 69.50, and the close quoted the security at 70, with no bid. This is the first sale of this bank stock for some months. Central National Bank was bid for 200, but closed without a trade and none offered. Citizens' National was bid for at 235 and closed without an offering.

Ten shares of Union Oil changed hands at 185. The close was at 184@187. Associated Oil sold to the extent of ten shares also at 29.50, showing a sharp rise in selling price as compared with the last previous sale. The stock closed at 29.50@31, these quotations showing an advance of 2⅝ points on the bid and 2¼ points on the asked price, as compared with the close at 26.87½@27.75, of Friday. Mexican Petroleum was bid for at 1.30 and offered at 1.35. New Pennsylvania was held at 1.30 and bid for at 1.11.

Home Telephone preferred stock again was in demand. Ten shares were sold at 52.50, and the stock closed at 52.50 bid, with no stock offered. No quotations were posted on the common stock.

Consolidated Mines was the leader on the mining call. A total of 55,000 shares were sold at 3⅞. One trade of 50,000 shares was a feature of the session. The close was firm at 3⅞@4. The reason for the advance in this mining stock is the rumor that the work at the mines has been progressing satisfactorily, and that a formation resembling that of the famous Yellow Aster mine in the same section has been met with at the end of the 1000-foot tunnel. The miners are said to be expecting to meet the ledge in a few days, and the brokers here are working up a little manipulation in the stock in anticipation of the strike.

Johnnie Consolidated sold at 13, 7000 shares changing hands at that price. Clark Copper was handled at 5½, only 1000 shares being traded in. Seventeen thousand shares of California Hills were sold at 1⅛. One thousand shares of Searchlight Western were sold at 6½.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKETS.

A healthy tone characterized the general markets during the week. Excepting some vegetables all lines had good sales. Staples were in earnest inquiry, and for the most part in sufficient supply. Prices were abnormal on fancy stuff, and proportionately high on choice. The market was practically clear of soft varieties. Some hesitancy was shown in dealing at the big figures, but there was no alternative and stock was pretty well cleaned up.

Butter opened the week at an advance of 2½ cents on creamery extras and firsts, dairy and eastern going up proportionately. Figures ruled very firm and still better prices are expected.

Early in the week the feeling prevailed for a higher market on eggs than the recent advance of one cent. Yesterday, however, the feeling changed for a lower market on some grades. While local fresh continued firm, storage were some easier and may drop a shade.

There was an excellent demand for a steady supply of cheese, with the local product preferred. The market closed strong with an outlook for higher figures owing to an advance in the North.

Potatoes were offered in large volume, the shortage of fancy grades being remarkable. Extra quality stock was in urgent request, especially Salinas and Burbanks. Despite the feeling early in the week for a declining market, prices ruled very firm, with extra fancy in some instances waiving sale at present quotations. In the yards prime grades refused offers of 2.25@2.30 with 2.40 asked. Choice and lower grades were plentiful, but hard to sell, while prices held firm. All potatoes quoted at full figures, extra fancy Salinas being exceptionally high. There are few potatoes at buying points, with stiff prices asked. However, the feeling exists that the market is ruling higher than conditions justify, and that a decline is probable. Sweets were scarce and good sellers at a slight advance.

The general run of vegetables were in poor demand and dealers were left with much in store. Tomatoes were abundant, prices opening as low as 15@25 cents per box, but gradually stiffening to 25@40. The market was almost bare of onions. Inquiry for yellow Danvers was strong with few to offer. The visible supply is extremely scant and high prices will be maintained. Lima beans and okra closed the week at an advance to 4@5 cents.

Grapes changed hands in large volume. The supply of most kinds was very heavy. Tokays and Concords were firm early in the week, but with other varieties gradually weakened, the market closing with bottom prices still future. Bellefleur apples were scarce and on way to fancy figures. Other varieties ruled strong as quoted. Fancy oranges and lemons were wanted at big value, with few to offer. The request for cantaloupes continued steady at advanced prices.

All lines of dried fruits were extremely dear. There are few to market and further advance is assured. Inquiry for evaporated apples is far in excess of supply, and remarkably many orders for the fruit are being received from the East.

Live poultry had heavy sales, with hens, ducks and geese preferred. Prices held firm as quoted.

Hay and grain were generally steady at quotations, with wheat on the upward. The high price of wheat is expected to cause an early advance on flour.

The receipts of produce as reported for yesterday's exchange were as follows: Eggs, 250 cases; butter, 26,702 lbs.; cheese, 9552 lbs.; potatoes, 898 sacks; onions, 90 sacks; beans, 2 sacks; sweet potatoes, none.

NEW YORK MARKET.

SHARES AND MONEY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—The speculative movement in stocks was disposed to mark time today. Prices moved sluggishly and fluctuated frequently. The holiday in London was partially responsible for the dullness. The financial district was inclined to wait the outcome of the New York city bond sale for clearer light on some of the conditions which are counted upon to sustain the improvement which has taken place in the securities market. Bids for the $40,000,000 issue of four and one-half per cent. New York City bonds are to be opened Tuesday. Something of the heavy tone of the day's market was due to the natural tendency to realize profits on the considerable advance of the last few days. The contrast with the bank statement this week and a year ago is striking. In that week, notwithstanding a loan contraction of nearly $12,000,000 surplus disappeared before a shrinkage in that item of $9,447,225 to a deficit of $6,577,925. The cash holdings have been depleted $16,502,100 by the week's operation during which money on call had loaned at forty per cent. Today's heavy tone of stocks here was unrelieved to the close of the session. Bonds were steady. Total sales par value $476,000 United States 4's have declined one per cent. on call during the week.

Weekly Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—The statement of Clearinghouse banks for the week (five days) shows that the banks hold $7,372,350, more than the legal reserve requirements. This is a decrease of $1,384,100, compared with last week. The statement follows:

Loans, $1,088,597,200, increase $611,900.
Deposits, $1,048,485,000, decrease $170,900.
Legal tenders, $68,678,300, decrease $814,700.
Specie, $269,307,400, decrease $572,500.
Reserve $337,985,600, decrease $1,426,700.
Reserve required, $261,621,250, decrease $52,700.
Surplus $7,372,350, decrease $1,384,100.
Ex-United States deposits, $14,654,100, decrease $1,063,875.

New York Cotton Market.

[BY PRIVATE WIRE TO FRED DORR.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Trading was quiet today, and generally of an evening-up character, before the government report on Monday.

The Times-Democrat report will be out Monday morning before our opening. The Census report on the amount of cotton ginned to September 1st, will be out promptly at 10 o'clock and the bureau report on the crop condition will be announced at 11 o'clock. The revision committee of the New York Cotton Exchange will meet Wednesday, and is expected to reduce the low grade about 50 points. This action has already been about discounted.

The receipts are estimated at 12,000 bales against 19,000 bales this time last year.

THE WEATHER.

Weather indications call for generally fair weather and high temperatures in Texas. According to the New York Cotton Exchange figures the visible supply of American cotton has decreased 58,356 bales against 22,335 bales this time last year.

E. R. Dick says:

"There is such irregularity in Liverpool this morning that our market was not expected to follow the difference between the various months. Cotton was due to open 2 to 8 points lower this morning.

"Traders, on floor, look for condition of 70 on Monday. Under that percentage would be bluish, and over 72 would be bearish.

Following is range of prices today:

We Think Oil Stoc Merit Your Attention

They have had a big drop, induced by tight money and liquida holders and carrying too heavy a load on margins, also by the dullness and lessened temporary output. The rising optimism as to general conditions must soon be reflected here. Over a lions of deposits and thirty millions of available cash in our look bad, and is at the service of legitimate demands.

On a basis of DOLLAR OIL, which is now the price in means something good and better for every oil producing fornia. We are optimistic on oil stocks for a fall and winter the present bear efforts carry them still lower. The oil business perity for the coming year. We believe in Union Oil, Central,

- Every Dollar Safely and Profitably Invested.

This Stock is all common—there are no preferred shares—and participates in all earnings of the Company

Mining As a Business.

The millions of dollars in dividends that are paid each month by mining companies prove that mining stocks offer splendid opportunities for the careful investor.

There is no line of investment that pays such large returns for the money invested, and in which there is less real risk than mining, providing the same business care is used in making investments that is used in other lines of business.

The proper time to buy mining stocks is when the company is first organized and while the stock is low, and not, as many investors seem to think, when the company has reached a dividend paying basis.

It is easier to find a mining property that will pay 50 per cent. to 100 per cent. than it is an ordinary business investment that will pay 5 per cent., and if the same care and business sense be applied a dividend-paying basis to the management of both, the percentage of failures in the mine will be smaller than in any business.

The low rate of interest paid by savings-banks is forcing millions of dollars into investments of all kinds. The Boston Globe says that during the past six months nearly six millions of dollars left that state for investment in Western mining stocks, farm mortgage loans, etc.

The following table gives a clear idea of the results obtained from the various lines of business:

U. S. Gold pays	2 to 5 per cent.
Savings Banks pay	3½ to 5 per cent.
Mortgages pay	4 to 8 per cent.
Farming pays	0 to 25 per cent.
Mercantile business pays	0 to 25 per cent.
Mining often pays over	1000 per cent.

Little Wonder M. & M. Co.'s

Property consists of SIX full Mining Claims, located in one of the best known mineral belts in the West. About 85 miles from the Needles, Cal., and about 17 miles from a station on the Santa Fe R. R. in Mohave County, Arizona.

Act Before It Is Too Late

The character of a money-making proposition may be judged by the character of the men back of it.

The questions to ask yourself are: Are the men of responsible business character? Has previous experience qualified them for the enterprise in which they are seeking to interest you?

One Good Investment Is Worth a Lifetime of Labor

Investments in mining stocks produces quicker and greater results than in any other line of business, as the following well-known results prove:

$5 invested in Calumet & Hecla in 1880, is now worth	$382.50
$10 invested in San Francisco in 1898 is now worth	$1,000.00
$50 invested in the United Verde in 1887 is now worth	$15,000.00
$100 invested in LeRoi in 1894 is now worth	$80,000.00
$300 invested in Granite Mountain, Montana, in two years advanced to	$225,000.00
$100 The Treadwell mine in Alaska sold for $400 in 1881, now it is worth	$10,000,000.00

It's a Hard Problem

To convince some people of the value of a stock until the price is so high that they are unable to invest in it. Then it's always: "I wish I had taken your advice."

Take our advise NOW and invest in the Treasury Shares of the Little Wonder at 10 Cents

Per share. Opportunity to obtain shares at the above PRICE will soon be gone.

REMEMBER that DEVELOPMENT NOW under contract will result in a material advance, IN A VERY SHORT TIME.

The ore body is 8 feet in width, averaging $70 dollars per ton, with a rich streak of 28 inches which runs from $200 to $1200 dollars per ton; and contracts being let for extensive development; we are offering a rare opportunity to get in on the ground floor.

A Word to the Wise is Sufficient

DONT PASS THIS BY

Investigate at Once!

And we will convince you that we have a proposition to suit the most conservative investor with capital.

Mining vs. Other Industries

Mining, as a legitimate industry, is one of the most attractive pursuits and one of the most profitable investments the capitalist can make. It is as certain in its results as any other calling. It is no longer necessary to enter into an argument to convince one that money can be most advantageously invested in mining; that such is the case has been admitted by all who have given any thought to the subject, as it is beyond doubt that the richest men in the world are interested in mining on a large scale, not confined to any one metal, and in many instances they are interested in mining properties throughout the mining world. Looking over the history of these same men you will see that in every instance they have reached their high financial standing through judicious investment of what was originally a very modest capital, proving conclusively that while millions of dollars have been lost in railroads, mortgages, both local and foreign, industrial enterprises, and in fact, every line of business you can call to mind, the mining industry advances year by year, and nets enormous returns to those who have been so fortunate as to take advantage of the splendid opportunities offered.

There are hundreds of good mining properties with all the characteristics which go to make up the successful dividend paying mine throughout the southwest, that are today seeking capital to aid in developing, and once developed will be a source of revenue to all concerned.

Judge

What your profits will be if you invest now before it goes to $1.00

In the entire financial world there is absolutely nothing that can compare with an investment in a proven mine. It is by far the most substantial and the most profitable investment one can make.

HAMMERSTEIN EXPANDS.

To Build Temples of Music in Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Washington, St. Louis and Cincinnati.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Oscar Hammerstein, who made a success of the grand opera last season at his Manhattan operahouse after the music world had consigned him to certain failure, announced today that he will build temples of music in Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Washington, St. Louis and Cincinnati, and present grand opera therein just as he is presenting it at his New York house.

The director emphatically states that he will be alone in all the ventures so far as financing them is concerned, and that he will win or lose, with nothing back of him save his own cash.

APPEAL FOR POMEROY.

Criminal Anthropologists Seek Mitigation of Harshness of Boy Murderer's Punishment.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Society for the Promotion of Criminal Anthropology has filed a protest with Gov. Guild against keeping Jesse Pomeroy, the boy murderer, in solitary confinement at the Charlestown State Prison.

The petition recites that Pomeroy has served a sentence in solitary confinement of thirty-three years, and the society brings forward a number of reasons why the Governor should mitigate the harshness of the punishment.

Pomeroy has been in prison since he was 14 years old, and he has never been allowed out of his cell to stroll with other prisoners, work with them at the benches, nor even to attend divine services. He has never seen an electric car, talked through a telephone or ridden in an elevator.

MARRIED TWIN BY MISTAKE.

PARIS (Ill.) Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Following her bill for divorce from Calvin Thomas, Mrs. Ada Thomas of Chrisman said, in an interview today, that she was tricked into contracting a marriage with the defendant, who closely resembles his twin brother, Alvin Thomas, and that she did not discover the mistake until after the marriage ceremony. Mrs. Thomas asserts that after a courtship lasting about three months, she made an appointment to meet Alvin here and they were to go to Charleston to be married. Alvin's ardor, however, had cooled, and he sent Calvin to meet his fiancée at the train. Mrs. Thomas says she had not the slightest suspicion of the deception, and that when Calvin expressed a willingness to go to Charleston that night, she consented. She discovered, she says, that she had been duped when she happened to see the twins together upon her return here the next day. After living with the wrong twin two years she sued for divorce.

STORE IN DIFFICULTY.

Bon Marche Passes Into Hands of Trustee Who Will Superintend Sale of Stock.

The Bon Marché is in financial difficulties and the concern has passed into the hands of a trustee. The proprietors, Le Sage Brothers, have turned over the entire stock and business to O. M. Souden, vice-president of the United States National Bank, who is acting as trustee and will liquidate the debts of the firm.

The liabilities, chiefly bills for stock, will probably total something more than $100,000. Trustee Souden believes that, when the inventory is completed, it will be found that the assets are considerably in excess of the indebtedness.

Mr. Souden said last night:

"The firm made large purchases of staples, principally silks, woolens and cottons. Those purchases were made in small quantities from many different houses and in consequence Le Sage Brothers owe a large number of small bills. It was the insistance of these small creditors that caused the firm to close its doors. The larger creditors were quite willing to wait for their money.

"I shall probably have the inventory completed by Sunday night and then I shall be in a position to state what the exact conditions are. I shall sell the stock, either at private sale or retail as may seem most expedient, and divide the proceeds pro rata among the different creditors. We will be open Monday.

"Of course, at this time I am unable to say just how much will be realized but I believe that the outlook justifies the hope that all of the creditors may be paid in full.

"Placing the business in the hands of a trustee means saving the expenses of bankruptcy proceedings and means so much more money for the creditors. I am informed by the proprietors that the stock is worth about $200,000, and as it consists largely of staples, worth more now than when they were purchased, there is every reason to hope that the sale may net satisfactory returns."

THEY MISSED THEIR PASSES.

Newspaper Men of Texas Decide to Test Validity of New State Law.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DALLAS (Tex.) Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Executive Committee of the Texas Press Association, at a special meeting held in Dallas today, determined to test in court the constitutionality of the new anti-pass law, so far as it affects the contract rights of newspapers with railroad companies.

The plan is for a member of the association to violate the criminal provisions of the law, and, when arrested, attack the constitutionality of the law through habeas-corpus proceedings.

Assessment of all the members of the association was ordered to raise a defense fund.

Consolidated Mines Company

Capital 3,000,000 Shares of $1.00 Each

STILL IN THE TREASURY AND UNSOLD OVER 1,000,000 SHARES

In our opinion Consolidated Mines stock is selling for less than it is worth. We give herewith our reasons for believing it will sell higher, and why we advise you to buy it.

The property consists of 12 claims in the heart of the Randsburg mining district—two of which claims have a record production of $400,000.00. The majority of these claims immediately join the famous Yellow Aster Mines, from which millions of dollars have been taken, and which is today one of the largest producers in the whole United States, operating two Mills, one of 100 stamps and one of 30 stamps.

The yellow Aster has some of the largest deposits of free milling ore ever discovered.

The Consolidated Mines Company is engaged in driving a cross-cut tunnel, now in a distance of 1030 feet, 1000 feet of which was in a grano-diorite. Lately the tunnel has broken through this formation into a mass of broken up mineralized ledge matter, carrying gold values, showing that they are in a mineralized formation not very far distant from an ore chute, which may be encountered at any moment. The almost certainty of this makes the stock, which is now selling in the open market at 3 to 5 cents per share, a very attractive mining speculation. The striking of the ore chute will create a quick, extensive and permanent advance. The possibility of loss is reduced to a minimum—and cannot amount to more than the few cents per share at which you can at the present time purchase the stock. The titles to the property are absolutely perfect—four of the claims have already been patented, and seven will be patented before the end of this year. The Company is in good financial condition, having sufficient funds on hand to complete the tunnel, with no debts of any kind or description.

The Officers and Directors of the Company are the following well known Los Angeles business men: C. J. Lehman, president, W. C. Hunt, vice-president, G. W. Beck, secretary and treasurer, J. J. Bergin, J. E. Brink, H. F. Norcross and J. W. Oakley, who have placed the development of the property in charge of Mr. Percy H. McMahon, who has had 10 years experience in the district in the personal active superintending of dividend paying mines there, and who has always had great confidence in the future of Randsburg. He expects shortly to make a dividend payer out of the Consolidated Mines Company

We urge you to act promptly—our interests in the matter is in directing our clients into a profitable investment, which may be made while there is a chance to make large profits with small outlay.

You understand this stock is and has been for many months listed on the L. A. Stock Exchange, and has lately become the most active trader, thus making your purchase a negotiable investment.

There will be no session of the Exchange on Monday (Admission Day) therefore for best results get your orders in sometime before 11:30 o'clock Tuesday the 10th. Our Home Telephone No. is Ex. 856, Sunset Main 3030.

THE CITY IN BRIEF

BREVITIES.

Hardwood Floors—The John A. Smith Floor Company begs to announce to its patrons and friends that it has moved its office and warerooms to more commodious quarters at 619 S. Olive st., where, with premises three times larger than before, it is better able to transact its growing business. The firm's policy during the last 14 years, of supplying the best the market affords, regarding material and workmanship, will be observed as strictly in the future as in the past. When your carpets wear out, let us quote you prices on our hardwood flooring; it will last you a lifetime. Remember, also, that we clean and wax old floors carefully at reasonable rates. We thank you for your liberal support in the past and hope to merit your continued patronage. Tel. Home F6629. Sunset, Main 2668.

City Steam Carpet Cleaning Works have moved their office and work room from 507 S. Flower to their large and commodious factory, 2152 Sacramento street, where they are better able to carry on their increasing carpet and upholstering business. If you would like to see a clean, sanitary carpet cleaning establishment, we would be very pleased to show ours. We have the largest and most complete establishment on the Coast. We make over, renovate and carefully glue-size fine carpets and rugs. We thoroughly renovate all kinds of mattresses and do A-1 upholstering. Phones M. 427 and F6229. John Bloeser.

Wrinkles and facial blemishes painlessly removed. Hollow cheeks, thin wasted necks, arms and hands rounded and plumped out to perfection by permanent and immediate process. Saddle-back and deformed noses, scars, indents, receding chins, double chins, sagged faces corrected without pain or detention. Noses modeled to fit nose glasses. All work guaranteed. A Winning Collection of Autumn Garments for Smart Dressers

The most comprehensive stock of exclusive Autumn Suits and Coats that ever entered this establishment. This certainly ought to mean a great deal to the thousands of Los Angeles women who know the Unique.

The stock embraces the very newest up-to-the-minute models. Our resident New York buyer forwards us the very latest creations. In many instances we are able to show garments as soon as they are shown on fashionable Fifth Avenue. Really a visit to the Uniue is like a stroll down that noted shopping center.

Come in tomorrow and see the cleverest models that have been produced by American and European artists this year. You will see garments here "so different."

Autumn suits, new fall coats, smart skirt models, bewitching evening costumes and wraps in confusion.

It is almost needless to mention the expert methods of garment fitting that characterize the Unique.

We have recently received some very attractive and exclusive styles in ladies' waists.

IMPROVEMENT IN ALL LINES.

Review of Trade Conditions in Southern California Contains Much That Is Encouraging.

There is much of interest to merchants, agriculturalists, manufacturers, and all others who have at heart the welfare of the community, to be found in R. G. Dun's review of trade conditions throughout Southern California for the month of August. Nothing of the pessimistic appears in it and, in the conservative statement with reference to various lines of endeavor, there is much that is encouraging. The review follows:

Crop conditions throughout Southern California remain exceptionally good. The grain harvest has progressed this season better than for a number of years. Quality is unusually good, warehouses are filling rapidly. Beans are looking all right in all sections. The output will equal if not exceed that of last year. Sugar-making is in full swing, Oxnard slicing to its full capacity, 2000 tons daily. Beets are small this year, but very rich in sugar content. The celery crop will be undoubtedly the largest ever harvested in Southern California, and will mature fully a month earlier than in previous years.

The announcement of the agreement among the railroads to increase the freight rates $20 a car on vegetables shipped from Southern California points to eastern markets after October 1, is rousing vehement protests from growers and shippers.

The grape harvest is on in earnest, the drying trays filling rapidly, and by last of month the wineries will be crushing at full capacity. The output will exceed that of last year by 50 per cent. Although no combination has been made, the makers of sweet wine in this section are offering less per ton for grapes than last year, $12 to $14 is generally quoted.

September 15 will find the walnut gatherers active. The trees are heavily laden and indications are for a bumper crop. The association will not set a price before October 1. The foreign crop is reported only one-third of normal output and it is predicted market demand will warrant an opening price of 15 cents for No. 1 soft shells. The fig crop is larger than that of last year about 3500 tons.

Eastern demand for Valencia oranges has continued good, very little fruit going to auctions, fair prices prevailed. The lemon market is strong in Middle West markets and is holding its own in the East in competition with Sicily importations.

The cured fruit market is quiet but there is apparent a general resumption of a business in such lines as were effected by Federal government ruling in regard to amount of sulphur to be used in drying. Growers and packers are still agitated over the matter, but the fact that eastern jobbers are ready to buy as heretofore has cleared the situation and led dried fruit concerns to abandon repudiation of contract talk. The few apricots still in this district are still in hands of growers who are inclined to await higher prices. The quotations on peaches are a little lower. The output is proving larger than anticipated.

The raisin market is stronger as it becomes apparent that importations, as they can be priced this year, are not likely to hold the market down. The demand for canned fruit and vegetables is proving phenomenal. Packers report as being well sold up on the 1907 pack.

Stocks are badly broken and no offers are made at less than list prices. Locally, wholesale distribution is active, country collection satisfactory, city collections rather slow. Building permits for August totaled 730, and showed only 9 per cent. decline in value from August of last year. The realty market is improving. Dealers while not looking forward to an activity equal to that of last winter, see every indication of a healthy market in both business and residence properties—with investment not speculative interest as a feature. Money is easier under a brisk demand.

Failures 15, liabilities $26,000; assets $16,000. Same month last year, 24 failures, liabilities $57,000; assets $40,000.

IMPORTANT MOVEMENT.

Utah's Governor in Hearty Accord With Plan to Conserve Natural Resources of the West.

Gov. John C. Cutler of Utah, arrived in the city yesterday and registered at the Westminster. He attended the irrigation congress at Sacramento and came south to participate in the Admission Day exercises at Venice.

"There was one movement started at Sacramento that I think has not been mentioned," said the Governor. "A number of prominent government officials, several Governors and at least one United States Senator met one day to discuss measures for the conservation of the natural resources of the Western States. It was planned to hold a future meeting at Washington to take further action. I regard the movement as a very important one. I believe measures should be taken by the executive heads of the Western States to conserve the timber lands, the mineral lands and the water supply."

Gov. Cutler says he is very partial to Southern California. He owns real estate in this city and at several of the beach towns. He believes the trade relations between this State and Utah should be very close, as the two States have many interests in common.

The executive head of Utah is accompanied by his wife and daughter, and his aide, Col. A. P. Kesler, of Salt Lake.

DELMAS THEIR GUEST.

Distinguished Attorney Receives an Ovation at the Weekly Meeting of the Democratic Club.

Delphine M. Delmas, was the guest of honor at the weekly dinner of the Democratic Club last night. He avoided politics in his address, and received an ovation at the close of his speech. Short talks were given by H. C. McPike, law partner of Delmas; Mayor Harper, R. F. Del Valle, I. B. Dockweiler, T. E. Gibbons, R. W. Dromgold, Justice Albert M. Stephens, S. M. Smyser, Joseph Mesmer and M. J. McGarry.

Jeffersonian principles were foisted to the front by most of the speakers and the Tammany tiger was locked up in the café, because of the ensemble of dignified guests of the evening.

EATS EXCELSIOR.

Francis L. Lanberger, a miner, was taken from his home at Butte and Santa Fé avenues last night to the Receiving Hospital. He is believed to be insane. Recently he has been acting queerly and yesterday his friends saw him eating excelsior. He is suffering from the hallucination that every one wants to starve him.

EVANGELIST'S OX ROAST.

The tent meeting at Ninth and Mateo streets, under the leadership of the colored evangelist, Dr. J. L. Griffin, is in full blast day and night, and it is being attended by great crowds of people. Last night an ox was roasted, and today all comers will be served on the grounds near the tent.

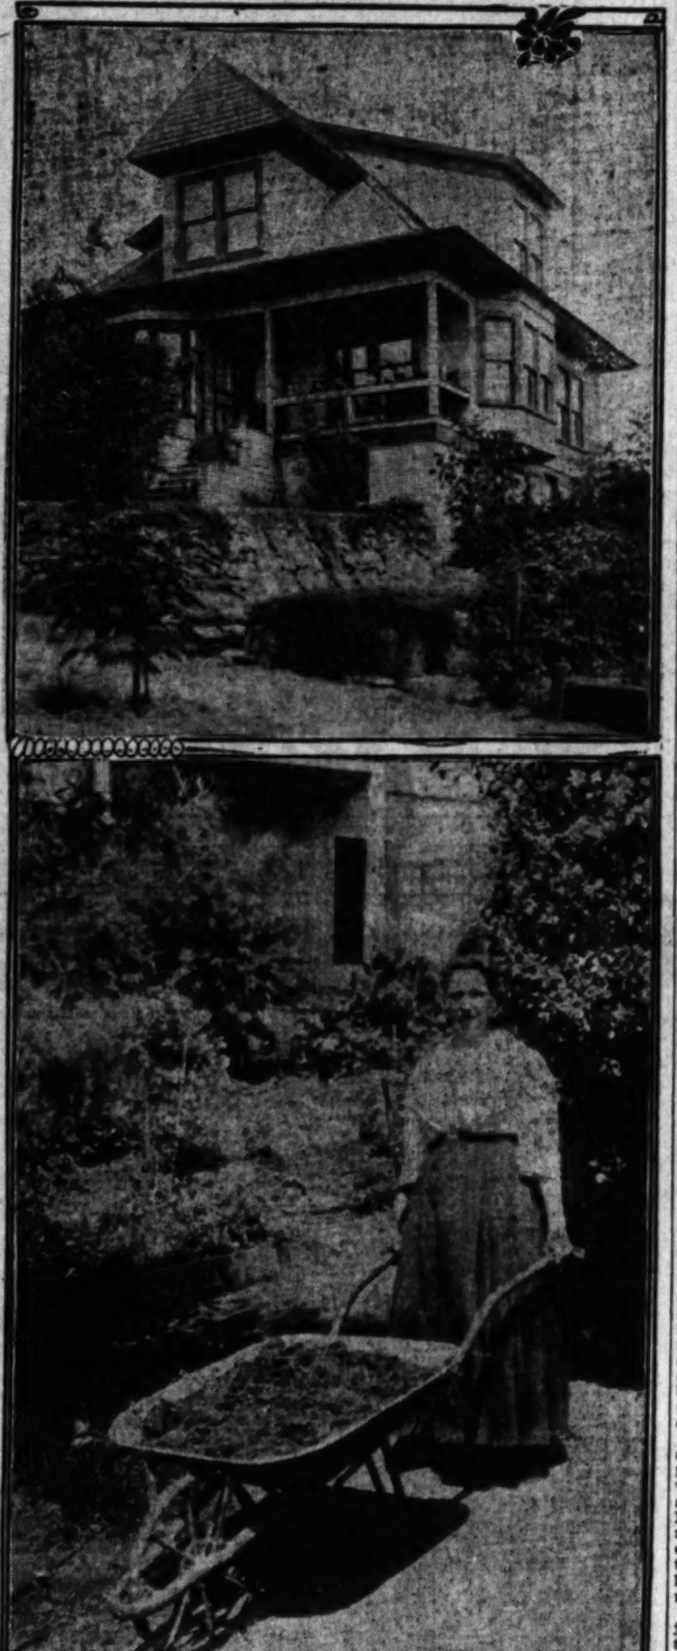
SHE BUILDED WELL.

WOMAN COMPLETES TASK OF WONDER.

With Her Own Hands She Rears a Fine House Above Her Head, Realizing Long-Cherished Desire. Last Touch Yesterday.

WITH her own hands, Mrs. Laura E. Cook, 55 years of age, transformed into magic beauty a bleak hillside in Edendale, where now stands a nine-room house, surrounded by a garden of flowers, trees and shrubbery. Her remarkable task was completed yesterday, when she put the last touches on a retaining wall, and sowed seed for a lawn.



Remarkable feat of house-building by a woman, Mrs. Laura E. Cook, and the residence she reared with her own hands, from retaining wall to chimney-top, in Edendale. Yesterday she finished her great work and the picture shows her hauling the last wheelbarrow load of dirt on the lawn.

For more than a year Mrs. Cook has toiled and struggled in building the house after her own plans. In the course of its construction she employed a few workmen occasionally to help her raise the studding and accomplish the work which required much strength. Instead of paying them money, she gave them board, the only commodity she had. When she stepped into the street yesterday and gazed upon her home, blossoming in the sunshine, she felt a heart full of satisfaction. She had realized her longing for a home without an incumbrance.

Every piece of lumber in the building was sawed and fitted by her. She found it necessary to employ a carpenter to raise the studding upon the brick pillars she had laid. He also assisted her in stringing the rafters and putting the framework in plumb. His bill amounted to $150. Mrs. Cook erected the scaffolding on which she worked to nail on the siding. The house was also shingled by her without assistance. She tinned the valleys, and never a drop of rain found its way to the inside.

After lathing the house she found it necessary to hire a plasterer. Mrs. Cook worked in the capacity of hod-carrier, but never carried a union card. She never had a strike. She also made the mortar. The plasterer's bill was $171, and he took it out in board. He also finished a chimney, after she had nearly completed it, because he wanted to help her.

GOOD WORKMANSHIP.

Nearly every joint in the house showed good workmanship. She puttied up the few cracks and put on the first coat of paint. Later she employed a painter to put on the finishing coat. He charged $30; more meals. When Mrs. Cook bought her windows she also employed a man to set them in for her.

On the inside she did all the work. She blocked the casings around the doors and stained them. She was unable to hang the doors, but put on the locks. In like manner she stained the window casings and sills.

Under the house she constructed a cellar, hauling the dirt out herself in a wheelbarrow. She cemented it and uses it for summer purposes. After the stair casings were placed by carpenters, Mrs. Cook completed them, both upstairs and down cellar.

The flooring was also laid by Mrs. Cook. In several rooms she waxed the boards, giving it the appearance of hard wood. Where she did this she uses rugs to carpet the rooms.

From top to bottom Mrs. Cook's house is as neat and clean as a summer girl's white frock. It is furnished with old-style furniture, which she has varnished a number of times. She has collected it during her lifetime, and all that she owns in worldly wealth is in this house.

Strangest of all, Mrs. Cook lives alone in her nine-room house. She has been a widow for several years, but has a family of grown children. A son lives in Los Angeles, and a son and two daughters in Fresno. She explained yesterday, that her children can now come and visit her in her declining years.

Mrs. Cook was wheeling the last barrowful of dirt yesterday when her picture was snapped. She built the retaining wall with rocks which were taken out in excavation for the cellar. Layer by layer she arranged them, and then back-filled with earth to bring it up to a level with the foundation of the house. She planted her yard with flowers and slips shortly after the work began. In the rear she has a vegetable garden which supplies her table.

HER DESIRE REALIZED.

"I have wanted a house of my own for a long time," she said, "and there it is. I built practically all of it with my own hands. I had a hard time completing it, but I feel that it is well worth my labors.

"I built that house over my head so to speak. When I bought the lot for $1000 two years ago, there was a little two-room hut on it. I worked on my plans for a house for several months. I couldn't tear down the old hut to make room for a new one, so I built over it. I made my plans so that the old house fit in the two front rooms.

"As I gradually built up the new house I tore the old one down and used the material. I lived in the two rooms all the time, however, and cooked meals for myself and workmen. When the back rooms were finished I moved into them and then completed the front rooms. In this way I managed to keep a house over my head all the time.

"Beside paying for the lot the materials cost me about $800. The labor I employed amounted to $321, but I paid that out in board. I value the house at $4000 spot cash, but I don't believe I want to sell it after all. I started to work on the house in May, 1906, and you see I have just completed my plans today."

Mrs. Cook has lived in Los Angeles eleven years. She lived in Fresno thirty years prior to coming here.

CALIFORNIA ALPS.

Mountain Region to Be Opened by Railway Through Owens Valley.

A railroad from Mojave into the Valley of the Owens River, which will be constructed to facilitate the work of building the Los Angeles aqueduct, will make accessible to tourists the loftiest and most picturesque mountain region in the United States.

The headwaters of Owens River are streams flowing down the eastern slope of the Sierra Nevada from snow fields which also supply water to the San Joaquin. From the divide between the watersheds, the vast huddle of granite peaks in the southern portion of Yosemite National Park can be seen. A view of Mt. Lyell and the Minarets from the Owens River divide is the subject of the art supplement to this issue of the Sunday Times.

SYMPATHY HER CRAVING.

WOMAN'S NEED HE REALIZES.

JUDGE GETS FAME BY WISDOM DEEPER THAN LAW.

Hon. George H. Hutton, Guided by the Heart Instead of the Code in Insanity Case, Is Flooded With Congratulatory Letters from Members of Gentle Sex.

Many letters have been received by Judge George H. Hutton in the past few weeks because a brief report of a little incident of the insanity examinations in the Superior Court on August 26 was published in The Times, followed by editorial comment on the case. Judge Hutton had seen a deeper question than a woman's sanity in the case of Mrs. Mary Blanchard. He had recognized woman's need, which is universal and eternal.

The universal suggestion of the case, in which a woman with a temporarily unbalanced mind sobbed out a bitter truth without reserve, was shown in instant response to that suggestion.

Letters poured in upon the judge, who was impelled to be more human than judicial in that striking moment, congratulating him on a rare judgment which reached deeper into life than written laws can ever go. Women called up Mrs. Hutton on the telephone, and told her she should be proud of her husband, and she said she was. And men, who perhaps themselves have been forgetful of the little amenities of life, which women crave but never ask for till their nerves and minds are shattered, told him he had done well.

Men and women wrote to others about the case, startling in its simplicity and its awful significance. One woman wrote to her attorney, inclosing a check and directing him to learn if Mrs. Blanchard's material needs were met ,and to use the money, if required, to pay for her care in a sanatorium till peace and quiet and "a little kindness" should restore her nerves and mind to health.

Mrs. Mary Blanchard, imploring the judge not to send her to an asylum; trying with halting speech to show the need of her nature in its sickness, could not know how her thoughts would be answered by thousands.

The insanity complaint was sworn to by her husband, W. W. Blanchard, of Whittier, on August 22. It is as follows:

"This woman is violent, and threatens suicide; is noisy and cries at times, and tries to get away from home and requires restraint. Thinks that all the members of her family are trying to get rid of her." The complaint states further that the subject is 50 years of age, and came here with her husband from Colorado, four months ago. It says she cried at times, but it did not say that she had lost a child. It said some things, apparently true, but it left some deeper truths unsaid.

Mrs. Blanchard was brought before the Insanity Commission on August 26, with Judge Hutton trying his first insanity cases. She did not venture to declare herself sane, in the face of the impressive preparations to determine the question by scientific and legal methods. She said she did not think she was insane.

And then, suddenly, she began pour-

ORDERS DOWN DIRTY HOTELS.

Fire Chief Condemns Four to Be Destroyed.

Terrible Conditions Found by the Inspectors.

Mayor Sees First Bedbugs in Dirty House.

Four wooden hotels in the heart of the city were closed by the health department yesterday as unfit for human habitation. The buildings have been condemned by the fire chief as flimsy fire traps and a menace to the business district, and their owners have been notified that they must be demolished at once and all the material removed.

A fifth building on Spring street, south of the Alexandria, has been pronounced a fire trap and unfit for occupancy, but no official order has been issued directing that it be closed and demolished. It is owned by Nelson Story, a Montana millionaire.

Before these hotels were condemned, the Mayor visited each in company with Fire Chief Lips and Health Officer Powers. Mayor Harper pronounces the Saratoga Hotel "the worst place I ever saw for human habitation." It was there that the Mayor saw his first bedbugs.

THEY ARE EYESORES.

Each of these buildings has been an eyesore for several years. They are flimsy, wooden structures, misshapen and weather-beaten, the despair of the Municipal Art Commission and of the proponents of the city beautiful. The lessees have conducted them as cheap lodging-houses, and seemingly no effort has ever been made to make them fit places for human being to live in.

Following his inspection of the Saratoga, Building Inspector Backus sent the following communication yesterday to its record owner, J. J. Pattison, Hollywood:

> We are informed that you are the owner of the property at 218-220 East Third street, known as the Saratoga House. After a personal investigation of the property I have reached the conclusion that it is my duty under Sec. 7 of the Los Angeles Building Ordinance to condemn the same on account of its exceedingly flimsy character—the construction being mainly boards and the ceilings consisting of cloth and paper. The class of construction is, in my opinion, a very serious menace to the thickly built-up section surrounding this property. You will therefore proceed to demolish the building at once and remove all the old material from the premises. The section referred to requires that you begin this work within forty-eight hours of the receipt of this notice.

Mr. Backus sent a similar notice to Godfrey Smith at the Southern Hotel concerning the Mechanics Lodging House at No. 232 East Second street.

Referring to the Nagaska Hotel, a cheap Japanese lodging-house on East Second street, Backus wrote I. I. Dehall at No. 913 East Twenty-eighth street:

> We beg to direct your attention particularly to the building located at 222½ East Second street, of which we understand you are the owner. This consists of seven small rooms upon the second floor, the entrance to which is a very narrow passageway on the west side and one small stairway in the rear. In my opinion the means of exit and entrance are entirely inadequate for a building of this char-

PLACES UNFIT TO LIVE IN.

"The worst places I ever saw for human habitation" is Mayor Harper's report on four lodging-houses ordered closed yesterday and the buildings demolished.

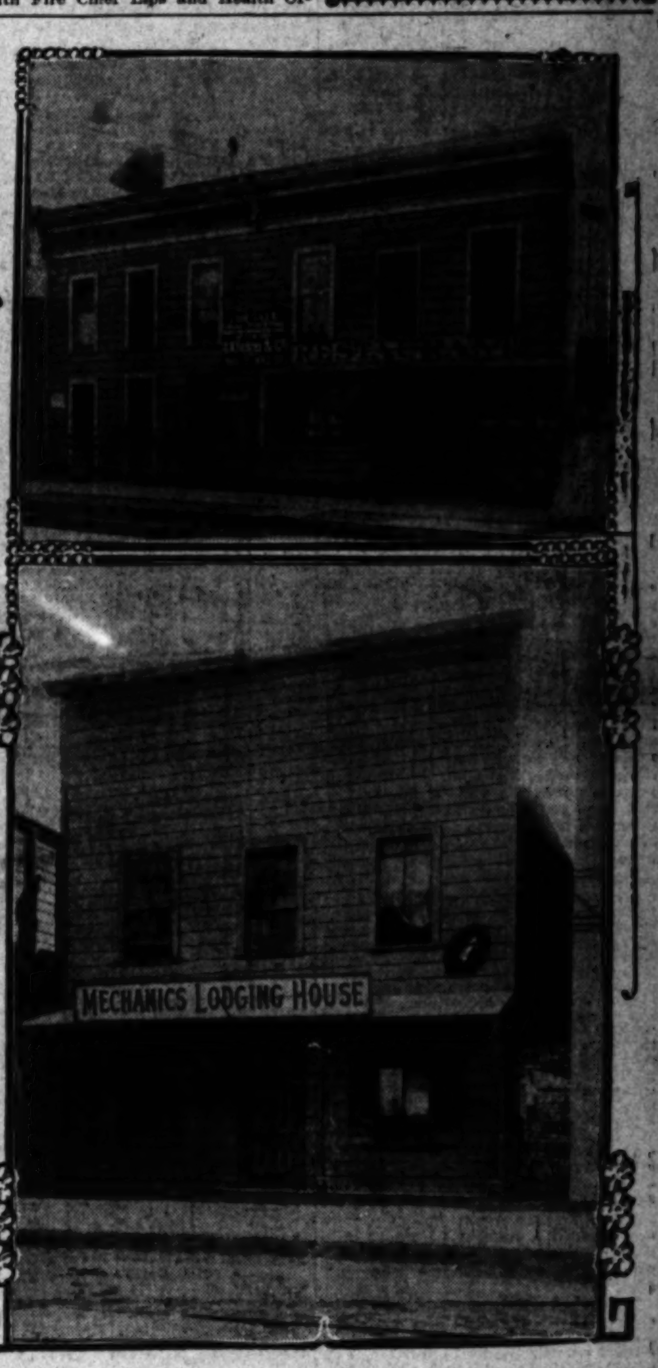
Health inspectors compelled three landlords to lock their doors, and the dirty hotels are tenantless, but a colony of Japanese refuses to leave a fourth. They swarmed over it like bees yesterday, cleaning up. Millions of bedbugs and other vermin infest the places, which the Fire Chief says would burn like tinder. The condemned houses are:

Saratoga, No. 218 East Third street; record owner, J. J. Pattison, Hollywood.

Mechanics Lodging-house, No. 232 East Second; record owner, Godfrey Smith, city.

New England Lodging-house, No. 245 East Second; record owner, Max Kushnrich, city.

Nagasaka Hotel, No. 222½ East Second; record owner, J. J. Dehall, city.



Two of the five hotels condemned yesterday, which must be torn down. Above is the Saratoga, investigated by the Mayor and pronounced the worst place he has ever seen for human habitation. Here His Honor saw bedbugs the first time in his life.

"UNDER CONSIDERATION."

Supervisors Have Not Yet Acted Upon Application for Liquor License Near Ascot Park.

Tucked away in the private recesses of their minds, where various other things "under consideration" are ensconced, the members of the Board of Supervisors have the subject of an application for a hotel liquor license for Chester A. Noyes.

Noyes wants the liquor license for a location at Irene and Alameda streets, just one mile east of Ascot Park race track. He made application August 12, and under the rules of the board the application went over until August 19, for action. At that time it was voted to take it "under consideration," which leaves it up in the air, ready to be called down at their desire.

But this is what is worrying the protestants out in that district, who want to go before the board when final action is taken. They will attend the session Tuesday, with the expectation of the subject being taken up. They are likely to be disappointed.

Huntington Park, incorporated as a city of the sixth class, adjoins the site of the proposed liquor dispensing place, and while it will be affected more closely than any other place, it has no power to act as the location is on county lands. In Huntington Park itself there are no saloons or liquor licenses, as the deeds of the land prohibit this. Petitions are now circulating for the signatures of those living in the county district who are opposed to the granting of the license.

PASO ROBLES PICNIC.

The Paso Robles Club, composed of former residents of Paso Robles, will hold its annual reunion and picnic all day in Eastlake Park tomorrow. All former residents of the northern town or vicinity are invited to attend. There will be an interesting programme, a basket dinner and free coffee for all.

UNCLE SAM'S CRUSADE.

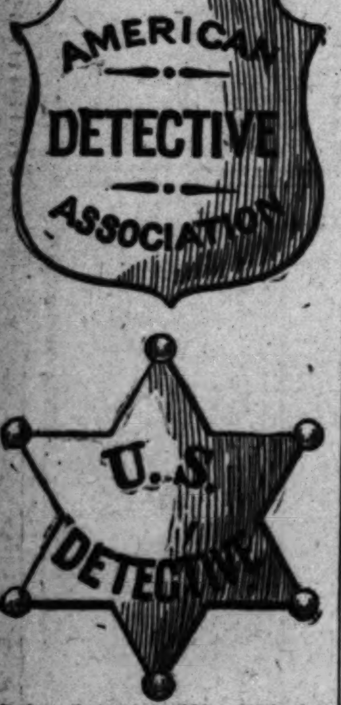
BOGUS BADGES AID IN CRIME.

Secret Service to Prosecute Wearers of Them.

Posing as Federal Officer Is Serious Offense.

Pseudo-Detective Agencies Find Many Victims.

Reports of irresponsible persons who are displaying bogus detective and secret-service badges has led to special efforts on the part of the local government officials and police to apprehend the men who are violating the law. While the police as a rule do not interfere with callow young men who sport tin detective badges, unless they attempt to extort money, the government is more stringent in its regulations.



Badges that get would-be sleuths into trouble.

United States Secret Service Agent George W. Hazen, in charge of this district, said yesterday that he is prepared to make an energetic campaign against the wearers of United States badges, and also against the firms which manufacture the bogus stars, because impersonating a Federal officer is a grave offense. Men who claim to be government officers do so almost invariably with evil intent.

"I have had occasion to run down a number of bogus Federal officers," stated Hazen, "and back of the imposture there is always a deeper motive than mere bravado. I could cite instances of men who held themselves out to be United States officers for the direct purpose of defrauding people. A special law was enacted to meet such cases. Even if there is no proof that a person actually obtained something of value by means of his fraudulent representation, we generally prosecute him in the United States Court. The only instance I can now recall where we refrained from criminal prosecution was in the recent case of Percy Short, who displayed a tin star marked 'U. S. Detective' and pulled out a gun in the presence of a car crew. The investigation showed Short to be a youth who was actuated by a desire to appear 'big.' He wanted to pose as a real detective and failed ludicrously. He was punished in the Police Court. We finally thought it best not to prosecute in the Federal Court. I took away his star. If he wears another, he will get into serious trouble."

SECRET SERVICE MAN'S STORY.

Secret Service Agent Hazen yesterday recalled a number of crooks who had been arrested within the past year for impersonating a United States officer.

"There was Nathan Jacobs who assumed to be a deputy United States Marshal," continued Hazen. "He cashed several checks in this city and elsewhere on the strength of his representations. He was arrested in Portland and brought back here for trial. He received a sentence of seven years.

"About the most consistent liar I ever met was Charles Lagrille. He met a girl on his way to this city and succeeded in making her believe he was a secret-service agent of great prowess. He told her he had been wounded in a battle with counterfeiters. He had a badge marked 'Assistant Chief of the Secret Service.' I finally rounded him up in San Francisco. When I went to his room and tore off the soiled strip of plaster which he wore over the supposed wound, the young woman went into hysterics. To make a long story short, we finally sent the young woman to her home in Chicago and convicted Lagrille of impersonating a United States officer. I think he was cured of his desire to pose as a secret-service man for we heard nothing further from him after his release from prison."

Reference was made to "Capt." Howard C. Clover, now awaiting trial in the United States District Court on a charge of impersonating a United States naval officer. "The government is keen to prosecute such men," stated Hazen.

UNPLEASANT COMPLICATIONS.

"Such imposition brings disrepute on the service and leads to various unpleasant complications. A government officer is accorded many privileges and the fake officers take advantage of that fact to cash fraudulent checks and obtain credit at hotels and stores.

"Henry Post, now in San Francisco awaiting trial, is another example of a clever man who attempted to live at the expense of the government by representing himself to be in government employ. He served a short sentence in the County Jail here prior to his rearrest on another indictment.

"All of the badges used in our work are manufactured at the government bureau of printing and engraving. No private manufacturer has any authority to make such badges. I gave a warning to a local stamp manufacturer not to make any more badges for any one."

To induce guileless young men to give up good money in order to become part of a "vast detective organization," there have come into existence fake concerns all over the country, which advertise for shrewd deranges from $2 to $25 for extra honors in the "gum-shoe" line.

WOMAN IS VICTIM.

One woman in this city paid $25 to secure a district detective agency in Southern California. The fakers who got her money sent her a star, some old hand bills concerning escaped criminals, and a piece of paper which apparently entitled her to appoint detectives in her district. She recently complained to a real officer that business was rather poor but she said she had hopes of "pulling off a big job" before long.

Only a few "suckers" are found who will rise to a bait involving payment of a large sum. Most of the so-called detective agencies charge $5 for admission and some only charge $2 at the outset but later on urge their victims to purchase revolver, slung shots, brass knuckles and other paraphernalia supposed to form a part of the oufit of a genuine detective. The following advertisement is a sample of hundreds of similar notices which are sent broadcast:

WANTED—DETECTIVE, SHREWD RELiable man for profitable secret service to act under orders; no experience necessary.

Those who reply to such advertisements are advised of the opportunity to become detectives in the employ of the "home office." For a subscription fee of $2 the candidates receive a paper containing a list of criminals wanted and a badge.

Members of associations are offered $3 a day and expenses on every case to which they are assigned. The Los Angeles newly-made detectives are still waiting for their first assignments.

House that Gen. Charles Forman moved, piecemeal, from Virginia City to Los Angeles, twenty-five years ago, and which is to be wrecked.

COMES TO GO.

NEVADA HOUSE HERE SOON TO BE RAZED.

AT THE corner of Pico and Georgia streets stands a large two-story house with a history. It is in the yard of the Los Angeles Inter-Urban Railway, surrounded by crippled cars or those waiting for runs.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the house has arrived, and it is understood that it is to be wrecked or removed to make room for improvements in the railway yard. This has occasioned speculation as to its history.

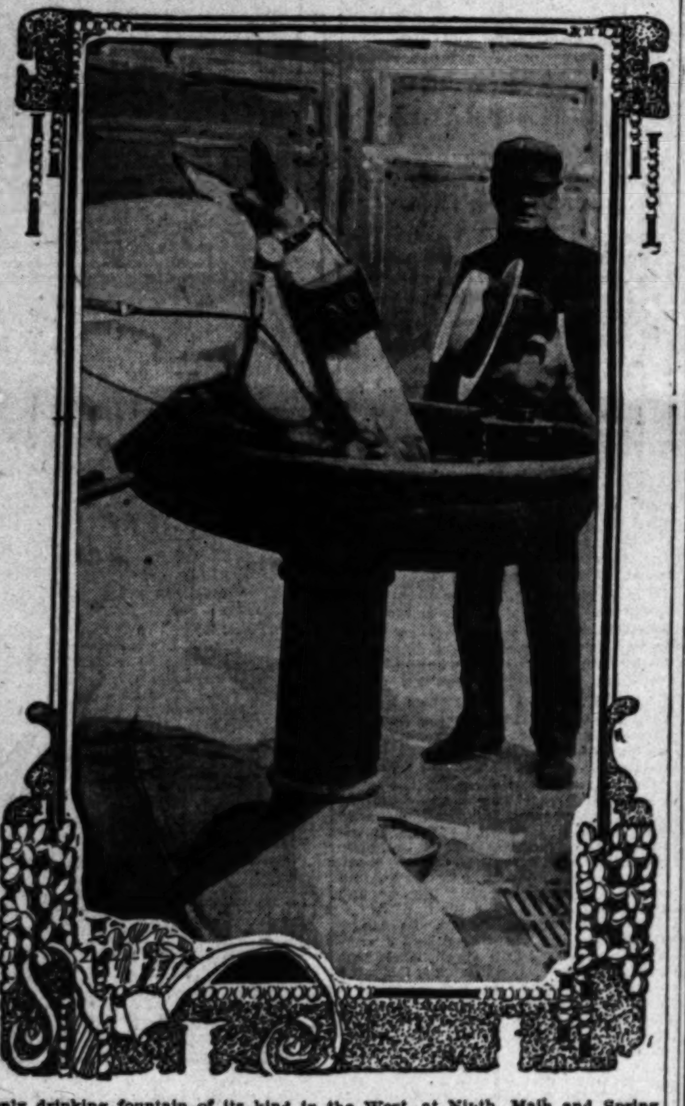
The house was originally the property of Gen. Charles Forman of this city, and he once lived in the identical structure in Virginia City, Nev. After he removed to Los Angeles, he decided that he wanted just such a house as he had in Virginia City, and he asked builders for estimates as to cost.

The offers were all between $12,000 and $13,000, and as he had already learned that he could tear down the old house in Virginia City, remove it by rail to Los Angeles and rebuild it from the same material, for $6000, that is what he determined to do.

"It is a splendidly-built house," said Gen. Forman; "much better than they were building here at that time, which was in 1882, and I simply decided that I could not make $6000 easier than by moving the house to Los Angeles, and I did it. There was no sentiment in it; it was money."

It is a number of years since the property passed into other hands and finally into the hands of the railway company. Its fine grounds, shaded by beautiful palms and other ornamental trees, almost obscuring the house from view, have long been an attraction pointed out as an ideal California home of the earlier days.

SLAKES THE THIRST OF MAN AND BEAST.



Only drinking fountain of its kind in the West, at Ninth, Main and Spring streets.

A handsome new drinking fountain for man and beast has just gone into commission at the junction of Main and Spring streets, just north of Ninth. It was placed there by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, under the direction of Superintendent N. W. Zimmer, and is the only one of its kind in the West. It is proposed to place similar fountains on various other important thoroughfares throughout the city as rapidly as funds are available with which to purchase them.

This fountain is for man, horse and dog. It was designed by Arthur Dodsworth of the Llewellyn Iron Works and was cast at the factory of this concern.

The big oval bowl from which horses drink is four feet nine inches long and three feet wide and holds forty gallons of water, which is constantly changed through an ever-open inlet, and an outlet that connects with the storm drain. Three teams may be watered at the same time, and the bowl is so high above the ground that it is not necessary to loosen check reins.

At one side of the horse trough is a stationary nickel cup from which water constantly bubbles. This is for the use of human beings, who quench their thirst by placing the mouth in the flowing water and quaffing. The device is said to be thoroughly sanitary and possesses the advantage that the cup never will be missing.

Just above the sidewalk level is a small trough for the use of dogs. This receptacle also is constantly filling and discharging.

Half of the cost of the fountain, which was $50, was contributed by Frank B. Long, former president of the S.P.C.A.; the remainder by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the society. Miss Cordelia Kirkland of No. 475 Lake street has contributed $50 toward the cost of a second fountain, which probably will be placed on Sunset boulevard or in the southwestern part of the city. Others will be put in as rapidly as funds are contributed.

There are few public drinking fountains in Los Angeles. Most watering troughs are in front of saloons in older parts of the city. Benjamin Walton, an enthusiastic temperance worker, recently caused the erection of a handsome fountain at First and Chicago streets, Boyle Heights, in which work he was aided by the Loyal Temperance Legion. He also has built four at his own expense in Long Beach.

[illegible] AND ENGAGEMENTS MAKE SEASON JOYOUS.

Miss Kay to Become Mrs. Elmer Pascoe—Miss Bacon and Dr. Thornburg Married at Pasadena. Bridge Club Reorganized—Pretty [illegible] Luncheon.

[illegible] Engagement.

Mrs. John C. Brown announces the engagement of her niece, Miss Maude Kay, to Elmer R. Pascoe. The wedding, which will be a very quiet one, will take place on Wednesday.

[illegible] Wedding.

Miss Lillian Bacon and Dr. Frank Thornburg were married last week at the Lake Avenue Methodist Church, [illegible], which had been beautifully decorated for the occasion by the J.O.C. [illegible] of the church. The service was read by the groom's father, Rev. Mr. Thornburg, Rev. V. Hunter Brink, the pastor of the church, assisting. Joseph Thornburg, brother of the groom, was best man and Miss Anna Bacon, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. The flower girls were Miss Edith Bacon, the bride's niece, and Jean Mc-[illegible]. The ushers included Messrs. [illegible], Clark Phillips, Harry [illegible] and Wilbur Smith. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. At the conclusion of their wedding trip, Dr. and Mrs. Thornburg will receive their friends at No. [illegible] North Orange Grove avenue.

[illegible] Luncheon.

Miss Maude Kay entertained with a [illegible] luncheon in honor of Miss Rose [illegible], who will be married in October. The decorations were in white and [illegible]. Covers were laid for Mrs. L. [illegible], Mrs. R. H. Hollingsworth, Misses Helen Bosbyshell, Johanna [illegible], Mabel Brown, Myrtle Brown, [illegible], Harriet Hibson and Rose [illegible].

[illegible] Wedding.

At the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Klindt, No. 628½ [illegible] street, Miss Pauline Klindt and Frederick Jacobs of [illegible] were married Thursday. Rev. [illegible] of the Presbyterian church performed the ceremony in the presence of relatives and a few friends. After the wedding breakfast the couple left for an extended trip. They will be at home after October 1 at Upland.

Surprise Party.

Thirty friends of F. C. Schillinger of No. 2248 West Fifteenth street on Tuesday evening gave him a surprise party. The evening was spent in dancing.

Reorganize Club.

Members of the West Side Bridge Club reorganized Friday at the home of Mrs. W. G. Schriber. Cards followed the business session and prizes were captured by Mrs. Harold C. Fisher and Mrs. J. J. Hanst.

Welch-Jackson.

Miss Annie Welch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Welch of No. 1631 Hoover street, was married Tuesday in San Diego to Percy Jackson. Mr. Jackson is the son of Mrs. C. G. Jackson of No. 1665 Sunset boulevard. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson will make their home in San Diego, where the groom is engaged in business.

Farewell Party.

Last Tuesday members of the Uncle Sam Relief Corps enjoyed the evening at the home of Mrs. Curly, who entertained with a farewell party in honor of Mrs. Reed, who will soon leave for Colorado. The walls were gracefully draped with flags and geraniums and palms were effectively used. Whist was played and the prizes were awarded to Mrs. Werden and Mr. Renwick. Later in the evening a tamale supper was served, after which an emblematic pin was presented by Mrs. Chapin in behalf of the members of the corps, to Mrs. Reed. Among the guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gilespie, Mr. and Mrs. Wilcut, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brown, Mr. and Mrs. George Renwick, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Augustus Anders, Mr. and Mrs. Kendal, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Grover, Mr. and Mrs. Werdan, Mr. and Mrs. Horton and Mr. and Mrs. Preston.

Lawn Party.

Miss Jennie O. Chambers and Mrs. A. J. Ives acted as hostesses at a delightful lawn party on Thursday evening. Young people of the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church sang old plantation melodies and other music was furnished by an orchestra.

Notes and Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Levet of No. 1220 West Thirty-eighth street, with their son and daughter, have returned from a visit at San Diego and Coronado Beach.

Miss Jessie M. Washburn has returned from a two weeks' sketching trip at Laguna Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Washburn of No. 1918 West Seventh street have returned from a week's outing at Catalina.

Mr. and Mrs. Ionell Higgins have moved into their new home at No. 2266 West Twenty-first street. They will receive the first and third Wednesdays.

John Forward, Jr., and family are guests at the home of Mrs. Forward's mother, Mrs. Fairbanks, No. 22 Wave Crest avenue, Venice.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Merrill are spending the month of September at Hotel Decatur, Ocean Park.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Louazon of No. 544 Towne avenue and two daughters, Misses Catherine and Josephine, left Wednesday for New York, where they will visit Mr. Louazon's father, P. Louazon, for several months. Mrs. J. F. Stratton of No. 521 Towne avenue goes with them as far as Albany, N. Y.

Mrs. A. M. Johnson and three daughters, Anna, Minnie and Ruth, and Miss Lucille Harper, have returned after a two weeks' visit at Avalon.

Mr. and Mrs. David E. Spangler and their little daughter, Katharine, returned Thursday from an eastern trip which included visits to the Thousand Islands, the St. Lawrence and Saguenay rivers, Lake George, Montreal, Quebec, Saratoga and New York. Mrs. Spangler will resume her Wednesday "at homes" after October 1.

J. T. Hedden, general passenger agent of the Tonopah and Goldfield Railroad and his wife entertained at dinner, Friday evening, in their private car, "Mizpah."

IN THE GOLDEN TRIANGLE.

Encouraging Reports Received from Mines in Searchlight and Vicinity.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SEARCHLIGHT (Nev.) Sept. 7.—The Alice group, about eighteen miles to the south and near the Old Roman, bobs up this week with a promising strike. A Los Angeles broker, T. J. Fry, just up here from there, reports assays of $61 and $85. The owners are A. F. Weeks, in charge of the Empire mine, Ed Lenz, and Edward Dowe.

Mr. Fry has completed extensive sampling of the Constellation group down Newberry way, and after assays have been run in Los Angeles will decide on the scope of the fall work. There are eight claims on which there are 2000 feet of shaft and tunnel work, and all following are of varying values, with assurance of much low grade.

The Eldorado Wonder is the latest to enter the active list at Camp Thurman, having for sponsors H. F. Bowling and H. F. Walker. These gentlemen came out from Los Angeles a week ago and have been busy getting together supplies preparatory to starting for their camp today. There are at least four well-defined ledges. In places the ore blowout is fifteen feet or more in width, but the owners conservatively state that an average down-width of two and one-half feet will quite equal their expectations and, with the present character of rock, fully satisfy them. The ore is mainly copper and silver.

Within a stone's throw of the Wonder, Tom Healy, an employé of the Lloyd-Searchlight, has recently uncovered some high grade silver ore, one assay going $200. There are nine claims in this property and Mr. Healy and a partner, about six weeks hence, will commence working it.

At the Lloyd-Searchlight two shifts are making good progress in going to the 200-foot level, at which point drifting will be started. The success of this pioneer property seems to be taken by all as assured.

M. A. Hortt and A. H. Smith, both employés of the Quartette Mining Company, completed a trip to the new oil regions of Southern Utah last week. The gentlemen left Searchlight July 25 for the purpose of getting in on the new field if possible. They report a very successful trip, having located over 5000 acres of land.

George W. Morgan of the Crescent district is taking out ore that runs from a few hundred to a few thousand dollars to the ton. The highest return so far was $3498.54, and the lowest shown ran two hundred and forty odd dollars. The principal values are in silver, and there are strong indications of cobalt. The ore as it comes from the pay streak is being sacked, and a small shipment will be made in the near future. The Nippeno mine is in two feet of specimen ore. This group, comprising eleven claims in all, is now being patented.

The Shandon Bells Company, of which A. R. Allison of Santa Barbara is general manager, this week purchased under bond ten claims, four and one-half miles above Nob Hill. The purchasers obligate themselves to do continuous work for the next year, and the group is so large this is no inconsiderable amount. Those best informed state that $5000 will be required to make any good start in development, and possibly two years time to fairly open it up. There is said to be good indication of the making of a big mine. In at least a dozen different places on the surface is brilliantly copper-stained quartz. An assay of two feet of the best of it returned sixty-six ounces in silver and 12 per cent. copper.

SOME PREFER IT TO REAL BUTTER.

OLEOMARGARINE IS STEADILY GROWING IN FAVOR.

Rich as Well as Poor Give It Place of Honor Once Reserved for the Churned Milk and a Few Local Sanatoriums Serve It Exclusively. None Made Here.

"The consumption of oleomargarine in this city," said a wholesale merchant yesterday, "is steadily increasing. Prior to the passing of the anti-coloring act, some ten years ago, the local market handled from twenty-five to thirty carloads annually. Then the product could not be distinguished from real butter either by taste, smell or appearance.

"For a long period after the passage of the anti-coloring law, very little oleomargarine was sold in the local market, but the sentiment against it gradually subsided and now four or more carloads are sold here yearly."

"A merchant is obliged to pay $200 annually for permission to sell the product, which in the local market, retails for from 20 to 25 cents a pound, according to grade. A report, too, is required each month by the government of the quantity of the article on hand and the sales of the previous month. Every pound must be accounted for, to prevent illegal handling."

"Oleomargarine is not manufactured in California. Most of it comes from Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago and Cincinnati. Seventy-five per cent. of the total product is shipped to Holland, Germany and France."

"There are only four wholesale licenses granted in this State for the sale of oleomargarine, and three of these are issued to local firms, which sell about 80,000 pounds a year. Much of the stuff is used by bakers and for cooking purposes. Few, if any, restaurants use it, as the proprietors are required to put a placard announcing the fact in a conspicuous place.

"While oleomargarine is much used by the poorer classes, it is also liked by many well-to-do people, and sanatoriums use it to the entire exclusion of butter."

Mr. Taft seems to know what to say and to have a taking way of saying it. He also knows what not to say—and that is where he has Bryan distanced.

As was expected, Utah carried off the blue ribbons at the irrigation congress. California has hardly awakened to the right degree of practical interest in this organization, perhaps.

Los Angeles is famous, the world over, for her good hotels. We have caravansaries hereabouts that the world can scarcely exceed for comfort and luxury. It will certainly add to our good repute to wipe off our map the hotels unworthy of the name and unfit for occupancy.

"A woman cannot throw a stone,
Or kill a mouse or rat;
Without a glass in which to look,
She can't put on her hat."

So runs the old skit; but a Los Angeles woman has demonstrated that she can build a good house with her own hands, from the ground up. What's the use to talk of what a woman "can't do?"

DISPOSITION OF THE PHILIPPINES.

Popular interest in the Philippine Islands is shown in the large number of communications received by The Times upon the subject of the disposition of these possessions.

It is not surprising that there is much difference of opinion, or that a considerable number of writers hold to the view that we should go on administering the affairs of the Philippines, as we are now doing, with the purpose of lifting the people to a plane of intelligence where it will be safe to entrust them with their own government.

Of those holding this view it appears that nearly all are influenced by sentiment. The sentiment is high and indicates noble ideals. This kind of sentiment has been the power which has spread civilization over the globe in the past. It was sentiment like this which created in the minds of many people so earnest a purpose to go to our task and make the Philippine people the receptacle of high occidental civilization.

But here the controversy came to the surface. We have been at this work now for almost ten years. We have performed our task earnestly, and it would not be correct to say that we have done nothing. After these years of effort, and at the cost of $200,000,000, the testimony of all best acquainted with the facts is that progress is so slow as to be exasperatingly discouraging. When things are done by our people and the work turned over to the natives they will not maintain the improvements, but will let the district revert to its primitive condition of wilderness. There can be no civilization without roads. When roads and bridges are made the natives permit them to fall into decay.

In other words, our ten years' experience has impressed most Americans who have been on the spot with the conviction that the native character offers to the work of civilization on the American standard insuperable obstacles. Holding to the general principle that we do not wish to rule over a subject race, and confronted with the conviction that a century will practically do little in the way of putting the Filipinos on the road toward fitness for American citizenship, or for self-government on any plan similar to ours, Americans who know these facts have raised the question whether it would not be better to make some other disposition of these possessions. The despair is not distrust in American ideals, but doubt as to the native capacity to absorb these ideals. That seems to be the practical point around which the debate revolves.

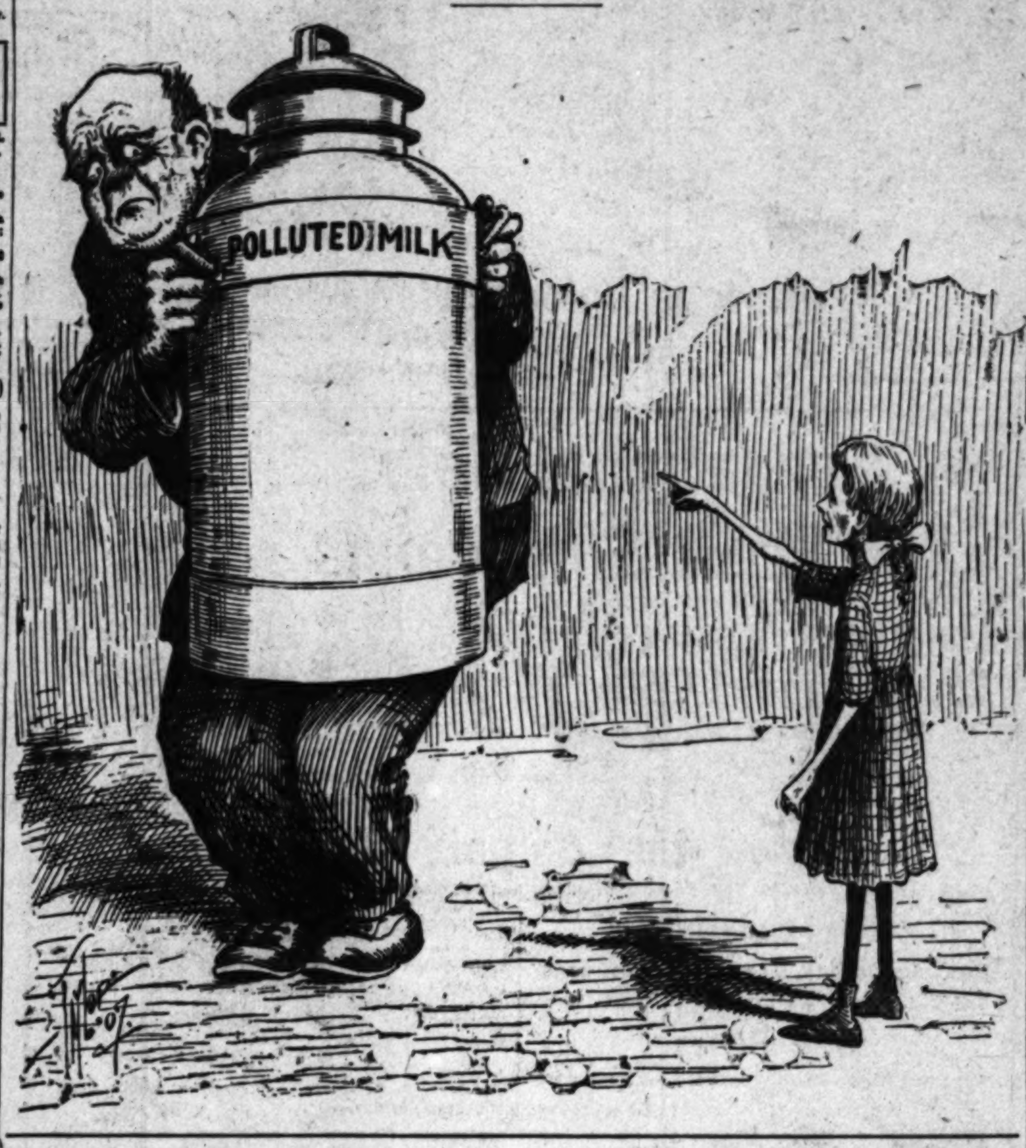
Other writers contend that the question should be submitted to the people of the islands and their decision adopted. It would not be necessary to take a vote on this proposition. It is known beforehand what the vote would be. The residents of the islands, European and Asiatic, who have acquired in some measureable degree occidental ideas, and who have property holdings in the islands, would vote, almost to a man, for continued dependence on the United States. These are the only people in the islands in any measure capable of self-government. They know how unfit are the masses of the people, and what results would follow the attempt. All the people of less enlightenment, and, therefore, unfit for self-government, would vote to try what intelligent people know they could not do.

Spain, in 300 years, planted a little outpost of civilization in this much-discussed archipelago. In some respects the result is not of the highest type. The Spanish inhabitants of the islands established their church there, and many of the natives acknowledge a more or less hearty allegiance to the Christian religion. In the last ten years American churches have established missions in the islands. Americans have acquired property rights and have established some business enterprises. The total of these germs of civilization is important. They must be preserved and given time to work a gradual transformation in the characters and lives of the natives. People from many countries are interested at various points on the islands. Americans coming up from them are, we believe, unanimous in the view that to entrust the islands to the natives would result in quick destruction of every root of civilization existing. As the roads have reverted to the jungle, and as the bridges have fallen into decay, so all done by Spain in 300 years, and by Americans in our short administration, would be swept away in an uprising of the semi-savage and quite savage tribes of the islands. The civilized world holds us responsible for preventing this.

The controversy turns around the point, shall we go on with our task, declared hopeless by those who know the conditions best, or shall we turn the work over to some one more in sympathy with the racial characteristics of the people, less impatient of native limitations, and willing to wait longer for lower results? It has been suggested that the Japanese, being Asiatics, not so hopelessly far above the Filipinos in occidental ideals, and being close at hand, would be the logical people for this task. They would be expected to give all proper guarantee for the protection of our missions and schools, and for the property rights of our people.

There is another point, seldom referred to, from which this subject must be viewed. The islands are a constant invitation to some power of hostile intent. The attack may come at any time, and the cost of defense, in blood and treasure, would be great.

"I ACCUSE."



THE GOLDEN TOUCH.

Once upon a time Los Angeles was diverted by the antics of one H. Gaylord Wilshire, who professed fervid love for his fellow-man, preached socialism and boomed real estate. Gaylord Wilshire has been gone from Los Angeles for some years, but he is still an ardent Socialist and a boomer. His magazine has been devoted largely for months to exploitation of "the greatest gold mine in the world," represented by Mr. Wilshire to be located on Bishop Creek, near the northern end of Owens Valley.

According to the New York Sun, many of Mr. Wilshire's socialistic readers haven't been taking the interest in Bishop Creek, "the greatest gold mine in the world," that a person would who was selling stock for $4 a share that cost about 10 cents. The Executive Committee of the Socialist party was even moved to resolve that the promotion of the Bishop Creek gold mine, even if it was the greatest in the world, was not one intimately associated with the cause for which all true Socialists are holding street corner meetings and getting arrested every once in a while for blocking the streets.

Wilshire is said to have secured control of the concern for just enough to coax the Sheriff of Inyo away from the "mountain of gold." When the comrades began to show interest in the stock at a dollar a share, brother Wilshire boosted the capitalization from $5,000,000 to $25,000,000, and the price of stock to $2.50 a share. On July 1, the stock was quoted exclusively in Wilshire's magazine at $4 a share, with symptoms of going above par right away, but there is to be no more boosting in the magazine; the comrades won't stand for it. "Hereafter," says Gaylord, the Midas of Bishop Creek, "stockholders will receive their news of development by a circular, mailed from time to time as the work progresses."

Brother Wilshire has been telling his comrades that they were in on a mountain of gold largely on the strength of a report made by his consulting engineer, Ali Asghar Hassan, described in the Bishop Creek literature as a "geologist and metallurgist of note." Among other things Mr. Hassan said:

> Before having taken any general sampling or made any assays I had come to the conclusion that here was the greatest body of gold ore I had ever seen, and so wrote you, adding, "If it would average $10 a ton it was one of the great mines of the world."

That is a mining expert of parts. He knows a mine when he sees it, and needs no assays to determine its value. In his enthusiasm, Ali Asghar Hassan reported to Br'er Wilshire, who passed it on to the faithful, that "no such valuable body of ore existed in any of the famous mines of the world, not excepting the Homestake, Tonopah or Alaskan Treadwell."

But let it not be inferred that nobody has been made rich by the "mountain of gold" on Bishop Creek. H. Gaylord Wilshire recently became a director of the Beaver National Bank in New York, which proves that either wild-cat stock boosting or socialism is a lucrative profession. Did any one rise to remark that Br'er Wilshire may have the "golden touch"—on the pockets of the comrades?

CRUSH OUT THOSE WHO TRADE IN SOULS.

The authorities have undertaken to check the career of the human harpies that trade in human souls.

Smooth of tongue, well groomed, but black as the bottom of the pit at heart, they come here and lure away to a life of ignominy, vice and misery in outside cities girls who, if protected, would become useful members of decent society.

Conceding that sometimes a depraved girl goes willingly to a fate of whose horrors she does not dream, these abandoned men by means of false promises lure innocent girls away. They are promised employment at high wages in hotels and restaurants. When far away from friends and home, they suddenly become aware of the character of the place in which they are landed, and it is very difficult to escape.

Without money, subjected to brutal treatment, too often they abandon hope and submit broken-hearted to their fate.

There is hardly a crime in the long catalogue more dangerous to society than this. The laws do not provide punishment half severe enough to meet the enormity of the offense.

The courts should exercise no leniency, nor listen to plausible excuses. When the evidence against the hescoundrels is sufficient, let the hand of the law fall on them so heavily as to crush them out of society.

ROOSEVELT'S STRONG HOLD.

Secretary Straus, back in Washington after a trip which covered nearly the whole West, says everywhere in the West President Roosevelt is the choice of nearly the whole Republican party as his own successor. That is just the condition. With Republicans line up hundreds of thousands of Democrats.

If Roosevelt should head the ticket next year he would carry every State usually classed as northern, and to these he would add Missouri and possibly two or three other Southern States. This would happen no matter who might head the other ticket, or what combinations might be made against him.

Should the people put up Taft, confident that he will give the country a Roosevelt administration along main lines of policy, he may not get so large a popular vote in some States as Roosevelt would, but unless some great change takes place he will get the electoral vote of as many States. It is not likely that there will be a single case of defection among the States that went Republican in 1904.

Should the unexpected happen and the Republican party put out a candidate whose policies would be reactionary, he might be elected, but it would be by a great effort and probably by a scratch.

VIRTUE AND THE ANARCHIST.

The anarchist has the semblance of a human being, but his antagonism is directed against the human race. The more human the person, the more blameless the life, the more exalted the personal character, the more spotless the personal virtue, the more rabid the animosity of the anarchist. In almost every instance the daggers of these enemies of humanity are aimed at men and women the most conspicuous for their tender sympathies for the race, at those of the highest lives.

They single out as the objects of their hatred rulers of more or less exalted position, but they neglect the tyrant, the debauché, the corrupt ruler. They dye the earth with the blood of the best.

When the assassin's bullet shed the life-blood of William McKinley, it removed from among men one of the most useful, devoted, sympathetic of men, one of the truest friends that people of all degrees had in America. No man among us had lived a more blameless life. None of us evidenced a warmer sympathy with every movement for the betterment of men. No life in all the land was daily more productive of helpfulness to all men. In his life, public and private, William McKinley never had been known to do an injury to any person, high or low. His days were full of acts of kindness.

On Thursday the city of Buffalo unveiled a monument to the illustrious victim who fell under the diabolical assault of anarchy. It may have been only malicious mischief which prompted the writing of letters threatening the life of Gov. Hughes of New York on this occasion. But it was directly in logical line with the acts of anarchists for years past. Hughes is the type of character these people cannot contemplate with complacency. Unambitious in a bad sense, no self-seeker, patriotic, high-minded, just in all his dealings, devoted to the good of the public, Charles M. Hughes is just the exalted, shining mark which attracts the green eyes of these degenerate, crooked-minded, foul-spirited people who make a profession of anarchy.

Professing to be acting for the removal of evils which interfere with the happy course of most men's lives, talking about the injustice in society, prating about lifting the race to a higher plane, these people always seek to strike down the righteous man. It is the one who is doing most to make justice universal and to ameliorate the condition of all who attracts the malignant attention of these monstrosities and who falls a victim to their cunningly-conceived conspiracies.

It certainly appears as if the very depths of hell were sounded and the diabolical hatred of vice for virtue had been brought and planted in the hearts of these men and women. They are an enigma in the world on any rational theory of existence. Anarchism is not a survival, a remnant of savagery persisting under the influences of civilization; the savage is a stranger to such a sentiment. The Indians held Hiawatha in as high respect as we hold our benefactors of today. It is not a remnant of the beast that lies buried under all the long ages of evolution. The wild creatures of the jungle have some sentiment of gratitude for any being which does them good.

In old times they had a theory which would account for the anarchist. They called his case a demoniacal possession. Modern man has discarded the theory of possession by devils. Perhaps we shall have to revive it, in our lack of a working theory to account for the anarchist. He is here. How shall we account for him?

FREIGHT CLASSIFICATION.

The Interstate Commerce Commission will bring into railroad management reforms one might have looked for at the hands of the railroad men working by their own initiative.

Only clerks in advanced situations in the railroad service know the complications of the railroad classification of freights. Each system, large and small, has its own classification. Rates and classification go together, and when the clerk comes to figure out rates on freight passing over portions of several systems, classification changing as often as the line changes, he has a puzzling problem.

The presence of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the operating affairs of the roads has brought the freight men to realize what a tangle the various systems show when any effort is made to analyze or compare them. The immediate result has been the appointment of a committee of railroad men made by the railroads to bring in one uniform system which will apply to all roads in the country. It will require three years for this committee to perform its task. This fact tells the story.

THE INFINITE SEA.

I love the sea for its power to give
A glimpse of the inmost life I live—
The elemental, the great and free
Forces that flame in the soul of me.
The throb of the cosmic heart I know,
Sensing the billows' ebb and flow.
My passionate prayer and reaching hands
With the white waves yearn up the rising sands.
I laugh in the glee of the crystal crest,
I rush in the buoyant open zest,
I kiss the shadow of sea gull's wing
And my song to the air with his I fling.
I lurk in the emerald darkness deep
Under the pier where the old piles sleep.
I clasp the ships in a lover mood,
Wild with the joy of wooer and wooed;
I fold with love the farthest isles
And the shores of lands for a myriad miles,
For my veins are the veins of the purple sea
Where it feels the sky so wondrously;
My eyes look up in the sapphire glow,
And my dreams in the shimmer come and go.
In the quick response to the sun and wind
I revel in bliss of the waking mind.
O urge and stress of the rhythmic power,
I know you and love you as mine this hour!
O beauty and color and grace and song,
You are mine by the right of the strong for the strong!
I will bear you away in the soul of me—
Breath of my spirit—the infinite sea.

RUBY ARCHER.

HOROSCOPE FOR THIS DAY.

Sunday, September 8, 1907.

"Today the distance holds a promise fair,
And friendship's duties rich reward declare."

The 251st day of the year; moon's age, one day.

A most propitious day for travel, particularly in a westerly direction. For short journeys the traveler is promised fulfillment of all desires. To start this day on long trips assures a pleasant voyage.

An excellent day for all intercourse between friends. Arrange meetings for the afternoon between acquaintances who have not seen each other in a long time. Unexpected and happy disclosures are promised.

A lucky day for all small enterprises that look solely toward entertainment or amusement. If venturing on the water, however, have a care to the appearance of the sky; for of this day it is foretold that "singing pinions beat upon the deep," and sudden windsqualls must be guarded against.

Calamity threatens an assemblage of many people in Central Europe during the coming week. A great enterprise in America will be beset with difficulties.

Those whose birthdate this is must take warning against indulgence in pleasures, particularly of the social kind, during the coming year. Any neglect of their business that this may cause will have serious consequences. Let them take heed especially that they do not lend money to merely social acquaintances or speculate on their advice.

The child born today will be altogether too fond of pleasure and extravagance to do well in business. It should be kept in employment. It will succeed best in the business of contracting, selling real estate or purchasing on commission. If a girl, guard her against unfit associates. The early life training should be devoted to building up a firm, modest and self-contented character. She should be led to read much in early youth.

Bright, Eh?

In a little town in Northern Pennsylvania there is a fire department in which the citizens take great pride, composed, as it is, wholly of volunteers.

Late in April a fire broke out at midnight. When the department came upon the scene, only one lantern could be found. The smoke was pouring out of the building, but no flames appeared, and it was very dark.

Finally, a tongue of flame shot out of one corner of the structure, and the crowd cheered as the man at the nozzle directed a stream of water toward it. At this crisis the excited shouted:

"Hey there, Bill! Be careful you do! Keep the water off Don't you see that's the we've got to put out the [Harper's Weekly.]

INVASION of Southern California by the English sparrow has begun. The advance guard having appeared at Newhall a few weeks ago. By a typographical error a new item relating to the subject conveyed the idea that Newhall was the only place in the region not previously visited by the birds, whereas the fact is that Newhall is the first locality to report the appearance of the little outlaw. There are no English sparrows in Los Angeles. But by some curious chance the English sparrow got into Owens Valley a few years ago and is seen in large numbers in Independence. Possibly the Newhall invaders came from the Owens Valley brood.

That the English sparrow may be destructive to small fruits and berries is possible, and if that be so, he will be an unwelcome addition to the feathered population of San Fernando Valley, but in some respects his bad reputation is undeserved. The common charge against him is that he drives other birds away, and it is asserted, as if it were an undisputed fact, that he has evicted all other small birds from the parks of eastern cities.

It is not true, however, that the English sparrow drives other birds away. There are thousands, perhaps millions, of English sparrows in Central Park, New York, but they have not driven the other birds out. I have observed them closely during all seasons, and although they fight furiously and frequently among themselves, I never saw them attack other species. Thrushes, warblers, vireos, flycatchers, orioles, chickadees, nuthatches, song sparrows, blue birds, cardinal birds, robins, grackles, starlings, finches—all the native birds of the eastern woods and fields, and various imported species—are plentiful in Central Park and show no fear of the English sparrow. The sparrow, however, is very respectful to the robins and grackles and keeps his distance from them. When a robin lights near a flock of feeding sparrows, the little birds scatter out of his way. Some of the popular aversion to the little Briton may be pure prejudice, yet there may be good reason for classing him with the "undesirables." The game warden plans a campaign of extermination against the Newhall invaders, and I suggest to him that he go about it in a scientific way and make examination of the interiors of as many birds as he can kill to ascertain what they are eating. I venture the guess that he will find more insects than berry seeds.

Just an Echo.

The asphalt trust's roar over the $5,000,000 fine imposed by a Venezuelan court is only an echo of Standard Oil's howl, and the same interests that sympathize with John D. are urging American interference in the Venezuelan affair. But the facts in the Venezuelan case, as stated by friends and defenders of the asphalt trust, are not likely to excite public indignation at the action of the court.

According to a financial journal that takes up the cause of the trust, Gen. Matos called on the National Asphalt Company in New York and obtained [illegible] for revolutionary purposes.

"The money was paid for the protection of the company's property during the continuance of the revolution, and for the protection of its just rights thereafter in case the revolution succeeded." During the revolution the trust gave Matos $30,000 more.

That is the trust's own explanation and defense, and if it does not justify Venezuela in compelling the trust to pay the cost of suppressing Matos, I am the ghost of a dead fish. The trust was blackmailed by Matos, of course, but it saw fit to gamble on the result of his rebellion and to pay in advance for privileges which it had failed to get from the existing government. Matos was beaten, and the asphalt trust lost.

If American adventurers meddle with South American revolutions and finance filibustering expeditions from New York they must expect at least to pay the cost when they lose. The asphalt trust is not a game sport; it is a welsher.

He Won't Resign.

Supervisor Patterson's bombast about his colleagues "walking over his dead body" to rescind a saloon license, giving it to a non-resident rumseller in spite of the protest of two-thirds of the owners of Neenach, sizes up the caliber of that bucolic—not to say alcoholic—statesman. The picture of Patterson gallantly yielding his life in defense of booze is a touching one, but it is not convincing. The only thing he is likely to lose by perversely opposing public opinion is his political pull in the county, and the sooner he loses that, the better for the county.

The election of politicians of the Patterson type is a standing reproach to the citizenship of Los Angeles county; it connotes an indifference to public interests that is discreditable, or a subservience to a pernicious machine that is disgraceful.

Patterson has said that he would resign rather than vote to rescind the rotten action of the board, but it is to be feared that he did not mean what he said. If the people of Los Angeles believed that he did mean it, they would urge him fervently (politically speaking) not to vote to rescind. His colleagues probably would not walk over his dead body if it were in the way; they would hold their noses and deploy around it. Of course my remarks are to be taken in a political sense. Nobody wants to kill Patterson any other way—not even Patty himself.

Civic Pestilence.

Bubonic plague is a bad thing to get started in a community, but there are worse pestilences than that, and San Francisco has been suffering for some years under a visitation more loathsome in its manifestations and more appalling in its destructiveness than any disease known to medical science. The moral decadence of the community is a menace to the civic health of the whole country and calls for drastic treatment.

The Mayor of San Francisco has telegraphed to President Roosevelt:

"In view of existing sanitary conditions, it is desired that the Federal government assume immediate charge of the measures necessary to eradicate and prevent the spread of bubonic plague in San Francisco."

This is what a Mayor should have telegraphed long ago:

"In view of existing anarchistic conditions, it is desired that the Federal government assume immediate charge of the measures necessary to eradicate mob rule in San Francisco and restore the rights of American citizens to life, liberty and the pursuit of lawful vocations."

It is not too late yet to check the relapse of San Francisco to savagery and civic decrepitude, but the moral sanitation will have to be undertaken by a stronger power than the temporizing city government.

Prods in Passing.

Everybody but Congressman Smith quit kicking at the Owens River project when Los Angeles voted the bonds to carry it out. Smith still hugs the delusion that he is "the people of Inyo county" and that it is his business, as retained "knocker" for corporations that have been knocked out and know it, to emit a feeble squeak of protest whenever he can get the floor. At the irrigation congress, Smith bobbed up with his old inanity that "the people of Inyo will permit Los Angeles to take water for domestic use, but object to allowing the water to be used for irrigation." It seems to be impossible to get it through the Smith skull that Los Angeles does not require his permission to make any use she chooses of what she has bought and paid for.

War news from Morocco reads like reports of Spanish operations against Cuban insurgents or Mexican battles with Yaquis. Terrific fighting; eight Frenchmen killed; enemy's losses enormous. An enemy out of touch with the telegraph always loses enormously.

No promise of relief from a silly fad is held out by the strike of Teddy bear stuffers in New York. For some time to come the Teddy bear will fill the place of the pug dog in the "typical American family."

NECKLACE IN LAUNDRY BAG.

Bellboy Finds Valuable Ornament and Returns It to Surprised Wife of Wealthy Contractor.

Through the honesty of a bellboy at the Hotel Lankershim, one of its guests recovered a valuable diamond necklace, even before she had missed it, yesterday. William Fredericks, the boy, went to the room of Mrs. E. G. Grant and carried away the laundry bag. When he took it to the checkroom he heard a jingle as the bag dropped on the floor. Upon investigation he found a beautiful necklace, encrusted with gems and valued at many hundred dollars, at the bottom of the bag. Fredericks at once went to Mrs. Grant's apartments and returned the ornament to her.

"Why, where did you find that," exclaimed the guest in surprise.

"It was in the laundry bag I got from your room this morning," replied the bellboy.

Then Mrs. Grant remembered that she had placed the necklace in the bag for safe-keeping while she was absent from her room.

She explained that it was a great bother to put it in the hotel safe every time she went out and that she finally decided upon the laundry bag as a secure hiding-place. She reasoned that a thief would never think of going through a bag of soiled linen in search of valuables.

Mrs. Grant is the wife of a wealthy contractor and has been a guest at the Lankershim for several weeks. She gave a suitable reward to the bellboy for his honesty. Fredericks has been employed at the hotel for over a year. While at another hotel, he once found a valuable ring and returned it to its owner.

LARGE GLASS PLACED.

The installation of a large plate glass in the Fifth-street side of the new Security building, yesterday, attracted a crowd. The glass is 12ft. 8in. by 9ft. 10in., and weighs 4½ pounds to the square foot. Ten men were required to handle it.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

At an executive session in the City Hall tower yesterday, the Council decided to call a special election to authorize the issue of $300,000 in fire bonds.

The Finance Committee of the Council recommended to the committee of the whole in secret session yesterday that two milk inspectors and two lodging-house inspectors be dismissed from the health department.

Attorney Haas made a touching plea yesterday to the Council not to drive auto liverymen into bankruptcy by making the maximum hire for their machines $3 an hour, or $25 a day.

Elements of comedy with tragic suggestions were presented in the trial of an action for divorce, brought by Mrs. Edith Switzer against Benjamin Switzer in the Superior Court yesterday. The plaintiff testified that her husband tore the house down while afflicted with delirium tremens.

Mrs. Blanche Hilliard, seeking a divorce from William Hilliard, told of a fight for a letter, in which her throat was clawed by her angry husband.

Jack Foster, a vaudeville actor, was fined $90 yesterday in the Police Court after he had been convicted of "mashing."

Tom Cronin, an electrician, was sentenced to thirty days in jail yesterday at his own request. He told Justice Chambers that he could not keep sober and did not want to disgrace his family.

The local Lathers' Union accuses one of its members, F. H. Lewis, of embezzlement. He was arraigned in the Police Court yesterday.

AT THE CITY HALL.

FEW CUTS IN CITY BUDGET.

COUNCIL FINALLY DECIDES FOR FIRE BONDS.

Will Call Special Election to Authorize Three Hundred Thousand-Dollar Issue—Recommends Dismissal of Four Inspectors in Health Department—Few Reductions.

In the final round-up on the annual budget yesterday the Council decided to call a bond election to raise $300,000 for fire houses and equipment. To the last minute some of the Councilmen held out for taking the money from the current revenue fund and it was a statement from Auditor Mushet that finally turned the tide in favor of bonds.

"It is simply impossible for the Council to take the money for those fire houses from the tax fund and still meet all its obligations," asserted Mr. Mushet.

Wren still objected and declined to vote for the bonds but the other eight Councilmen decided that the bond election must be called.

The Councilmen concluded to invest $100,000 this year in bridges. Part of this will go to repairs, the other to beginning work on the Buena Vista street, East Main street and Brooklyn Heights bridges.

It is not expected that any of these structures will be finished during the present fiscal year; but the way will be prepared for rushing the construction work during the next year.

This year's budget exceeds all its fellow by almost $1,000,000. From the tax fund $2,598,556 has been apportioned among the different departments; and $876,000 has been apportioned from money expected to be raised from other sources.

When it was finally decided that a bond election shall be held to raise money for fire houses the tension on other departments was relaxed and a number of proposed reductions in force and salary were abandoned.

The greatest reduction in force recommended is in the engineering department. This is because the contractors are loaded with street work and there will be fewer calls this year for plans and specifications for street improvements. Then, of course, there will be a big reduction in the engineering force when the outfall sewer is finished.

Friday the Finance Committee talked about abolishing the office of city forester, but Saturday morning it was decided to give the forester a chance for another year.

Four inspectors in the health department are on the anxious seat; the Finance Committee is of the opinion that the department can run for another year minus two milk inspectors and two lodging-house inspectors.

When the final test came it developed yesterday that there are to be comparatively few reductions in salary, but there are to be no increases and no increase in department forces has been voted.

Late Tuesday afternoon the budget will go to the Council from the Finance Committee. The members of this committee are working to smooth out all the wrinkles so that there will be no objections from the floor of the Council when it is presented.

City Auditor Mushet speaks commendingly of the interest taken by the Council in the details of the budget. "I think that the Council has gone more into the details this year than ever before," said Mr. Mushet last night, "and I think that they will be well prepared to meet the financial questions that will come before them during the remainder of this year."

MUST REMOVE POLES.
TO ENFORCE CONDUIT LAW.

Notice has been served on all local public utility corporations by the Board of Public Works that they must remove forthwith all poles and overhead wires in the new conduit district.

A year ago the Council passed an ordinance including in the conduit district the following streets:

Fifth street from Hill to Olive, Sixth street from Hill to Figueroa, Fifth street from Central to Main, Grand avenue from Sixth street to Ninth street, Hope street from Sixth street to Ninth street, Flower street from Sixth street to Ninth street.

Under the terms of this ordinance the utility companies were required to remove their poles and wires from the streets in the district by June 30 of this year. Yesterday the Board of Public Works notified the companies that they must remove the wires forthwith and that the poles must come down at once.

The companies affected are Home Telephone Company, Edison Electric Company, Sunset Telephone Company, Los Angeles Gas and Electric Company, Los Angeles Railway Company, Pacific Light and Power Company.

Each year the Council passes an ordinance setting apart two miles of streets to be included in the conduit district; these districts are generally on the edge of the present conduit area. Once the Council selected a suburban district; the utility companies at once notified the Mayor that they were willing to remove the poles and wires if it was considered for the best interests of the city, but they asked to be excused from digging conduits along those streets, as it would take about 400 years at the rates charged to get their money back.

The Council discovered that it has no power to force a private company to dig a conduit, and since that year the districts have been short extensions of the conduit area in the center of the city. This is the first time a question has arisen about a close-in district.

City Hall Notes.

H. D. Kennedy, secretary to the Mayor, left for Rockford, Me., with his wife last night, called away by a telegram telling him that his wife's father is dying of pneumonia in Rockford.

The Democratic machine has selected Jim Craig for successor to Ed Kern as chief of police, in case the Mayor decides to transfer Kern to the City Hall and give him a place on the Board of Public Works.

The anti-prize fight ordinance was brought out from the files for an airing before the Committee of the Whole yesterday morning. After a half-hearted effort to secure its adoption it was "laid on the table."

Attorney Haas made a strong plea to the Council yesterday in behalf of struggling liverymen who keep autos for hire. These are compelled to rent their machines to the public now for a paltry $35 a day or for $4 an hour. Mr. Haas said that if the city should reduce this to $3 an hour and $25 a day, the auto men would all be forced into insolvency.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

OF GRAVE CRIME HE ACCUSES HER.

HUSBAND CHARGES WIFE WITH KILLING BABY.

Hints at Criminal Operation in Grading Camp—Woman, Suing for Divorce, and Her Mother Accuses Him of Cruelty and Habitual Drunkenness—Case Is Contiued.

Strong comedy elements, a spice of farce and more than a suggestion of underlying tragedy were presented in a preliminary action and a trial for divorce yesterday in Department Seven of the Superior Court.

The first action was on an order to show cause why Benjamin Switzer should not pay $100 for expenses and attorney's fees in the trial which was to follow.

Counsel for the plaintiff said the defendant ought to pay the amount asked; counsel for the defendant declared his client could not do so. Mrs. Switzer was placed on the witness stand to tell what she knew of material facts. Immediately she began to speak of matters which properly pertained only to the divorce case, but eliminated them from her testimony after being cautioned by Judge Hutton.

"How do you earn your living?" asked her attorney.

"I don't earn it at all. Mother does," answered the young woman, promptly. In answer to other questions she declared that the husband she seeks freedom from earns $2.50 to $2.75 a day in the brickyards where he works.

Mr. Switzer was called to the stand to give his view of the matter.

"I can't pay $100," he said. "I earn $3.50, and sometimes $2.75, when I work, but they don't make bricks all the time.

"I gave her everything I had when she left me, and besides that she took my shirts, my stockings, my cuff buttons and everything. I had to borrow money from my mother to get a suit of clothes with. I'm living with my mother now. Yes, I pay her board."

Judge Hutton made an order for $15 costs and $25 attorney's fees, to be paid within ninety days, and then the divorce trial began.

As the defendant walked toward the door of the courtroom, Judge Hutton stopped him, saying:

"Don't go away. We may need you as a witness."

Mrs. Edith Switzer returned to the stand.

"We were married in September, 1903," she began, and in answer to various questions by counsel and judge, she added:

"He was cruel to me all the time of our married life. He called me names." (She repeated them briskly when urged by counsel.) "July 14, in the night, he came home and had the snakes. What? Well, I don't know what you call 'em. Yes, delirium trimmins, I guess. He swore at me. Just what he usually said, I guess. I called a gentleman in to help me manage him, and he struck at him. I went away, and he tore the house down after I left.

"Yes, he generally worked all the week, when he had work, and got drunk Saturday nights.

"I don't exactly remember the dates. Oh, when he swore at me? 'Most any time."

She testified that her husband had given her a black eye once, but did not remember how.

Mrs. Case, mother of the plaintiff, who came to California a year ago and lived a month with her daughter and son-in-law, stated that she was not in the house at Avenue 28, and Dalton avenue, on the night of July 14, but saw the place the following day.

"Nothing was hanging up," testified Mrs. Case. "The ceiling was tore off the walls, and every dish was broke. "Yes, he'd been drinking right smartly for some time, and abused his wife dreadful while she was sick."

Hubert Stine, who keeps a store adjoining the house where the Switzers lived, smiled broadly when asked if he had ever seen Switzer drunk.

"Yes," drawled the witness, apparently enjoying the memory of the incidents he was about to relate; "about every Saturday, and oftener when he wasn't working.

"One evening he fell off the car near home, and the conductor went back and picked him up and put him on the sidewalk. He got to his house and up on the porch, but fell off it before he could get to the door. I went up to him and told him he was causing too much attraction, and I got him in the house.

"Noise? Yes. It used to bother us at first, but by and by we got used to it, and if it waked me up I'd just say to myself: 'That's Switzer coming home,' and go to sleep again."

Judge Hutton called Switzer to the stand, and invited him to explain the black eye incident. He said he did not care to, but the judge insisted.

"I never laid a hand on that woman," he cried sharply. "I cursed her, yes. Who wouldn't? Didn't she kill my baby, she and her mother? She went away into a grading camp, and then a doctor was called there. Her mother paid the doctor, and he never came to me for the bill. That was strange, wasn't it?

"She admitted that it was so. She told me the doctor said blood poisoning would have set in pretty soon and she'd have died, if he hadn't been called then."

"You're making a pretty serious charge here," said the judge. "Did you go and see that doctor? Did you investigate?"

Switzer admitted that he had adopted the idea that a criminal operation had been performed, without inquiring as to particulars.

The witness declared that his wife had been perfectly well when she went away to the grading camp. He cried out in anger against his mother-in-law.

The case was continued, in order that the man who sought to aid Mrs. Switzer when her husband, as she alleged, had delirium tremens, might be subpoenaed.

HER TALE OF CRUELTY.
DIVORCED FROM FIREMAN.

Mrs. Blanche Hilliard secured an interlocutory decree of divorce from a fireman on the Southern Pacific road, yesterday, on the grounds of cruelty and desertion. She had married Samuel William Hilliard in New York in January 18, 1895, and her marital career had been pleasant until four years ago.

"He got in the habit of going across to a vile Italian saloon when he was in Los Angeles, and of associating with people far beneath him in every way. When I'd say: 'Will, please don't go there,' he'd laugh at me as if I was a fool, or curse me."

Then had come the discovery that her husband had renewed an acquaintance with a woman he had known before his marriage.

"I had thought it was something past," the plaintiff testified. "I read some of the letters, and then did them up with a note I wrote to him, and gave them to him. He said he would burn them, and have no more to do with her.

"One day a letter came, addressed in the care of his father, but I knew it was from her. I did not open it till Will came home, and then I told him I was going to. He caught me by the throat, and tore it with his fingernails, saying: 'I'll kill you!' But I kept the letter."

Mrs. Hilliard testified that her husband had become a hard drinker in the past four years.

The plaintiff did not appear.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.
BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

OWENS'S HEARING SET. Dr. J. S. Owens, charged with extortion by J. W. Evans, was arraigned in Justice Selph's court yesterday, and his examination was set for September 27. Deputy Dist.-Atty. Paul McCormick tried to have an earlier day set, but Attorney George Hupp, counsel for the defendant, insisted on delay, declaring that the rights of his client demanded that depositions be taken in Portland, and that letters which will constitute exhibits in the civil suit against Evans, pending there, will be necessary to combat the extortion charge.

JUDGE MONROE BACK. Work, suspended in Department Six of the Superior Court through much of the time since Judge Monroe's departure for Europe on his vacation, was resumed with a rush yesterday.

IMPERIAL JUDGE VISITING. Judge F. J. Cole of Imperial county visited the Courthouse yesterday, and will spend some time each day in the different departments during his stay in this city. Judge Cole expects to open court in El Centro early in October. Already several criminal cases are awaiting him, most of them in connection with illegal liquor selling in the chaotic period preceeding the election. Several probate matters have been transferred from the Superior Court of San Diego county to Judge Cole's court.

NEW CORPORATION. Los Angeles Steel Company, capital stock $50,000, of which $500 is subscribed. The directors are D. A. Schweitzer, George W. Harding, W. A. Amend, Frank S. Hutton, F. D. R. Moote.

THE INFERIOR COURTS.

ACTOR IS GUILTY OF "MASHING."

COMEDIAN DRAWS HEAVY FINE IN POLICE COURT.

Unaware of Nearness of Husband When He Accosts Young Woman on Main Street—Electrician Locked Up at His Own Request—Union Has Member Arrested.

Because he didn't know that an irate husband was rapidly approaching, Jack Foster, vaudeville comedian on one of the big western circuits, came to grief Friday night, and yesterday, after being found guilty of the crime of "mashing," was fined $90, with the alternative of working out that amount on the city chain gang. His friends came to his assistance and paid the fine.

Foster is a handsome young man of the blonde type. For the past few weeks he has been appearing at various vaudeville houses in Southern California.

Friday night R. C. Wilson, a young business man of Pasadena, had been in Los Angeles to witness a play. He was accompanied by his wife.

While they were waiting for a car at Third and Main streets, Wilson excused himself for a moment and went off to get a cigar. At that moment the comedian appeared on the scene and tragedy threatened.

Foster is alleged to have approached the young woman, and to have remarked: "Rather late for you to be out all by yourself, isn't it, girlie?"

"Let me alone and go about your business," was the woman's reply, as she turned away from Foster. Then she added, "My husband is coming here now."

When Wilson approached, he found his wife in tears. She was so angry that all she could do was to point after Foster and murmur that he had insulted her.

That was enough for Wilson. He started after the actor. A policeman interfered and arrested the actor, who spent the night in solitary confinement.

Yesterday morning he explained to Justice Chambers that he had noticed that the young woman was unattended, and fearing that she might be insulted, he had volunteered to see her to her car.

Justice Chambers said: "This insulting of young women has got to stop, and it will go hard with any one convicted of that offense in my court."

Union Accuses Him.

Charged with the embezzlement of $22 from the local lathers' union, F. H. Lewis, former treasurer of that organization, was arraigned before Justice Chambers yesterday and his preliminary examination set for Tuesday.

Lewis lives at No. 1348 East Twenty-first street. The warrant for his arrest was sworn to by C. Bostwick, president of the union.

Lewis alleges that while ill and away from work, two weeks ago, he was given permission by the president and the secretary of the union to use $22 of the union's funds, provided he paid it back when he secured work.

Since then he has become a member of the International Association, which has only non-union lathers in its ranks. Lewis and his friends allege that the union's president had him arrested for spite.

Can't Keep Sober.

Well dressed, well mannered, but showing the effects of continued dissipation, T. A. Cronin, a man well known among the electricians of Los Angeles, yesterday appeared at the Police Station and begged to be given a long sentence in the City Jail.

When Cronin walked into Capt. Broadhead's office he was trembling.

"Lock me up," he begged. "For the sake of myself and my family. I want to get away from my friends. They have kept me drunk for just one year and only a long jail sentence will sober me up."

Capt. Broadhead escorted Cronin upstairs to Justice Chambers's court, where Cronin repeated his story. He said that he didn't want to cause any trouble to his family, that his boy was a graduate of Harvard and that his girls were in local society and that he didn't want to stay around home and disgrace them. He asked for ninety days.

Justice Chambers refused to give the man so long a sentence, but gave him thirty days instead.

"WATCH US GROW."

PROPHET OF EXPANSION.

Mertz Sees Great Future for Manufacturing.

Says Climate Is a Big Asset for Factories

Los Angeles to Become a Leader of Industries.

L. H. Mertz, editor of the Business Man's Magazine, spoke on "Los Angeles as a Manufacturing Center," before the City Club yesterday. He presented a highly optimistic picture of the possibilities of this city, and declared that the array of facts and figures which he had assembled has thoroughly convinced him that Los Angeles and the contiguous territory is certain to become one of the world's great centers of manufacturing. He stated the foundation for his faith as follows:

"Last year the figures on Los Angeles manufacturing were as follows: Number of establishments, 1537; number of employés, 20,780; capital invested, $35,000,000; output during 1906, $50,000,000.

"A consideration of these figures leads to two conclusions:

"First, that Los Angeles has shown that the world was entirely mistaken in thinking that this city would never become of importance in the manufacturing world, and, second, that this portion of the State is only on the threshold of her future manufacturing greatness.

"We must no longer think of California as an agricultural and mining State; it is erroneous in the face of these figures to consider Southern California merely as the greatest horticultural center in the country.

"To have achieved what it has in mining, in lumbering, in agriculture, in horticulture, is vastly to California's credit, and it is natural that these things should have had first attention. But to be satisfied with continued development along these lines would be taking small advantage of the opportunities offered. From now on the greatest development of this State, and more particularly of Southern California, must be in the direction of manufacturing enterprises.

"The figures which follow seem to show that Los Angeles can manufacture in many lines cheaper than any other city in the world, which is the same as saying that our splendid city will be one of the world's greatest manufacturing centers.

"Connecticut is one of the Union's greatest manufacturing States. Her factories produce a multitude of small goods, in which the highest improved automatic machinery is used. Yet California has every advantage of manufacturing that Connecticut has, and many more. When California's manufacturing is developed to the same extent as that of Connecticut, we will be producing eleven and one-quarter billion dollars' worth each year, or nearly forty times our present output. And California will do it. When she does, where will Los Angeles rank among the cities of the State? For Los Angeles, more than any other California city, is in position to take full advantage of our splendid God-given advantages.

"Unfortunately, the figures which I use are taken from the last census, now several years old. It is a fact that the advance in manufacturing in California, and more particularly in Los Angeles, has been much more rapid than in those States and cities with which I shall make comparison. Therefore, this section will be at a disadvantage from using these figures.

"The last census shows that the average gross output per operative in the factories of the United States is $1900 per annum. This is three times the output of France, four times that of of England and nearly four times that of Germany. So much for improved machinery, better methods, and the higher intelligence of American operatives.

"The average output per operative for the country is $1900. For California it is $3328. Thus, the worker in the factories of California turns out one and three-quarters as much as his brother worker the country over. This being so, do I misread the destiny of our city, when I prophesy that it will become a world center of manufacturing activity?

MOSTLY DUE TO NATURE.

"It is mostly a matter of natural advantages. When our factories are as thoroughly equipped and organized and work on as large orders as the East does, the difference will be even greater. The present advantage in favor of California manufacturers comes mostly from that much-maligned blessing—our glorious climate. Climate has a dollars and cents value in manufacturing. It is the greatest single factor in enabling the workers in our factories to produce $1.75 in gross output while the workers in less-favored sections produce only $1.

"Fifteen years ago those of us who were here probably agreed that Southern California had no serious chance as a manufacturing center. I do not know how many of you agree with me, but today hardly any claim that might be made in behalf of our manufacturing supremacy would phase me, in face of the fact that California, with 91,000 operatives and an investment of $205,-000,000, produces $263,000,000, as against Connecticut's production of $353,000,000, with 176,00 operatives and an investment of $314,000,000. This shows that the same output is produced in California on an investment of one-third less capital than in Connecticut. Farther on in the census report we find figures which show that the heat and power cost in Connecticut was 130 per cent. more than in California, based on coal at $3.60 per ton there and about twice that in California. Today the figures would be still more in favor of California, because 70-cent oil is about one-third cheaper than Connecticut's $3.60 coal.

"To put the matter in another way—if Connecticut could substitute our 70-cent oil for her $3.60 coal she would save $3,500,000 every year in her manufacturing expense.

"We are all familiar with the methods by which Southern California has succeeded in taking the products of her orchards, ranches and vineyards into the markets of the East and of the world. The citrus products of Southern California have gone into competition with the products of Mediterranean countries whose centuries-old systems and cheap labor have vanquished. So with walnuts, so with raisins; so in a measure with wines and so shortly it will be with olives and olive oil and many other products.

"The same conditions that have made this possible will enable us to enter the eastern markets with manufactured products at less risk on the investment and at greater profits. While the orchardist enjoys the benefits of our climate only spasmodically and is subject to all the whims of nature, the manufacturer will effect his climatic saving every day in the year, summer and winter.

INTERESTING COMPARISON.

"Let us consider a few figures comparing Bridgeport, Ct., and Los Angeles. In order to simplify the matter we will compare the iron industry in the two cities, because the iron industry is as true an exponent of a city's progress in manufacturing lines as any that could be taken and also because Los Angeles seems particularly fitted for the very highest development of iron manufacture, along the lines which have been so highly developed in the New England States—the higher grade of products which require much hand work or the use of the highest class of automatic machinery, such as hardware specialities, typewriters, bicycles, automobiles, arms, tools, etc.

"Referring again to our census report we find that Bridgeport had thirty-one establishments in the iron industry with an invested capital of two and one quarter millions and products to the value of two million five hundred thousand, employing fifteen hundred wage earners with a total wage of $830,000.

"In Los Angeles there were thirty-four establishments in the iron industry with an invested capital of one million dollars, products to the value of one million, five hundred thousand, employés to the number of 550, whose wages amounted to $360,000.

"In Bridgeport, therefore, the average investment per establishment was $75,000, while in Los Angeles it was $30,000. This is two and a half times as great an investment in Bridgeport as in Los Angeles. The same ratio is maintained in the investment of machinery in the plants of the two cities.

"In buildings the investment in Bridgeport was seven and three fourths times as great as it was here, while the investment in land was two and three-quarter times as great there as here.

"The net value of products in Bridgeport for each dollar invested in buildings was $4.20 while in Los Angeles it was $15. And this shows the practical, dollars-and-cents value of Los Angeles climate. The manufacturers of this city were enabled to build so much more cheaply and to perform so many of their operations out of doors, or in uninclosed buildings, that their investment in buildings was less than one-seventh as much as it was in Bridgeport.

"Going a little further into the census figures we find that the net value of the products of the Los Angeles operative was 40 per cent. greater than that of the Bridgeport worker. When we add this advantage to the saving in interest and taxes on account of the smaller investment in buildings and land and the saving in fuel from the use of oil instead of coal, we find that the total advantage of Los Angeles amounts to 15 per cent. on the entire capital that Bridgeport has invested in the industry. This 15 per cent. represents our city's present advantage. These figures are the fundamentals on which to base the manufacturing supremacy of the city. The matter of equipment, of experienced and skilled managers and employés, of men with technical and scientific knowledge are mere details—important, but yet details. The fundamental fact is that the Los Angeles manufacturer has the following advantages:

OUR ADVANTAGES.

"A climate which enables him to manufacture the same output with an investment in buildings only one-seventh as great as is necessary in the East. A climate which enables the operatives to reach their maximum production every hour of every day the year through, thus increasing the total gross output by 75 per cent. A climate in which many materials can be manipulated and manufactured in the prevailing temperature and which if handled in the East would require special temperatures secured by artificial means.

"Fuel that is equivalent to coal at about $2.50 per ton. Labor at only slightly higher prices than is commanded in eastern cities and an executive staff at slightly less than prevails in the East. Many raw materials close at hand which New England has to import. An enormous demand right at our doors at prices that pay the eastern manufacturer a profit after paying freight clear across the continent. A market in Mexico and down the west coast of South America that we are already being called on to supply. The oriental market as soon as we can get in shape to supply it.

"The above figures apply directly to the iron industry and similar lines. But in many special lines the figures are much more in favor of this city. Under this head are three classes of industries; Those which draw their raw materials from near-by sources—illustrated by the Dolgeville felt factory. Those that are made to meet local demand—illustrated by the Tourist auto factory. Those that can only be manufactured under such climatic conditions as prevail here—illustrated by the Cawston Ostrich Feather Factory. Already there are numerous examples in each class, although we are only beginning to develop them. They will be absolutely beyond competition from other sections.

"Such industries as these are ours and can not be taken away from us, once we get them well in hand. There are countless others, more familiar to you, no doubt, than to me.

"Just as the orchardists of Southern California have raised new standards in the producing and marketing of their products, so will the manufacturers of this city establish new standards."

The City Club had the most largely attended meeting of the season. After luncheon seventeen membership applications were received.

REGISTER OR BE FIRED.

Additional Evidence That Colonization Methods Are in Use at Ocean Park Over Disincorporation Election.

W. L. Hicks, one of the men sent to Ocean Park by the California Employment Agency, No. 203 East Second street, to be employed by the Los Angeles-Pacific Railway Company as sub-foreman, threw up his job yesterday and returned to this city. He said immediately following his demand for his time check, the Ocean Park boss telephoned to headquarters. A little later, E. O. McGibbon and a Swede, whose name Hicks did not know, were discharged.

Hicks declared that it is his belief that their failure to register as voters led to the discharge of the other two men. He believes he would also have been "fired" except that he quit. Hicks declares that those who registered were given good employment, several of them being appointed sub-foremen. "I was sick of the job, and quit," remarked Hicks. "I had $10 coming to me, but 50 cents was deducted at the railroad office for a hospital fund."

When McGibbon was discharged yesterday at Ocean Park, he did not have any money and borrowed from his friends in order to get breakfast and to purchase a ticket for this city, where he could draw his four days' pay.

Although the men hired by the employment agency said they had plenty of evidence of the attempt to make them register as voters, they were unable to prove that the Los Angeles-Pacific had any connection with the alleged attempt at fraud.

DIRTY HOTELS MUST GO.

acter, and, as I have stated above, on account of its extremely poor, flimsy construction, it is a decided menace to the adjoining property. It therefore becomes my duty, under section 7 of the Los Angeles building ordinance, to condemn the property and order that you at once demolish the same. The section referred to requires you to begin work upon this within forty-eight hours of the receipt of this notice.

Referring to the New England lodging-house Backus notified Kuehnrich's agents as follows:

Complaint has been made to this department regarding the flimsy construction of the building at 245 East Second street. Yesterday I made a personal investigation of this matter and find that complaint is absolutely correct, and, further, that said building is utterly unfit for human habitation and a serious menance to all adjoining property. Therefore it becomes my duty to order that you immediately demolish said building and remove all material from the premises in order that the risk of fire may be removed.

Mr. Backus sent a notice yesterday to the Pioneer Warehouse Company that a building owned by it at No. 421 Bernardo street is in an unsafe condition. This building is a brick structure; it has stood for a great many years and the Building Inspector says the foundations have settled, and the walls are so warped and cracked that they are liable to tumble down at any time.

ON SPRING STREET.

Fire Chief Lips has pronounced the wooden hotel just south of the Alexandria on Spring street to be a fire-trap and health inspectors have said the hotel is conducted in an unsanitary manner and the rooms unfit for human habitation. But there appears to be no official notice on record closing the lodging-house and ordering the building to be demolished.

"I visited that hotel south of the Alexandria on Spring street myself and found it to be in just as bad a condition as any of them," said Mayor Harper yesterday afternoon.

This building is owned by Nelson Story, a Butte, Mont., millionaire who spends his winters here.

The health department secured quick action on the lodging-houses east of Main street. Dr. Powers has forced the managers to send all the roomers away from the New England, the Saratoga and the Mechanics' hotels. Yesterday these three buildings were vacated.

The Japs have disregarded their notice at the Nagaska and are still packed in there like sardines in a can. If they have not cleared out by Monday they may be transferred to the Police Station.

The New England House occupies part of a building that is used for a liquor store. A saloon has been conducted there for a number of years. The building was owned by P. M. Kuehnrich, while president of the Los Angeles Brewing Company, in order that the company might dictate the brand of beer sold by the saloon.

The Mechanics' Lodging-house contains about forty rooms. It is pronounced to be of flimsy construction, and a certain menace to surrounding property.

FIND RANK CONDITIONS.

The rank condition of these buildings was discovered by lodging-house inspectors employed by the Health Department. The inspectors have been working quietly for several weeks securing evidence and locating the owners of the buildings. So quietly have they worked that the Finance Committee of the Council concluded they are doing nothing and recommended in the budget that their places be abolished.

Yesterday's condemnations are a startling refutation of the reports that there is no work here for a lodging-house inspector to perform.

The section of the building ordinance under which the demolition of the buildings is ordered reads as follows:

Whenever the Board of Public Works shall find that any structure, or any part thereof, is dangerous to persons or property, or is unsafe for the purpose for which it is used, or is in danger of fire from any defect in its construction . . . it shall notify the owner in writing specifying wherein the structure is unsafe and requiring said owner or occupant forthwith to remove or demolish or repair the same . . . and the person receiving such notice shall within forty-eight hours after receiving same begin to comply therewith and shall complete the work required as soon as practicable.

The notices issued yesterday are among the first given under this section of the building ordinance. They may be followed this week by a number of others, as there are twenty buildings within the business district that have failed to meet the approval of the fire chief and the building inspector. Some of these must be remodeled and repaired, others demolished.

PROHIBITION CHAUTAUQUA.

The Prohibition Chautauqua tent has been located at First and Cummings street for a five days' session of the Prohibition Chautauqua Assembly, to open there Tuesday evening. The first evening there will be recitations by local talent, and a stereopticon lecture, "An Eye-Opener," by Rev. C. J. Hall. On Wednesday afternoon there is to be a rally for children, under the leadership of the Boyle Heights Loyal Temperance Legion, and that evening there will be a programme of music and readings, and a lecture, "Why I Butted In," by J. Wiley Phillips. The Boyle Heights Male Prohibition Choir will sing. On Thursday afternoon Mrs. Lucy S. Blanchard and Mary A. Kenney will speak on California laws relating to women and children, and on Thursday evening there will be a silver medal contest. The Woman's Prohibition Club will have charge of the programme on Friday afternoon, and Friday evening there will be a great mass meeting, with Rev. Fred Ross of the Euclid Heights Methodist Church and Rev. F. G. H. Stevens as the main speakers. Saturday evening David E. Allen of San Francisco will give a "Chalk Talk," and at 3 o'clock next Sunday afternoon there will be a union mass meeting, with Prof. Tully C. Knowles of the University of Southern California as the principal speaker. Sunday night there will be a lecture by Rev. C. J. Hall on "Home, Sweet Home, and Its Friends and Foes."

STAGNANT WATER NUISANCE.

Residents in the vicinity of Berendo and Eleventh streets are making strenuous objections to the existence of pools of stagnant water in the ravine which passes through that locality and drains the western oil fields and Westlake Park. They claim that the stench from these pools has become so fearful that they are compelled to keep their doors and windows closed, and that, although they notified the Health Department more than two weeks ago, they are still without relief. Yesterday a delegation of citizens took the matter to the office of the Board of Education, and asked it to take some action toward relieving the situation, or otherwise the health of several hundred children will be endangered upon the opening of the Berendo-street school, which is close to these stinking pools.

MUST GO AND EXPLAIN.

Fred Hughes, local representative of a bonding company, and a notary public, will be required to appear before Judge Wellborn, Tuesday, to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt of court. His offense lies in his neglect to appear in court Friday with the Federal jury venire. Judge Wellborn took occasion to say from the bench recently that neglect of jury duty is not a trivial offense, and that he is disposed to punish wilful absence from the courtroom.

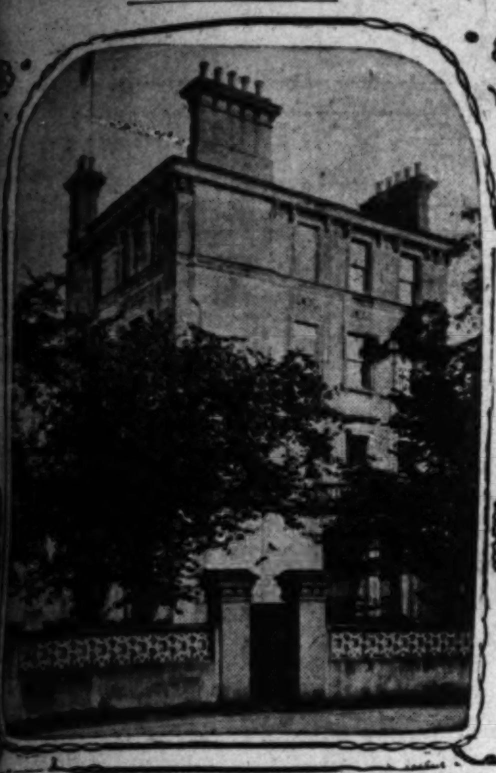
TINGLEY'S MOVE TO CAPTURE EUROPE.



The "Raja Yoga Institute."

ing Dick Croker, Bill Devery and John D., has given the high priestess very little concern. When the question has been put to her she has smiled, has opened her mouth and has talked about the weather or some other topic of equal interest.

The Raja Yoga Institute which will be established after several building changes have been made in the property which the Hon. Nan Herbert has been "good enough" to "make over" to Mrs. Tingley, will, says the latter, be only one little dot in England. It is her intention to pretty well "fly speck" the map of England with these institutes for the upbringing of children in theosophy, which, according to the American leader, is the science of life and the art of living. Just what that may mean is not clear to the uninitiated for she enclosed that kernel in a nut and handed it out without explanation.

Sweden is also to have a Raja Yoga Institute. It will be located on the Isle of Visingso, in Lake Vattern, which is said to be owned by Mrs. Tingley. It has not been made clear, however, just how she came into possession of the island and one wonders if some one was "good enough" to "make it over" to her as in the New Forest case. From Sweden the crusade will extend to Germany, France, Holland and elsewhere, especially if enough "good" people are found to provide the "wherewithal." And last, but far from least, when the theosophical queen returns to the United States she will inaugurate the work on the huge university which is to be built at Laurels, on the Merrimac, near Newburyport, Mass.

For her stay in London Mrs. Tingley is quartered at the English headquarters of the particular branch of theosophy of which she is the autocratic head. It is a fine five-story mansion in Avenue Road, St. John's Wood Park, London, and during the stay of its notorious visitor the flag of the society's purple and gold arrangement with a single large star, waves proudly and defiantly from the flagstaff that surmounts its walls. The house is surrounded by a high wall and on the entrance gate is a sign bearing the inscription "Universal Brotherhood Organization. International Brotherhood League. Theosophical Society."

An air of suppressed excitement prevails and one feels that all connected with the place, from the doorman to the secretary are dressed in their Sunday clothes for the occasion.

Bisbee property in the Cananea Mountains has been declared off. M. J. Cunningham of Bisbee, the owner of the property, has refused to grant an extension of time to the prospective purchasers, W. B. Thompson and associates of New York.

The Mexican Federal Court at Nogales, Sonora, has rendered judgment, giving the Gold Treasure mines in the San José Mountains near Naco to the Oklahoma stockholders of the Arizona Mining and Development Company, on a showing that fraud had been used by the management of the company in the issuance of illegal certificates of stock. The mine, which is only a few miles south of the border, is locally considered very rich and it is hoped that with this settlement of the legal difficulties, its operation will be resumed.

Southeast of Naco is a new mineral district, to which the name of "Los Angeles" has been attached, the main property being that of the Arizona Mining and Trading Company. A large amount of prospecting has been done in the vicinity and much rich ore has been reported found at a number of points.

The "Nacozari Consolidated" is the title of a new company lately organized both in Mexico and America to work the property of forty pertenencias, south of the great Pilares mine of the Phelps-Dodge Company, five miles east of Nacozari.

Eighty miles southeast of Moctezuma, a large copper property has been bought by a New York syndicate for $250,000, from P. Durack of El Paso.

BULLFROG DISTRICT.

Rhyolite Fears That She Will Be Side-tracked by Borax Smith.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

RHYOLITE (Nev.) Sept. 6.—The citizens of Rhyolite, represented by her Board of Trade, are somewhat exercised over the apparent possibility of the Tonopah and Tidewater Railroad's making Beatty or Gold Center its terminus and providing Rhyolite with only a spur from either of those points. It has been announced that this line, otherwise known as the Borax Smith, has arranged with the Bullfrog-Goldfield road for reciprocal traffic relations from this city north, and the main office at Ludlow, on the Santa Fé, has been served with a demand that Rhyolite be given the main terminal facilities. The result of negotiations still hangs in doubt. It is expected that a regular schedule over the Las Vegas and Tonopah road, between Rhyolite and Goldfield, will be inaugurated early in October. By that time work upon the construction of the depot here will have begun. The depot is to be of concrete, in mission style, occupying ground space 38x128 feet, and flanked with palms and flowers.

A $60,000 reinforced concrete building of three stories and a deep basement is being built by the John S. Cook Bank, operating here and in Goldfield, with deposits exceeding $5,000,000. The bank will occupy the ground floor about the middle of October. The structure occupies a space 30x100 feet, and is fireproof throughout, equipped with all conveniences.

Ninety per cent. of the development work on the Gold Bar is in ore, this property having spent about $120,000 in exploration operations to date. Machinery for the company's reduction plant is expected to arrive within a week.

Five feet of ore, followed by the main drift at the Gold Bullfrog, has been averaging around $150 per ton, and recently bulged to an average sample of $2400 the ton.

Descriptive of Autumn Millinery
WHEN an attempt is made to describe the truly stylish millinery for the Fall season of 1907, one experiences a dearth of suitable words to mete out justice to the hats sojourning on the third floor of the New York Store, for one would have to possess and make heavy draughts upon a rarely rich vocabulary to give each stunning production its due meed of praise. The demand for tailored effects is splendidly met and the showing of large creations is simply gorgeous—among the best ideas are the large silk hats smartly trimmed with wings and ribbons; while the fascinating beauty of the plume swept and rose-laden creations simply beggar description. We cannot impress the fact too strongly upon your mind that a visit to The New York Store Millinery Parlors is actually necessary to form a true conception of what is what in Fall hats.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN.

Rear-Admiral Wm. H. Emory, commanding the fourth division of the Atlantic fleet, will act as squadron commander in place of Rear-Admiral Chas. H. Davis, retired.

The resignation of Capt. Lloyd England, Coast Artillery Corps, of his commission as an officer of the army has been accepted by the President, to take effect August 28, 1907.

Maj. Harry C. Hale, Thirteenth Infantry, has been detailed for service in the adjutant-general's department, vice Maj. Hunter Liggett, and will report in person to the commanding general, Philippines division, for duty.

Admiral Davis, who has just been placed on the retired list of the navy, will be recalled as the naval officer who had such a disagreeable experience with Gov. Swettenham at the time of the Jamaica earthquake.

A board of officers, to consist of Maj. Samuel W. Dunning, Twentieth Infantry; Maj. John W. Ruckman, Coast Artillery Corps; Capts. Evan H. Humphrey, quartermaster; Curtis W. Otwell, Corps of Engineers, and Robert M. Blanchard, assistant surgeon, is appointed to meet at Honolulu for the purpose of definitely selecting the areas of land to be retained at both Diamond Head and Punchbowl Hill for permanent military reservations.

Edward W. Whitehead, first-class gunner's mate on U.S.S. Adams, has been commended by the Navy Department for his self-sacrifice and bravery in risking his own life to save that of a comrade during a landslide that destroyed the marine barracks at Tutuila, Samoa.

Commander Edward E. Capehart, at the Yerba Buena Naval Training Station, has received his commission as commander, since he arrived at the station. During the Spanish war he was a lieutenant on Admiral Sampson's flagship.

Lieut. Godfrey L. Carden of the United States revenue cutter service, who has been in Europe investigating the principal industrial centers of Belgium, Switzerland and Germany, with a party of American manufacturers and professors, reports extraordinary prosperity and extreme industrial advancement in Germany.

By direction of the President, First Lieutenant R. J. Reaney, Second Cavalry, on leave at San Francisco, is at his own request, relieved from his detail as captain, Seventeenth Company, Philippine Scouts, and will proceed to join his regiment without delay.

First Lieutenant C. A. Clark, Coast Artillery Corps, will assume charge of construction work at Fort Totten, N. Y., relieving Capt. Ernest R. Tilton, who will proceed to Fort Monroe, Va., and will assume charge of construction work there, relieving Capt. Robert H. C. Kelton of those duties, who will be assigned to duty in the Philippines division.

NEW CRATERS DISCOVERED.

An Interesting Bit of Country Containing Five Different Extinct Volcanic Craters.

[Walla Walla Bulletin:] Near the headwaters of the Kobuk river is one of the most peculiar chains of craters that have ever been discovered, says a Nome correspondent. It consists of five different extinct volcanic craters and is probably the most interesting of all volcanic regions in this northern country.

The craters are situated near the portage of the Aaua, on the south fork, close to the body of the water known as Caribou Lake by the natives. They are stretched over a large triangular valley or basin and are plainly visible from the surrounding ridges.

The first of the craters contains several hot springs, which do not freeze in the coldest winters. It is about a quarter of a mile in diameter, while the edges are fully 200 feet. There is not a particle of vegetation near. The water emitted from the springs is of a yellowish color and sulphurous in taste. It is highly effervescent, undoubtedly containing other mineral substances.

All of the other craters are smaller than the first and are covered with moss from the edges to close to the centers, which are bare lava.

The sides are steep and exceedingly difficult to scale. It is easy to see where the lava and cinders have flowed over and been washed down the creek, as there is no timber in the vicinity, but much both above and below the old volcanoes, and it is probable that all vegetable growth was killed years ago by the first eruption.

The largest crater probably was the last to subside, which accounts for the springs, which are still running, and the lack of moss on its sides.

Low Rates Admission Day.

The Southern Pacific will sell on September 7, 8 and 9, excursion tickets to points in Southern California, between Los Angeles and Redlands, Riverside, San Bernardino and Santa Ana, including branch lines, at one fare, for round trip. To all other points in California, one fare and one-third for round trip, where the one-way rate is not more than $10. Under this arrangement, round-trip on "Inside Track" to Redlands and Riverside is only $2.05. Riverside and San Bernardino, $1.75; Santa Barbara, $4.20. Tickets are good to return until September 10. EDUCATIONAL.

READY FOR THE STUDENT ARMY.

High School Building Is Nearly Finished.

Boundaries Are Changed in Many Districts.

Final Adjustment of Places for Teachers.

It looks very much as if the subway scheme of the Los Angeles Pacific Railway had died aborning. At a meeting of the Board of Education yesterday, the secretary was instructed to notify the railway company that after receipt of the report of the arbitrators several weeks ago, further action was postponed at the request of the company, since which time no word has come to the Board of Education, concerning the subway under the Olive-street building.

Mr. Steddom spoke up in open meeting and said that he had been told by some one that "nothing more would be done at present." Another member after the meeting, said that he thought "the continual nagging at the railways about fenders, third rails and other matters, have killed the subway project."

It was stated that the new High School building will not be completed in time for the opening of the schools, though the time for completion is long past. A compromise will be effected with the contractor by which a portion of the building may be occupied.

The contract for the eight-room addition to the West Vernon-avenue school was ordered let to Martin Madden for $22,250.

The decision at a former meeting to purchase a school site at Thirty-eighth and Durango streets, was rescinded yesterday, because it was discovered that two streets were to be cut from the property, making it too small for school purposes.

Two rooms for the accommodation of a portion of the school board's business were ordered rented in the Los Angeles Trust Building.

Notice was given of the opening of the schools on September 16, and that the high school buildings will be open on the mornings of the 13th and 14th at 9 o'clock, for the enrollment of B9 pupils, on credentials. A principals meeting will be held in Polytechnic Auditorium at 9 a.m., on the 14th, and a general teachers' meeting at 10 a.m. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon all teachers and principals will report at their respective buildings to arrange for the opening of the schools on Monday morning.

CHANGE OF BOUNDARIES.

An important thing to parents and pupils, which will save much confusion if properly understood, is the change in the lines of many districts. The action of the board yesterday was as follows:

The west boundary of Alpine street school district was changed to read Centennial street and Sunset boulevard; the southern line of Casco street district changed to Third street; the west line of Union avenue changed to Alvarado street; the southern boundary line of Normandie avenue school district fixed at Slauson avenue; the south line of Main-street school district fixed at Florence avenue, Main street and Sixty-third street; the west line of Main street school district fixed at Figueroa street, Slauson avenue, and Redondo avenue; the east line of Manchester-avenue school district fixed at Main street; the west boundary line of McKinley-avenue school district changed to South Park avenue, Forty-eighth street, San Pedro street, the remainder of the western boundary, viz., Bernita, Forty-second and South Park avenue, to remain as at present; the south boundary line of Fifty-second-street school district changed to Slauson avenue, Central avenue, Florence avenue, and its west line fixed at South Park, Slauson, and McKinley avenues, the remainder of said line to remain as at present, viz., Fifty-fourth and Dominguez streets; the east line of Twentieth-street school district changed to Long Beach avenue; the north boundary of Staunton-avenue school changed to Fourteenth street, and its west line to Long Beach avenue; the north line of First-street school district changed to Brooklyn avenue, Forest avenue, and Upper boulevard; the south line of Bridge-street school district changed to Michigan avenue, Bridge street, Pleasant avenue, and New Macy street. On recommendation of the superintendent a new school district was organized, to be known as Denver-avenue school district, with the following boundaries: North, Slauson avenue; east, Figueroa street, Sixty-third street, Main street; south, Florence avenue; west, city limits. The boundaries of all the districts adjacent to the above-named school districts were made to conform to the changes.

TEACHER ADJUSTMENTS.

Resignations were accepted from the following teachers: Mary C. Moore, Katharine E. Teahan and Sarah E. Weeks.

Leave of absence was granted as follows: To Mabel O. Benjamin, Fannie Kerns, Flora L. Mills, Grace N. Grout, Vera Blake, Lucy A. DuBois, Mary A. Woodworth, O. S. Lousley, Lillian N. Clark, Ruby Kimble, M. Frances Sanders, Katherine Cary, Henrietta Glissman, M. Elizabeth Field, Mary K. James, Clara M. Preston.

Transfers and assignments were made as follows: Linnian E. Blind, to Gates street; Grace L. Phelps, to Twenty-first avenue; E. O'Dessa Galliher, to West Vernon avenue; Sarah E. Woodbury, to Normal Training School; Arminta McMahan, to Olive-street night school; Blanch L. Vance, to California street; Edith A. Miller, to Thirtieth street; Augusta L. Kuhle, to Fifty-second street; Adina M. Conway, to Castelar street; Mary Colliver, to Ann street; Hanna Kaal, to Amelia street; Emma G. Conway, to Main sreet; Lutie Mimes, to McKinley avenue; Sarah M. Dole, to Seventeenth street; Katherine Ellis, to Twenty-eighth street; Emma M. Lillard, to High School; Florence Durkee, having passed the required examinations, was elected a substitute teacher in the primary and grammar grades. James E. McBurney and A. W. Sorenson were elected substitute teachers in the High School department.

LUMBER FIRMS COMBINE.

The past week has brought about a consolidation of three lumber concerns which will mean the development of a large wholesale lumber yard at Santa Monica, as well as the continuation of the lumber business by the new firm at Ocean Park, San Pedro and Los Angeles. The J. E. Culver Lumber Company has purchased all the stocks and the business of the Santa Monica Lumber Company, and the Billheimer-Lathrop Company, having yards at Santa Monica and Ocean Park, and has combined them with the wholesale lumber business of the Culver Lumber Company of this city. The officers of the new company are E. W. Culver, president; J. S. Billheimer, vice-president and treasurer; J. C. Summers, secretary, and J. E. Culver, manager. The new company has been incorporated under the laws of the State of California, with a paid-up capital of $100,000. It will enlarge its yard facilities at Santa Monica and convert that yard into an exclusive wholesale yard. The leasehold at East San Pedro will also be continued. The new combination is strong, as the personnel includes men who are well known in the lumber business of the Pacific Coast.

SYMPATHY SHE CRAVES.

ing out the secret thoughts her mind had kept shut up before it weakened: "I think all I needed was a little kindness."

Other things she said, haltingly, but every word striking directly to the heart of things. She said her husband went to sleep without speaking to her, while her mind was dwelling in silent grief on the little girl that had died. Not a terrible thing for a man to do, it would seem, until it was spoken of by a woman so near the verge of madness that she cared no longer to conceal the sensitiveness of her nature and condition.

The case had not seemed extraordinary to those gathered in the courtroom till Judge Hutton spoke. The woman's talk was strange, where strange talk was to be expected; that was all.

Judge Hutton expressed an opinion that the woman was not insane. This did not surprise. But he did not discharge her.

"It won't do for her to go home with this man now," he went on. This was utterly unlike any of the formal phrases of insanity examinations. The judge went on, working out the problem aloud, while the woman watched him anxiously. He said to her then:

"I'm going to suggest that your husband send you to a nice, quiet place near here, a sanatorium, where any one might go to rest, and next Wednesday you can come back and we'll see how you seem."

"I'll do anything you say," said Mary Blanchard trustfully.

It was a different Mary Blanchard that came again before the Insanity Commission on September 4. Her eyes were bright, not dull with weeping; the muscles about her mouth and neck were firm, not twitching nervously. She did not pour out the secrets of her soul in halting speech.

Judge Hutton talked to Mr. Blanchard, drawing him apart and giving him the benefit of his thoughts, and Mr. Blanchard seemed a chastened and a wiser man.

Mrs. Blanchard was discharged and went home with her husband to Whittier.

JEALOUS GRANDDAUGHTER.

Fear as to Certain Property Interests Cause Her to Accost Another Woman in Anger.

An argument over property owned by wealthy John Kirby, of No. 521 Court street, resulted yesterday in the arrest of Mrs. Clyde Bateman, Kirby's granddaughter, on a charge of disturbing the peace.

The warrant was sworn to by Mrs. Arvilla Walsh, and Mrs. Bateman, arrested late yesterday afternoon, was compelled to put up $50 bail or spend Sunday in the tanks.

Mrs. Walsh made complaint to the prosecuting attorney, yesterday morning. She said that Mrs. Bateman had been accusing her of trying to gain old man Kirby's affections in order to get hold of his property. This created trouble between the two women. Kirby, who is said to be critically ill, was alleged to have met Mrs. Walsh by appointment, and yesterday morning Mrs. Bateman hearing of the alleged meeting met Mrs. Walsh at Court and Hill streets and the neighbors leaned from the windows to hear the argument. Mrs. Walsh first wept and then became indignant. The complaint against Mrs. Bateman then followed and now the whole story of the argument for the old man's property will be told in Police Court. Kirby is said to be very wealthy, and a half dozen of his relatives are interested in seeing him keep his property.

ORANGE GROWERS' SHOOKS.

Dealers of Los Angeles are receiving extensive inquiries from the orange growers of Southern California in regard to the price for shooks. Some of the orange growers were so fortunate as to contract for large supplies two years ago, when the price was from 12 to 14 cents. Then came the upward jump in all lines of lumber, and the prevailing price last year was in the neighborhood of 21 cents. Dealers are now quoting prices for the coming season at from 14 to 18 cents, which is a considerable reduction over last season's prices. It is probable that orange growers will make extensive contracts on this basis, as the lumbermen claim there is little prospect of the material for orange boxes reaching a lower rate.

WATER RATE INCREASED.

Lumbermen have been confronted by another rise in the rates for lumber transportation. This time the ship owners have tacked on an increase of 50 cents per 1000 feet from northern ports to San Pedro, and wholesalers say it is hard to secure charters even at the added figure. There is a scarcity of flooring and upper grades of finishing lumber in the local markets at present, and prices have been maintained very firm.

OUR 1906 COPPER PRODUCTION AND CONSUMPTION.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

According to L. C. Graton, of the United States Geological Survey, the production of copper in the United States in 1906 was 906,591,947 pounds. The figures are based on confidential reports from every known reduction company operating in 1906, and represent the actual recovery in terms of blister and refined copper. In presenting the figures Mr. Graton says: "These figures may not exactly correspond with those relating to mine production although the variation is usually not great. The smelter production and the mine production, should not be confused."

BLISTER AND LAKE COPPER.

The 1906 production of 906,591,947 pounds is 18,000,000 pounds, or 2 per cent. over that of 1905, compiled on the same basis, and is a new record. The total is made up of Michigan's production of fine Lake copper, and of the refined copper content of the production of blister. In the following table the production is apportioned to the States in which the copper was mined:

Lake copper and fine copper content of blister:

	Pounds, fine.
Montana	293,695,517
Arizona	262,566,103
Michigan	229,695,730
Utah	50,339,119
California	28,153,202
Alaska	8,685,646
Idaho	8,578,046
Colorado	7,427,252
New Mexico	7,099,842
North Carolina	582,209
Oregon	545,850
Washington	290,823
Wyoming	106,177
Missouri	64,247
Texas	51,377
Georgia	17,132
Vermont	11,696
Massachusetts	9,744
Total production	906,591,947

An increase of 2 per cent. over 1905, and a new record.

Of this amount, 816,286 pounds were produced in blister in foreign smelter from materials exported from the United States. In addition to the total given, 54,543,116 pounds were produced as blister in domestic smelters from foreign ore, concentrates, and matte, while blister imported from foreign sources, containing 126,826,906 pounds fine copper was electrolytically refined in this country.

ELECTROLYTIC COPPER.

The production of electrolytic in the United States in 1906, based on actual returns from all refineries, was as follows:

	Pounds.
From materials of domestic origin	648,614,592
From materials of foreign origin	181,370,022
Total	829,984,614

The figure for domestic production includes 24,017,833 pounds of Lake copper which was refined electrolytically and an indeterminate but very small quantity recovered from scrap.

CASTING COPPER.

The production of domestic nonelectrolytic copper refined by the furnace process and known as casting copper amounted in 1906 to 28,345,263 pounds. This does not include Lake copper.

TOTAL REFINED COPPER.

The total production of refined copper of domestic origin was:

	Pounds.
Lake (exclusive of Lake electrolytic)	205,408,382
Electrolytic, total domestic	648,614,592
Casting	28,345,263
Total	882,368,237

STOCKS ON HAND.

Complete returns show that the following stocks were on hand at the Lake and electrolytic refineries at the beginning and end of the year.

Date—	Pounds.
January 1, 1906	118,244,028
January 1, 1907	[illegible]
Stock depletion during 1906	25,772,236

These figures do not include undelivered sales. Stocks carried by consumers have not been estimtaed. In addition to these stocks at refineries, there was at smelters or in transit to refineries blister copper to the amount of 100,630,245 pounds on January, 1, 1907.

AMERICAN CONSUMPTION.

The apparent consumption of refined copper in the United States in 1906 was about 680,000,000 pounds, or 80,000,000 pounds more than in 1905.

It figures out this way:

	Pounds.
Domestic refined, produced in 1906	882,368,237
Imported in 1906	215,602,841
Stocks at refineries, January 1, 1906	118,244,028
Total available supply	1,216,215,106
Exported in 1906	446,750,711
Stocks at refineries, January 1, 1907	92,470,792
Total withdrawn from supply	539,221,503
Apparent consumption	676,993,603

In addition, the consumption included about 50,000,000 pounds, which was recovered from old copper, drosses, residues, etc., and reëntered the market mostly in the form of casting copper.

IMAGINES HE'S A HORSE.

Strange Delusion of Demented Man Who Is Found Eating Grass in a Pasture.

Croppin the grass in a pasture just outside the western city limits and neighing and kicking like a horse, Frank Lobeander was captured yesterday by Motorcycle Officer Hickok and taken to the University Station.

The young man is thought to be mentally deranged, and insists that he is a horse. Yesterday he attempted to follow out that theory in the most approved style.

He tied an old piece of rope about his neck and let it drag on the ground. Then he got down on his hands and knees and started to cavort about the pasture. At intervals he would stop and chew the dry, dusty grass of the pasture.

Officer Hickok was sent to corral the "festive steed." Lobeander saw the officer coming, and began to prance and neigh. Hickok, thinking to quiet him, approached slowly, calling, "Here horse, nice horsey."

Lobeander, in true coltish style, allowed the officer to approach, and then suddenly flung out his heels, and caught Hickok in the shins.

With an imitation of a horse laugh the man galloped about the field.

The kick in the shins settled it, and Hickok charged after his man. A struggle followed, and Lobeander was captured. On the way to the station the officer found it necessary to put handcuffs on his prisoner's ankles to prevent him from kicking.

WORK OF SNEAK THIEVES.

Four robberies were reported yesterday to the police headquarters, and in each instance the work is believed to have been done by members of the gang of sneak thieves which for the past three months has been operating in Los Angeles. The home of Mrs. Avilla, a dressmaker at No. 527 Ceres street, was entered Friday afternoon, while Mrs. Avilla was away from the place. The screen of a rear window was slashed. The intruders secured jewels and money amounting to $250. Sneak thieves entered the office of Dr. Ernest Allis, in the Bullard block, Friday, and several bottles of gold filling and gold-sheet leaf were taken. Other small robberies were reported from lodging-houses and apartments in various parts of the city.

SAVES A LIFE.

Mrs. P. H. Hammond, a guest at the Atlanta Hotel, Santa Monica, is playing nurse to a carrier pigeon she found in an alley-way in Ocean Park a few days ago. The bird seemed ill and almost helpless. It was fluttering on the ground trying to escape from several dogs which were bent on worrying it. Mrs. Hammond rescued the pigeon and took it to her hotel. One wing was clipped. On one leg was a metal ring marked "H. E. R. 47." Under the kindly ministrations of its protector, the pigeon has recovered its strength and eats with avidity. But it is unable to fly.

Little Farms Near the City and the Mountains

$150 Per Acre
Including Water
$40 First Payment
Balance Long Time

Have You Ever Hoped to Have a Home Place of 1, 2 1-2, 5 or More Acres, on the Foothill Slopes Near Los Angeles?

Haven't you wished that some friend had taken you by the shoulder and made you pick up a few acres at Hollywood before it advanced from $300 to $3000 an acre?

Or at Altadena?
Or Sierra Madre?
Or Monrovia?

Those places have passed from your easy reach forever and forever—and forever.

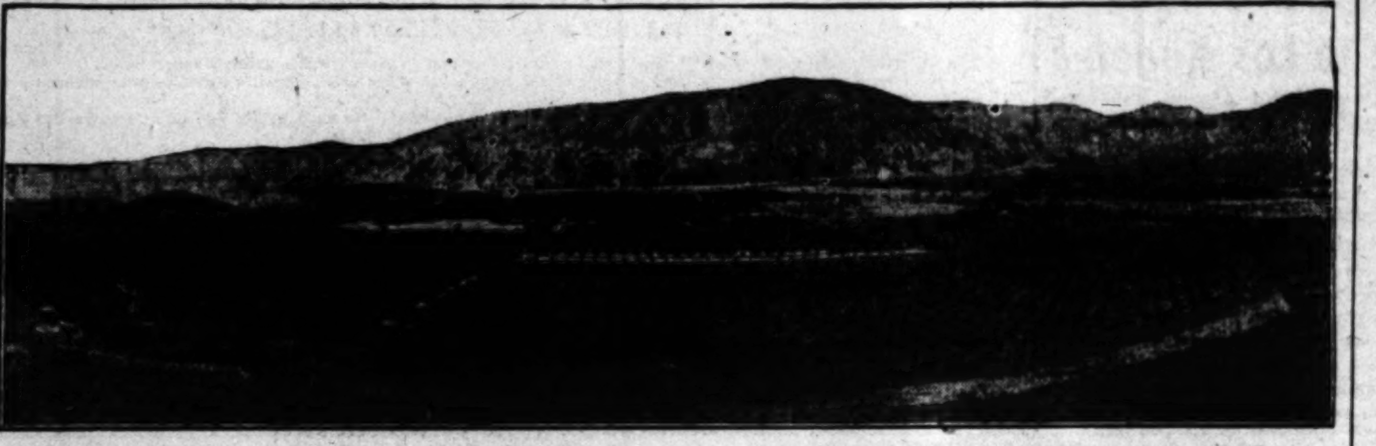
Only 9 Days Left

in which to secure this land at this price. After the reservation books close Sept. 17th the prices will advance $50 to $100 per acre.

We want you to stop—look— and listen.

This is the last knock on the door of your opportunity—and the district is prettier than you dared dream of having—as rich and frostless as any of those places named—as close in as Sierra Madre, and $150 will buy a whole acre, with water stock worth more than that alone. First payments $40 an acre, balance small payments twice a year.

There is a reason for this low price—too long to tell it all, but based on lack of transportation (secured now) long litigation in courts about the title—and necessity of a quick partition sale on which the services of this Home Extension Society have been secured.



THE TE JUNGA VALLEY, ONLY 18 MILES FROM LOS ANGELES—And the lady from Kansas raised her hands and exclaimed: "Sakes alive! Don't that look like the Holy Land?"

It is not strange that such a spot of rare beauty should lie so close to Los Angeles and yet be almost unknown to the people. Remember that the most of the residents of Los Angeles have only arrived here during the past five years, while the Te Junga Valley lay sleeping behind the hills. It is directly back of Glendale, but separated therefrom by the Verdugo Mountains, some of which are 4000 feet high. It is sometimes referred to as "Little Yosemite," for in all this Southland there is no spot so fair.

Standing on the eastern slopes of the Verdugo hills, one looks over the three miles of oranges, lemons, peaches, table grapes and live oaks; on across the river wash and its babbling brook, into and up the canyon across the pine-covered peaks out into the blue eternity. The wild canary and the whistling quail complete the scene. So near, and yet so far from the noisy grind and dust of the city.

The lady from Kansas was a saintly soul, but she said: "I wish Deacon Pirkins was here this minit with my Gospel Hymnal number two—for we needn't go to Heaven to find Paradise."

There is a church here, and schools, but even though within a few miles of Los Angeles, there are no trolley cars—not a railroad within four miles, not a single telephone or telegraph wire—and the folks there haven't cared. But all these are arranged for now—and the Homeseekers' Club is going into this delightful section, body, soul and children, to the glory of the Home Extension and everlasting pity for those who join TOO LATE.

The Charmed Circle of the Glorious Climate of Southern California—where mere existence is counted a perpetual pleasure.

That is the eighteen-mile circle around the city of Los Angeles. You know what land values are in the section marked "A." There you find Brentwood—Westgate Acres—Palms, etc., etc., $800 to $8000 an acre. Even the sink holes or plain farming land at $400 an acre.

In section "B" is what? Why, there is your ordinary plain farming land. Good farming land, thank you, but not orchard or delightful home land; and yet where in that section is land to be had below $350 to $3000 an acre?

In section "C" you find Whittier. That is fine, but the rest is a country of plain prairie low lands; price is $300 to $3000, according to distance from Whittier or Los Angeles.

In section "D" you get to the place your heart has yearned for. The foothill slopes. Altadena, Pasadena, Alhambra, Sierra Madre—yes, Monrovia. The beauty spots of this beautiful land. But prices there are gone up forever away beyond easy reach. You could have owned some, but you didn't. $800, $2000, yes, $5000 an acre for the right spots.

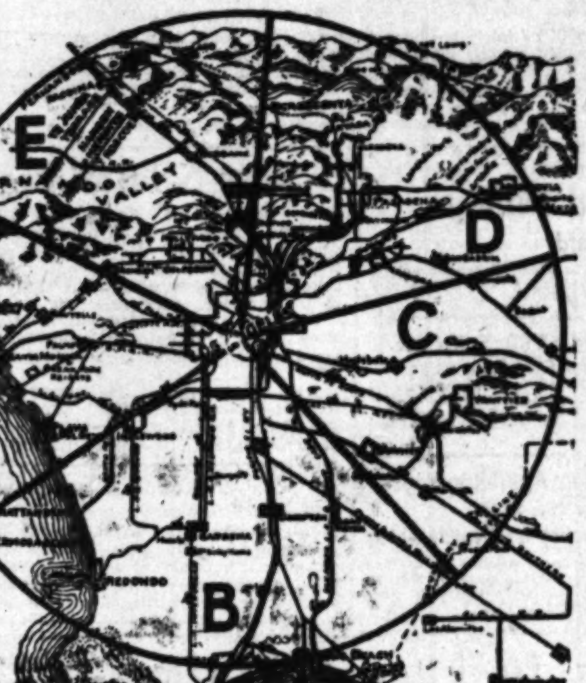
AND THEN OUR SECTION "E." Just as close in as the rest. Takes in the whole Fernando Valley and these Te Junga slopes. Just as close as the other rare spots. Richer in soil and supply of water than any of them—and in beauty or climate all that Altadena is—all that Sierra Madre is—and then some. Even Redlands in all its glory is not walled in like unto this.

Here it is offered to you at old-time prices.

At land values of ten years ago. An old and long-passed opportunity come back to shake hands with you and give you one more chance. You have to take nothing on faith. The soil is here, and the water is running in the pipe lines. The adjoining lands which were not entangled in the courts for so many years are all in planted orchards, worth from $500 to $2000 an acre. Proving just what you can do without risk or speculation.

It is a Rip Van Winkle Valley just waking up—an arm of the rich and powerful Fernando Valley which is just beginning to vibrate with that twenty-three-millon-dollar Owens River aqueduct boom.

It is a strong call and a long call. An opportunity open now, but in a few weeks, even in a few days, gone from you forever, and neither you nor your children nor your children's children can hope to get a home like this again.



When this kind of land goes up, it goes out of reach. When the Glendale, Burbank and Fernando trolley which is no wbuilding, is complete, the last gap in the above map will be closed on foothill land. Your door of opportunity will have closed and if you do not get that foothill home right now, just leave Hope behind.

The terms are easy enough—a whole acre only $40 down, and nothing more for six months. Your salary or your profits have not increased as fast as this class of property. It is growing away from your reach. Should you not "spot" a little of it right now? What in the world is the use of your having come West to grow up with the country if you don't own some of the country to grow up with?

If you are down at the beach when you read this, just come up and go to see these lands. Bring your wife and note what the climate is in August. You know very well what it is in winter. The purple sunsets, the balmy, dry nights. Tent life all the year. Then in the morning only forty minutes to town.

You know the need of action now

REV-E-LA-TION

REVELATION OF THE KING'S BUSINESS

The Lord of lords, and King of kings.
A gospel letter in love to the people for precious souls.
The intelligence of God.

Dear and kind readers, and to all whom this may concern: I am so affectionately in love for precious souls, that I address you one and all in love, to see the Lord. I beg, pray, beseech and earnestly plead for every soul to seek the Lord. Acquaint yourselves with God. Seek the Lord God while he may be found. Isa. 55:6-9; Hos. 10:12, 13. Please seek the Lord. The Lord will manifest himself to every true, humble, believing, seeking heart and soul. John 14:21. The Lord God speaks to the people face to face, as a man speaks to his friend. We must go to God in a business way. The Lord God means business with the people. We have the letters and the testimonies of the holy prophets and the disciples recorded in the Bible, God's holy and divine laws for our instruction. 2 Tim. 3:15-17. The Lord is our example and pattern in this life, who did no sin. Dear reader, please seek the Lord, seek his face continually; the Lord will manifest himself to honest seeking souls. 1 Chron. 16:11; Psl. 27:8; John 14:21. Seek the Lord in prayer, seek diligently, plead earnestly to God in secret prayer to God; pray without ceasing. 1 Thess. 5:17-22. Seek the Lord; seek to know God's will in all things in this life. The Lord God will manifest himself to true believers, and will talk and reason with the people as a man talks and reasons with a friend. Isa. 1:16-20; Heb. 12:9, 10, 14, 15. The prophet said, I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved. Gen. 32:30. And the Lord spoke unto Moses face to face as a man speaks to his friend. Exo. 31:12; 33:11; Exo. 24:11, 18; 25:1, 2. We have seen this day that God doth talk with man and he liveth. Deut. 5:24; Exo. 19:9, 16, 18. Prophets have seen angels of the Lord God face to face. Rev. 10:1-11. Behold the face of my Father which is in Heaven. Matt. 18:10; Dan. 8:16, 26,27; 12:3, 10; James 5:20; 1 Cor. 9:22; Peter 4:8; Joel 2:18, 21, 27-32; Acts 2:16-47. The Lord God will talk and reason with every true, honest, humble, believing, seeking soul. Job 13:3; Isa. 1:16-20; 55:6-9. And I will love him, and I will manifest myself to him. John 14:21. The glorious gospel of the blessed God and our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is free to all. The true gospel is free to all. 1 Peter 5:2; 1 Cor. 9:17. The gospel is free to all. But isms is dear and devilish and will deceive you. James 3:15; 1 Tim. 4:1,2; 2 Tim. 4:3, 4; 2 Thess. 2:11, 12; 1 Cor. 10:21; Rev. 2:9, 16. The true gospel is free to all. 2 Cor. 4:3. What is the gospel? The true gospel is the life of Christ, the divinity of Christ our Lord, the intelligence of God, the gospel is the divinity of Christ and His divine nature. 2 Pet. 1:2-4, 10. And how to seek the Lord and His divine nature and obtain it, and live it before the people and teach it to others willingly, not for money, but willingly. 1 Pet. 5:21; 1 Tim. 4:6, 16. Now mark them that cause division, and divines for money, for such are false apostles, for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light, therefore, it is no great thing if his ministers be transformed as the ministers of righteousness. Rom. 16:17, 18; Mic. 3:11; 2 Cor. 11:13-15; Jer. 7:8-11; 10:21, 22; 23:11, 16, 17, 21, 30, 31; Ezek. 22:25-27; Rev. 22:15; 1 Cor. 10:20, 22; Matt. 23:13-15, 33; Rev. 2:9; 3:9. Remember, dear people, there are no divisions with the Lord God at all. Beware of dogs, greedy dogs and pastors in the synagogues of Satan, that divines for money, their mouths must be stopped. Cretians are always liars. Tim. 1:10-12, 16; Phil. 3:2, 18, 19; 2 Cor. 11:13-15; Rev. 2:9, 29; Jer. 10:21; Isa. 56:10, 11. They make merchandise of you, to support themselves in idolatry. 1 Cor. 6:9, 10; 2 Pet. 2:1-3. Dear people, readers and professors, be not deceived, God is not mocked. Gal. 6:7, 8. Please seek the Lord, seek diligently, plead earnestly to God, the Lord will manifest himself to you. John 14:21; Jer. 24:7. The Lord God will give us an understanding heart. 1 Kings 3:9; Prov. 2:2-17; James 1:5. Dear people and professors, examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates. 2 Cor. 13:5. Many profess that they know God, but in works they deny Him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good works reprobates, void of judgment. Ti. 1:76. Dear people, I am so affectionately in love for precious souls. 1 Thess. 2:3-13. That I must to the honor and glory of God. Tell to the people the goodness of God. I am compelled to tell one and all, old and young, rich and poor, noble and ignoble, that there is no division with the Lord God. The Lord God is not a Protestant, nor a proselyte. Matt. 23:15. And the Lord says come out from among them. 2 Cor. 6:17, 18; Jer. 17:9, 10; Job 11:11-14; Psl. 68:30-35; Isa. 62:10-12. The Lord will not make slaves of you with tithing cords nor merchandise of you. I was brought up under Protestant doctrine for forty years, and the teachers, preachers, prophets, orator and revelators never told me that the Lord God was not a Protestant. But the Lord spoke to me and told me to get a Bible and read for myself. And when I came to Los Angeles I chanced to hear the gospel of Christ, preached by a lady, the bride of Christ, and she told me to seek the Lord. The Lord spoke to me and told me that I had been deceived by the devil and learned men. The Lord manifested himself to me. I have seen the Lord's face and heard his voice. The Lord God pardoned my sins last October, and the Lord God told me that I must be born again, have my heart cleansed, purified, garnished, purged and Christ's spirit born in me to be a child of God. I had been taught that I could be a child of God by belief. And the Lord asked me if I was born in this world by belief, and I said no, and the Lord God said neither can you be born of God by belief. God pardoned me of my sins, cleansed and purified my heart and gave me my work to do. Many people do not believe in the works and operation and the manifestation of Christ; many do not believe in visions, revelation, and that God talks with the people. Where there is no vision the people perish. Prov. 29:18. Unbelief is sin. Heb. 3:12; 4:11; Rom. 3:3-6, 11-18. The marriage of the Lamb. We are in the generation of the bride of Christ, the Lamb's wife. Rev. 19:7-9; 21:7-9. The time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God. 1 Pet. 4:17-19; 2 Tim. 3:15-17; 4:2-5; 1 Thess. 2:3. A line to the unmarried and virgins that they may be holy, both in body and in spirit and please the Lord God in all things in this life. 1 Cor. 7:32, 34; Luke 10:38-42; Psl. 27:4-8. Be not yoked with unbelievers. 2 Cor. 6:14-18; Deut. 7:3, 4; 1 Cor. 5:9; Eph. 5:6-12. Unbelief is sin, the effects of unbelief. Ti. 1:15, 16; John 5:36-39; Rom. 16:25, 26; 2 Cor. 12:1; Eph. 1:17-23; Col. 1:9, 10. Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God. The powers that be are ordained of God. Whosoever, therefore, resisteth the power resisteth the ordinance of God; and they that resist shall receive to themselvs damnation. Rom. 13:1, 2. Wherefore, if ye be dead with Christ, from the rudiments of the world, why as though living in the world are ye subject to ordinance. Touch not, taste not, handle not. Which all are to perish with the using after the doctrines of men. Col. 2:8, 20-22; 2 Pet. 2:10-18. Not many wise, noble or mighty are called. But God has chosen the weak, foolish, base, despised to seek the Lord. 1 Cor. 1:26-29; John 7:24. This world is a school or a college, and there are two spiritual teachers; the devil teaches us sin, folly, isms, divisions, profane laws and spiritual wickedness in the synagogues of Satan. 1 Cor. 10:21; 2 Cor. 11:13-15; Rev. 2:9; 3:9. The Holy Spirit teaches us of the divinity of Christ and his divine nature, and how to seek it and obtain it and live it and teach it to others willingly, not for money, but willingly. The gospel is free as the air we breathe, or the sunshine or California climate. Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof, from such turn away. 2 Tim. 3:5. Search the scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me. John 5:39; Isa. 8:20. How can we testify of any one that we have not seen their face nor heard their voice. Please seek the Lord. He will manifest Himself to you. John 14:21. Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved. How can we believe on any one that we have never seen their face nor heard their voice at all? Please seek the Lord God in secret prayer. The Lord will manifest Himself to every true, humble, seeking soul. The Lord God will pardon our sins and cleanse our hearts and give us knowledge of the works and operation. The Lord gives us knowledge of His works, visions, revelation, manifestation in righteousness. Rom. 1:16-19; 13:12. Remember, dear people, if we have not seen the Lord's face nor heard his voice, we don't know the Lord; no matter what we profess, or what we have been taught, or how many societies we belong to, or how much we pay the preachers. We must seek the Lord for ourselves. We are to know and experience the works and operation of the mighty hand of God, independent of others, as the prophets and disciples did. Read their letters and testimonies; the works and operation of the mighty hand of God are free for all. Israel's hypocritical services and your mighty sins, they take bribe, and I hate, I despise your feast days and solemn assemblies. Amos 5:12, 21; Isa. 1:9-18; 48:8-18; Matt. 10:28; Acts 7:51; Rom. 12:1, 2; Col. 2:18-22. The people establish their own righteousness and have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God. Rom. 10:1-3; Matt. 5:17; Gal. 3:20-28. The gospel must be published among all nations. Mark 13:10. Jesus said every plant that my Heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up. And I am praying to the Lord God to show the people of every creed, sect and division their condition. Remember Nineveh, Sodom, Gomorah and San Francisco. Get wise as the people did in Nineveh. Repent or perish. Ye must be born again. Jesus said it to all nations, isms, creeds, sects and divisions. Ask the Lord God to please not to let the enemy deceive you. The enemy will deceive every soul he can; that is his business. The Lord God was good and kind to me and I want to help other precious souls that have been deceived under Protestantism. The true gospel is free to all; isms and doctrines of devils are dear and will deceive you. 1 Tim. 4:1, 2; 1 Cor. 10:21; Tim. 1-10-12; James 3:15. Dear people, seek the Lord, the Lord God will not deceive you at all. And the gospel is free to all.; isms will deceive you. I have bitter enemies since I left the isms, traps and snares of the devils, and my enemies are your enemies, too. One enemy makes many. But I entreat all to seek the Lord; acquaint yourselves with God. We have been a long time without the true God. But God will search out the people that will seek the Lord God, who cleanses the hearts and who believes in the works and operations of the mighty hands of God in faith. Faith; now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. Christ's spirit born, or formed in us is our living faith, and this is the works and operation of God, who cleanse, purify, purge and garnish the hearts and gives us knowledge of the works and operation for us to teach to others willingly, not for money. The gospel is free to all. Please seek the Lord; seek His face. Psl. 27:8; John 14:21. The lords and gods of this world have deceived and blinded the people in the synagogues of Satan, under the auspices of the Holy Scriptures for money, and th eLord God will expose isms, schism and division in the synagogues of Satan under the auspices of the Holy Scriptures. That is deceiving the people and making merchandise of them. 2 Pet. 2:3. As there be gods many and lords many, But to the true believer there is but one Lord and one God, that created all things, and the Bible is our law book. The Lord God and angels are our bodyguard. I feel very, very greateful to the Lord God that they did the works and operation in my heart, mind and soul nature. And I will do all I can to help the people seek the Lord for their soul's sake; isms and societies will not save souls at all. We must go to God in a business way. The Lord God's ways, works and operation are all business. And the works and operation and the spiritual birth are essential to all to be a Christian. Friends, never say you are a Christian until God does the works and operation in your hearts and gives you knowledge of the facts. If you are a believer, say so. I had to get in secret places to pray and seek the Lord. The Lord God never organized societies at all. Noah preached 120 years and worked like a man, and all of the other true prophets and disciples supported themselves and taught the people free and willingly. I think that the people, teachers, preachers, prophets, professors, revelators and eloquent orators and citizens have got unlimited gall to take the Holy Bible and organize societies under the auspice of the Holy Scriptures and deceive precious souls for money, and make merchandise of innocent children and people, and get them to say they are Christians when they have no knowledge or experience of any definite work or operation of the mighty hands of God at all. Matt. 23:13-15-33. Dear people, I don't want your money nor sweet smiles, nor a vacation at all; souls are more than all to me. Please seek the Lord for your soul's sake, is my prayer to all nationalities. The gospel is free to all and the Lord God will pardon us of our sins and will cleanse and purify and purge and garnish our hearts, and Christ's spirit will be born or formed in us as the scriptures teach us, and the Lord God and the Holy Spirit will help us to teach others willingly, not for money, but willingly. The gospel is free to all. I will strive to help every one I can to seek the Lord God and escape hell. Eternity is too long, and souls are too precious to be lost; the way to heaven is narrow; the way to hell is broad and popular. Please seek the Lord. Your humble servant in the Lord. W. H. JOHNSON, 1116 West Twenty-second street, Los Angeles, Cal. I will gladly do what I can to help a soul to seek the Lord God of heaven and earth.

GREAT WONDER SALE

Startling, Dazzling Event—Store Brimming Over With Bargains

Wonders In Prices—Wonders In Goods—Wonders In New Styles—Wonders In New Ideas

Most Interesting--Most Unique Most Helpful Sale in Los Angeles

Are you getting your full share of the wonderful bargains Hale's has been offering? If not, don't miss the great Wonder Sale, which commences tomorrow.

Hale's, "The Busy Store," will fairly glisten and sparkle with bargains of every imaginable kind—no trash. Hale's goods are good goods, whether sold at cut prices or not.

Instead of paying a ridiculously high rent and spending a fortune in fancy fixtures, Hale's uses its capital for the benefit of its patrons.

Three great warehouses—the property of Hale's—are stacked from floor to ceiling with goods, bought in great quantities at prices which enable this store to dominate the local market.

The great Wonder Sale is first of a series of events which will make this store the one shining bargain market in Los Angeles.

I can stop toothache in two minutes. I can sooth and allay the pain from sensitive dentine. This is highly essential in dealing with a super-sensitive molar, but you want more than temporary relief. It must "stay good" for memories of tooth pains are very lasting. I want to emphasize the importance of your saving your own teeth, and I want you to believe me when I say I know how to permanently preserve teeth, and what is more, I am honest enough to give you the best I've got. I am still making those good crowns, either gold or porcelain, for $5.00. They are the best.

If your teeth are all lost, no skill on earth can give you teeth without plates. What you want is a plate you can eat with. Then you want it light and of material adaptable to the soft tissues of the mouth. Then it must have appearance. I can positively give your mouth and face natural restoration. Have not space to say more, but come in and see samples. Quality and permanence for all my dental services is the secret of my success.

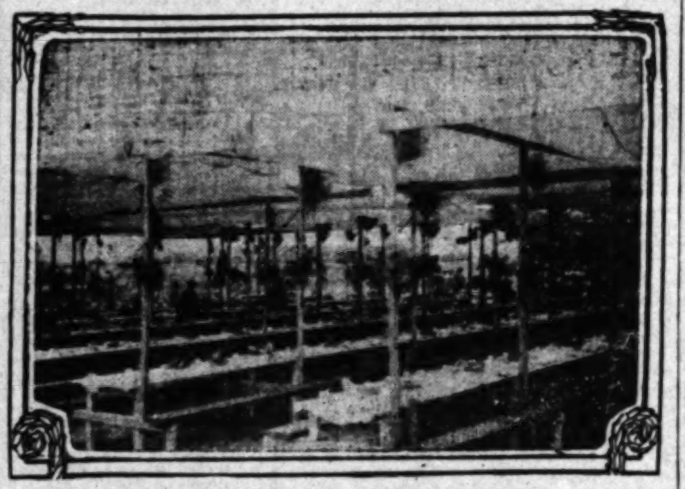
MEN OF ACHIEVEMENT.

INDUSTRIES FOUNDED BY SOUTHERN CAPITAL.

Corner-stone of Great Sugar Factory Laid at New Town of Corcoran.

Business Captains Go from Los Angeles on Special Excursion Train and See Marvels of Progress in Central California—Hospitalities at Visalia—Corcoran Makes Holiday for the Visitors—Wealth in the Beet.



Tables spread for the barbecue.

TWO hundred of the business leaders of Los Angeles and its vicinity joined in a railway excursion into the San Joaquin Valley last week, to take part in laying the foundations for a center of commerce and industry in Central California.

They traveled as guests of the Security Land and Loan Company and the Pacific Sugar Corporation, and the occasion was the setting of the corner-stone of the $1,000,000 sugar-refining plant at Corcoran.

Kings, Tulare and Kern counties made a holiday excursion to Corcoran to greet the Southern California capitalists whose wealth has opened the gates of progress to the three lower counties of the San Joaquin.

In that great valley of California thousands of acres of land have lain sleeping since the beginning of things that are. Other thousands of acres in the southern counties slumbered with them until touched by the golden wand of the southern alchemists, then they suddenly wakened and smiled forth a wonderful harvest. Villages sprang up on the bare face of the plains, and the hum of industry startled century-old echoes in the virgin valleys and marvelous cañons of the Kings River country.

In the space of eighteen months this metamorphosis has taken place; the valley people who have witnessed the remarkable bloom of the industrial century plant came to greet in wide-eyed wonder the leaders who have made such development possible.

THE WONDER OF IT.

With equal wonder the visitors from Southern California viewed the great vineyards, the beet fields, and the dairy herds, and listened to narratives of the rich harvests. To them it was an unceasing wonder that so fertile a valley should have been permitted to slumber so long. The explanation came with the information that the settlers had always looked to Northern California to develop the territory, and that the northern capitalists had failed to invest a sum sufficient to start the wheels of industry.

The industrial invasion from the south marks an epoch in the history of the San Joaquin, and in that of Southern California as well, for in developing the three lower counties Los Angeles is providing a market for her manufactured products and opening a new channel to bring the commerce of Central California through the southern gateway.

In a special train, composed entirely of Pullman sleepers, the Los Angeles excursionists left La Grande Station at 7:30 o'clock last Sunday night. H. J. Whitley, president of the Security Land and Loan Company, and Nathan Cole, Jr., vice-president and general manager of the Pacific Sugar Corporation, were the hosts.

Warned that they would be called for breakfast at Visalia by sunrise, the travelers retired early. Right of way was given the special train, and it made a swift but uneventful journey, going by way of San Bernardino and Mojave, and reaching Bakersfield almost an hour before it was expected.

AT BAKERSFIELD.

A number of members of the Bakersfield Board of Trade entered the cars, rousing the travelers from their morning slumbers to point out to them as the train hurried on the scenic beauty and the natural resources of Kern county. It soon developed that about half the Bakersfield party slept too late and missed the special train. Some of these went to Corcoran later in the day on a Santa Fé regular train.

The interest of the Bakersfield Board of Trade soon became apparent. Kern county feels the necessity of offering inducements to the captains of Southern California to develop its latent resources. Its men of affairs are planning to interest Los Angeles capitalists in the fertile valleys along the Kern River. They realize that the path of prosperity leads away to the South and they want to join the procession. Before the day was over it developed that Bakersfield expects to offer concessions to the Pacific Beet Sugar Corporation in return for a beet sugar plant to be located about ten miles from the city.

By the time the sun had cleared the topmost peaks of the Sierras, the engines drawing the special train stood wheezing and panting alongside the Visalia refinery of the Pacific Sugar Corporation. The Visalia Board of Trade had prepared for its guests a delightful country breakfast under the oaks near the plant.

The choicest products of Tulare's vineyards and its orchards were heaped high on wooden tables under the welcome shade. Visalia is built on the site of what was once a forest of magnificent oak trees. Enough of these have escaped the ax of the pioneer to provide sylvan arcades on its outskirts. It was in one of these that the travelers enjoyed their morning meal.

WELCOMED AT VISALIA.

Long teams of corn-fed country horses drew to the factory four-ton loads of cream colored sugar beets gathered for the sacrifice. While the visitors watched these teams approaching the east side of the factory and other teams bearing away loads of sacked sugar from the western exit, Mayor Orr of Visalia bade his guests welcome in the name of Tulare county.

He said that Visalia sees in Los Angeles the new Chicago of the Pacific Slope; he realizes that the boundaries of the Tehachepi are too narrow to confine the industrial progress and enterprise that has carried the name of Los Angeles even to the waste places of the earth. He said that Tulare county is proud to join with Los Angeles in developing the central and southern parts of the State.

When the last of the country hams had disappeared and the visitors had quaffed their fill from the great bowls of country cream, the travelers turned, under the guidance of Manager W. J. Wayte, superintendent of the Pacific Sugar Corporation, to inspect the Visalia sugar beet factory.

With increasing interest they followed the sugar beet from the time it was dumped into a sluiceway of running water along with thousands of its fellows, through the washing and shredding machines, through the great centrifugal separators until it glided along a miniature railway into the warehouse a part of a hundred-pound sack of refined granulated sugar.

Superintendent Wayte presented for inspection laboratory records to show that the average sugar content of the beets harvested in the Corcoran district this year is more than 21 per cent. sugar. The lowest single field assayed more than 18.4 per cent.

When Superintendent Wayte explained that the average sugar content of the Oxnard beets is 17.24 per cent. and the highest 18.4 per cent., the visitors began to understand why the opening of a sugar factory in Tulare county marked an industrial epoch. Prior to the planting of the Corcoran district the percentage of sugar in the Oxnard beets was the highest in the country.

IN CORCORAN DISTRICT.

In the Corcoran district this year the average yield was fourteen tons to the acre. Some fields harvested as high as twenty-eight tons to the acre, but these were the exceptions. The beets are contracted for by the sugar corporation at $5 a ton. The cost of production to the farmer is about $2.50 a ton.

In the Visalia district 6000 acres will be devoted to beets at the next planting. Corcoran will seed 5000 acres of beets and another 2000 acres will be seeded in territory tributary to Corcoran. The Visalia plant is refining sugar at the rate of 800 sacks a day. This sells at the factory for more than $4000. The Visalia factory has a capacity of 400 tons of beets daily; the new factory at Corcoran will have a capacity of 700 tons a day.

Delegations from boards of trade of all the valley cities south of Fresno were gathered at Corcoran to greet the arrival of the special train, which now carried more than 300 visitors. This new city of the future was ready for its guests. Settlers had come overland more than twenty miles to witness the laying of the corner-stone of the great sugar factory.

Here the visiting business men received an insight into the possibilities of the marvelous soil of Kings county.

Eighteen months ago Corcoran was a railway siding on the Santa Fé, surrounded by tule and grass lands. Now it is a thriving new town containing three brick business blocks, a modern hotel building, a $25,000 railway station in the course of construction and a number of comfortable homes. Half a dozen mercantile and industrial companies are in business there, and for miles around the virgin plains have been converted into some of the most valuable beet, raisin and grape lands in the State.

Land which the Security Land and Loan Company sold a year and a half ago for $40 an acre cannot now be bought for $250 an acre.

THE EXERCISES.

On the outskirts of the townsite of Corcoran the new $1,000,000 sugar factory is building. In a canvas pavilion covering an acre of ground Corcoran extended to its visitors a hospitable welcome.

H. J. Whitley and his associates of the Security Land and Loan Company were greeted as the pioneers of a new empire in the San Joaquin Valley. Raisin growers, orchardists and dairy farmers vied with the beet sugar men in doing them honor. The occasion was one without parallel in the history of Central California.

To the residents of the valley the laying the corner-stone of the new factory was almost sacred. The exercises opened with prayer and concluded with singing "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow."

Standing on a rustic platform festooned with American flags, Dr. Alan Gardner, president of the State Bank at Corcoran, bade the visitors welcome.

DR. GARDNER'S SPEECH.

"I am glad to see the ladies with us," said Dr. Gardner, "what they say goes. That's the way it is in our family, and I guess it is in yours.

"Friends, speaking for the company and myself, I feel highly complimented to be called upon to address this audience of progressive, up-to-date business men. I recognize that this gathering is made up of leaders—master men—men who do things—men who develop countries and build empires. They are the ones who take hold on our universal life and lift it higher up.

"Now, ladies and gentlemen, we want to give you a little history and tell you how we stand, especially on this beet-sugar factory question, the laying of which corner-stone is our main purpose today. The first question that any practical business man will ask is: 'Will they make good?'

"I will answer: 'You saw this morning something doing at Visalia; you saw the sugar being produced. It is being shipped to Los Angeles, a carload a day, worth over 5 cents a pound. You saw the successful operation of a sugar factory. Well, that factory was built on confidence and courage and much money.

"Mr. Nathan Cole was so well thought of by his friends in Los Angeles; they had so much confidence in him, that they put up their money and let him carry out his idea, and when the agricultural authorities at Berkeley said the sugar beet could not be successfully grown in the San Joaquin Valley, these true friends still put up their money. They assessed themselves, and kept on. Mr. Cole has justified their confidence. When any body of men will stand together with such faith and courage they must win.

"Today they are reaping the first fruits of victory, and the result is going to Los Angeles as a large factor in its upbuilding, just as the results of this development at Corcoran will carry money to Los Angeles.

"Now, it was what these men had done with money, great courage and energy that influenced the Security Land and Loan Company to make a deal with them to build at Corcoran. That was the condition of the beet-sugar factory people.

"How was it with the Security Land and Loan Company?

"They were strong. They had sold

BY PURCHASE OR CONQUEST?

JAPAN MUST SECURE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Manila Bay Believed Inevitable Destination of Mikado's Fleet.

Experienced Traveler in the Orient Declares That Possession of Archipelago Is Essential to Development of Commerce of Nippon—Chain of Islands Along Asian Coast Fundamental Element in Strategy of Far East.

Gen. Bliss,
and a peaceful Moro datto, a human phase of the Philippine problem.

BY HAMILTON WRIGHT.

OF COURSE Japan wants the Philippines. How much she desires them is, of course, largely a matter of conjecture. Will she buy them or seek to wrest them from us by war?

Sooner or later, I believe, in the inevitable struggle between that rising star of the Orient and the great United States of America, the battleships of the Mikado will steam toward Manila Bay; and, if we are as unprepared as at present, the pearls of the Orient will, for the time being at least, pass under the domination of the Japanese.

There is no doubt in the minds of well-grounded students of international affairs who are conversant with the armaments and strategical positions of nations, that Japan could easily and readily capture the Philippines; and, some of the strategists assert that she could perhaps hold them for a number of years. Some of our well-informed American army and navy officials freely admit that we are in no position to resist Japan, should a conflict be precipitated at the present time, and should she desire to seize the Philippines, the step would be easy.

Our defenses in the islands are inadequate. We are far from our base of supplies. To protect the islands from an invasion of the Japanese we would have to destroy the Japanese fleets and thus leave our own coast unprotected. But there would be no time for us to send battleships to the Philippines were it possible, for almost before we realized what was happening Japan would have seized the coveted archipelago. Her fleets would have destroyed our small naval representation there. Her armies would speedily march upon and capture Manila.

IF ONCE IN.

With the Japanese armies in possession of the islands, it would prove an almost impossible task to dislodge them, since they could subsist bounteously off the country in a manner which would be impossible for white troops.

The Japanese people could easily conquer the Filipinos. A savage race poorly equipped for modern warfare, as it is always, is no match for the rapid-fire gun, shrapnel, and improved explosives of the most civilized nations and it is probable that the Japanese would enter on the work of annihilation with far more spirit and zest than the Americans have ever shown. As for our present army in the Philippines it is so inadequate that were the Japanese to land it would easily be overcome by sheer force of numbers.

Of course, the great problem in the proper armament of our oriental bases is not the repulsion of armies that have already landed, but the taking of measures that will render it impracticable for them to attempt landing, and this, of course, means the existence of a large war fleet and fortified naval bases in our oriental possessions.

The talk of Japan's ultimate designs upon the Philippines, though it is commonly trivial and ill-considered, has a very solid foundation in strategic principles. Japan does not desire the Philippines for the sake of their wonderful resources, their fertile fields, vast coal deposits, almost illimitable forests. These, though attractive in themselves, do not bear at all upon the present equation.

The fundamental element in the strategy of the Far East, says one great authority, is the existence along the Asiatic coast, from Sakhalin on the north to Java on the south, of a line of tolerably large and naturally rich islands with many good harbors capable of efficient fortifications as naval bases.

The history of many wars demonstrates that such chains of islands within moderate distance of a continental coast have a peculiar importance with relation to that coast. The Philippines are the key to the open door of Asiatic commerce. The political and commercial fate of China is dependent upon that nation which is in control of the islands off her coast. If, for instance, a single efficient military nation had adequate fortified bases in the chief islands off the Asiatic coast from Vladivostok to Singapore, and a large and efficient navy, the position of that nation with regard to naval attack by other powers or interference with her commerce would be practically impregnable.

This is the principle that concerns the United States, China, Japan and Germany in the strategy of the Far East. These islands command the trade routes between the East Asian coast and the rest of the world, and it is this fact that lies behind the plans and ambitions of several powers.

A war between Japan and the United States in the distant future is highly probable unless our present situation in the Far Orient is materially changed. Indeed, a number of men who are regarded as international authorities predict that a Titanic combat is sure to come sooner or later, regardless of the fact that we may be thoroughly equipped in the Orient to meet such a war. Some of these authorities even go so far as to say that if we shall increase our fortified bases and our fleet in Philippine waters we will thereby become a greater menace to the commerce of Japan, and so the likelihood of war will become almost a certainty.

Among those who make this assertion is the great German authority, Graf von Reventlow, an officer of the German navy and editor-in-chief of Die Armee und Marine, who has written a book with the following subtitle, "Political and Military Reflections Before The Hague Peace Conference."

Those who are conversant with affairs in the Orient, including, of course, men who are internationally regarded as authorities, believe that a war with Japan, based on commercial grounds, will not come soon; for, while the war with Russia has left Japan with a large and seasoned army and has increased the size and efficiency of her navy, her great foreign debt is in the nature of a bond to keep the peace. Then, too, at the present time, Japan is fully occupied with the development of her commerce that has not yet

INDUSTRIES FOUNDED.

a great part of their lands and could pay each stockholder in full and a handsome profit. They had developed Corcoran and its lands as dairy and grape-growing propositions, and for many other products. They were on velvet. That means a great deal, for you all know that velvet is the heaven of all industrial enterprises. They had spent money as no company had ever done before for the interest of the community, and the people who bought from them.

"So he started in again. One of the conditions of agreement between the Pacific Sugar Corporation and the Security Land and Loan Company was that we take $100,000 of their bonds. Our president has since sold a large block of them. That being the case, it was up to us to make those bonds just as good as gold, and we have tried to do so. Our bonus to the Pacific Sugar Company is a large one.

"So you see, ladies and gentlemen, that this is not a castle in the air, but a reality. You can see that such a combination of brains, money and courage must succeed.

"Yet, after all, my friends, our work here at Corcoran is only a starter for what will be done in this great fertile valley. We are only showing the way. All of us today are empire builders and we are building in the valley of the sunny San Joaquin an empire as rich and fruitful as any on earth. It will not be many years until you see all these fertile lands thickly settled and towns grow to cities. It is the law of progress. Close on our heels a new perfection treads, born of us and fated to excel.

"And a word for the leader of this enterprise. Only now and again a leader is born. Most of us must be content to be as though we had not been. The leader must be careful. Where he leads thousands follow him, to gain or loss.

"Here he has chosen the land well and given many the chance they need to become independent and happy. His work will live after him. He is sowing the seed of development that will grow into cities on whose streets he will never walk. He is planting orchards and vineyards of whose fruit he will never eat.

"My friends, I thank you for aiding us, and this whole valley by your presence here today. I wish now to introduce to you the man who has made these things possible, my friend, H. J. Whitley."

PRESIDENT WHITLEY.

There was a crowding forward of the throng as President Whitley ascended the platform. His name, linked with that of the Security Land and Loan Company, is winner in the San Joaquin Valley. Where they have touched the fallow soil it has smiled forth a harvest. In their footsteps have sprung up the villages of the plain.

A breath of applause swept through the arcade, followed by a hush, showing the eagerness of the farmers that not a word might be lost.

Mr. Whitley spoke as follows:

"After listening to the speech of our gifted master of ceremonies, one would think me a Moses and a leader of the people. On the contrary, the great strength of our company is that we have many men of influence and ability who are leaders and a power within themselves. At the same time, my experience has been that the people generally see and decide on their own judgment.

"On behalf of the Pacific Sugar Corporation and the Security Land and Loan Company, it affords me great pleasure to welcome you here today.

"It is a source of great gratification to us to see so many of our prominent people and the various Boards of Trade from all parts of the valley. It shows that they are with us in this enterprise. This is a development of mutual interest to the entire San Joaquin Valley. Without coöperation it is impossible to do things.

"It is now a little over two years since I first came to this section of the valley. At that time it was an endless prairie, with only a few scattered stock ranches to relieve the dreary monotony, and my object then was to buy and establish a large stock ranch.

"After carefully investigating the lands and their possibilities, and seeing what had been done around the neighboring towns, I made up my mind that with the vast acreage, the fertility of the soil and abundance of water, we could at all events do as well as our neighbors, and after carefully looking over their rich and productive lands, their fine orchards and vineyards, and their luxuriant alfalfa fields, I found they were second to none.

"We then concluded that in order to properly develop this territory we must control a large acreage of land, and we decided to purchase a strip of territory extending for nearly twenty-five miles along the line of the Santa Fé, and including the territory around Corcoran, Waukena and Angiola.

"To properly improve and settle up a new territory takes a large amount of capital, energy and experience. As most of the surrounding towns were selling more or less of their holdings, it was necessary that this capital should come from Los Angeles and outside places. We believed at the same time that if we could develop this section of the country, we would, at all events, gain for Los Angeles in return a fair share of the trade which had formerly gone to other cities.

"There has been over a million and a half invested in the purchase and development of these lands. Thousands of dollars have been paid out to the surrounding towns. This development should open up a new era. Hundreds of our friends have been attracted by the efforts of the Security Land and Loan Company and are investing in various places throughout the San Joaquin Valley.

"During the past two years we have gone through earthquakes and other calamities, and here I wish to pay a tribute to those who have so faithfully stood by us.

"Any achievement of this nature necessitates untiring energy on the apart of a few, and in order to accomplish things they must have unbounded courage.

"After unceasing exertion we have at last succeeded in putting our company 'on velvet,' and are now paying dividends, and this, too, before we secured the establishment of the sugar factory here.

"Nearly two years ago, we had in mind that we had lands adapted to sugar beet growing, and after testing them we concluded to use our best efforts to locate a No. 1 plant here. We considered several outside companies, who were willing to put in a beet sugar factory, but after careful investigation concluded that our home people, headed by Nathan Cole, Jr., and his able associates, could build and operate another first-class factory.

"I visited the plant of which ours is to be a duplicate (only larger and more up-to-date,) located at Lamar, Colo., built by Mr. Waite, consulting engineer, and who is also largely interested in the Corcoran factory.

"First I visited Garden City, Kan., where they are operating a beet sugar plant. I learned from conservative business men that the plant had cost about a million dollars, and that it had added millions to land values around Garden City, and that many men had been made independent by the beet sugar industry there. I never met a body of men more enthusiastic or more loyal to their town.

"I then visited Lamar, Colo., where Mr. Wayte built the factory. In passing along the streets I saw a sign reading: 'Everybody boost. Damn the knocker.' Around town I saw many other signs of a similar spirit, and in talking with the leading citizens they would make one forget all about Garden City and have all believe that the factory Waite built at Lamar was much more up-to-date and perfect than the one at Garden City. It is certainly a great factory, and stands today a monument to his skill and ability.

"Here I want to pay a tribute to Mr. Cole and his associates. Under existing conditions, we think they have done wonderful work and are succeeding beyond all expectations, which we have seen today in visiting the factory at Visalia. They have added to their original forces, and have with them now some of the best business men of Los Angeles, including Worthy Mayor Harper.

"In an interview with a prominent railroad official the other day, he mentioned his extensive dealings with Mr. Cole and paid him a very high compliment, saying that he was a gentleman who always made good—in fact, a man who is better than his word. It is impossible for such a man to fail. It takes just such a man—a man of his word, and a man of courage, to build up such a great enterprise as this sugar factory.

"In conclusion, I wish to say that a country may have all the necessary natural advantages to build up a great enterprise, but unless such enterprise is properly placed before the public it will fall by the wayside. The press has always been one of the greatest factors in the building up of new enterprises. Through its untiring efforts in the interest of the community it brings about results which could be achieved in no other way. The newspapers of Los Angeles and the San Joaquin Valley have been of untold benefit in building up the interests of the country, and we therefore feel greatly indebted to them, and in behalf of our company, I wish to tender them our thanks for their valuable assistance in helping to make possible the successful establishing of the beet sugar industry—an industry which means much to the future development of the San Joaquin Valley.

NATHAN COLE.

Nathan Cole, Jr., vice-president and manager of the Pacific Sugar Corporation, spoke as follows on the development of the beet sugar industry in the San Joaquin Valley.

"Three years ago next Christmas, W. C. Petchner and I visited Visalia for the first time to offer to the citizens of that enterprising town a proposition for the building of a beet sugar factory. A conference was held with leading members of the Board of Trade and conditions were soon arranged whereby active work was begun on the factory. The spontaneous action of the people of Visalia, together with their generosity and good will to strangers, who were about to come into their midst, will always be gratefully and pleasantly remembered by me. It took a good deal of courage and some self-sacrifice on the part of the people of Visalia to meet our conditions, but they did not falter and the result is the factory you saw in operation today, which I am sure is mutually beneficial to the sugar company and the city of Visalia.

"Four years ago a bulletin was issued by Prof. Shaw of the State University, in which the opinion was expressed that sugar beets could not be grown profitably in the San Joaquin Valley. This was after experiments had been made on dry, sandy lands and dry adobe mesa lands. Only desultory experiments had been made in beet culture in the moist lands of the Waweah Delta, and the rich sub-irrigated lands of Tulare and Kings counties. Since the establishment of our enterprise at Visalia, we have demonstrated by actual field work, that the sugar beet grows as well, if not better, over a wide area of Tulare and Kings counties, than in any other section of the world. Of course there have been failures to raise successful crops; this is but the universal experience in raising all crops, due to indifference of the farmer or absolute neglect. Where proper effort has been made, the soil plowed deeply and thoroughly prepared, the seed planted early, the plants thinned early and thence cultivated constantly until the fruition of the crop, sugar beet culture in Tulare and Kings counties has proven an unqualified success, where the rewards of industry have been as great as in any other line of agriculture. It is true some of the beet fields have produced only two or three tons to the acre, but in every case of failure there is an excellent reason, not due to the soil and climate, but due to either inexperience on the part of the farmer or planting the seed out of season. Where correct farming methods have been followed, the results have been almost incredible in many instances and crops exceeding twenty tons to the acre, with a sugar content of from 18 to 23 per cent., and a purity of from 83 to 88 per cent, have been achieved. Although our brief campaign of 1906 was handicapped by the inexperience of the local farmer, we achieved such results as to encourage us in the belief that Tulare and Kings counties would soon develop into the greatest beet country in the world. In all cases the sugar content ran very high, in one case the tonnage exceeding thirty tons to the acre; this by a factory employé who has never raised a beet in his life; another factory employé, who planted two acres to beets, we paid $175 for the crop, upon which he had spent $9 in money exclusive of his own labor. In the case of a local farmer near the factory we paid $51 net per acre for the product of thirty-five acres of beets, which he claimed was the most profitable annual crop he had ever raised in Tulare county.

"The sugar made at the Visalia plant is now successfully standing the test of the market, where it is commanding the top price and being rapidly absorbed by the trade.

"In closing, permit me to say that no industry in this vast and fertile area gives greater promise of success than the culture of the beet or the making of sugar therefrom."

MAYOR HARPER.

Mayor Harper facetiously declared himself Mayor of Corcoran, and then in turn welcomed the visitors of Los Angeles, and responded to that welcome, in separate addresses. He said, in part:

"It is needless for me to express my great personal pleasure in being present and taking part in this auspicious and notable event. I am glad to be here, and glad to see so many here, testifying the deep interest you are taking in the development of this promising section and in joining hands with our city of Los Angeles.

"Now, firstly, as there seem to be no other Mayors around, and nobody here to resist or dispute the matter, I want to declare myself the Mayor of the city of Corcoran.

"And I, Mayor Harper of Corcoran, now extend to you, Mayor Harper of Los Angeles, and your fellow-visitors, a most hearty welcome to the future metropolis of the lower San Joaquin Valley. Mayor Harper of Los Angeles, we hope you will enjoy to the fullest our barbecue of native beef, our luscious grapes and peaches, our pure and invigorating air and splendid, inspiring scenery.

"We hope, Mayor Harper of Los Angeles, that you and your good and wonderful people will come up here often and linger long.

"We need, and we want, above all other things, just such people as you, who have made the city of Los Angeles the wonder-city.

"In urging your people to come to Corcoran, Mayor Harper of Los Angeles, we promise to offer you every inducement in our gift.

"If H. E. Huntington, or E. H. Harriman, E. P. Clark or Gen. M. H. Sherman will come to Corcoran and put in their money, their brains and their energies, we promise you, Mayor Harper of Los Angeles, that they may have for the asking a third-rail franchise, a fifty-year one, to run cars over our busy streets, or the privilege of laying conduits underneath for electric wires, gas or water mains.

"Come to Corcoran, gentlemen, when the other cities refuse to do the square thing, and be sure that you will get fully or more than a square deal here.

"Therefore, I, Mayor Harper of Corcoran, tender the key of our city to you, Mayor Harper of Los Angeles."

Laughter and applause followed as Mayor Harper passed a key from his left to his right hand, took a couple of turns about the rostrum, and continued:

"Mr. Mayor of Corcoran, as Mayor of Los Angeles and on behalf of our people present and absent, I wish to accept your cordial and generous hospitality with grateful thanks.

"I shall convey your inducements to all Los Angeles to the best of my ability. We are happy today in your beautiful, fertile and promising city, for we look forward to the most pleasant and beneficial relations. You have a great future, for you are blessed with an abundance of nature's richest gifts, and you are entering upon the task of claiming your own in the right spirit.

"I proudly recommend that you follow closely in the footsteps of the leaders of our city of Los Angeles, for the results there have astonished the world.

"Stand together for progress of all classes of citizenship and the general public good, invest liberally of toil, capital and brains, and the battle is yours. Mayor Harper of Corcoran, I thank you."

W. J. WAYTE'S REMARKS.

W. J. Wayte, superintendent of the Pacific Sugar Company, spoke of the building of the sugar factory at Corcoran. His figure is a familiar one in Tulare and Kings counties, where it is known as a builder of rare constructive ability.

"I have been in the sugar business for a great many years," said Mr. Wayte. "In my father's machine shop, where I served my apprenticeship to engineering, as far back as 1875, we did repair work for a sugar refinery; but it was not until 1881 that I went regularly into it at the old Franklin refinery in Philadelphia.

"I resigned from the general superintendence of all the factories of the American Beet Sugar Company, shortly after the earthquake, and started in contracting in San Francisco; but on an invitation from Mr. Cole last December I visited this country and what I saw in the shape of lands, the records I saw as to tonnage raised, sugar content, purities, etc., the prices that land could be purchased at—the whole outlook was so phenomenal I simply dropped everything else and put my all—money, energy, experience, everything I possessed, into this business.

"I have visited and am familiar with the records—the private records of every factory in the United States. I have laid before me a great many of the records of European factories, and while I find some that equal the tonnage grown per acre—nowhere have I found beets that equal these in sugar and purity.

"Corcoran got started late, the land was not got into shape, was not planted in time, was not properly taken care of, but when I tell you the following figures further comment from me is not necessary:

"The average sugar of the beets sliced at Chino in the last six years was 15 per cent., of which the highest was 18.37.

"The average sugar of the beets sliced at Oxnard in the last six years was 17.24, of which the highest was 18.4, and let me say this—sugar content is, or was, the highest average in the world.

"The average sugar content of all the beets harvested in the Corcoran district this year was 21.08 sugar and the lowest single field harvested was 18.4, which is equal to the highest average year at Oxnard which is, or was, the best on earth. These are no fancy figures. I have the absolute records to show for it. It is beyond doubt or contradiction.

"Today you have been over some of the lands in this section and what have you seen? Never was a fairer, more productive country shown to man. Not even when the children of Israel sent their spies into the promised land and they found a land flowing with milk and honey, was a fairer prospect opened up.

"Men of the Southland! I have lived in the north of this State sufficiently long to become acquainted with the ways of the people. I love the people of the north, for a thousand things, but there is too much jealousy among them ever to develop the opportunities that lay at their door. This San Joaquin Valley has been the scoff and the sneer of the north for years. They look upon it yet as an arid desert. They have looked upon the Southland as a large infirmary and year by year they have expected the growth of Los Angeles to burst as a bubble pricked with a pin. Finally as the bubble continued growing and became more and more solid they began to open their eyes, then to establish branch houses; then to district California and say south of the Tehachepi, Los Angeles, north of that, San Francisco.

"But the same indomitable energy that made the Southland an orchard, an orange grove, a garden, could not be held by the Tehachepi and so overflowing its metes and bounds poured into and is now spreading itself out and taking possession and reclaiming from waste the fairest land ever given to man. Very early in the game it was recognized that no single business could possibly help the development of this country as much as beet sugar, and so—with characteristic judgment—the beet sugar business was decided upon. The factory was built at Visalia and the results achieved there are the wonder of every sugar man who sees them.

"You are assisting today at the commencement of a sugar house which will be an advance on any sugar house in the United States or in the world. Nowhere on earth has there been designed a more modern and up to date plant, and at the same time, while there are several features in this house that are not yet incorporated in any house built, not a single one of them is a departure from sound conservative sugar engineering practice.

"I have been told that when a man has once gone to sea as a sailor the salt water microbe gets into his blood and forever after he loves the sea and its hardships. It is the same way in the sugar business. Once a man gets the sugar microbe, he never lets up until he dies, and after? Well as far as I personally am concerned, if they don't make sugar in our future state and if I don't get a job at it, I have certainly wasted a lot of time here on earth. I am not going to enter into the question of dollars and cents to be made in this business. On this side there is no question. Not a sugar factory has been built in the land but has made money if it got the beets to slice. And here is no question of getting the beets. It would be an insult to your business acumen for me to attempt the demonstration of a fact that is patent to you all. There is an empire here waiting for you to stretch out your hands and take possession of it, just waiting. The material benefits that will accrue are incalculable.

"There is a fascination about this business that to a man of any energy is simply irresistible. From the time planting begins to the time the money from the sale of the product comes in, there is never a dull moment, and when the dividends are declared and they go into the pockets of Los Angeles shareholders, the absence of dullness still continues, for I rejoice in the fact that Los Angeles people subscribe emphatically to the old proverb—'never reckon your profits until they are spent.' It makes no difference whether that spending is done in the way of pleasure, or in the way of new investments and further development, the principle is still the same.

"But where is the pleasure equal to the development of a new country? Where is the joy that equals the knowledge of a labor well performed? All you gentlemen are workers. Every one of you knows the satisfaction that comes to a man when he looks on his labors completed and can echo the Master Workman when he looked at his work and found it was good.

"Gentlemen: The God of things as they are has shown you the work that lies before you. He has given you the opportunity today to see wherein you can gain the Psalmist's blessing on those who make two blades of grass to grow where one now is. And when in the years to come, and you and I are in the sear and yellow leaf, what joy can equal the thought, 'I came here when this flourishing city, this thriving community, was nothing but a desert. I have done my part towards this progress. I have advanced the material welfare of my State, I have assisted in the prosperity of thousands of families, and now as I look on this work I see it is good.'"

SPEECH OF MR. PETCHNER.

W. C. Petchner, secretary of the Pacific Sugar Corporation, spoke as follows to the toast, "Benefits to Be Derived from the Beet Sugar Industry:"

"In the lower San Joaquin Valley the farmer raises alfalfa and fruit most largely, and other crops incidentally. Counting the cost of labor, he will not average above $25 per acre for his alfalfa, at best; and the right kinds of fruit may bring him from $50 to $75 per acre, after waiting from six to ten years for his trees to get into their heaviest bearing period.

"But oftimes the market is very unsatisfactory, and sometimes he has no market for what he produces; in other years his fruit trees will not bear a paying crop. His land is worth from $25 to $100 per acre for alfalfa and fruit growing.

"But in raising sugar beets the farmer is guaranteed in writing at least $5 per ton before he sows his seed. With a little experience and the getting of the soil into condition, he comes to know that, in Corcoran, for instance, he can raise, say, fifteen tons per acre. He is absolutely certain that he can take these beets to the factory and turn them into cash—$75 per acre—without hunting for a market. No wonder, then, that lands at Oxnard have gone up from $100 an acre to $500 per acre, for on a valuation of $500 per acre the farmer can at least make 10 per cent., or more money than the money lender does; and riot and revolution cannot destroy his principal—the land.

"Corcoran is most fortunately situated in the midst of fertile farming lands; the factory is in the town, and all the factory employés may live within its limits. Each year the sugar industry will bring here factory employés, field laborers, teamsters, and others directly and indirectly connected with the industry to the number of about 1000, to whom and to the farmers who supply the beets, it will pay about $500,000 each year. Much of this will be spent at Corcoran, or will be banked here; and to this point must come the surrounding farmers, who live well and spend liberally when they have the money and know where they can get more.

"These conditions will attract other industries, and, finally, we will find here at Corcoran in this same San Joaquin Valley, a second, but a greater Oxnard, because Oxnard was built in the shadow of Ventura and Hueneme, while Corcoran stands solitary and alone, miles away from any rivaling neighbor.

"The United States yearly imports from abroad upward of $125,000,000 of raw sugar. In 1905, for instance, to pay for this immense importation, it took all the wheat we exported, together with all the wheat flour, all the corn, and all the cornmeal; all the oats and oatmeal, all the rye and rye flour or meal, and all other breadstuffs, excepting barley.

"It will take the product of 500 new factories to supply to the people of this country the sugar we annually import; and also we must erect twenty-five new factories each year to keep up with the annual increase of consumption in the United States.

"We have in the United States now seventy-one beet-sugar factories, and are building them at the rate of two or three each year. If we were suddenly to erect 500 new factories, we should retain in the United States $125,-00,0000 annually, so that each factory built goes so far toward keeping American money at home, besides furnishing to that extent a market for American machinery, as well as employment for American farmers, machinists and others whose services are usually required in the operation of these plants.

"It is not likely anybody now alive, nor even anybody born this day, will live long enough to see the native production catch up with home consumption, for at the present rate of catching up it will take us 100 years to wipe out the foreign importation alone, to say nothing of the increased consumption within those 100 years.

"In view of all these circumstances, the person who has money invested in the sugar business need have no immediate apprehension as to his profits. I have extracted from the able speech at Hollywood of Gen. H. G. Otis, published in the Los Angeles Times of August 25 last, the following official and statistical information, relating to Denmark:

> The test of saccharine watter in the beets of Denmark shows an average of 12 to 12½ per cent.; and last year the sugar factories of that country paid a dividend of 20 per cent. to their stockholders, besides adding 15 per cent. to their reserve fund. The climatic conditions in Denmark are unfavorable for beet raising, yet the net income from beets averages from $80 to $100 per acre there, besides the pulp, which would be worth to the farmer from 1 to 2 cents per pound.

"The beets in Corcoran will yield nearly one-third more of sugar matter than the Danish beets, and the climatic conditions at Corcoran are very favorable; hence if the Danish factories can earn 35 per cent. of their capital stock, what should be the earning ability of a beet-sugar factory at Corcoran or anywhere in Tulare or Kings counties?

"Therefore, it will be seen that sugar making is not only very profitable to the community, to the investor and to the country at large, but there is about it an element of sentimental and patriotic interest, for whoever or whatever tends to lead men into the country, away from the generally undesirable conditions of city life, may well be reckoned as deserving of the greatest encouragement."

As Secretary Petchner concluded, a white-aproned, bare-armed paisano elbowed his way through the throng to whisper in the ear of the master of ceremonies that the barbecued meat was ready to serve. Two score apple-cheeked country girls led the way to the pavilion where great rows of wooden tables were filled with provision for 1000 guests.

THE BARBECUE.

For an hour there was a merry clatter of silver on porcelain and the air was filled with the music of 1000 voices. The feast displayed the hospitality of Kings county. Three whole beeves had been roasted on red-hot stones in the barbecue pit. These were served with an accompaniment of vegetables and fruit, and the whole was washed down with quarts of rich milk and cream.

The hospitality of the valley folk met with a grateful response from the hungry hundreds who had traveled 250 miles to help lay the corner-stone of the great sugar factory that is to be. Not one discordant note had marred the day's harmony and all were happy and hungry. But try as they might they could not stem the rising tide of provisions that fairly inundated them as they ate. When the last mouth was filled provisions remained for thousands more.

MR. CHADDOCK'S TALK.

After luncheon E. G. Chaddock of Fresno, Corcoran and Los Angeles, spoke of the possibilities for the culture of the grape in the lower San Joaquin. Mr. Chaddock is president of the Chaddock Raisin Growing and Packing Company of Fresno, the second largest shippers of raisins in California.

Mr. Chaddock won a round of applause when he said that he and his son have secured within the boundaries of Corcoran a site for a raisin packing and seeding plant.

"I have invested a great deal of money in grape land in the Corcoran

"[illegible]," said Mr. Chaddock, "and I [illegible] to invest a great deal more. What first won me to Corcoran was [illegible] of all the people of [illegible] district. We have good raisin land [illegible] Fresno but there are more jeal- [illegible] more hanging back and watching [illegible] how the other fellow is going to [illegible]

"[illegible] vineyards alone there is going [illegible] a great empire in the lower part [illegible] this valley. I have a vineyard of [illegible] near here. The yield is so [illegible] that I have made ar- [illegible] to set out several hundred [illegible] of vines. I sometimes wonder [illegible] if you people understand the [illegible] of the soil that is lying all [illegible] you.

"[illegible] week I was talking with a [illegible] about the prospects of Kings [illegible]. He was anxious to know [illegible] the investments are stable. I [illegible] him that if every acre of fruit [illegible] beet land under cultivation in the [illegible] were to be sold at $100 an acre [illegible] the money deposited in the banks, [illegible] amount would not be so great as [illegible] that will be taken from [illegible] acres this year in crops.

"I am not going to give you the figures for this year's Corcoran raisin [illegible] my friends, the beet growers, should think that I am trying to [illegible] their industry. But I will say [illegible] that the soil of Kings county [illegible] produce vineyards at least the [illegible] of any in this State. This is [illegible] be a great raisin growing [illegible] and Corcoran as its market [illegible] will be a metropolis of the [illegible] valley.

"[illegible] captains of industry in your [illegible] today have opened the gates to [illegible]; they have builded better [illegible] knew."

INDUSTRIAL FREEDOM.

[illegible] to the toast, "Industrial [illegible]," Gen. H. G. Otis warned the [illegible] against the folly and injustice [illegible] a prejudice against com- [illegible] of capital simply because [illegible] may be operating on a large [illegible]. He said that there are captains [illegible] in small enterprises as well [illegible] great, and that the crucial test [illegible] always be as to whether their [illegible] are within the law.

[illegible] declared industrial freedom [illegible] the keynote of all substantial [illegible]. He assured the farmers and [illegible] growers that by working in [illegible] with the captains of industry [illegible] are investing their millions in [illegible] county they will take part in [illegible] to the fullest extent one [illegible] most fertile districts in all Cal- [illegible]

MR. MERRITT.

[illegible] Merritt made a brief but strong [illegible] effective speech for industrial [illegible] and fair play.

[illegible]SHEL'S REMARKS.

[illegible] Rishel spoke on "The Indus- [illegible]." "Brains, capital, cour- [illegible] large experience can alone de- [illegible] the resources of this country to [illegible]," said Mr. Rishel, "and he [illegible] in this work, its prosperity [illegible] values, will be able to [illegible] with King Cole and eat sugar [illegible] round.

[illegible] God's country, and we are [illegible] ordained by the law of evo- [illegible] the laurel of success on [illegible] brow of industry and toil. [illegible] of time we will have [illegible] in Europe, two great [illegible] owner and the land- [illegible] God pity the landless, [illegible] shall be grinding [illegible]

[illegible] who live in the sunshine [illegible] and labor with their hands [illegible] of the earth and the an- [illegible] of society and government."

[illegible] R. KING.

[illegible] spoke briefly on, "What [illegible] of the factory means to [illegible] the surrounding lands." "The laying of this corner-stone [illegible] to Kings and Tulare coun- [illegible] any other event in their his- [illegible] Mr. King. "Its building [illegible] era which will quicken [illegible] glad the whole valley, in [illegible] can be no jealousy, be- [illegible] diversity of her products is [illegible] that here is room for all, [illegible] the further reason that the [illegible] prosperity of one section [illegible] greater prosperity for the [illegible]

[illegible] not only beet culture and [illegible] of sugar, but inten- [illegible] diversified farming and manu- [illegible] of various kinds."

W. C. PATTERSON.

[illegible] Patterson, vice-president of [illegible] National Bank of Los An- [illegible] of local boards of trade [illegible] benefit to a community. Mr. [illegible] said that fifty bankers are [illegible] under the name of the Security [illegible] Loan Company for the de- [illegible] of Corcoran and Kings [illegible] that it is the union of muscle [illegible] that must secure the great- [illegible] of the resources of [illegible] district.

[illegible] Patterson warned the farmers [illegible] growers to avoid strife, to [illegible] in order to work in [illegible] with their neighbors and [illegible] capitalists who are assisting [illegible] development of the valley's in- [illegible]. He said that capital is timid, [illegible] out of communities where [illegible] are at war among them- [illegible] with their neighbors. It is [illegible] community where the people [illegible] together for industrial [illegible] that capital seeks an in- [illegible]

[illegible] my money here on faith, [illegible] and H. G. Whitley," said [illegible]. "This is the first time [illegible] Corcoran; its develop- [illegible] a splendid revelation [illegible] is better than Whitley and [illegible] represented. In the [illegible] world we bankers meet [illegible] the ones that say things [illegible] that do things. It is the [illegible] do things that are banded [illegible] the purpose of developing [illegible]. 'By their fruits ye shall [illegible].' The fruits of their indus- [illegible] broadcast over thous- [illegible] in your district. You [illegible] in having chosen for [illegible] a land so fertile and well [illegible] where industrial development [illegible] in its infancy, and you are [illegible] in being associated [illegible] men who do things, who [illegible] the grit, and the capi- [illegible] great enterprises."

AFTERMATH.

[illegible] of the Corcoran Dairymen's [illegible] provided carriages, in [illegible] were conveyed over [illegible] several miles about Cor- [illegible] they might have an oppor- [illegible] first knowledge of the [illegible] the farming and dairy [illegible] Kings county.

[illegible] well-fed cows grazed [illegible] neat, country homes; [illegible] "people who do things" [illegible] to the capitalists who came in Pullman cars from the south. In the farming community for miles about Corcoran thrift and prosperity are everywhere assertive.

The excursionists spent the greater portion of the afternoon sightseeing in and about Corcoran, and a number of them remained over until Tuesday, spending the night at the Corcoran Hotel. The special train carried the others back to Bakersfield in time to take supper at a leading hotel there as the guests of the Bakersfield Board of Trade.

During this supper the Bakersfield capitalists spoke of their desire to secure a sugar refining plant for that city. They said they would have secured it long ago, but for the fact that they looked to the North rather than to the South for the capital and the brains to build and operate the plant.

"We have discovered our error," said Maj. Rice, of the Bakersfield Board of Trade, "and we are now ready to make whatever amends are possible. You have gone out beyond your boundaries and success has attended your footsteps. We are beginning to understand that it is a great deal more than hot air that has made Los Angeles great. You are showing the way to the rest of the State, and to the whole Pacific slope. We trust that closer trade relations in the future will make us much better acquainted with each other.

"When we first heard your capitalists were going to Kings and Tulare counties we thought it was mostly boom; when we heard you were going all the way to Mount Whitney for your water supply we thought it was bluff. Now we know better; your capitalists have found the path of progress and you are marching right in the middle of the road."

J. W. Lankershim and H. J. Whitley responded to the greetings of the Bakersfield business men. Mr. Lankershim said that Los Angeles capital follows readily and easily in the footsteps of H. J. Whitley for the reason that Mr. Whitley has financed a number of industrial enterprises in Southern California and all of them have been successful.

Mr. Lankershim told of the development that has made Hollywood one of the beauty spots of the southland and said that much of this is due to Mr. Whitley and his associates.

President Whitley of the Security Land and Loan Company said there is room enough in the great San Joaquin Valley for all the towns now established and for 100 more. "No one section has a monopoly on prosperity. If there were only one fertile spot in the southern part of the valley it wouldn't amount to much; that spot wouldn't be worth developing. The time that one section spends in knocking another is worse than lost; you need all your energy to develop your own community. No section ever yet made itself great by belittling a neighboring community."

At 9 o'clock the southern "invaders" returned to their cars. A strenuous day had passed without an accident, without a discord. At sunrise Tuesday morning they arrived in the La Grande Station, Los Angeles, having traveled 740 miles and attended receptions in three cities, all within thirty-six hours.

GROWTH OF BEET-SUGAR INDUSTRY.

[From the Speech of Gen. H. G. Otis at Hollywood, Aug. 24.]

Statistics of California's beet-sugar production each year since the first success was achieved are not available, but the 1905 year book of the Department of Agriculture gives the following yearly productions for the entire country and California's share therein up to that year, inclusive:

Seasons—	—Tons— United States.	California.
1901-2	163,126	62,722
1902-3	195,463	71,130
1903-4	208,135	60,608
1904-5	209,722	41,540
1905-6	283,717	64,521

Those figures show that, except in 1904-5, California's beet-sugar production more than held its own, even after the withdrawal of the Congressional bounty formerly paid on its production. In the same report the Secretary of Agriculture said: "The sugar-beet lands of Ventura county have more than doubled in five years."

GROWTH OF INDUSTRY IN ENTIRE COUNTRY.

It was not until 1880 that the census bureau first reported the industry separately. Since then the growth has been as follows:

	1880.	1905.
Establishments	4	51
Capital invested	$365,000	$55,923,459
Wage-earners, average	350	2,963
Their yearly wages	$62,271	$2,486,702
Materials used, yearly	$196,128	$14,486,876
Value of yearly product	$282,572	$24,393,794

The industry showed marked growth between 1898 and 1905. For instance:

	1900.	1905.
Capital	$20,141,719	$55,923,459
Wage-earners	1,970	2,963
Yearly wages	$1,092,207	$2,486,702
Materials used, yearly	$4,903,796	$14,486,876
Value of yearly product	$7,323,857	$24,393,794

CALIFORNIA'S SHARE IN 1905.

In all of this great development of a profitable and necessary industry, California has had a large participation.

Her 1905 beet-sugar status was by (Census Bulletin 61:)

Establishments in operation	5
Capital invested	$10,672,786
Wage-earners, average	614
Their yearly wages	$429,430
Materials used, yearly	$2,463,829
Value of yearly product	$4,415,172

In production of 1905 California exceeded Wisconsin and all the other States in the Union, except Colorado and Michigan.

California's 1905 product consisted of:

	Quantity, lbs.	Value.
Granulated sugar	92,358,500	$4,267,606
Raw sugar	1,459,400	51,916
Total sugar, lbs.	93,817,900	$4,319,522
Molasses, gallons	2,750,500	52,491
Beet pulp		32,358
All other products		10,801
Total products		$4,415,172

Materials used in 1905:

	Quantity.	Value.
Sugar beets, tons	405,865	$1,918,240
Limestone, tons	33,295	89,715
Coke, tons	2,549	41,557
Sulphur, tons	101	3,221
Fuel cost	......	180,582
All other, including freights	......	230,514
Total materials used in 1905		$2,463,829

California's beet acreage, etc., in 1905:

	Acres.	Tons.	Cost.
Grown directly by factory	5,419	57,774	$282,569
Grown by tenants of factory	8,787	106,853	476,395
Grown by outside contract	19,267	241,238	1,159,276
Totals	33,473	405,865	$1,918,240

Average quality of beets:
Per cent. of sucrose	16.1
Per cent. of purity	80.6

The per cent. of sucrose was a trifle greater than the average for the entire United States.

There are now eight beet-sugar factories in operation in this State, as follows: At Alamitos, Chino, Oxnard, Santa Maria, Spreckels, Alvarado, Hamilton and Visalia, with one factory in course of construction at Corcoran. This particular enterprise is the one that is engaging the immediate attention of the gentlemen whom we have the honor of entertaining here tonight. This factory is to be the particular apple of our combined and concentrated eye, even though a beet-sugar mill is not a cider-press, by a long shot.

The combined capacity of these eight factories is figured at about 10,000 tons of beets, or 1000 tons of granulated sugar, per day. The average season's run is 100 days, so these eight factories could slice 1,000,000 tons of beets each year, or the product of 100,000 acres of land.

Last year the product of beet sugar in California was over 80,000 tons; this year it is anticipated that the product will not be quite so large. The average cost of a sugar factory in this State is about $1,500,000, or an average of $1500 for eachaton of beets capacity. California has a soil and climate and acreage to easily sustain 100 sugar factories, each factory using from 50,000 to 100,000 tons of beets, and each producing from 5000 to 10,000 tons of granulated sugar per annum. Taking the lowest figure, California, with 100 sugar factories, should make 500,000 tons of sugar per annum, worth $100 per ton. These 100 sugar factories should consume 5,000,000 tons of beets, for which the farmer should receive, at $5 per ton, $25,000,000. The pay rolls for these 100 factories, at an average of $500 per day, would be $50,000 per day for 100 days. Each sugar factory should use 100 carloads of oil per season, on the average, 15 carloads of coke, 5000 tons of lime rock, 100,000 sugar bags, besides thousands of dollars' worth of miscellaneous supplies.

Even as an infant industry, California is now producing on the average nearly $10,000,000 worth of sugar per annum. Increase the number of factories tenfold on the average, and the production of beet sugar in this State becomes prodigious. There are seventy-one beet-sugar factories in the United States, producing nearly 400,000 tons of beet-sugar per annum. The consumption of sugar in the United States amounts to $140,000,000 per annum. Eighty per cent. of this vast total is imported from Europe and the tropics. The government receives $16,000,000 per annum in duties on sugar importations, which is said to be the greatest income from a single source on the dutiable list. The increased consumption in sugar equals 125,000 tons per annum. It will take 500 new beet-sugar factories to produce the sugar now consumed in the United States. On the average, we are building beet-sugar factories in the United States just about fast enough to keep up with the increased consumption of sugar each year.

The per capita consumption of sugar in the United States is about seventy pounds. Beet sugar comprises 65 per cent. of the total world production of sugar; the other 35 per cent. is cane sugar. Statistics show that beet sugar is gaining on cane sugar each year in production.

California leads all other States in the high percentage of sugar reached in her beets, high purity in the beet, high yield of sugar per ton, and also in what is called in sugar-beet circles her "long campaign," meaning the period during which active operations in the field may be successfully carried on.

COAST INDUSTRIES.

Lumbering vs. Railroading.

The lumbermen of the Pacific Coast who propose to fight to the bitter end the proposed advance in eastbound lumber rates, take issue with President Hill of the Great Northern in the statement credited to him that operating expenses on the western roads have increased 70 per cent. within the past ten years. According to the sworn statements filed by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific roads with the Interstate Commerce Commission, the percentage of operating expenses to the earnings of these two roads have decreased in recent years. For 1897 the percentage of operating expenses to the earnings of the Northern Pacific road was 67.15 per cent.; for the year 1903 it was 52.16 per cent., and for the year 1906, 50.76 per cent. According to these figures operating expenses for the year 1906 decreased almost 2 per cent. over 1903, and fully 16 per cent. over 1897.

Iron Bedstead Factory.

That the manufacture of iron bedsteads is not confined to the East, is evidenced by the fact that the business of a Tacoma firm has required the erection of a four-story concrete and frame building, 100x120 feet. The building is just finished at an expense of $25,000.

Woolen Mill at San Diego.

Hanson W. Carter of Syracuse, N. Y., has purchased land at San Diego for the purpose of erecting a woolen mill plant that will involve an outlay of nearly $500,000.

High Price for Pears.

A dispatch to the Tacoma Ledger says J. F. Forman of Parker, who was offered a check for $2000 by Fred Thompson for the pears growing in an orchard rather more than half an acre in extent, has sold the crop to eastern buyers for $3500. From fifty-four trees of the B. d'Anjou variety, Mr. Forman secured 1000 boxes, worth $3.50 per box. These trees are fourteen years old. J. O. Shadbolt, another Parker orchardist, will net $25,000 from his thirty-seven acres this year. He is shipping two carloads daily.

Seed for the Government.

A new kind of timothy seed has been raised at Pullman, Wash., and is now being threshed out for the government under the charge of J. W. Evans, a government employé. The seed will be sent to Washington for distribution by the Department of Agriculture. As a result of the investigations by government experts it is expected that seeds of various kinds, especially grass seeds, will be grown near Pullman in large quantities.

RAILROAD NOTES.

The management of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad are experimenting with a speedometer and expect to adopt it on all passenger trains. It is placed in one of the cars composing the train and not only records the speed which the train makes but also all stops and their duration.

President Stickner of the Chicago Great Western Railroad tells an interviewer in London that President Roosevelt's campaign will put American investments on a sounder basis. He also said he was a firm believer in Federal supervision of the railroads.

In order to aid the wine industry of the State, the Southern Pacific and Santa Fé Railroads have cut 20 per cent. off the existing rate on grape shipments within this State because of the large number of vineyards that have to send the fruit by rail to the wineries.

The farmers in the Palouse country, Washington, recently rebelled at the excessive charges levied on grain and organized themselves together and asked the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company to lease them their warehouses. This was refused and the farmers turned to the Northern Pacific, which leased its warehouses and secured the shipment of all the grain raised in that country this year, amounting to about 400,000 bushels.

The drastic treatment of Alabama and Georgia railroads by the Legislatures of those States has caused the railroads to shut down on improvements, and they are purchasing only just such things as are necessary and will continue to do this until they know just where they stand. The consequence is that already the car wheel companies, lumber men, the brass men, the iron men and the suppliers of everything which goes into the make-up of the railroad are suffering from the antagonistic position the Legislatures have assumed toward the railroads. Southern cities which wish to negotiate loans are also finding capitalists unwilling to take hold of the same.

JAPAN AND PHILIPPINES.

reached such proportions that our possession of the Philippines embarrasses her.

JAPANESE PRIDE.

But there is a probable cause, and one that cannot be disregarded, which might plunge Japan into war regardless of consequences or irrespective of the fact whether the combat were precipitated at an opportune time. This is the sensitive, almost too sensitive, pride of the Japanese people. Any fancied slight upon the Japanese race will meet with almost universal protest from the crowded and tumultous population of those tight little islands of the Orient. The mob spirit is far more developed in Japan than any Occidental person generally realizes.

The sensational press of Japan and the populace run far ahead of the sober, conservative, ruling element, and at times by the mere preponderance of clamor, compel them to their way of thinking. There is little doubt in the minds of many sober Japanese that a fierce demand for war could be fanned into flame in an incredibly short space of time by unscrupulous agitators on both sides of the water who would stir up the embers of race hatred. Should the question of pride of race arise, "then," says Reventlow, the German authority, "populace, government, and Mikado would be united to strike for supreme domination of the Far East, the fetish of the Japanese." And anyone who is familiar with the Japanese spirit will instantly agree with this well-grounded authority on this particular point.

FOR COMMERCIAL SUPREMACY.

What are the reasons why war is predicted? First, as already stated, the Philippines are considered strategically important war bases with reference to Asiatic commerce, and any nation which occupies them is in the way to a diplomatic, military, and commercial command of a large portion of Oriental trade. It is the future condition of Oriental trade, and the future situation in the Far East, then, upon which predictions of war are based.

Besides the United States, at least two other nations enter into the future equation as far as Japan's commercial supremacy is concerned. These nations are China and Germany. Though China at present consists largely of a poorly-organized federation of provinces, yet, the Celestial Kingdom, like the rest of the world, is growing fast, both commercially and in a military sense. The exhibition of her standing army last fall was an amazing revelation to foreign attachés in the Far East, many of whom assert that in drill and appearance the Chinese army is fast approaching the standard of the Japanese.

Commercially, too, China is making wonderful progress. Almost $300,000,000 worth of bonds have been guaranteed by the Imperial government for the building of railroads. It is probable that, in a quarter of a century, China will be in a position to resist the plundering powers to which she has been so much a prey. She will doubtless too have become a tremendous manufacturer of goods for her own enormous internal markets, as well as being a source of supply of both raw material and manufactured products for other nations.

THE CHINESE AND GERMANS.

In a word, China will have become a vital competitor of Japan on Japan's own home grounds. Should Japan be at that time in possession of the Philippines, she will be in a position to dictate the commerce of South and Southeastern China, just as England for centuries has been in virtual strategical command of the commerce of a large portion of France, and by her navy controls the French Coast. On the other hand, should China at that time be able to seize the Philippines, or even to threaten to do so, she would seriously interrupt Japanese trade.

In Germany, the remaining factor in the equation, we have another nation which threatens the power of Japan in the Far East and will make it highly desirable in the future for the Japanese to control the Philippines, if they are to maintain their commercial supremacy. Already the Germans are serious and formidable competitors with Japan throughout the Orient. Even in Japan you will find large quantities of German goods sold in open and successful competition with the Japanese-made product. Already Germany, for the protection of its commerce, has attained a large strategical and military hold in the Orient. Already the Germans have established three large coaling stations between Hawaii and Manila. The German flag now flies over Pelew Islands, wherein their coaling port of Yap is situated; the Caroline Islands, where is located Ponapi; in the Marshall Islands, where is located Jaluit, as well as in the Samoan Islands and Admiralty Islands, and some islands north of Guam and a portion of New Guinea. The possession of the naval bases by Germany is absolutely essential to the peaceful maintenance of her vast and increasing commerce. Germany, for one, is a nation which can hold her own with Japan in trade.

SUPPOSE!

It is not probable that Germany would attempt to wrest the Philippines from the United States. But suppose that we should withdraw from the Philippines and leave the Filipinos to the tender mercies of their own government? Can any one doubt but that some foreign power would quickly step in and appropriate these islands; and if that power did undertake to sieze them, would not Japan, fearful of the encroachments of some competing power, promptly step to the front and, before any such designs could be put into execution, sieze upon the Philippines, thus completing her chain of islands, which, with Formosa, would command almost the entire Asiatic Coast?

MUST HAVE 'EM.

To tell the truth, possession of the Philippines would seem an economical necessity to Japan in the distant future, if she is to obtain that commercial growth which her administrators are planning. With the Philippines, the commercial position of Japan will be absolutely secure; without them, she will always be in competition for a large portion of Asiatic trade. With them, too, she would have a string of outposts reaching from Sakhalin on the north nearly down to Singapore on the south, and it would be nearly impossible for a foreign fleet to effectually threaten her commerce.

As far as the United States is concerned, our possession of the Philippines does not at this time involve any restriction worth speaking of to Japanese commerce.

The present trade and friendly relations between Japan and this country are materially worth far more to either than the Philippines. Though the islands have not yet proved of great value to us, still no good American would like to see a foreign nation attemtp to sieze them. Already American investments in the Philippines are reaching large proportions, and promise to become enormously valuable. To us the archipelago is of great and growing importance. Our manufactures are expanding rapidly and our industries are so organized that a constantly growing market for them must be secured in order to avoid serious disturbances of our economic conditions. Here it should be observed that in the Philippines we hold the gateway to the open door in Asia, and especially in China.

The importance of China as a market for our nation is her enormous population and her vast purchasing power. Were the market for our cotton cut off, the balance of our trade would be against us; and China is a promising market for our cotton, our steel, and our copper, those three most important products to an industrial civilization.

With the completion of the Panama Canal, the Philippines will become of far greater importance to us than at present. They will form a convenient and absolutely necessary base by which we may distribute our goods throughout the vast Orient. When the great ditch is built our oriental trade will assuredly bound to amazing proportions; and, if ever our commercial trade clashes with that of Japan, it will be in the period following the opening of the "big ditch."

Shall we sell the Philippines to Japan, or fight for them? It will come to that.

GREW MISS CARROLL'S HAIR

AND WE CAN

PROVE IT

Beautiful Hair At Small Cost.

WITHIN the last decade great and rapid strides have been made in Materia Medica. Many diseases that were considered incurable fifteen years ago are now cured in a few days, and in many cases prevented altogether. The scientists of late years have been delving for the cause, the foundation, the reason and the starting point of disease, fully realizing that the actual and true cause must be ascertained before the remedy can be located. Hair troubles, like many other diseases, have been wrongly diagnosed and altogether misunderstood. The hair itself is not the thing to be treated, for the reason that it is simply a product of the scalp, and wholly dependent upon its action. The scalp is the very soil in which the hair is produced, nurtured and grown, and it alone should receive the attention if results are to be expected. It would do no earthly good to treat the stem of a plant with a view of making it grow and become more beautiful—the soil in which the plant grows must be attended to. Therefore, the scalp in which the hair grows must receive the attention if you are to expect it to grow and become more beautiful.

Loss of hair is caused by the scalp drying up, or losing its supply of moisture or nutriment, and when baldness occurs the scalp has simply lost all of its nourishment, leaving nothing for the hair to feed upon (a plant or even a tree would die under similar conditions).

The natural and logical thing to do in either case is, feed and replenish the soil or scalp as the case may be, and your crop will grow and multiply as nature intended it should.

is the only remedy for the hair ever discovered that is identical with the natural hair foods or liquids of the scalp. It feeds and nourishes the hair and does all the work originally carried on by the natural nutrients or life-giving juices generated by the scalp itself. It penetrates the pores of the scalp quickly and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities.

One twenty-five-cent bottle is enough to convince you of its great worth as a hair growing and hair beautifying remedy—try it and see for yourself. Now on sale at every drug and toilet store in the land. Three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00.

$5.50 Oak Rocker $3.95

It is a solid oak rocker and the design is a good one. The cabinet work is a feature that you will appreciate. The seat is wood, saddle shaped. Plenty more rocker bargains.

Stoves All Reduced Without Regard to Cost

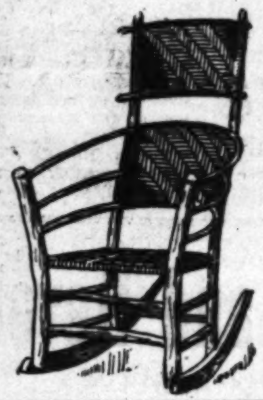
$5 Kitchen Cabinet Table $3.65

A rock-bottom price. Complete with two bins, moulding boards, etc. You can't get its equal in town at this price. All pine goods are reduced lower than ever for this sale.

$20 Folding Beds $14.50

We have this bed in both the mahogany and golden oak finish. It is one of the most modern in every way. Don't buy a folding bed without first coming here.



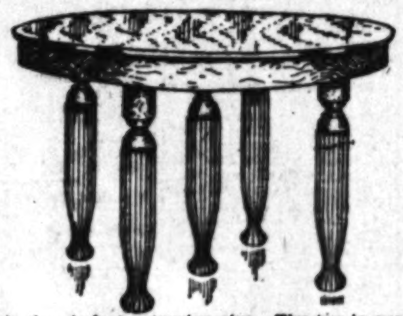
$5.50 Old Hickory Rocker $3.95

This is the genuine Old Hickory, too. We take $1.55 off in this case and you will find the rest marked on a saving basis. This rocker is one of the leaders in the line.

Big Snaps in Fine Porch Furniture

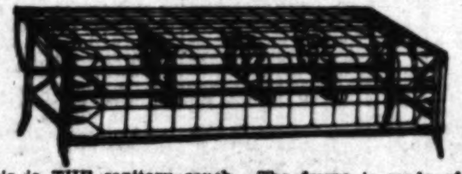
We have put prices on our entire line of furniture that will force, or rather is, forcing it out with a rush. Besides the old hickory, we have a good stock of ash and some in silver birch.

$17.50 Dining Tables $12.50



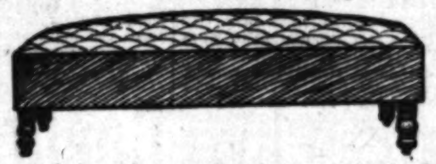
This is the six-foot extension size. The top is quarter-sawed oak and the finish is weathered. We have the square top style in solid oak, reduced to $9.60.

Aluminum Sanitary Couch $3.65



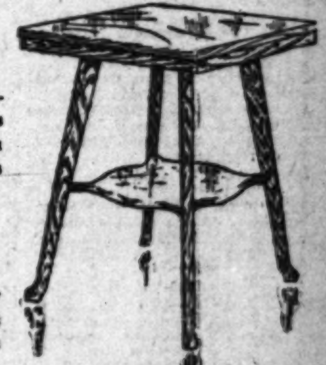
This is THE sanitary couch. The frame is made of angle iron throughout. The finish is aluminum. The springs are properly tempered, giving an even surface under any weight.

$4.50 Tufted Couch $3.25



This couch is made over 18 springs and tufted. The frame is well made and the covering is good quality ticking. It is a wonder at $3.25.

$4.50 Oak Parlor Table $2.95



Here is a parlor table that is made entirely of quarter-sawed oak, the finish is golden. The design is clean cut, as you may see from the picture above. Scores of other table bargains.

Library Tables

You are sure to find a bargain in library tables, for every one in our big stock is reduced. We have them in all woods and the range of prices is good.

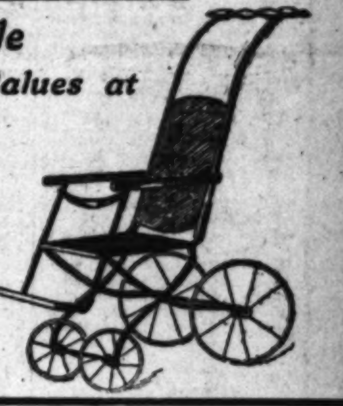
$11.50 Refrigerators Reduced to $7.95

You are lucky if you are late in buying a refrigerator. Our entire stock is reduced for this sale. This one at $7.95 is a splendid value and there are plenty more just as good.

$12.00 Iron Beds Reduced to $7.75

Iron bed prices are down to lowest notch they have ever been. This one is a fair example. The color is apple green with gilt trimming. We can give you an iron bed at most any price.

Go-Cart Sale
$2.00 and $3.00 Values at $1.65



We have several lines of go-carts which are reduced to one, two or three of a design. We want to close them all out this week, so have combined them into one lot. Some have rubber tires, others are plain steel. All are well made and good for long service. They are worth from $2.00 to $3.00, but they all go in the sale at

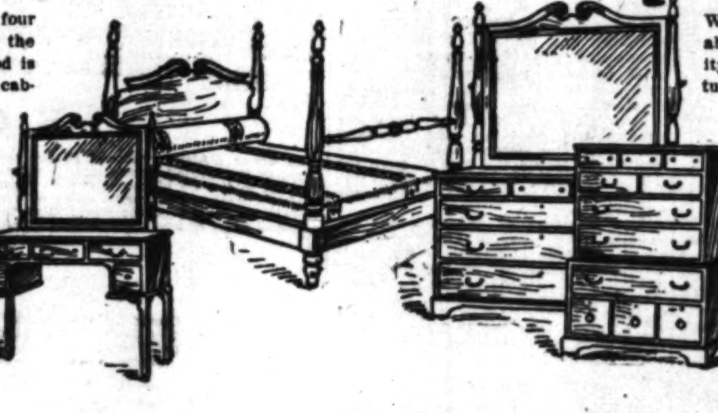
Leather Seat Cushion Rocker $7.25

Your choice of fumed or weathered finish. Seat is upholstered in Spanish leather. We show the design in the picture above. All Mission chairs and rockers are marked at bargain prices.

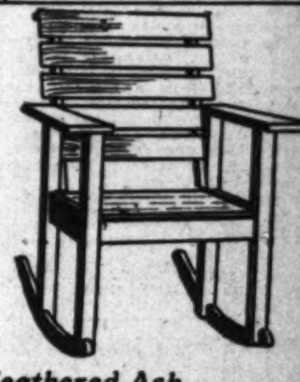
Elegant 4-Piece Solid Mahogany Bed Room Suite $425



Regular price $545. The four pieces are illustrated in the group herewith. The wood is real mahogany and the cabinet work is superb. You can't get anything better, no matter what feature you are particular about.

We submit this as a fair example of the reductions in high-grade bedroom furniture. We have a big stock and everything is reduced to a no profit basis.

We might add a word here about the general high quality of our bed room furniture. The Pacific Purchasing Co. has the first choice of all the best lines made in Grand Rapids. That means the best that can be had. We are particularly strong on Colonial reproductions in real mahogany. After looking around a bit you will discover that you can get the best here at the same prices you pay for the mediocre elsewhere.



Weathered Ash Porch Rocker $3.75

Regular price $5.00. We have the chair to match at $3.35. These pieces are made of ash and given the real weathered finish. They are ideal for porch or summer cottage use. Many other good bargains.

MINES AND MINING—Past Week's News of the Surrounding Ore Districts

IN THE EARTH.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY AND CHEMISTRY.

To Correspondents:

This department is not conducted for pay. Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public, and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and injunctions contained in the paragraphs below.

(1.) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender, and the general—not exact—locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send, also, with the specimen a clearly-written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wishes done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed.

(2.) No attention will be paid to anonymous letters or to letters signed merely with initials.

(3.) No examination of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times may decide that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4.) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interests will not be answered.

(5.) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6.) It is impossible to return specimens, as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

Address invariably, The Times.

Earthy Bitumen.

ST. GEORGE (Utah) Aug. 20.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you kindly name the specimen I send you in separate package. It is from near Kanab. I would be glad to have an analysis of the sample if within the purview of your "In the Earth" department. Yours truly,

G. F. D.

ANSWER: The specimen is massive. Of uneven fracture and black-brown in color. Streak shining. Hardness 1.50. Specific gravity 1.20. Of strong bituminous odor and when burning deposits much soot. An approximate analysis follows: Carbon 77; hydrogen 9; oxygen 10; nitrogen 2; ash 2—percentages respectively.

Yes.

MOJAVE, Aug. 21.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Is the sample andesite? It is from Hamilton Mountain.

C. B. R.

Dumortierite.

NIPTON, Aug. 20.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Does the green sample in this sack indicate turquoise formation? It is from a streak in ledge matter from Providence Mountain. Please favor me with a reply in your valued paper. Yours truly,

DR. G. T. P.

ANSWER: The sample is dumortierite. Green blue in color; of vitreous luster and 7 in the scale of hardness. Sp. gr. 3.3. Infusible before the blow pipe. Cobalt nitrate solution dropped on the specimen, followed by high blow pipe heat, gives a blue color. It is a silicate of alumina and does not "indicate' turquoise formation. The Tiffany mine of your section has yielded some good gem turquoise.

Red Iron Chalk.

RATON (N. Mex.) Aug. 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you a sample of ore from near Cimmaron, which my partner and myself hope to be cinnabar. Will you kindly examine it and let us have your advice? By so doing you will much oblige.

O'B. & T.

ANSWER: Your sample is not cinnabar. It is reddle (an impure iron peroxide.) In times past Indians used a better grade of the mineral as war paint. Some of the squaws among the Navajos still use it in their toilet accessories.

The specimen soils the fingers and paper. It adheres strongly to the tongue. Gives off a clay odor when breathed upon. It falls to powder in water but will not make a paste. With heat it decrepitates and turns a darker red in color. The material would answer for a low grade red pigment.

Cyanosite.

BISBEE (Ariz.) Aug. 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am told that one test in chemistry is to taste the substance in analysis. I do not, however, advise you to put your tongue on the sample. It is from this section and I believe it must be alum ore. I tasted it and will never forget it. It took me over a day to get rid of the taste. What is it? Yours truly,

J. M. L.

ANSWER: The sample is somewhat a matter of taste after all, and it is not, strictly speaking, alum ore. It is a copper sulphate in pulverulent form and blue green in color. Of nauseous and metallic taste. Before the blow pipe it yields metallic copper. The material is "soluble in three parts of cold and one-half a part of boiling water; affording a blue solution, which deposits a film of pure copper on a polished surface of iron."

Cyanosite is present in many waters issuing from mines, and is formed primarily from the decomposition of pyrite (iron disulphide) containing low percentage of copper.

"Throughout all the mines (of the Vale of Avoca) the juxtaposition of large quantities of pyrites with clays and soft slates, combined with their exposure to air and the percolation of water, produce various decompositions, which exhibit their effects abundantly in the old workings, under the forms of blue and green vitriol, and other sulphates. The water trickling through old excavations continually dissolves a portion of these salts, and at its exit from the mine is carefully led into inclined troughs or 'launders.' in which fragments of scrap iron are laid. At the expense of the sulphate of copper, sulphate of iron is then formed and the metallic copper is precipitated, and from time to time collected."

This method of saving copper values is utilized at many of the copper mines of our country. Notably so at Butte, Mont., and elsewhere.

Low-grade Molybdenite.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 18.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In this letter please find a small sample of what I take to be flakes of graphite. From the Elizabeth Lake country. Is it graphite? Yours respectfully,

D. J. F.

Hybernite.

NOGALES (Sonora, Mex.) Aug. 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I recently offered for sale a mineral from this section which is wolframite. My New York (U. S. A.) broker informs me that "it is impossible to make a profitable sale of the material owing to the deleterious contents in the ore." Will you kindly inform me through your "In the Earth" what you think of the material. It occurs in stringers and pockets and I have traced it for over half a mile (occasionally) on the surface. Yours truly,

G. B.

ANSWER: Your sample is not wolframite (tungstate of iron.) It is a remarkably low grade hubernite (tungstate of manganese,) in fact, the sample is a mixture of wad (bog manganese) with tungstic acid 12 per cent. present. There is both arsenic and phosphorus (as phosphate) mixed with the sample. You might find a better grade of the material by prospecting and at depth. Your sample, to say the least, is most discouraging.

Pumice.

SISSON (Cal.) Aug. 21.—[To the Editor of The Times:] By this mail I am forwarding you some rock material that may be pumice stone. It is from Mount Shasta district. Will you please describe it and give me the purposes for which it is used—provided it is pumice stone. Thanking you in advance. Respectfully yours,

B. C. T.

ANSWER: The sample is pumice and deposits of it are located near Mount Shasta. It is gray yellow in color; floats on water; it is brittle; of uneven and subconchoidal fracture; 5 in hardness and while it floats in water its specific gravity is 2.35.

"Pumice is a porous feldspathic scoria, thrown out by volcanoes during the periodical explosions which take place simultaneously with their more quiet action, when ashes, cinders, masses of rock, and melted lava are hurled into the air by the action of pent-up steam and gases. Pumice, one of the ejected substances in question, becoming cooled in its passage through the air, retains the porous spongy structure it originally possessed, owing to the presence of the vapors or gases with which it was permeated at the time it was shot forth in a melted state."

Pumice is used as an abrasive; as a building stone; in the preparation of parchment (pounce;) for polishing metal, glass, minerals, ivory, etc. It should find a market as a mixture with plaster—or as a filled in walls in the buildings of San Francisco and elsewhere. The approximate analysis of your specimen follows: Silica 78; iron peroxide 2; alumina 18; water 2—percentages as stated.

FLITTING OF FAKERS.

The man who advertises that he wants to swap for a city lot a placer mine from which he is washing $40,000 a day, either belongs in an insane asylum or thinks everyone else does. Dirt that pays "$100 a yard" is pretty fair digging for this part of the country. Even assuming that a point was dropped accidentally and that he values the dirt at only $1 a yard, he is taking out $400 a day, and he would have it believed that he is getting rich too fast and wants to give somebody else a chance. There ought to be a stampede to get in on such a good thing, unless the people of Los Angeles have had enough of mining fakes and wild-cat schemes to satisfy their get-rich-quick ambitions for a while.

The wildcatters are less in evidence than they were a few months ago, and the reputation of Los Angeles as a mining center is correspondingly improved. Some of the fakers appear to have made clean-ups and flitted to parts unknown. The Greenwater fizzle impaired the public appetite for indigestible "securities" and capitalized hot air, and the well-grounded fear of prosecution under the State law relating to misrepresentation of mining schemes, aroused by the visit to Los Angeles of the State Mineralogist, after sending a few fakers to prison from San Francisco, caused the sudden cessation of reckless advertising and the prudent disappearance of some of the worst of the bunco mining-stock promoters.

The market for sagebrush and cobblestones in Searchlight shows signs of dullness since the operations of the H. H. McCord Company in unloading worthless lots as "choice business property" on poor women were shown up, and the "U. L. Dike" townsite fake seems to have faded away entirely.

Unfortunately, the statute against wild-cat mining does not cover wild-cat townsiting, but there is the general criminal statute concerning the obtaining of money under false pretences which might be invoked against real estate bunco games with advantage to the public.

There will always be ignorant, easily-deluded people, anxious to invest money, and there never will be any lack of predatory schemers ready to take money away from them, but the bunco mining game appears to have been about worked out in Los Angeles, and that is a good thing for the legitimate mining operators of the Southwest.

The Chamber of Mines and a responsible, properly-conducted mining-stock exchange should be powerful factors in maintaining mining on a business basis and hunting the wildcats out of Los Angeles.

ORD MOUNTAIN.

High-grade Gold Ore Said to Have Been Found in New District.

The Ord district, located about twelve miles south of Daggett, is now having some real development work done, with encouraging results. A townsite has been laid out; the sixty miners located there have petitioned for a postoffice, which will be in operation within ninety days, and an automobile will ply upon the route between the camp and Daggett. Aside from some prospecting, no real work was started in this district until February last, when the Ord Mountain Gold Company, owned by the Hasson Brothers of this city and B. E. Logan, formerly with the Yellow Aster, began to sink their main shaft.

Mr. Logan states that outcroppings of ore, bearing value, show up in the immediate vicinity of the main shaft about thirty-five feet above the surface, and that the formation can be followed for over a mile. The main shaft is down 256 feet and runs through three distinct veins of ore at the two levels where cross-cutting has been done. At the first level ore running from $12 to $373 was obtained. At the second level, which is down 250 feet, the ledge is six feet wide and, according to an assay made by Julius Koebig, values were obtained of $461 and $1572.

Over 400 tons of the best ore from the different levels have been taken out, and within sixty days it is expected to have a forty-stamp mill in operation, together with a complete cyanide plant.

CRACKERJACK DISTRICT.

Hoisting and Milling Machinery Being Placed on Several of the Properties.

The Crackerjack mining district in San Bernardino county has shown unflagging activity throughout the summer. Improvements are under way at the Crackerjack Bonanza mine, which has reported several strikes during the last few months and is the first ore shipper of the district. A depth of forty-five feet has been attained in the two-compartment shaft, and a road is now being constructed for the purpose of installing the big hoist, which has been received at the mine.

Arrangements are being made for the erection of a forty-ton mill.

On the Crackerjack Gold Mining Company's property two shifts of miners are making rapid progress in the east cross-cut, in which some good showings in copper and silver ore have been obtained.

ARIZONA.

WOMAN SUES FOR RICH MINE.

BISBEE WANTS NEXT YEAR'S MINING CONGRESS.

Shut-down of Ray and Christmas Work Variously Accounted for. Promising Coal Prospects Near Winkelman—Notes from Copper Districts.

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Sept. 9.—It appears as though another line of lawsuits is to begin over the Vekol mine. Jade Walker, a Tucson woman, now claims to have been the daughter of John D. Walker, her mother a Cherokee Indian. She asserts that her father, who died thirteen years ago in San Francisco, left half his estate to her and she has expressed her belief that an uncle destroyed the will and that the surviving brother illegally seized the mine. The major part of the estate went to William Walker, who still lives in Southern California and under whose control the property has gradually lessened in value. The woman has engaged Attorney William Cooper to represent her and will file suit, her principal object being a desire to profit in the sale of the property lately made by the Daggs brothers of Phoenix, who claim title through a deed given them by the surviving Walker, with some complication of foreclosure of a mortgage upon the mine given by the widow of Lucian Walker. It is understood that the Daggs brothers claim to have purchased the equity of Jade Walker, a number of years ago, for $100. Many wild stories have been told about the mine, it being told that even millions have been taken from it. In reality, it is probable that a few hundred thousands would be much nearer the mark. In it have been found a number of bodies of silver ore, which have been worked with Indian labor in the crudest possible fashion, most of the ore having been taken out in rawhide bags on the backs of Indians, who climbed from the depths on "chicken ladders." At depth considerable copper ore has been found, and it is believed by experts that by following small stringers that radiate from the old workings, copper bodies of large value may be uncovered.

BISBEE'S AMBITION.

Cochise county, secure in her possession of the greatest mineral-producing camp in the United States, will ask at Joplin, Mo., in November, that the next session of the National Mining Congress be held in Bisbee. It is believed that here can be made an exposition of successful mining on a larger scale than could anywhere else be afforded, and that the delegates would be given an opportunity to investigate methods of mining which have been logically worked out under unique conditions. The Bisbee field has always been of intense interest to geologists.

About four miles northwest of Bisbee, the opening up of an old-time silver field has resulted in the finding of several fine bodies of copper on the property of the North Bisbee Development Company. One ore strike on a body something over two feet wide, gives values of 14 per cent. copper; at another place a cross-cut is in solid ore that runs all the way from 4 to 12 per cent. copper. This property was worked twenty-five years ago, and from it a number of shipments of valuable silver ore were made.

CONFLICTING STORIES.

Three or four stories have been told concerning the late suspension of work on a part of the Ray Mining Company's holdings at Ray, Pinal county. The management states that only about ninety men were laid off, because of delay in the completion of the concentrating plant at Kelvin, and that forty men were put back at work within a few days. Private reports were to the effect that 300 out of the 500 men employed had been dropped, primarily with the intention of settling a union-labor movement that was in process of incubation. Still a third report is that activity in the camp was suspended in order to bring the Southern Pacific to time and to compel lower freight rates than those which were put into effect when the Phoenix and Eastern Railroad changed hands. The railroad rates will be materially reduced early this month and it is probable that even a greater degree of activity will be noted in the Pinal county camp thereafter. This matter of railroad rates is said to be wholly responsible for the shut-down at Christmas, in the same locality, though there are reports that the smelting plant is to be removed forthwith to the Gila River on the Phoenix and Eastern, where much more economical reduction of ores can be secured. The Christmas narrow-gauge railroad is now receiving its rolling stock

PLACER GOLD.

A most unexpected strike was made on the ground of the Ray Company last Tuesday. A Mexican miner, who had been laid off, was doing a little prospecting and found ground where, in decomposed porphyry, placer gold was present that panned from 25 cents to $1 a pan. The deposit is believed to extend over a tract of about six hundred feet wide by one thousand feet long. The Mexican and an American friend leased the ground from the company before announcing its value and consider themselves prospective millionaires.

E. S. Stafford of Florence has organized a company in Los Angeles to develop mining claims in which he is interested, northeast of Florence, and has also sold a group of claims in the Kelvin district to California investors. A large amount of Los Angeles capital is being invested in Pinal county mines in a most judicious manner and with excellent prospects of large returns.

COAL PROSPECTS.

A company of Phoenix residents has located a number of coal claims, about fifteen miles east of Winkelman, near the line of the Phoenix and Eastern road. Fifteen men have been sent out to sink prospect shafts, ten feet deep, and to explore the ground, which comprises fifty quarter sections. Several of these ten-foot shafts have developed coal in large quantity and of fair quality, though most of it is broken up on the surface. The deepest development in the locality has been done by the Saddle Mountain Copper Company, which has 640 acres of land, on which a shaft has been sunk to a depth of 150 feet, developing coal which is being used at the mine for fuel. The coal runs high in ash and is not suitable for coking, though it is hoped that a lower stratum may yield a better quality.

Twenty miles east of Benson, William Fourr has found a ledge of lead carbonates, which crops out for nearly a mile. The ore is extremely rich and the discoverer believes that he has found a bonanza. Samples that have been brought to Benson show fleckings of copper and it is believed that the ore will run into copper when depth has been attained.

COPPER NOTES.

The product of the Old Dominion Company for August was about 3,500,000 pounds of copper, the best monthly record ever made by the mine, though one furnace had to be closed down for repairs for a few days before the end of the month. Lack of railroad transportation for a solid week had no effect upon the smelters, which were well supplied with fuel and with coke, as well as with all the necessary fluxing ores.

The Gem shaft of the Globe Consolidated is now 920 feet deep, still in diorite. The Globe-Boston shaft of the same company has encountered ore at a depth of 789 feet. Sinking has been abandoned until a station can be cut and pumps installed at the 782-foot level.

The molders in the Arizona Copper Company foundry at Clifton have struck for an advance of wages to $4.75 a day.

Most of the material for the new Shannon furnace below Clifton has arrived and the stack is to be in operation early in September. The company has been handling about six hundred tons of ore a day, a record which is to be much increased.

Superintendent Hoar has completed the draining of the Superior mine and is raising his working force from 60 to 100 miners.

SALES AND LEASES.

The Copper Butte mine on the north bank of the Gila, sixty miles east of Florence, has been leased to a company which announces its intention to install a 300-ton concentrating plant.

W. H. Palmer of Phoenix and J. M. Jaquette have sold the Molly group of mines, ten miles north of Wendendale, for $75,000, to a company mostly composed of Bisbee mining men, represented by J. T. Brickwood of Nogales. Ten per cent. of the purchase price has been paid down and the balance is to run for eighteen months. The property consists of eleven claims, with ores carrying both copper and gold.

The Thumb Butte Mining Company, which has property eighteen miles north of Dome Station, Yuma county, is preparing to begin ore shipments this fall, there being 30,000 tons of ore on the dump to sort over. A sale of stock in the property is understood to have been the result of a visit a few days ago to Los Angeles of J. Moffett, A. B. Ming and Perry O. Spittler, who owned a considerable part of the property.

J. D. Thompson has resigned as manager of the Fortuna Gold and Copper Company, which has property in Cave Creek district, north of Phoenix. N. Sturdy has been appointed by the directors to fill out the unexpired term.

SOUTHWESTERN FIELD.

Evidences of Progress in Many Arizona Camps.

YUMA, Ariz., Sept. 7.—The properties of the Spar Mining Company, three and one-half miles northeast of Mayer, Yavapai county, have been taken over by Tryon & Brain, of Los Angeles, at $100,000. They have ten locations and a shaft down 200 feet.

W. F. Timmons, superintendent of the Big Horn company, has had the assessment work done on the company's twenty-two claims and sunk one shaft 140 feet on an incline, exposing a vein of free-milling gold ore varying from 4 to 6 feet in width. He also struck water at ten feet. He is satisfied there is enough ore in sight to justify the establishment of a mill.

J. M. Molina, of Yuma, has placed ten men at work on the old Torres mine in Salome district and is taking out high grade copper-gold ore. A new gasoline hoist has been planted on the property. The Hercules company has received a car of fuel oil and will resume development this week after a rest of two months. Development has been started on the property of the Harcuvar Copper company, owned by Philadelphia people. The Victor & Bell Crown has received from the contractor a shaft which is down 250 feet. E. A. Haggott is outlining new development work for the Ironwood and Arizona, the main shaft of which now is down 300 feet, and sinking continues along the big dyke with good ore showings. Hoisting machinery has been ordered for the Greenstone, which is showing better daily. At the bottom of a 60 foot shaft they are crosscutting in ledge matter and the drifts of 20 feet each are in fine ore, with several tons of copper glance on the dump.

Near Octave the Southwestern Development people are in a considerable vein of tellurium. Near Congress Junction the Storm Cloud, owned by H. J. Beemer, shows a large body of high grade ore and a vein of native coper. Sixty days hence the Mot. Tritle company will have a new mill on the Dunkirk group fifteen miles from Prescott.

Twelve miles south of Prescott the Independence mine, with a mill and cyanide plant of seven tons daily capacity, has paid for installing and operating mill and plant and paid a profit to its owners, who are preparing to enlarge the plant. T. H. Oxnam's resignation as general manager for the Humboldt smelter became effective September 1 and E. H. Hamilton, the company's metallurgist, is in charge pending the permanent filling of the vacancy.

The Little Jesse has been making good. In the crosscut from the 250-foot level an eighteen-inch paystreak of gold ore uncovered assays $112. The vein is parallel to the ledge already exploited to a depth of 700 feet, and lying 50 feet from it is the dyke. Work has progressed rapidly at the Verde Grande shaft, where new machinery is being installed. It is capable of driving a shaft below the 1000-foot level, and the plan is to put three shifts on the sinking at once. Already they are in sulphides.

NEVADA.

INCREASED PRODUCTION.

GOLDFIELD'S HIGH-GRADE OUTPUT RISING.

Lease Workings Not Affected by Consolidated's Trouble With Miners—Florence Controversy to Be Settled Out of Court—New Ore Bodies.

GOLDFIELD, (Nev.) Sept. 8.—In the months of June, July and August the high-grade ore production of the mines and leases of Goldfield district was 43,604 tons. This is a rate of 14,535 tons per month, or 3,115 tons per week. The total tonnage of the year is 64,151, an average of 8,019 tons per month. June's production, 11,193 tons, is 39 per cent. above the year's monthly average; July's record of 14,687 tons is 83 per cent. above and the production of August, 17,724 tons, is 121 per cent. above.

Goldfield's production is rapidly increasing. Some leases have expired, but others have taken their places, many mines and leases are just on the seeming verge of tapping the high-grade for which they have spent months in sinking and driving, and numerous properties are now about ready to mine for the market, having devoted past energies to development work.

Following a week of arbitration and joint sessions between the Goldfield Consolidated Mines officials and the representatives of the miners who object to the system of change rooms, installed for the prevention of high-grading, the Consolidated company has issued a statement, reviewing the labor troubles that have been a bane to the camp for a year past.

Only the company workings on the Mohawk and Combination are affected by the miners' attitude, the several leases on these properties and the company workings on all other Consolidated possessions continuing activity without interruption.

The Conklin, or Syndicate, lease remains the sensation on the Florence. The north ledge is yielding values of from $192 per ton to $20 per pound. Pending troubles of the Little Florence and Mohawk Florence leases, resulting from the contention of the Florence company that these leases have been shipping ore from stopes outside their lines, will probably be adjusted out of court, all parties having reached terms of agreement which, if ratified by the leases' home offices, at Chicago, will quash injunction proceedings, postponed until September 7.

The Florence Leasing and Mining Company's lease on the Florence, a shipper, has passed from E. R. Argersinger to M. J. Monnette.

On the Wedge fraction of the Jumbo Extension the Mohawk Jumbo lease is shipping $110 ore at the rate of $70,000 per week and at an early date in September will double its output.

Heavy shipments on company account will shortly be the rule at the Combination Fraction, all of whose leases have expired and none of which has been granted a renewal.

The Daisy mine, whose main shaft is down 230 feet, with drifts running on the 210-foot level, having stripped the rich ledge for a distance of 250 feet, has taken over the Truett and Peer leases and is prosecuting developments in both. There is plenty of shipping ore on the 200-foot level of the Daisy Mining and Leasing Company's lease.

A drift on the ledge that was tapped by the west crosscut in the Todd lease on the Simmerone, at a depth of 265 feet, is following ore that gives grab samples around $55 per ton. This discovery is on the trend of the ledge which yielded fabulous shipments in 1905.

Empire, well to the east of the more famous Goldfield, comes forward this week with a strike of a large body of sulphide ore, tapped by a 40-foot upraise from the 153-foot level. The revelation was made on the Alabama lease. Five assays have been taken, the minimum showing $14.40 and the maximum $162 per ton.

Copper, gold and silver are found by surface work on the Frances near the Dixie. A product ages $11.20 per ton has shaft at a depth of 530 feet.

Average assays show 300-foot depth in the Mad

R. G. Dun's Report on the Coeur d'Alenes

The Coeur d'Alene produces 78 per cent.. of all the ore values in Idaho, including the gold output of the State, and it produces one-half of all the lead ores of the United States, and is acknowledged to be the greatest mining district in the known world. This district has made more millionaires than any other district in the world and is still in its infancy. It has many failures because so many of the prospecting mining companies have not the financial resources their respective discoveries. But as a mineral district there are open to investors the greatest opportunities ever offered to capitalists in any part of America. italists from all over the world have their eyes on the mines of this district and the coming season will be stimulated by an influx of outside capital in portions than at any time in the history of the district.

Production for 1906 for Coeur d'Alene, $21,838,000.

Have made more money for our clients from mining investments in Coeur d'Alene stocks than any other mining promoters in Los Angeles.

We all know that the public generally is thoroughly imbued with the idea that the money invested in mines in all mining sections, is far in excess of that which is returned therefrom. We will grant that this is the condition in many and probably the majority of the mining districts, and yet, in the face of this admission I fearlessly make the statement that the dividends or net profits paid in one year from our producing and operating properties—and that too from a territory so limited that a radius 10 miles long, with Wallace as its center, would circumscribe the field—would yield an amount far in excess of all expenditures for actual development work put into every mining enterprise in this entire mining district since its its inception, covering a period of 22 years or more.

HIGH ASSAY ORE RECEIVED FROM RECENT STRIKE IN THE IDAHO LEAD-SILVER PROPERTY.

The strike was made in the property of the Idaho Lead Silver Mining Co., eight miles northeast of Murray, Idaho, and adjoining the Bear Top, which is a steady shipper. The Bear Top road, over which ore is being hauled regularly, runs within a half mile of the Idaho Lead Silver tunnel. The ore was encountered in the upper tunnel. How large the ore body is remains to be determined, but there is ten feet exposed now. The ore is exceptionally high grade and carries value in silver, lead and gold. The assay return on Sample No. ounces gold, 21.6 ounces per cent. lead, making a of $51.72 per ton. Sample .06 ounces gold, 73.2 ounces 79.3 per cent. lead, making tion of $140.94 per ton. ore have been sent to we should be pleased to

The crosscut tunnel in the Snowstorm Extension Company is in 580 feet and is nearing the vein, stringers four feet in width being encountered, containing values in copper, silver and gold. The holdings of the company adjoin the Snowstorm on the east and the ore is identical in character with the Snowstorm.

WORKERS' PAGE—Metropolis of Tidewater Virginia Typifies the New South.

Town That Huntington Built.

NEWPORT NEWS THE MOST INTERESTING COMMUNITY IN THE SOUTH—LARGEST OF SHIPYARDS.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

COMBINATION of circumstances has during the past few months operated to direct public attention to the most interesting city of the "South"—the industrial community of Newport News, Va. One of the factors is the proposed enlargement of the $15,000,000 shipyard (the [illegible] in the world) now owned by H. E. Huntington of Los Angeles. Another is the awarding to this same shipyard by the United States government of a contract for the 20,000-ton battleship Delaware, the most formidable fighting craft ever ordered by any nation.

Another circumstance that is courting publicity for Newport News is the fact that the Jamestown Exposition is located directly opposite on Hampton Roads—a short ride by ferry. Fourthly this metropolis of tide-water Virginia has been, since the second American occupation of Cuba, the terminus for the line of transports plying between this country and the Pearl of the Antilles, carrying back and forth officers and men and supplies for the troops on the island, etc.

To persons who take even a passing interest in the doings of the house of Huntington, Newport News must have significance, for this hustling community virtually owes its existence to the genius of the late Collis P. Huntington. Such is its wide-awake enterprise that it might be likened to a northern or a western city set down in the South just as Los Angeles, by reason of its [illegible] and cosmopolitan features, is often referred to by easterners as an eastern city set down in the West. The visitor to Newport News finds comparatively little evidence of the slowness and easy-going progress that has been and is today the [illegible] of a considerable portion of the South that is rich in natural re-

THE SITE HISTORICAL.

The site of the present-day city of Newport News has had a place in history from the very earliest days of the settlement of English-speaking people in America for it was here that [illegible] from the settlement at Jamestown sighted Lord Delaware's ships when he first came to Virginia. There are several stories as to how the place derived its odd name. According to one of these it was first known as Port Nuce, which title was changed to New Port Nuce in order to distinguish it from an older place of the same name in Wales. Another version of its christening has it that this point, where the James River flows into Hampton Roads, was named in honor of Capt. Newport who brought the news of succor and relief to the perishing colony at Jamestown Island.

The modern city of Newport News is, however, only a dozen years old. It owes its existence directly, and one may say exclusively, to Collis P. Huntington. It is doubtful if there is in the United States or perhaps in the world a community of equal size that bears so unmistakably the impress of the ambitions and methods of one man. Mr. Huntington chose Newport News as the scene of a number of his industrial enterprises for various reasons. Conspicuous among the considerations was the fact that it afforded the finest natural harbor in the South, but not the least of the advantages offered was the plentiful supply of cheap negro labor and a climate so mild that outdoor work may be carried on uninterruptedly throughout the entire year.

The practical foresight of the pioneer railroad builder was well illustrated by his selection of Newport News as the site of "his town." Mr. Huntington visited Newport News for the first time in the year 1837, when he was but 16 years of age, and he declared that even then the advantages of the place as a site for a commercial city impressed him strongly. Moreover they were so indelibly fixed in his mind that when, years after, his extensive rail transportation interests and his steamship lines on the Pacific brought to his attention the question of the advisability of building his own shipyard he unhesitatingly picked upon Newport News as the ideal site for the workshop that was to become his especial hobby.

TOWN'S RAPID GROWTH.

The shipyard was established in 1888 and during the earlier years of its existence most of the workmen made their homes in the neighboring city of Hampton or other adjacent communities. However, once the shipyard was established the Huntington interests turned their attention to making it a habitable community for the thousands of employés and thus it came about that Newport News expanded in a comparatively few years from a hamlet to a city of about [illegible] thousand inhabitants.

Mr. Huntington conceived his ambition to ride on his own railroad from the Atlantic to the Pacific. He selected Newport News as the terminus of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, the eastern link in his transcontinental transportation chain, and it is from this circumstance, next to the location of the shipyard, that Newport News has derived its greatest prosperity. The railroad is the main artery of traffic from the rich coal lands of Virginia and West Virginia and it is not unusual for the record of a single month to show that more than a quarter of a million tons of coal have been brought by rail to Newport News and there transferred direct to ocean-going vessels for movement to all parts of the world.

The fact that it is the natural outlet for some of the best steam coal in the world and is also the most centrally located port on the Atlantic coast of the United States, serves to make Newport News a convenient port of call for ships in the ocean carrying trade, to supply coal quickly and cheaply, and great numbers of ships put into the harbor simply to replenish their fuel supply. However, Newport News has extensive shipping aside from such flying visits. Freight and passenger vessels of several steamship lines regularly tie up at the magnificent docks built by the Huntington millions, and added to these vessels are the regular sailings of the U.S. army transports, which continue to ply to Havana while American troops are within the turbulent island. A glance at the statistical tables issued [illegible] will show how large a [illegible] of American wheat and flour [illegible] via Newport News; but [illegible] in this sphere is as [illegible] port! During one-half [illegible] the records showed that [illegible] was dumped on the docks [illegible] Huntington made than [illegible] shipping point of like size.

A PLACE TO LIVE.

[illegible] in which to live in comfort Newport News is head and shoulders above the average southern city, [illegible] a tribute to western [illegible] for this bustling [illegible] in the Old Dominion was made on the pattern of the up-to-date western city. It boasts well-paved streets, excellent street railways, besides an interurban system connecting it with surrounding towns; a good sewer system and a splendid fire department. The public schools are of a high standard, and Uncle Sam has recently presented the community with a $250,000 building for use as a post-office and customhouse. The hotels are vastly better than those to be found in many of the smaller cities of the country, and the city has a Chamber of Commerce that goes gunning for new industries with real vim and vigor.

The Huntington shipyard, which gives employment to between 7500 and 8000 men, is, of course, the main support of the community, but the Chesapeake and Ohio system, the terminal yards of which contain sixty-five miles of track, adds a goodly quota of railroad employés, while the nine enormous freight piers and the grain elevators with a capacity of 2,000,000 bushels, afford a field for a small army of freight handlers. The country just outside of Newport News is one of the finest trucking districts in the world, and the city is the shipping point for great quantities of small vegetables and fruit, which are sent to the markets of New York, Philadelphia and other cities.

A short distance from Newport News is located the Hampton Normal and Agricultural Institute, an institution in which the late Collis P Huntington always took the liveliest interest. Here are gathered more than one thousand colored boys and girls and two hundred Indian boys and girls, who are receiving an education of the hand and head that is designed to fit them to earn their own living in any surroundings. One of the handsomest of the buildings at the institute is the Huntington Memorial Library, a memorial to C. P. Huntington.

WALDON FAWCETT.

UNCROWDED PROFESSION.

WORKERS IN OVERALLS.

FREQUENTLY BETTER PAID THAN IN PROFESSIONS.

Firemen on the Railroad Get a Hundred and Fifty a Month, but Office Workers Have Got to Prove Their Worth Before They Can See so Much Money.

Why doesn't the able-bodied young man of mechanical bent turn more often than he does to the fireman's deck of the locomotive? This is a question which at all times appeals to the superintendents of motive power of the great railroads of the country, and in a few weeks, when the movement of the grain crops of the country begins to test the capacity of the roads and when locomotive engineers are in a sharply increased demand, the question becomes serious to many lines.

Time was under the old rules of the railroads when the work of firing an engine for six or seven years of an apprenticeship made the lot of the fireman hard, dirty, and exacting. Today, under the schooling system, that has been adopted almost universally on the big systems, firing still is hard work, but the term of apprenticeship is cut from two to three years, the "hostler's" work is eliminated for the fireman, the shoveling of coal, while increased in tonnage, is made easier by the modern chute shape of the coal tender, and when the fireman, after his four years' experience, reaches an income possibility of $125 to $200 a month as engineer, the roads have an income argument behind their question which is inescapable.

BETTER PAY THAN OFFICE MEN.

"Look at the quality of the office man who can be got for $150 a month," said the superintendent of one of the great systems entering Chicago. "Before this company gives a man a desk and chair at $150 a month in the general offices he's got to show them. There are several hundred cabs to several hundred locomotives in which a $150 engineer may have a seat with the least questioning when his average fitness has been demonstrated."

Anywhere in any general office of a great railroad one may see men physically and mentally equipped for locomotive engineers of the best grade who, with powerful backs and shoulders, are stooping over desks year after year, at salaries of $75 to $85 a month, presumably satisfied to grow old at routine work. The railroad managements see in these fellows the make-up of picked men in the locomotive cab had they only turned to the operative department of the road.

In the huge dimensions of the modern locomotive the average man who might be in a mood to consider firing discovers a presumably appalling task at the scoop which feeds the yawning firebox. He overlooks the point, however, that in the formation of the modern locomotive tender, the shoveling of coal is simpler and easier than ever it was before, ton for ton; that in the operation of trains the least considered economy is that which would give a fireman more than he can do; that where the firing of a locomotive by one man would threaten the train schedule because of insufficient steam, two firemen for the work is the simplest proposition in economy.

FIREMAN'S JOB ONCE WAS HARD.

Talk with the engineer who has had his train for fifteen or twenty years, graduating to it under the old apprenticeship, and he will tell you how uninviting was the work when he undertook it. He had to begin as a hostler in the roundhouse cleaning engines. They had to be cleaned in those days, too, for in those days every engineer had his own engine and in the eyes of some engineers these pet machines could not be clean enough. Through switchyard firing, through the dirty, greasy roundhouse work, and finally to some engine on an indifferent run the fireman worked up through six or seven years of apprenticeship, learning more or less in haphazard way from his engineer and long after the engineer had gone home toiling in the roundhouse to have the engine in fit condition the next day.

These old engineers will tell you that they had to scoop far less coal than is scooped now for a division run; they are a little disposed to criticise the modern fireman who takes a text-book course along with the knowledge that comes of hard knocks and experience; they are disposed to sympathize with the fireman today over the fireman of yesterday. Yet the examination tests of the fireman in connection with text-book exactions is becoming more and more fixed with the operative department of the great railroads.

SCIENCE VS. NATURE.

ARTIFICIAL RUBY MAKING.

RECONSTRUCTED STONES PUZZLE THE EXPERTS.

They Have Been on the London Market for Ten Years and Have Proved so Deceptive That Dealers Had to Refuse to Handle Them to Protect Their Customers.

Considerable interest is manifested among the jewelry trade in the so-called reconstructed stones. Rubies, sapphires and emeralds have been subjected to this process, the rubies being the most perfect reproduction up to date. There is most argument as to whether the stones are really what is claimed—a pure ruby without any foreign matter whatsoever. Be that as it may, the reconstructed stones are going to puzzle even the best of the jewelry profession to detect from the real thing. They possess the same specific gravity and hardness as the genuine article, and their fire is quite equal to the usual run of genuine stones. It is safe to say that the dealer who is not an expert will never be able to detect these stones.

Professor Friedel of the French Institute, in an address to the Association of Jewelers and Diamond Merchants at Paris, on artificial rubies, said he had found the chemical composition, density, fusibility, crystalline form, and refractive power of the artificial specimens handed to him for examination to correspond in every respect with the qualities of the natural ruby. Both kinds contain alike minute air-bubbles. But while the cavities in the genuine rubies are almost invariably polymetric, with surfaces parallel to the planes of cleavage, those in the artificial specimens examined by him had curved surfaces, frequently of a pear-like form. Moreover, all these pear-shaped bubbles in any given position of the artificial ruby had their elongated axes running in the same direction. From this Professor Friedel infers that the material out of which artificial rubies are made was originally semi-fluid, and the bubbles of gas striving to escape their prison cavities cause this pear-like form.

In consequence of this technical report, the association decided that artificial rubies could not be regarded as precious stones, and any one selling them as such would be guilty of fraud.

HOW RUBIES ARE MADE.

Reconstructed rubies are made from dust and small chips in the following manner: Tiny genuine rubies and ruby cuttings—of the same shade of color—are selected, and are reduced to a fine powder in an agate mortar. A small quantity of the powder is placed on a steel disc, which is rapidly revolved by suitable machinery; then small flames of oxygen and acetylene gases are directed on the powder. Great care is needed in the management of these gases, otherwise they will explode. The heat is intense, and the ruby powder melts. As it fuses a further small quantity is added, and the process is continued until a sufficient quantity for a small cone—perhaps three-quarters of an inch in height—is obtained, when it is put into hot sand and allowed to cool slowly. The ruby is, in fact, being annealed, and the process occupies at least three days.

The longer the time the more tenacious is the stone, and a week's annealing would no doubt be better than the three days. The result is a small, hard, ruby-colored cone, from which the stone for setting can be cut. It corresponds to the natural stone in every respect, with the one exception already noted. It is the same specific gravity, the same hardness—diamond dust being necessary for cutting it—and, lastly, it is dichroic; that is, when viewed through the dichroscope, it shows two colors, maroon and cochineal, as does the natural stone.

Not one person in 10,000, it is claimed, could tell the difference, and probably the most experienced connoisseur could not do so without the aid of the microscope. Viewed through that instrument, the reconstructed stone shows a wavy line instead of the straight cleavage lineof nature; but this difference seems to be the only mark of divergence when both the natural and reconstructed stones are cut. A fine natural ruby varies from $6 to $125 a carat; while these reconstructed rubies can be sold, cut, from $3 to $6 a carat.

An artificial ruby of about 11 carats seems to be the largest, so far. The largest natural rubies have risen to 30 carats, but they all have a fault in the stone which detracts from their value as gems.

So-called constructed rubies were introduced into the London market at least ten years ago, and they had then quite a run on the continental cities. It was in London they received their death-blow. The English market absolutely refused to have anything to do with them, and so customers were protected from any risk of purchasing, under a fictitious name, that which was supposed to be the genuine stone. At the same time there was a general fall in the demand for these gems on the continent, and this was taken advantage of by the English experts, who purchased the finest genuine rubies at the then reduced price, so strengthening the market.—[New York Commercial.

THE MEANING OF SUCCESS.

A Nebraska Woman Wins a Prize for the Best Definition.

From time immemorial people have been trying to define the word success—what does the word mean and what is the thing itself? Magazines and newspapers have offered prizes for the best definition and thousands of persons have tried their hand and brain in the effort to adequately describe it. A Lincoln, Neb., woman has recently won a prize of $250 for having entered what was considered the best definition in a contest held by a Boston firm. Her answer was was follows: "He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men and the love of little children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task; who has left the world better than he found it, whether by an improved poppy, a perfect poem or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty or failed to express it; who has always looked for the best in others, and given the best he had; whose life is an inspiration; whose memory a benediction."

What a comprehensive definition that is. There is no limitation put upon human effort here, says the St. Joseph Gazette. And, what is better still, to accomplish all or even a part of what is suggested in this definition were worth the supreme effort of any man. There is no laudation here of material things, save and alone as they may contribute to man's spiritual improvement or to his ability to promote the happiness of others. The accumulation of money, the control of vast interests, political power, intellectual attainment, are not even hinted at. None of these, in the mind of the Lincoln woman, constitutes success. One may have any or all of these and still be poor in spirit, lacking all that makes life worth the living. But to live well, to bubble over with joy, to enter into the pleasures and pains of others, sharing of each in that spirit of helpfulness that makes all men kin; to love true and deep and long—this is success, for it constitutes all there is in human life, after all.

In this strenuous age of endeavor we are apt to put limitation upon our effort. We are taught from our infancy up to specialize. Some of us come into manhood's estate with the impression that money spells success, influence, happiness, predominating in our minds. To get money, therefore, we sacrifice all else. Others of us seem bent on worldly pleasures alone, spending money, time, energy for these, only to discover in the end that all is vanity and vexation of spirit. And in this constant striving after money or pleasure we eventually reach the point where nothing short of excess gratifies. Like the man who drinks steadily, the habit grows on us until nothing short of intoxication satisfies. We do not hear the humming of the bees, the singing of the birds, or note the beauty of the bursting bud. Seeking only for the gratification of self, we miss the source of greatest pleasure, unselfish contribution to the joy of others. It would be well for us all if we could take the definition of success, furnished by the Lincoln woman, as our own, arriving as nearly as possible of its full meaning.

THE SPIRIT OF WORK.

Tail Made Pleasant Helps to Unfold Man's Natural Character.

It ought not to be necessary to ask a man if he likes his work. The radiance of his face should tell that. His very buoyancy and pride in his work, the spirit of unbounded enthusiasm and zest, ought to show that. He ought to be so in love with his work that he would find his greatest delight in it; and this inward joy should light up his whole being.

A test of the quality of the individual is the spirit in which he does his work. If he goes to it grudgingly, like a slave under the lash; if he feels the drudgery in it, if his enthusiasm and love for it do not lift it out of commonness and make it a delight instead of a bore, he will never make a very great place for himself in the world.

The man who feels his life-yoke galling him, who does not understand why the bread-and-butter question could not have been solved by one great creative act, instead of every man's being obliged to wrench everything he gets from nature through hard work, the man who does not see a great beneficent design and a superb necessity in the principle that every one should earn his own living—has gotten a wrong view of life, and will never get the splendid results out of his vocation which were intended for him.

The man who does not look upon his vocation as a great unfolding, enlarging, cultivating, educative, elevating process—the results of which could come in no other way—has made a very poor guess at life's riddle.

Multitudes of people do not half respect their work. They look upon it as a disagreeable necessity for providing bread and butter, clothing and shelter—as unavoidable drudgery, instead of as a great man builder, a great life university for the development of manhood and womanhood. They do not see the divinity in the spur of necessity which compels man to develop the best thing in him, to unfold his possibilities by his struggle to attain his ambition, to conquer the enemies of his prosperity and his happiness. They cannot see the curse of the unearned dollar, which takes the spur out of the motive. Work to them is sheer drudgery—an unmitigated evil. They cannot understand why the Creator did not put bread ready-made on the trees. They cannot see that the best thing in man has ever been developed by the necessity of labor. They do not see the stamina, the grit, the nobility, and the manhood in being forced to conquer what they get.

What a pitiable sight to see one of God's noblemen, made to hold up his head and to be a king, to be cheerful and happy, and to radiate power, going about whining and complaining of his work, apologizing for what he is doing, and deploring the fact that he should have to work at all.—[Success Magazine.

New Way of Asking Old Questions.

A new expression has been found for inviting a friend to quench his thirst. Prof. Metchnikoff is a great student of the white cells of the blood. He believes that they eat up the microbes which would otherwise eat up man. But at the Pasteur Institute, it is discovered that a rabbit, after taking alcoholic drink, can not be rendered immune from anthrax. His white cells, or leucocytes, had lost their appetite, and the enemy won. "Thus now," writes a doctor, "when I offer to a medical friend the various alcoholic liquors which I keep for my friends' benefit, I simply ask, 'Would you care to paralyze your leucocytes?' "—[Kansas City Journal.

Labor's Open Shop.

MINNESOTA MINERS' STRIKE WAS BROKEN BY REFUSAL OF CREDIT TO THE STRIKERS.

THE strike of the miners on the Mesaba Range in Northern Minnesota, last July, was terminated by the determined stand the storekeepers took. There was no grievance except a manufactured one concocted by the Italian agitator who had organized the miners as members of the Western Federation of Miners. The people had been watching every move, and in silence they had made up their minds. The morning after the strike began, this sentiment thundered throughout every city and hamlet in Northern Minnesota: "There is no room in this State for the Western Federation of Miners." The press of Duluth sounded the alarm and it was echoed in every trade and profession, in every class and calling. The 200,000 people of the district were armed as one man against Petriella and his organization.

This attack, from a quarter about which he had not even thought, confounded Petriella. He replied by a show of violence. The more unruly of his followers were paraded in the streets of the range towns, behind the red flag. This flaunting of the symbol of anarchy added to the wrath of the people, and there was a demand which could not be withstood that armed deputies be hurried to the range to preserve order and afford ample protection to all who wished to work. The mine owners, who had already declared against any dealings with Petriella and the federation, said they could work the mines if protection was afforded.

To this demand Sheriff Bates of St. Louis county and Sheriff Hoolihan of Itasca replied by sending about 2000 armed men into the affected districts. They overawed the turbulent strikers, and soon the best of the men who went out were returning to work.

Then came the introduction of a new and totally unexpected element in the situation. With ample credit at the stores, with plenty of food and no work, the great mass of the striking miners was content to remain idle and wait upon events. The men did not realize that public opinion was strongly against the unfair attitude of their labor leader, and that public opinion not only is extremely potent, but acts unexpectedly at times.

The blow came one morning in the shape of a curt decision on the part of the storekeepers not to give one further cent of credit without the men returned to their legitimate work. A resolution to this effect had been passed by the merchants at a secret meeting, and the result was immediate and decisive. The idle men who were without money turned to the supposedly all powerful federation for relief, but Petriella had failed to anticipate this development and he was powerless, and possibly reluctant, to authorize an expenditure of funds. The men grumbled, but returned to work. Today 80 per cent. of the strikers are engaged at their old tasks, and the mines are shipping ore in large volume.

The individual miners are convinced that agitators may not be their best friends after all and that agitators of the type of this foreigner, whose sole claim to distinction in free America is a doubtful character, and a possible capacity for creating disorder and discontent, are the foes of honest labor.

And not the least important of the lessons learned is that so forcibly brought home to the minds of the honest merchant and the law-abiding citizen of every class and degree, that mob violence and uncalled-for strikes can be avoided by a determined stand, like that taken by the storekeepers of the Mesaba Range.

Labor's Decreased Efficiency.

President Mellen of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company said a little while ago that in his experience, the efficiency of organized labor had of late years become less as wages had become higher. This is a startling and discouraging declaration; but it has received confirmation from other men of large experience. Some careful students of the census tables of manufactures and wages have declared that this tendency is more or less general throughout our manufacturing activities.

But, after all, the cause is not hard to find. We have been passing through an era of labor organization when one of the chief purposes of the unions has been to make of themselves mainly strong fighting machines. A union card means that its owner has paid his dues and will obey an order to strike. It may or may not mean that he is an efficient workman; and there is no difference between the card o fa very good workman and the card of a far less good one. Nor, under the rules of most organizations, has a very good workman a chance to earn more money than a far less good one.

In a word, the organization of labor has not been wholly on the basis of efficiency in work but rather on the basis of loyalty to the organizations. In a sense, efficiency in work, beyond a certain grade, has really been discouraged.

Another cause of decline in efficiency is the lack of good training in most trades. The labor unions have abolished a systematic apprentice system, and we have yet developed few trade schools where boys are thoroughly trained. Thus the lack of thorough systematic training in the first place, and thereafter the kind of organization which permits skill of the second grade to receive as high wages as skill of the first class, have discouraged the development of the highest efficiency.

This is a fact that touches the very foundations of American character and of American progress. It should be a subject of the gravest concern not only to labor unions, to skilled workmen, and to the employers of skilled workmen, but to every class of society. It means retrogression. It means—to the extent to which inefficiency has increased—a failure in our educational and social life.

A Disguised Labor Law.

The New York Court of Appeals has declared unconstitutional the State law forbidding the employment of women in factories during certain night hours. Judge Gray, who wrote the opinion, says when "it is sought, under the guise of a labor law, arbitrarily, as here, to prevent an adult female citizen from working at any time of the day that suits her, I think it is time to call a halt. It arbitrarily deprives citizens of their right to contract with each other. The tendency of Legislatures, in the form of regulatory measures, to interfere with the lawful pursuits of citizens, is becoming a marked one in this country, and it behooves the courts firmly and fearlessly to interpose the barriers of their judgment, when invoked, to protest against legislative acts plainly transcending the powers conferred by the Constitution upon the legislative body.

"The right of the State to restrict or regulate the labor and employment of children is unquestionable; but an adult female is not to be regarded as a ward of the State, or in any other light than the man is regarded when the question relates to the business pursuit or calling.

"In the gradual course of legislation upon the rights of a woman, in this State she has come to possess all the responsibilities of the man, and she is entitled to be placed on an equality of rights with the man. Considerations of her physical differences are sentimental and find no proper place in the discussion of the constitutionality of the act."

It has long been recognized that a large proportion of the effort to restrict the hours of employment of women and children has really been an effort on the part of organized labor to secure its own desires rather than to help the women and children. Judge Gray punctures this profession and tears it to shreds.

The Telegraphers' Strike.

The Telegraph Age (New York,) which describes itself as the organ of the "better element" of the telegraph operaters, deplores the strike as "altogether unworthy of the men who have deliberately precipitated the struggle." The counsel of the leaders to "go slow," it adds, appears to have been overlooked entirely by the strikers "in the mania that has seized upon them." It adds:

"The charge is made that the telegraph companies have acted in bad faith in their treatment of the operators; more specifically that the Western Union Telegraph Company is not living up to the covenant, actual and implied, made with United States Labor Commissioner Charles P. Neill in the settlement of the difficulty in June last.

"For a long time past appearances have indicated that the men were 'spoiling for a fight,' and it would also appear that subterfuge has been resorted to in order to give this outbreak a semblance of justification."

The Philadelphia North American, a paper as friendly to labor as any in the country, says:

"The commercial telegraphers have not given the American people a square deal. They have been recreant to their leaders, and played hari-kari with their own interests. They have acted not like sane men with grievances to redress, but like sulky children. They are causing regret and chagrin to the true friends of organized labor. They will lose their strike. And they deserve to lose it.

"The operaors walked out, in utter disregard for the newspapers of the country and for the public which the newspapers serve. Calling such conduct childish folly is over-mild.

"The question may or may not be the closed or the open shop. The wage scale may be right or wrong; the hours equitable or over-long. The American people do not know, and consequently do not care. And it is too late now for the strikers to start an informatory campaign.

"The public is in the position of the innocent bystander who does not know that any one is fighting until he is hit by a brick. He does not pull off his coat to help the thrower of the brick. He calls a policeman."

Cheers for the Open Shop.

The most significant point in the festivities held to commemorate the annual flag-raising day of the San Francisco Mining and Stock Exchange, last week, was the enthusiastic applause which greeted the remarks of Col. John P. Irish when he spoke of making San Francisco an open shop. Senator Nixon who preceded him in the talking had called attention to the hustling endeavors of Los Angeles to get ahead in the race for commercial success. Col. Irish, when it came his turn, picked up the suggestion and attributed the success of Los Angeles in a large measure to the fact that it was an open shop. Being a tactful speaker he did not use the expression "open shop," but declared Los Angeles was a place where all labor was free and equal, a place where every man could find work without the opposition of his fellows and where the Constitution of the country was big enough and broad enough to supplant laws made for special classes. He appealed to his hearers to take advantage of the present conditions and try to bring about the same broad changes for San Francisco. From the vigorous cheers, shouts and applause which punctuated his remarks it was very evident the big audience vehemently seconded his sentiments.—[Town Talk, San Francisco.

HAVE YOU A FUTURE?
IF SO, CONSULT
MME. LE PIERRO.

What is happiness? It is to know yourself. Is there on earth any human being that feels himself actually happy? Practically not, because divine wisdom uses our longing for happiness to spur us on and force us to the effort necessary for the accomplishment of our destiny.

A little thought makes it clear that men can neither hope for nor reasonably expect HAPPINESS, PEACE AND PROSPERITY in their present state.

Man looks out at the universe with the puzzled, ignorant expression of a small child when the light is suddenly brought close to its face. Everything that we see astonishes us and proves our ignorance. Happiness must be found in knowledge, and the power that knowledge gives. Men are ignorant. They know nothing of their destiny. Thousands and tens of thousands of centuries hence, as long as the sun's heat shall preserve us—human beings will still be seeking it, because HAPPINESS IS IN SEEKING, IN TRYING. If you have time this day for quiet thinking, reason it out.

CONSULT MME. LE PIERRO.
The world-known, born with a double veil, can safely be consulted, and guarantee absolute satisfaction.

KNOW THY FUTURE BY CONSULTING THE WORLD'S GREATEST PSYCHIC, PALMIST AND SPIRIT PSYCHIC, PROF. MILBURN,
PROF. MILBURN,
PROF. MILBURN,
PERMANENTLY LOCATED IN HIS NEW HOME, 428 W. SIXTH ST., CORNER OF OLIVE, OPPOSITE THE PARK.

FORTY YEARS A PRACTICING PSYCHIC, KNOWN FROM OCEAN TO OCEAN AS THE MARVEL OF TWO HEMISPHERES, PRESS AND PUBLIC RECOGNIZE PROF. MILBURN AS THE FOREMOST AND MOST ABLE PSYCHIC NOW BEFORE PUBLIC. WHERE OTHERS FAIL, HE SUCCEEDS WITH EASE, AND HE POSITIVELY WILL NOT ACCEPT FEE FOR HIS READINGS UNLESS YOU ARE PERFECTLY SATISFIED AND RECEIVE THE INFORMATION YOU DESIRE. MARVELOUS DEMONSTRATIONS OF SECOND SIGHT, THAT MUST BE SEEN TO BE BELIEVED, SO BE SURE AND CONSULT HIM AT ONCE. ELEVATE THYSELF. KNOW THY FUTURE. POSITIVELY NO EQUAL ON EARTH IN HIS PROFESSION. BY HIS WONDERFUL POWERS HE WILL GIVE YOU NAMES, TELLS WHAT YOU CALLED FOR, TELLS WHAT YOU WANT TO KNOW. IF NOT CORRECT, FREE, FREE. SO POSITIVE AM I OF MY OWN POWER TO TELL THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE, THAT I WILL MAKE NO CHARGE, NO CHARGE, NO CHARGE, UNLESS YOU OBTAIN THE INFORMATION YOU DESIRE, AND FIND ME THE SUPERIOR OF ALL PSYCHICS AND PALMISTS IN THIS CITY.

SPECIAL OFFER FOR ONE WEEK ONLY. Realizing there are many skeptical people in Los Angeles, and that this city has been overrun with pretenders, etc., and that many of its best citizens would be only too anxious to visit a TRUE psychic exponent were they assured of satisfaction, therefore Prof. Milburn will (to convince the public of Los Angeles of his superiority over all psychics) give his special readings for seven days only, at 50c.

50c.

WHEN CONSULTING A PSYCHIC ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST. AS A TEST IN HIS REGULAR READING, HE WILL GIVE NAMES, AGE, OCCUPATION, WHOM AND WHEN YOU WILL MARRY.

ASSISTANCE FOR TROUBLED OR unfortunate; if you are in trouble of any kind, discontented, unhappy, or not satisfied in life, or have domestic, love or business troubles, you will be told how to overcome all trouble. WHEN OTHERS FAIL, HE SUCCEEDS WITH EASE.

HE GIVES ADVICE ON BUSINESS, speculation, investments, insurance, changes, travels, health, sickness, love, divorce, marriage, lawsuits, separations, wills, deeds, mortgages, patents, claims, collections, mining, etc. He will tell you what trade, speculation or profession you are adapted for.

LAWSUITS, WILLS, DIVORCES. He can render you assistance and give you advice in a way that will bring success in business transactions, property speculation, investments, mining, etc.

LOVE, COURTSHIP, MARRIAGE. Gives truthful revelations of all live affairs, troubles, marriages, restores lost affections, reunites the separated, settles lovers' quarrels, etc.

Tells how to WIN the man or woman you love, and how to make your husband or wife be true to you, and how to overcome all your enemies.

WHY CONSULT AN INFERIOR PSYCHIC WHEN PROF. MILBURN, THE ACKNOWLEDGED LEADER OF THEM ALL, IS HERE AND HIS FEE IS NO HIGHER THAN THOSE LESS COMPETENT.

His past record and strictly honorable dealings are sufficient guaranty for his future work, and have won the good will of the press and public.

READING BY MAIL, ONE DOLLAR.
SEND DATE OF BIRTH.

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at

322 S. SPRING ST. (Suite 17,)

by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn, in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HAS HIMSELF WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in everyday life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health, marriage and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill-luck into wide paths of success and prosperity can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.
(Daily and evenings; Sunday 9 to 1.)

PERSONAL—
PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE, of 335½ S. Spring st., near Third,
THE CELEBRATED, RELIABLE PALMIST AND ASTROLOGER.

A resident of Los Angeles for 24 years, and whose work is known throughout this entire land, and who has made a life study of PALMISTRY AND ASTROLOGY, has convinced hundreds of the best intellects and persons in all walks of life that HIS REMARKABLE READINGS AND PREDICTIONS FOR FUTURE EVENTS IN THEIR LIVES ARE UNPARALLELED.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S readings, which are thorough and scientific, have nothing in common whatever with the fictitious readings of illiterate, unreliable humbug palmists, astrologers, psychics, fortune tellers, and those who, THROUGH TRICK METHODS, CLAIM TO TELL YOUR NAME, etc., after you yourself have written the information—who scarcely know one line or mount from the other, and who, by their disgraceful readings, drag these useful sciences into the mire of fortune telling and fraud. PROF. ALTHOUSE is not actuated by any feeling of ill-will toward any reader who may be GENUINE (for he believes all RELIABLE readers should be encouraged;) but he will—in the future, as in the past—denounce humbug work whenever and wherever he can.

A SATISFACTORY AND ABSOLUTELY CORRECT reading can only be had from one who has thoroughly mastered the laws of these wonderful sciences, through years of critical study of planetary influences on the lines of the hand and in the Horoscope, combined with large experiences, trained judgment, etc. The palm shows diseases, love, marriage, divorce, deaths, money, investments, changes, talents, travels, etc., etc., and many other things which cannot be mentioned here.

WITH EACH PALM READING THERE IS ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.

PROF. ALTHOUSE stands at the very head of the profession, having read—FROM LIFE—more celebrated people than any other reader. He does not deceive the public in this respect. HIS READINGS, TOO, MUST IN NO WISE BE CLASSED WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER READER NOW OPERATING IN THIS PART OF THE COUNTRY, AND HIS SKILLED WORK HAS NO COMPARISON WITH THEIRS WHATSOEVER.

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK, THE GREAT SINGER, WHOSE HANDS WERE READ AND HOROSCOPE CAST BY PROF. ALTHOUSE, writes and says: "I was greatly surprised to find how many of your warnings were well founded, and having been prepared for the same, I was not taken unawares. YOUR WARNING regarding an oncoming illness also PROVED A FACT, as not more than ten days later I was at home with a severe attack of la grippe. YOUR READING WAS MOST MARVELOUS.

DR. ALEX. J. M'IVOR-TYNDALL, editor Swastika Magazine, writes and says: "Your work along the lines of Astrology and Palmistry is highly spoken of on all sides, and I feel certain that you are able, through your accurate and scientific knowledge of these sciences of human life and culture, to guide and direct to the best possible advantage, the lives of those who apply to you for advice. I wish you every success in your work."

E. H. SOTHERN says: "I find your readings coincides with Cheiro's," and "I am greatly interested in Palmistry and Astrology." FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your reading of my hands was most satisfactory. Your knowledge and skill in palmistry is REMARKABLE and gave me a much more exalted idea of that science than I have hitherto entertained." LOUIS JAMES, actor, says: "I wish to say that your reading was ENTIRELY SATISFACTORY." PAUL GILMORE, actor, says: "I want to express to you my keen appreciation of your reading. It is by far the most scientific I have ever had." JULIET CROSBY, actress, says: "Prof. Althouse has given me a most helpful, complete and satisfactory reading." Prof. Althouse also read Admiral Schley, Senator Clark, ex-Gov. Pardee, Gen. Chaffee, Baron Rothschild, Joaquin Miller, Ysaye, Sousa, Edison, Capt. Hobson, Creatore, Caruso, Huntington, Susan B. Anthony, Nance O'Neil, Lillian Nordica, Constantino, Calve, Julia Marlowe, Modjeska, Adaberto, Sembrich, Gadski, Jefferson, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, Anna Held, Grace Van Studdiford, Lillian Russell, Wm. Desmond, Blanche Hall, Papinta and hundreds of others. These names of NOTED people are merely given because they are PUBLIC persons. It indicates the class of people being read by PROF. ALTHOUSE, together with hundreds of the very best people of Los Angeles—WITH WHOM ALL HIS BUSINESS IS STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL IN EVERY PARTICULAR.

Intelligent, HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED—those capable of appreciating the superior qualities of a fine reader.

ASTROLOGY AND THE HOROSCOPE.

PROF. ALTHOUSE has also given many years of critical study to, and is an experienced practitioner in, the science of MODERN ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE IS DECIDEDLY A GUIDE IN LIFE, showing remarkable things when properly cast for YOU INDIVIDUALLY, from the position of the planets at YOUR BIRTH. It indicates the condition of health, all kinds of diseases, the constitution, how best strengthened, when weak; tells all about love—whom to marry and when, describing the marriage partner; shows deaths divorce; tells about children, speculation, the best time to invest or to push affairs, an' when to hold on to what has been gained; your talents, what best adapted for; your environment; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when one will be in danger of illness, accidents, deaths, losses, troubles; also of your good periods coming—giving dates of these events for the future; IN FACT, TELLS EVERYTHING ABOUT ONE'S SELF WORTH KNOWING, being in truth one of the best investments the world offers. YOUR HOROSCOPE is also a key to the character of OTHERS, and in this respect can be of the utmost use to you.

SCIENTIFIC PREDICTIONS ON ALL QUESTIONS OF LIFE, for the present, and future events up to the close of life—made by these sciences—with most complete primary and secondary directions (arcs, etc.)—through the trained judgment of PROF. ALTHOUSE—will stagger the senses. BEWARE, HOWEVER, OF UNRELIABLE READERS.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in hand reading and casting of horoscopes has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.

Readings by mail; send for circular, etc.
Daily and evenings, Sunday 10 to 2.

WANTED—
Help, Male.

WANTED—WE HAVE MANY DESIRABLE positions open from day to day. We furnish the largest firms in Los Angeles with competent men and women, and our business has now grown to such an extent that we are supply firms throughout California, Nevada and Arizona and occasionally we get a call from Mexico.

Frequently we receive telegrams, telephone calls or letters from the heads of firms for certain kinds of employees and they have such implicit faith in our judgment and honesty that they allow us to select the persons they want. In other words we do their hiring.

We have only secured the confidence of the business men of the Southwest by strict attention to business, fair methods, and using good judgment in making our selections. For instance, we never send a "mule driver" to accept a position as "bank cashier," or vice versa. Every applicant for a position must furnish us with references as to honesty and ability before we will consider him at all.

Ours is the only agency on the Pacific Coast which describes the qualifications of employees in a magazine. This unique publication, GOLD VS. BRAINS, is sent to thousands of employers monthly and the qualifications of each man or woman registered with us is described therein. We give each applicant a number and in that way no publicity is given to the individual.

It does not make any difference whether you are idle or employed and wish to better your condition, if you know how to do one thing and do it well, and can furnish first-class references, the chances are we can place you in a short time.

We are now working on the next issue of GOLD VS. BRAINS and if you would like to place your qualifications direct before the business men of Los Angeles and the Southwest generally, come in and list with us.

The positions which we fill day to day command salaries ranging from $600 a year to $5000. We have the highest bank and mercantile references and will show you a list of hundreds of brain workers whom we have placed in the past 60 days. We invite the fullest investigation and in the future as in the past we will continue to give both employers and employees a square deal.

FOR SALE—F. W. HEALY, THE WELL-known banker and fancier of Pasadena, writes—"After hearing others praise Egg-More, I determined that if there was anything to keep hens laying through the fall and winter months, I wanted it. I bought a package of Egg-More and fed it, and the improvement was very marked. Keeping on with it I soon proved the truth of your statement, that 'you can't put all your eggs in one basket if you feed Egg-More.' I have raised poultry nearly all my life, and for twenty years in California, but never did my hens lay so well as since I began to use Egg-More. I consider it the best egg producer on the market, and I do not intend to be without it." 8

I have just returned from Twenty-nine Palms Mining District, the new gold fields, where I took in a large lot of supplies and machinery for the Mohawk Herald Co. When I came out the road was lined with wagons loaded with men and supplies going in. the rush has commenced sooner than expected. Several new companies have incorporated to work in the new field; the Twenty-nine Palms Gold M. Co., headed by L. J. Barber & Dr. Brown passed me with a team load of supplies and miners to commence work on the claims adjoining the Mohawk-Herald Company property.

The Pacific Exploration Co., newly formed, also passed me with wagons and miners to commence work on their property near Twenty-nine Palms; the new townsite sent in a committee composed of Mr. Chandler, Mr. Meyer and another gentleman to secure land upon which to start a town; several parties with teams and supplies are rushing to the new fields. Los Angeles parties are forming a company to run an automobile line.

The Postoffice authorities will be asked to give a mail service to Twenty-nine Palms, as there are more than enough people and mail matter to warrant a postoffice for the new Goldfields.

Come to the Southwest Miners' Stock Exchange and I will show you ore specimens and photographs which will prove what a beautiful place Twenty-nine Palms is. If you cannot come, then send for a Southwest Mining News. Five cents per copy, or will be sent free on request; Which will have a descriptive article, illustrated with cuts of scenes in the new Goldfields.

I again warn the public that there is some stock belonging to brokers and others in the Mohawk-Herald L. & M. Co. that has been attached, and is otherwise debarred, and will not be transferred on the books of the company. This stock has become so popular and eagerly sought after that irresponsible brokers and others are offering the stock, well knowing that they cannot deliver it, but they want to secure the names of my customers for other uses. So do not take any notice of advertisements offering this stock.

OUR MILL IS RUNNING, AND WE ARE WORKING OUR PROPERTY, NOT THE PUBLIC.

Received dividend check No. 3 on the Little Florence; this makes 30 per cent. paid to date. First was paid August 16th. I was sole fiscal agent in Los Angeles for this stock.

OIL STOCKS—OIL STOCKS—

INVESTORS, ARE YOU LOOKING FOR SAFE AND SURE INVESTMENTS?

INVESTMENTS THAT ARE SAFE AND SURE AND GOOD DIVIDEND PAYERS.

OIL STOCKS ARE AMONG THE BEST AND HIGHEST DIVIDEND PAYERS ON THE MARKET.

Oil companies are and have been paying from 6 per cent. to 36 per cent. per annum, some monthly, some quarterly and some semi-annually, among which are: UNION, UNION PROVIDENT, UNITED PETROLEUM, WESTERN UNION, MEXICAN PETROLEUM, RICE RANCH, CENTRAL, COLUMBIA, and FULLERTON OIL.

The time to buy THESE OIL STOCKS is NOW.

Advise with me as to PRICES, whether you wish to SELL or BUY.

STOCK—50 PER CENT. OF THE STOCK of a company owning 9240 acres of land in Mexico. This stock can be bought for 60 per cent. of the actual value. The company owning this property is going to subdivide it in small acreage and sell the same to American farmers. The owner of this stock is a very sick man and cannot go ahead with the proposition. This stock will make you 200 per cent. in the next two years. Three thousand acres of this land has fine hardwood timber on it, worth from $75 to $125 in the log in the United States. This land will produce bananas, pineapples, sugar cane, oranges, lemons, tobacco, rice, rubber and all tropical and semi-tropical fruits. Best of transportation facilities. Come in and see our hardwood samples and views of the land of opportunity.

NEVADA PEARL M. & L. CO.—

OF GOLDFIELD, NEVADA.

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER SHARE.

It would not be twenty-five cents per share if the Chicago, Illinois, brokerage firm could have had their way about it; they wanted to advance the price to 35 cents, but the good and conservative sense of the company prevailed and the price is still 25 cents, for the present at least, and if you wish to buy any of the stock you had better send in your order and money at once.

THE SUPPLEMENT to the PROSPECTUS I told you about last week is ready for delivery and we have been sending them out. If you want one call at my office or write for same.

THE SUPPLEMENT contains A MAP showing the relative locations of the LITTLE FLORENCE, FLORENCE-MOHAWK, ROGERS LEASE and NEVADA PEARL, together with notes explanatory of the map.

During last week some large sales of NEVADA PEARL were made. The president of an eastern National Bank, who owns 38,000 shares of NEVADA-PEARL, has so influenced his friends that they purchased 31,450 shares last week; and a Chicago broker reports that three Illinois business men have each bought 10,000 shares of NEVADA PEARL.

Have you any doubt about NEVADA PEARL being properly and completely financed?

Do not forget what I told you weeks ago, that this company was strong, officered and managed by successful and experienced mining men. No salaries; no office rent, and almost three-fourths of the whole capital of the company placed in the treasury; and that it owns five claims and two very valuable leases near the large producing mines of Goldfield.

Call or write for Prospectus and Supplement. In sending in order for the stock, be sure to get the correct name and address of purchaser, so the stock can be issued correctly and the company have the right address.

Statistics, commercial agencies and your personal knowledge will bear me out that there is no investment that will compare with investments in the line we are offering. It was proven hundreds of years ago and has made good throughout the world and will always be good. Why invest your money, much or little, in long shots? Why not invest where you have more than a reasonable assurance of both the value of your holdings, besides promising dividends that will return your principal yearly. Thoroughly co-operative and so planned that the smallest investor may take advantage of the proposition on a very easy installment plan. Ten to fifty dollars will start the ball rolling. Get particulars without delay. Backed by good men. We substantiate all our claims before you make the investment. Address O, box 25, TIMES OFFICE.

MINING—

CORE DRILLING WITHOUT DIAMONDS. Have you mining claims? Do you find it hard to interest capital? Of course you do. Why not buy an Okell core drill and extract mill test cores, 5 inches in diameter to the depth of 1000 feet or so? Then how easy it will be, if your property has the values, to get capital. It costs less than $4 per foot to do this work, including purchase price of drill; others are doing it, why not you? We have testimonials from all over the United States, showing exactly what our drills are doing for others.

OUR CERRO DEL ORO
CERRO DEL ORO CERRO DEL ORO

We wish to call the attention of the investing public to the CERO DEL ORO MINING COMPANY.

Persons who are familiar with mines and mining prospects in Old Mexico, will appreciate the opportunity we now offer them, but to those who are unacquainted with the prospects, we wish to extend an invitation to investigate our properties, which are some of the most valuable in Northern Mexico.

This company is now installing a mill on one of its valuable properties in Sonora, Mexico, and will soon be producing bullion. We guarantee our properties to be first-class in every respect, and to any who wish to learn of their values, location, etc., no effort will be spared to give you any information you desire.

We are offering a limited amount of our treasury stock at an attractive figure, and hope that you will not let an opportunity such as this pass without an investigation; we earnestly request you to call at our offices at your earliest convenience.

OIL PROPERTY—

WE OWN AND CONTROL A LARGE BODY of some of the best oil lands in Ventura county. These lands are close to pipe line and rail transportation and are certainly some of the best located oil lands in California. Oil springs and abundant oil sepages are found on the land. The oil of this locality is of high gravity, worth $1 a barrel at the wells. We offer these lands at a very, very low price, much lower than lands of their character can be obtained anywhere in California. For maps and all information, see the O'BRIEN INVESTMENT CO., 547 Douglas Bldg. 8

OIL LANDS—
Located where there is an abundance of oil with transportation and markets. We have several attractive pieces of such land awaiting development. We want brain and energy for use in this direction.
Never in the history of California has such an opportunity been offered for legitimate, permanent and profitable investment in oil.

LABOR.

AGREEMENT IS SATISFACTORY.

Tentative Compact at Goldfield in Effect.

Miners Who Walked Out Will Walk Back Again.

Carpenters Not Under Union Jurisdiction Now.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Sept. 7.—The tentative agreement entered into between the Consolidated officials and the miners' committee relative to the Mohawk change-room, and the question of jurisdiction over watchmen, carpenters, electricians, etc., was finally approved and accepted by the Miners' Union in special session this afternoon.

The men who walked out of the Mohawk and Combination mines will return to work tomorrow, and the trouble that for a time threatened a general tie-up of the mines and leases in the district is at an end.

Some concessions were made to the operators and watchmen, and carpenters will not be under the jurisdiction of the union, that demand having been withdrawn.

UNIONITES RAISE OBJECTION.

Miners at Angels Insist That Strike Shall Not Be Settled and Workers Are Ordered Out.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Information was received here today that the union miners in Angels who opposed the settlement of the strike, which has caused a heavy loss to busines men and mine owners here, have raised a technicality and declared that snap judgment was taken on the union by those who favored ending the trouble.

The objectors made such a kick that it was agreed to reopen the matter and to have a vote next Tuesday.

There has also been a question raised about the election of officers, which was not properly ratified before the last meeting adjourned. Some of the men had returned tho work when this new point was raised, and these men were ordered to cease work until the matter was settled.

Those who favor going back to work assert that they will win and only agreed to another vote to avoid any dispute with the defeated faction, which appears to be trying to cause trouble. The mine owners expect to start up next Tuesday.

CONCLAVE OF NATIVE SON.

Admission Day Will See the Greatest Gathering in History of Order at San Jose.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN JOSE, Sept. 7.—With thousands of people from all over the State pouring into San José on every train, Admission Day, Monday, will see the largest gathering of Native Sons in the history of the order.

The city, after weeks of preparation, was ready for the multitude of visitors before they commenced to arrive tonight. The celebration has commenced with the city brilliantly lighted and the streets thronged with visitors. Thousands of people have arrived and by tomorrow night it is expected that the total will be swelled to 35,000.

The decoration of the streets required weeks of work on the part of the committee from the local N.S.G.W. parlors, as well as a large subscription from the merchants of the city.

Tonight, when the current was turned into the wires, myriads of red electric lights strung in festoons across the principal streets for several blocks shed a soft light over the surging crowds, while the big electric tower was hung with 2000 gleaming lamps.

National and State colors are displayed everywhere, producing a beautiful aspect. The programme for the three days entertainment contains attractions of every description. Band concerts, parades receptions and barbecues take up much of the time, and the celebration will end with a grand ball Monday night.

The visitors are being escorted about the town by members of the local parlors, and the whole city is turned out to welcome them. Late this evening a delegation of 3000 men arrived from San Francisco and fully as many more will come tomorrow.

Special trains will be used to bring the crowds from all directions. Every division of the order in the State will be represented.

EARLE'S "AFFINITY" TALKS.

Miss Kuttner Declares She Would Give Up Her Love If Artist's Wife Would Consent.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Miss Julia Kuttner, the young woman whom Ferdinand Pinney Earle, the artist Socialist, is to marry, after a divorce shall have been granted his wife, who is now on her way to France wtih their little son, is quoted in a published interview today as saying:

"I am not an interloper. I have not come between this man and his wife. Mrs. Earle is not a martyr. This day, I would gladly give him up for duty's sake, although he is the only man I have ever loved, if the wife would consent, but she will not. It was she who urged me to try to fill the need in his life, which she admitted she had been unable to meet."

Miss Kuttner said further, that she came over from Europe and went to the Earle home solely to effect a reconciliation between Mr. and Mrs. Earle. Earle, Miss Kuttner added, had told her they were not happily married. Miss Kuttner is now in retirement in the Orange (N. J.) Mountains with a brother. Earle says that the prime cause of his trouble is the French system of arrangement of engagements, under which the engaged couple are mutually ignorant of each other's real habits and temperaments.

ARIZONA.

STORMS CAUSE MUCH DAMAGE.

RAILROADS OUT OF COMMISSION AND BRIDGES WRECKED.

Six Inches of Sleet Fall in Aqua Fria Valley and Mountain Gorges Become Raging Torrents—Government Takes a Hand in Water Suit. Territorial Fair Plans.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Sept. 5.—Though only slight showers have fallen in this vicinity, the last week has been a stormy one in most parts of Arizona. Notable damage was done on the Gila Valley, Globe and Northern Railway, Globe being isolated for about a week. Passenger and freight traffic to the main line at Bowie was absolutely cut off by washouts between Pima and Fort Thomas. In all, several miles of grade were put out of use. The new bridge is not finished across the Gila River at San Carlos, but the old structure did not go out. Much damage was done to the new bridge by the loss of false work and lumber.

For several days transfers were made around the main break for passengers, while freight, at the rate of about fifty carloads a day, was shunted on sidings at Bowie. For several days passengers were compelled to ride on wagons for fourteen miles between Fort Thomas and Pima. The very meager hotel facilities at the junction point of Bowie were very much overtaxed. Globe was put on short rations for dairy products, fruit and vegetables. The smelters had plenty of coal, and the operation of the mines and furnaces was not affected by the railroad troubles.

Last Tuesday the Bradshaw Railroad, between Prescott and Dewey, was put out of commission by the loss of a couple of bridges in a destructive storm which raged through the Agua Fria Valley, and in the Bradshaw Mountains. Six inches of sleet fell at one point, and every mountain gorge bore a raging torrent.

LIGHTNING KILLS.

At Tucson Tuesday there was an electrical storm that did much damage. A lightning bolt nearly blinded Charles Bent, and another killed Hartwood, a valuable horse belonging to Col. Randolph.

Floods on the lower Gila in Maricopa and Yuma counties have washed out the headings of nearly all the irrigation ditches. The land is of excellent quality and at many points water rises in sufficient volume to furnish an ample flow, but practically all the ditches have headings in sand banks, and dams and headgates are prone to depart at any rise in the stream.

The report of the Weather Bureau station at Phoenix for August shows that the highest temperature was 109 deg. on the 8th, and the lowest 64 on the 30th. The total precipitation for the month was 8-10 of an inch.

GOVERNMENT INTERVENES.

Through United States Attorney Alexander, the United States government has intervened as a party in the great water suit which was begun before Judge Kent in Phoenix early in the summer, and which is to be resumed on September 23. The government's position, as set forth in the document just filed, consists in a claim of sufficient water from the Salt and Verde rivers to irrigate all Indian and Indian school lands. It is probable that the rights of all unpatented lands in the valley will be considered in the same set of pleadings.

The City Council of Phoenix is digesting plans for the spending of $150,000, now on hand and in bank, after paying the Sherman interests $150,000 for the permanent water supply plant. It is agreed that while the present water supply is ample and of good quality, it is not suitable for manufacturing uses, owing to an excessive per cent. of sulphate of lime. Water of the finest quality, pure and soft, and in ample qualities for a much larger city than Phoenix, can be had at the Agua Fria River, about twenty-five miles north of Phoenix, and the pipe line would have a grade that would give ample pressure to the local mains.

WATER RATES EXCESSIVE.

At the present time, the water rates in the city are excessive. The present system collects a flat rate for every fixture upon property on the highest basis used in any large municipality on the Pacific Coast, the average household being charged about $4 a month, with a meter rate of 20 cents per 1000 gallons.

During October there is to be held in Phoenix a convention of business men from all parts of the Territory. This is a movement looking toward the lowering of freight rates on the railroads, and designed primarily to urge before the Interstate Commerce Commission a readjustment of excessive tariffs now in force between eastern cities and points in Arizona. It is instanced that while the freight rates on carload lots of merchandise to El Paso is at the rate of 75 cents a hundred, and to Los Angeles at $1 a hundred, the rate for Arizona points is $1.82 a hundred.

Preparations are now being made to insure an immense success for the next Territorial fair, to be held in Phoenix in November. More than a dozen $1000 purses will be provided for the racing. From all parts of the Territory assurances are coming of much larger exhibits of Territorial products and of even greater crowds than those which taxed transportation facilities last fall. It is expected that one of the racing cards will be the presence of the famous Dan Patch, who, it is expected, will be wintered in Arizona.

Gifford Pinchot, chief of the United States Bureau of Forestry, and Murdock Mackenzie, president of the American Live Stock Association, have accepted invitations to be present in Phoenix during fair week, and it is expected that Mr. Pinchot will talk to the Arizona Cattle Growers' Association in regard to the policy of the government on range lands and forest reserve.

SALT RIVER VALLEY COTTON.

For years it has been known that the Salt River Valley could raise cotton, but it has now been announced that the cotton grown here is of the highest quality. A sample shipped lately to the New York Cotton Exchange was declared worth from 30 to 40 cents a pound. A southern expert declares that the crop on lands near Phoenix can be made to pay a profit of $250 an acre.

All over Arizona the benefits derived from Gov. Kibbey's agitation of proper mining taxation are being felt. The reduction has been usually 50 cents on the $100. The county most benefited is Cochise, in which the tax rate has dropped in six years from $4.20 to $2.

Operation of the condensed milk plant at Tempe has had the effect of largely increasing the price paid farmers for milk. The average dairyman around Tempe now is deriving a monthly profit of $10 a cow. The creamery is working up 25,000 pounds of milk a day. Much of the product is being shipped to California, where the same company has a plant near Los Angeles.

NEW THEATER PROMISED.

R. B. Sherman, son of Gen. M. H. Sherman, has been in Phoenix for the last few days. A result of the visit is a promise that a decent theater will be erected this winter at Phoenix Park together with a grandstand that will better shelter baseball enthusiasts than the present unsightly and unsafe structure.

Last Saturday at the Ray mine, near Kelvin, a cage containing nine men, dropped 185 feet in the main shaft. None of the men were killed. This is probably due to the fact that near the bottom of the shaft the cage struck a heavy timber, somewhat lessening the force of the fall. All of the men were somewhat injured, but none seriously.

ARIZONA NOTES.

At Gila City, Yuma county, last week, Robert Greer died of exhaustion due to excessive heat.

A few days ago at Yuma, a tramp, W. M. Allen, for a prize of $5, dropped from the highest span of the Colorado bridge into the river, and swam to the shore through whirlpools that were as threatening to his life as the leap had been. The $5 was added to very largely by contributions from the crowd that witnessed the reckless deed. The next day Allen showed that his leap had caused him no inconvenience by entering the room of a bartender and appropriating a quantity of clothing. As a result he will remain in Yuma as an occupant of the County Jail, at least until the time of the assembling of the next grand jury.

Damage approximating $1000 was done a few days ago at the Pan-American Ostrich Farm, west of Phoenix, by coyotes. They attacked a flock of young ostriches, killing six and badly injuring nine others.

At Florence, several reputable persons declare that they have seen a real mountain lion prowling about after dark.

John L. Gilbert is in jail at Globe, primarily because of mistaken gallantry. When a dining-room girl at the Gibson mine resented his proffer of a kiss, he became indignant and exhibited a revolver.

Last December, Frank Foust, a young Globe miner, disappeared from home, and it was feared he had perished in the mountains. A few days ago it was learned that he is a member of Troop G, United States Cavalry. The young fellow had enlisted in the troop under the name of Frank Smith.

This winter, in Phoenix, will be married J. F. Cleaveland, member of the Territorial Council from Graham county, and Miss Zelma Bailey, sister of Neil Bailey, speaker of the last Territorial Assembly.

To the music swift a rapping,
Every hand responds a clapping,
Calls Orisa back again.
See! She comes again a smiling,
Form and feature so beguiling,
With that art termed woman's wileing,
Deftly captures all the men.
Have you heard her sing a dancing,
When before the lights advancing?
To describe her charms entrancing,
Would require an angel pen. 8

Statistics, commercial agencies and your personal knowledge will bear me out that there is no investment that will compare with investments in the line we are offering. It was proven hundreds of years ago and has made good throughout the world and will always be good. Why invest your money, much or little, in long shots? Why not invest where you have more than a reasonable assurance of both the return of the principle and an advance in the value of your holdings, besides promising dividends that will return your principle yearly. Thoroughly co-operative and so planned that the smallest investor may take advantage of the proposition on a very easy installment plan. Ten to fifty dollars will start the ball to rolling. Get particulars without delay. Backed by good men. We substantiate all our claims before you make the investment. Address N, box 101, TIMES OFFICE. 8

GENUINE BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

We have an opportunity for a good level-headed business man to take the office and financial end of one of the best teaming and contracting concerns in Southern California. Capital required $20,000 to $30,000.

The business is well established and has for years made splendid returns. Last year's returns were more than sufficient to pay 30 per cent. on the capital stock of $100,000.

To a party whose personality is suitable and who is financially responsible, a thorough expert examination will be allowed.

MACHINE WORKS, well established and making good profits, will sell a half interest to a suitable party having a good system of doing business and financial experience; capital required $10,000; this is an exceptional opportunity to buy into an increasing and profitable business.

HIGH CLASS GROCERY STORE, located in one of our best residence districts, where the demand is for the best class of goods; established 14 years, and changed hands only twice during that time; will inventory about $7000; this includes furniture for 7-room flat over store; part purchase price may be in good city property.

GENERAL MERCHANDISE STORE located in good farming and fruit growing district; will inventory about $5000; man willing to work can make good money; business can be largely increased; we also have a similar store which will inventory about $9000 which does a correspondingly larger business.

Houses, Lots and Lands—Saturday Review of Buildings and Development.

FACT AND COMMENT.

AMONG the big questions relating to city real estate, streets occupy a very important position. The streets of Los Angeles have been one of the sore spots in city life for nearly twenty years. For a city of the size and wealth, of the beauty and pretensions as a tourist resort, of Los Angeles, the streets are far from what they ought to be. If the city had grown as nearly all other municipalities grow, this probably would not have troubled us in the past so much as it has. We would have streets befitting a city of 300,000 inhabitants if the city had been fifty years in growing to that point. But the city that grows at the rate of from 20,000 to [illegible] a year is one hard to keep up with in streets and every other convenience.

The Business District.

The old established business district is being handled where wisdom to handle it is in evidence. The rents paid for business premises and in office buildings in this city bring to the property owners a revenue ample to enable them to provide the best streets known to modern city life. We have been experimenting like other cities in this matter, and have been learning by our experience. It may be said that the conviction is becoming more and more general that the asphalt street for heavy traffic is a failure. Owners of property in the heart of the city where all premises are occupied and rents are high are consulting their own interests by an attempt to make streets that will stay made. We may expect to see vitrified brick streets prevail more and more in the heart of the city. But when we come to the new business center, there the problems are worthy of attention. The development of the new business center will depend upon the rapidity of its growth. Until it is developed and the old buildings returning mediocre incomes to the owners are replaced by large business structures producing a large revenue, it will be a very serious burden upon these property owners to provide a vitrified brick street in an area perhaps twice as large as the old established business center. But the property owners are not the only persons to consider. The general public has an interest in the streets and some steps [illegible] to be taken to provide in all this [illegible] decent streets.

[illegible] Residence Portion.

[illegible] we consider the close-in residence portion of the city, where flats, [illegible] and hotels abound, with here and there a little business in the area, it will probably be [illegible] years before brick streets are [illegible] in these neighborhoods. In [illegible] where traffic is comparatively light, the well-made asphalt [illegible] with sufficient concrete base, [illegible] surface of well-laid and good [illegible] rock, will probably prevail [illegible] great many years to come. We [illegible] lamentably slow in providing [illegible] streets in the close-in residence [illegible] of the city. One scarcely [illegible] from the business center [illegible] walk until he comes upon [illegible] dirt streets which really are a [illegible] to a city of our pretensions.

[illegible] Being Made.

[illegible] are just now being [illegible] by the city, others by [illegible] holders, in the remoter residence sections of the city. Along one [illegible] street out as far as Sun[illegible] the city authorities have [illegible] an abundant flood of crude oil [illegible] hope of producing a street [illegible] better than the old natural [illegible]. The oil is simply [illegible] upon the street and then allowed to sink in as may be. There are [illegible] about this. It is al[illegible] under the conditions [illegible] the tracking of this crude [illegible] the house, over carpets, rugs [illegible] floors. The average [illegible] can scarcely be expected [illegible] the serenity of her spirit [illegible] such a thing as this happens. [illegible] seems to have done as well [illegible] by sending wagonloads of [illegible] along the cross-walks at [illegible] crossings. This did much [illegible] it does not take very many [illegible] the wagons running over [illegible] to saturate the sand [illegible] and make it nearly [illegible]. Still, it only requires [illegible] days for this oil to become [illegible] soaked into the soil, [illegible] there is much less dust [illegible]. The proper way would [illegible] upon the street, then [illegible] coat of good gravel on [illegible] and roll the whole in with [illegible]. Of course the city at its [illegible] can be scarcely expected [illegible] undertake work on any street. It would be unfair unless the same treatment is applied to all the thoroughfares in the business section of the city.

Another Method.

On Alvarado street, just south of Seventh, property owners are trying a new experiment in the way of asphalt streets. The street was first plowed up and properly graded, then an abundant supply of oil poured into the soil, and this was lightly plowed again. Upon this a roller was run and it remains now to be seen how well that treatment will wear. We have never seen it tried before and it will be watched with interest. If it succeeds, as it seems likely that it will, this will furnish us with a not too expensive street for thickly settled residence sections. All such sections of the city where the street is pretty well built up, leaving only an occasional vacant lot, ought to be provided with some such street as this. There is revenue-earning power in a residence street, whether the houses are occupied by their owners or rented to tenants. This earning power furnishes a basis for insisting upon making proper streets.

The Remoter Sections.

Of course there will always remain the remoter districts of the city which will have to wait, some of them as long as fifteen to twenty years, until the population can spread generally along the streets. These will necessarily remain for years to come natural soil streets. They will not be attractive. It is almost impossible by abundant sprinkling to keep the dust down upon them. There will be few residents in many of these sections for some years to come, but the general public have to use them to get in and out of the city, and they will always remain, until the districts are built up and streets made, a source of annoyance to all who have to travel over them in vehicles. Rapidly as we are growing, it would have been better to have left many of these outside districts in farm use for some years to come—better for the owners, better for the general public, and the country roads would have been in no respect worse than the dusty, half-made streets.

Selling Bricks.

One company of makers of vitrified paving brick is now filling orders for 4,000,000 to go into work immediately in various pieces of streets. One is the piece of Seventh street west of Figueroa now being graded.

ON EAST FORTY-SIXTH.

The Cornell Company has sold for Marshall Sevy to Harry Wormersley, the property at No. 866 East Forty-sixth street for $3500. The lot is 40x152 feet to a twenty-foot alley, and is improved with a new six-room bungalow.

Hotel Beaumont, Beaumont, Cal., recently sold for twenty thousand dollars.

BEAUMONT HOTEL SOLD.

Old Hostelry Bought by David Cochrane from Chicago Lawyer for Twenty Thousand Dollars.

David Cochrane, former proprietor of the Holyrood Hotel at Riverside, has acquired from C. B. Eyer, through the agency of A. T. Jergins & Co., the Beaumont Hotel of fifty-five rooms, and four acres of grounds at Beaumont, Cal., for a consideration of $20,000. He is now remodeling the building and will open it about November 1 under the title of the "Edinboro." The house will be newly furnished, and every modern convenience will be provided. There will be 200 feet of porches, upon the roofs of which arrangements will be made for outdoor sleeping. The four acres of park, surrounding the hotel, already are planted to one hundred or more varieties of trees and shrubs. Tennis courts, a tea drinking pagoda, and a system of cottages for those who prefer them to rooms in the hotel are included in the plans of Mr. Cochrane.

A stable of horses will be kept, and automobiles provided for hire for mountain trips to Idyllwild, Oak Glenn, Strawberry Valley and other resorts near Beaumont. The hotel will be open all the year round.

ON SOUTH UNION AVENUE.

Several sales and exchanges are reported by the Auslen Realty Company. Mrs. Lida M. Peck has sold the property at No. 1043 South Union avenue to H. W. Altman for $4500. The house and lot at No. 1709 West Twenty-fifth street was exchanged with J. B. Alexander by Samuel Gantner. The valuation was placed at $3400. A vacant lot was taken by Mr. Gantner as part payment. The house and lot at No. 440 North Beaudry avenue was sold by Mrs. Etta M. Gray to Meyer Topilitzky for $5000. Bessie Curland has purchased from N. P. Hafner the house and lot at No. 555 Marshal street for a reported consideration of $3000.

BUILDING UP BEVERLY.

Picturesque Suburb, on the Hills, Becoming Thickly Populated—Artistic Store Building.

Much building activity is reported from Beverly Hills, a pleasantly situated suburb to the west and north of Los Angeles, on the Santa Monica car line. Three of the recently completed buildings at Beverly Hills are illustrated on this page.

One picture shows a view of J. M. Hunter's home, on the northwest corner of Beverly Drive and Carmelita avenue. It is a fair sample of the class of dwellings with which the tract is being improved. It contains ten rooms, and will cost about $10,000. The home of C. H. Peters, on the west side of Cañon Drive, about 100 feet north of Elevado avenue, is another artistic building. This is completed, and cost about $7000.

An artistic store building has been built by the company owning the tract. It is two stories high, as the photo shows, and is located on the southwest corner of Beverly Drive and Burton Way. There are three large store rooms on the Beverly Drive frontage, one of which is occupied by a general store. The corner store room will be occupied by a bank. The second floor is finished as a large hall, and is fully equipped for lodges, meetings and entertainments.

The tract is one of the best situated of any surrounding Los Angeles, lying on a pretty mesa, and surrounded by gently rolling hills. Sound judgment has been exercised in a decorative and artistic way. There are four parks, thousands of shrubs, trees and flowers. The avenues are oil-tamped, and instead of running at right angles, they wind in broad, graceful curves, forming an infinite variety of building sites.

Two of the new subway lines will run to Beverly Hills. It is said that the distance between the city and Beverly Hills will be made in less than fifteen minutes. Three car lines now go there. One, via Sawtelle, to Santa Monica, one via Hollywood and the Westgate line. The Percy H. Clark Company is the agent and manager for the tract.

OCEANO BEACH IMPROVEMENTS.

An arc-light system was put in at Oceano Beach in San Luis Obispo county last week, lighting up the ocean front of that resort, and an eighty-foot boulevard is being constructed. Many improvements have been put in within the past few weeks which are greatly adding to its attractiveness. Building and realty also are active, and many new settlers are reported to be coming in. Oceano is a part of the famous Pismo beach and because of its location on the Southern Pacific main coast line has become the shipping point of the Arroyo Grande Valley.

HUNTINGTON BEACH SCHOOL.

Artistic Building Designed by Local Architects—Large Grounds Surround It.

Work soon will be begun on a high-school building for Huntington Beach. A picture, from the architect's drawing, showing the school as it will appear when completed, is printed on this page today. The school is located about three-quarters of a mile back from the beach on the main road leading to Huntington Beach from the east. The Huntington Beach Company has set aside a tract of land 400x600 feet in size, and so located that the building, when completed, will be seen from all sections of the surrounding country. There is a large grove of trees at the rear of the lot, which afford shade as well as a pleasing background for the building.

The building is to be of frame construction, with a plastered exterior and a brick base extending up to the first story window sills. It has been designed in the Spanish colonial style, by Arthur Rolland Kelly, architect, and William Arthur Newberry of Los Angeles, and will contain all of the appliances for the administration of a thoroughly modern high school.

The first floor will contain six classrooms, besides the teachers' and principal's room, with closet and toilet accommodations. In the second story there will be an auditorium which will seat about 350 people, a commercial room, a study room, a chemical laboratory, and a physics laboratory, so located that the physics lecture room adjoining it can be opened up to form, with the physics laboratory, a small assembly room that will seat nearly 200 people. The stage and the large auditorium is also connected with the physics lecture room, so that the lecture room may be used as an adjunct to the larger assembly room.

The basement will contain the heating and ventilating apparatus, the toilet, and the lunch rooms, as well as the large manual-training room. When the building is completed it will cost approximately $40,000.

EXCHANGE CORNER.

B. W. Bartels has sold for A. H. Brokamp and Lawrence Hohl, to C. C. J. Hildesheim, the northwest corner of Washington and Hoover streets, lot 92x165 feet, improved with fair improvements valued at $25,000. The grantors take a twenty-acre orange grove at Ontario, valued at $15,000, and a house and lot on West Fifty-fifth street near Moneta avenue, lot 40x135 feet, improved with a nine-room residence, and valued at $5000, in exchange. The balance of the $25,000 was taken in a mortgage back on the lot.

TRADE LOTS FOR RANCH.

Stratford Tract Property Exchanged for Tehunga Canyon Farm—Value Is Thirty Thousand.

William M. Clark of Los Angeles has sold to Mrs. Sarah A. Cheney, through the agency of the C. B. Fagg Company, the remaining thirty-eight lots in the Stratford Tract, in South Pasadena, valued at $32,300. Mrs. Cheney has transferred, as part payment in the above deal, a tract of fifty-three acres at Monte Vista, about eight miles from San Fernando, and valued at $30,000. The land is improved with grapes and oranges. The ranch lies just at the mouth of the Big Tehunga Cañon, in a little valley, and is sheltered from winds.

The company reports other sales as follows: Thomas I. Gifford of South Pasadena has sold to John E. Dublin of Los Angeles a modern six-room bungalow, on the corner of Mound avenue and Oxley street, lot 50x120 feet; consideration, $4500. Mrs. Ida L. Steinbar of Los Angeles has sold to Mrs. B. L. Smith of Pasadena a four-room modern bungalow, on the south side of Rollins street, near Fair Oaks avenue; lot 50x150 feet. Mrs. Smith bought for a home; consideration, $2500.

HIGH-CLASS PROPERTY.

Two Vacant Lots in Wilshire Boulevard District Bring Big Prices. Two Persons to Improve.

H. W. Allstrom has purchased a lot 50x145 feet, located on the west side of Catalina street, about 165 feet south of West Seventh street, in one of the choicest sections of Wilshire Boulevard Heights, south of Seventh street. The price per front foot was $60, making the total consideration $3000. The buyer is planning to improve the property with a handsome two-story residence. The sale was made through the agency of the Arthur W. Kinney Company.

The same company also reports the sale of another choice residence lot on the south side of West Seventh street, about 640 feet west of Magnolia avenue. The lot has a frontage of sixty feet on Seventh street and a depth of 155 feet. The property was bought by a local investor from T. J. Lesher for the stated consideration of $4500 cash.

LONG LIST OF HOUSES SOLD.

Transactions Completed by Local Realty Rirm Show Market Is Anything But Dull.

Charles F. Patterson & Co. report the following sales: For F. Z. Phillips to Miss Louise Ehrmann, a modern six-room bungalow at No. 2235 West Thirty-first street, consideration $3600; Frank J. Honig sold to N. J. Brubaker, a modern six-room bungalow at No. 2140 West Thirty-first street, consideration $4000; J. H. Williamson has sold to Dorothy E. Parker a seven-room modern bungalow on Budlong avenue, south of Santa Barbara, in the West Park tract, consideration $4000; Fannie C. Laird has sold to J. H. Lyell, the modern five-room bungalow, No. 3626 South Flower street, consideration $3650; George H. Patterson sold to Dr. Chester L. Magee, the modern six-room bungalow at No. 453 West Forty-third street, consideration $4000; H. S. Beaver sold to Emma C. Esterley, a lot on Thirty-first street, east of Arlington avenue, 40x120 feet, consideration $1000. Mrs. Clo Cunningham has sold to Guy Harrold, a lot on Twenty-ninth Place, west of Arlington avenue, 41x122 feet, consideration $850; A. B. Mader sells to Miss Esther M. Wilson, a lot on Twenty-ninth Place, east of Cimarron street, 50x125 feet, consideration $1000; M. Herrman sold to Clo Cunningham, a lot on Thirtieth street, east of Arlington avenue, 40x130 feet, consideration $1000; J. Van Trump has sold to R. D. Morris a lot on Forty-fifth street, between Moneta avenue and Figueroa street, 40x135 feet, consideration $1200; Dr. L. Magee sold to a local investor, two lots each 40x140 feet on Twenty-seventh street, west of Arlington avenue, consideration $750 each, and lot on West Thirtieth street, between Durango and Cimarron streets, to S. Preston, consideration $1100; Miss Verna C. Blythe has sold to J. Muff a lot on Marshall street in Strong & Dickinson's tract, 40x120 feet, consideration $900.

TWO THOUSAND AN ACRE.

Highest Price for Claremont Orange Groves—Sales on Twenty-eighth Street.

The H. R. Cowan Co. has sold to a Los Angeles investor for Cornelia P. Wimberly, a ten-acre orange grove, located about three miles west of Claremont, for a reported consideration of $20,000. At this price the rate per acre is exactly $2000, which is said to be the highest price per acre ever paid for this class of property this year.

The same agency has also made several other sales, as follows: A. B. Tomlinson and A. E. Dutcher sold to Burton J. Sefton the property at No. 2067 West Twenty-eighth street, consisting of a lot, 50x100 feet, improved with a six-room bungalow, for $4500.

Burton J. Sefton sold to A. B. Tomlinson and A. E. Dutcher a lot on the east side of Cimarron street, between Sixteenth and Eighteenth streets, for $1850.

ALHAMBRA PARK SALES.

Lots sold in Alhambra Park tract by T. Wiesendanger during last week are as follows: To A. H. Merrick, 150 feet fronting west, on Almansor street, price $1125. To J. S. Bruner, fifty feet fronting west on Almansor street, price $375. To J. A. Wood, fifty feet fronting west on Almansor street, price $375.

BEAUTIFUL NEW MISSION HOME.

This home is finished throughout the lower floor in fine quarter-sawed oak, put in by the best workmen obtainable in the city. No expense was spared to produce an A1 job, and as the house has never been occupied the beautiful workmanship on window and door frames, doors, and paneling on walls and ceilings is perfectly intact.

SPECIAL NOTICE—The glass used in bookcases, buffet doors and throughout the house where bevel plate is used, is the best in the market—quoted today at $3.50 per square foot.

The large, cheerful dining-room, with walls paneled 5 feet high with oak, has a specially-designed built-in buffet with heavy glass doors and hand-carved oak trimming. In the pantry in the rear bountiful shelf, bin and drawer room is available. The whole front of the house has plate glass windows, while the entrance itself is of heavy oak with art plate glass on the sides, making a very attractive appearance. The den, so dear to the heart of every man, has walls of paneled oak and luxurious imported tapestries, together with a mantel finished in old gold and built-in bookcases with plate glass doors furnished with glass knobs.

Five large bedrooms, one of them 21x17, exclusive of a front alcove, which contains built-in seats, are all tinted in soft harmonious colors and well supplied with closets. The cemented and bricked cellar contains the best furnace manufactured; the large cemented porch in front extends the whole width of the house and everything else in the appointments of the place is strictly up-to-date, even to an interior telephone.

REMEMBER, this house has never been occupied, its location is superb, facing a $30,000 home, and for the price it cannot be duplicated at the present price of materials and building.

WEST ADAMS HEIGHTS HOME.

This fine 10-room house on a well-elevated lot, 75x210, on Harvard Blvd., is surrounded on all sides by homes of equal value. Entrance to the house is made over an immense veranda 12x48, through an imposing oak doorway, finished with solid brass and nickel hardware. All the windows in the front of the house are of plate glass. A large, well-lighted reception hall extends a cordial welcome to the visitor. From this room there leads a fine, easy, artistic winding stairway to the second floor.

The dining-room, which occupies one side of the front of the house, is bright and cheery and has a large specially-designed buffet; also a built-in seat. Here, as elsewhere in the house, the lighting fixtures are of a special pattern and elaborate in design. The LIVING-ROOM is 16x28 and has an old Dutch fireplace built of Chatsworth stone. The windows are large, giving pleasant prospects on all sides and in the rear you find a charming den having a 7-foot pressed brick mantel, casement windows over built-in seats and an air of luxury throughout.

Among the features of this residence are the large specially-designed and decorated billiard-room, and the mammoth kitchen and pass-pantries with their many drawers, bins and cupboards. There are two screen porches on which are located the wash trays, while in the basement, which is cemented, there is a fine furnace, a Monarch hot-water heater, wine cellar, and wood and coal bins. The garage on the rear of the lot is large enough to accommodate three cars and has cement floor, and is connected with the sewer; also has a servant's room.

There are five dainty cheerful, well-lighted bedchambers with two modern bathrooms, in which the plumbing and fixtures are of nickel plate.

This property is a bargain in every sense, and we would advise you to act quickly if it meets your fancy.

FOR SALE—BY
JAMES V. BALDWIN,
536-537-538 H. W. HELLMAN BLDG.

Below we quote a few choice properties in the Westminster Place, located in the beautiful Wilshire Boulevard district, the coming residence section of the city. Houses are being rapidly erected in this tract, and several others will be commenced in the near future. This property is more particularly desirable on account of the high location, lots being from two to four feet above grade.

East front on Grammercy Place, between Wilshire Boulevard and Sixth street; 75x150; $2900.

East front on St. Andrew's Place, between Wilshire Blvd. and Sixth street; 70x150; $2750.

East front on Western avenue, near Sixth street; 60x150; $2170.

East front on Manhattan Place, between Wilshire Blvd. and 6th street; 70x150; $2800.

East front on St. Andrew's Place, near 6th street; 52½x150; $1800.

East front on Grammercy Place, between 5th and 6th streets; 60x150; $1700.

West front on Manhattan Place near Wilshire Blvd.; 75x150; $2200.

West front on St. Andrew's Place, between 5th and 6th streets; 60x150; $1700.

S.E. corner of St. Andrew's Place and 5th street; 60x150; $2200.

S.W. corner Manhattan Place and 5th street; double clean corner; 60x150; $2250.

N.W. corner of Manhattan Place and Sixth street; 120x150; only $4500.

West front on Manhattan Place, between 5th and 6th streets; 60x150; $1675. This is a snap.

Take the West Sixth-street car to Western avenue and look these properties over. They will interest you, as property in this district is the cheapest in the city. Work all done; water piped to each lot.

is the place, and you can buy lots now as low as $325 on easy terms.

That's absolutely 25 per cent. less than you'll pay for any other equally well located and improved lots in the southwest.

It's the ONE BEST place to invest in. You can get in RIGHT and get out RIGHT. Prices are not inflated here. Values are intrinsic—substantial, and property of this character sells readily when less desirable property goes begging.

The location is perfect, right between Figueroa st., Moneta ave., and Main st. Blvd. directly in line with the city's great growth to the sea. All high class city improvements, including shade and ornamental trees are COMPLETED. There's quick profit for you here. Better get busy NOW. Call for free tickets to tract. Open Sunday.

SOME PEOPLE BUY WATER TO GET THE LAND
BUT AT BELLE VERNON WHEN YOU BUY THE LAND YOU GET THE WATER FREE.

You don't suppose that hundreds of people would be rushing eagerly to get this land if it was not all right, do you? It is the greatest bargain ever offered in Los Angeles. Belle Vernon is only 20 minutes from the Huntington Depot and when the four-track line now under construction is completed, the time will be reduced to about 12 minutes. You have the choice of two fast car lines. The soil is a rich sandy garden loam. The water is pure, free and unlimited. It is piped direct to your door. The Long Beach Boulevard passes in front of you. You can raise enough vegetables, chickens and berries to make all your subsequent payments. Your acre is growing in value every day and when it gets too valuable to use for home and garden you can cut it into lots and sell each lot for more than the whole acre costs you today.

WHOLE ACRES $650 UP.
$20 DOWN, EASY PAYMENTS, $20.

Go to it now and don't wait if you want one. Remember that Belle Vernon is not an obscure tract, hidden away behind the hills, but lies right in the track of best development on the way to Long Beach and swept by the most invigorating sea breezes.

FREE TICKETS WITH PLEASURE.
IF YOU GO YOU'LL BUY.

No other home place like it in Greater Los Angeles. If you don't want a home, but simply seek an investment, see Belle Vernon by all means, and you can double your money.

Now is your opportunity to investigate the wonderful opportunities of this high-grade subdivision, which is a beautifully lying piece of land, with a gradual rise from Vermont avenue to Normandie avenue, and the altitude gives a fine view of the long ranges of mountains and of Los Angeles and surrounding country, and also the benefits of the ocean breeze. Manchester Heights has two rapid transit electric lines, and opposite the southwest boundary of Los Angeles, also has the pleasures of country life and the conveniences of the city, near stores and churches, and only one block from a new $14,000 public school. The improvements are high-grade, including graded and oiled streets, lined with beautiful trees; also cement sidewalks and curbs and abundance of artesian water piped along the rear of all lots; these improvements are of the best workmanship, which will be finished by an early date. The soil is of a dark, sandy loam, where fruits, vegetables and flowers grow of surpassing quality. Invest your idle dollar where it will double every year; large, sightly lots, 153 feet deep to 16-foot alleys. Our agents on the ground at all times. Office open Sunday. FOR SALE—
Business Property.

FOR SALE—SPRING STREET.

50x120 to 25-foot alley, 40 feet south of 12-story building on Fourth. "On account of the present summer dullness" I will sell you this lot at a price which is a very big "cut," though many say "no property is being offered at a cut price." Well, just ask them what they think of $4500 for Spring and Fourth. This don't mean that the price is cut from $5000 to $4500—but the cut is from $6500—TO $4500.

But you must act at once. I do not even guarantee the delivery at this price on Monday, but its advertised, here in good faith and for good "reasons."

If price will move it "you'll see her feel the thrill of life along her keel!" If money eases up or slows down to where I can reach it with my sand bag then you just watch me how easy it will be for me to mark this lot back up to a price commensurate with the value of the very best "Central Business property" of a city of 350,000 population.

Lots of other fellows would be glad to sell at a "cut," too, but they are afraid if they advertise a low price they couldn't put it back to its original price after the "silent panic" is over! But that don't worry me a little bit! My experience is it's a whole lot easier to follow a rising market and mark it up than to acknowledge a falling market and mark it down. You say the market has not fallen? All right, Bud, you're the doctor! Come right on and get THE VERY BEST in the city at a bargain.

If I get my loan or make the sale of other property I'm negotiating on, you'll find I think just as much of Spring and Fourth as you do. But I sometimes talk straight and say what I think and this is notice to you that until the banks begin to lend money I'm going to "be keerful," too! So this is your chance to get a summer bargain or a "silent panic" bargain, or a "loud knocker's" bargain, or any other old kind of a bargain you want to call it! See? It don't take nerve to mark it up. It DOES take nerve to mark it down, though the supposition usually is that the fellow who first marks it down first loses his nerve! Not on your life! Any old fish can swim down stream—or with the crowd. The crowd prays for the CHANCE to get a low price but daresn't advertise it. The crowd cries, "Boost, don't knock!" but gries it for FEAR that to admit the FACTS will hurt their chance to sell! The banks consign to the demnition bow-wows the fellow who tries to get ready for the uncertainty of the financial future by getting a little money "where he can put his hands on it"—but will some citizen of Eternal Boost kindly tell us what the banks are doing with every bloomin' cent they can get their hands on?

But—but lucky to relate, they're only doing it "temporarily!" They're going to "resume" later—as soon as conditions justify it! Oh, Joy! for me—but not for you unless you jump in and get this "only cut-priced lot in the solid business center of Los Angeles!" Come early for you must have seen by Saturday's Express that "Realty inquiry is stronger" and "Dealers say that evidences of improving market conditions are beginning to make themselves manifest." And from the Record that E. M. Hitchcock, of Bradstreet's says "LOS ANGELES LEADS" and "the city is in better financial condition than any town in the country," and "Reports received from all the great commercial and financial centers, by the big mercantile agencies, shows Los Angeles to be in the healthiest financial condition of any city in the country. Money is easier, the past business season has been much better and the outlook is brighter than any city in the East or Middle West." And as to The Times' good news just look at the Real Estate Section today.

And the "Crop reports!" Just get posted on the crop reports and you'll see that it's impossible for money to stay tight as soon as it is put wise as to the crops.

So "Don't worry! Watch us grow!" If a knocker comes around tell him he's an injury to the community and ought to be ashamed either to say what he thinks or to think different from what the "men who know" think, or rather, perhaps, maybe, say! Tell him to go take a dose of calomel, that's what he needs instead of money on good collateral to pay his debts when they are due! Tell him that the Financiers of our day in New York and the East are "wise" now as to panics and they won't let any come if only a few dodgasted 2x4 croakers whose opinion don't cut any ice anyway, will just keep quiet and not bring the panic by their pessimism! Tell 'em that there's plenty of money here for all legitimate loans, but you are trying to discourage this "wild catting" 'way out at Fourth and Spring! Tell 'em—tell 'em—just tell 'em, the knocker, the pessimist, to please forget his debts and remember the orders the mills have that will last for the next two years! And if he dares suggest that more of those orders are "two years old" than "two months old" just swat him one on his crazy head and charge the wreck to me! What has all that to do with this ad, to sell a lot at Fourth and Spring?

Oh, nothing, except just to give you a sample of the "reason" why you can get this lot at a "cut price!"

My "reasons" for selling cheap are absolutely foolish and silly and weak, but what's it to you if they result in your being able to pick up a bargain I dropped in my foolish flight from a little summer dullness, or a temporary money stringency caused by absence of money which is only on its little short annual trip to move the crops of our prosperous country? "That's all."

Just call me up for easy terms and cut price, and then when you've made about $100,000 to $150,000 profit on me, like the Delta Building people and the Braly Building people, and others down on Spring have done, just drop in on me at Poor Farm some day and give me the merry ha! ha! and let me congratulate you upon having the nerve to swim the opposite way from the crowd and "buy" when others were not buying! See?

Go down and look at the numbers, 414-16-18 South Spring, (two vacant, but that's only "temporary,") and notice how absolutely safe is the location for an office building of ten stories. I can deliver it promptly and ready for you to build on as half the tenants are out and the others' leases expire in 30 days, and the mortgage is due and by some earnest clubbing and threats I think you could induce the bank to accept the money—so that you could clear the buildings in 30 days of absolutely everything except the rats, and they go with the building—without extra charge. So if you ever expect to get in on Spring st. you must be an awfully dodgasted piking pessimist if you hesitate to turn your money loose on this opportunity.

Just mail me a check and I'll bring the deed down before my name dries on it unless I run so fast I break my leg on the way.

FOR SALE— 50 ACRES OF LAND ABSOLUTELY FREE.

We are going to subdivide a large tract of fine agricultural land in Mexico into tracts of fifty acres and upwards and sell the same to American farmers. This land will produce all tropical and semi-tropical fruits, such as bananas, pineapples, oranges, lemons, sugar cane, rubber, tobacco, rice, etc. It is the finest stock country in the world; climatic conditions are good, cheap labor and a good market. 50 acres developed will make you independent. This land will be sold on long time payments and we are going to give the first ten settlers 50 acres absolutely free who will improve the same. This property is 1000 miles closer to New York than Los Angeles, and you can go there on a Pullman sleeper. It is not pioneering like it was in the West years ago. All we ask of the people we give this land to is that they have backbone and grit and want to make themselves independent.

BILLOWY CONTEST.

NEW LINER TO RACE LUCANIA.

Maiden Cunarder, Lusitania, to Test Her Speed.

From Liverpool to New York, Sets Sail Today.

Highest Power Not to Be Utilized First Time.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Rarely has any event aroused so much interest in shipping circles as the maiden voyage of the new Cunarder, the Lusitania, which leaves Liverpool on September 7, on her first voyage to New York.

Added interest, too, will be given to the event by the fact that two hours before the Lusitania leaves, the Lucania, of the same line, will depart from Liverpool, also bound for New York.

The Lusitania will proceed under easy steam to Queenstown in order that the Lucania may have a chance of embarking passengers and getting away from the Irish port of call.

The Lusitania will leave Queenstown about 10 o'clock in the morning, and then will probably commence the real contest from Daunt Rock to Sandy Hook, doing from twenty to twenty-one knots an hour, and with her three hours' start the Lucania will be on the broad waters of the Atlantic when the Lusitania is emerging from the Queenstown Harbor, but, traveling at the rate of twenty-four knots, the Lusitania will, in all probability, overhaul the Lucania long before America is sighted.

The fact that the Lusitania will not be driven at its highest speed on her maiden voyage gives the Lucania a sporting chance of arriving first in New York.

GREWSOME JOKE.

HEAD OF MAN FOR COMPANION.

MYSTERY IN SAN FRANCISCO SOON EXPLAINED.

Finding of Portion of Remains of Man in Vacant Lot Sets Detectives to Work Until They Learn That Grewsome Relics Were Property of Labor Union Joker.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Swathed in a grimy sack, the head of a man with two bullet holes in it, and a right hand resembling a woman's from its frailness were found in a vacant lot on the north side of Oak street, between Steiner and Pierce streets, about ten feet from the sidewalk, late yesterday afternoon by two children at play.

Both head and hand were well preserved, and the police, while dubious, incline to the belief that the grewsome relics came from a medical college, and were thrown into the lot by a student.

The head was that of a man about 60 years of age, and it was covered with a thin growth of gray hair. The cheeks, upper lip and chin of the face were covered with a half-inch growth of beard. The correctness of the features and high brow spoke of intelligence, and the hand was that of a man not accustomed to manual labor.

DETECTIVES GET BUSY.

The fact that the head was punctured by two bullet holes in the temples and the mysterious incidents which followed its discovery in the deserted lot, threw the entire detective force, headed by Capt. Colby, into immediate action.

In the left temple of the head were two small holes, half an inch apart, while on the opposite side was another hole. Apparently one bullet had remained in the head and the other found an exit. The events which took place following the ghastly find revived the memory of the Tortorici and Nora Fuller mysteries.

Not long after the discovery an unknown person telephoned to police headquarters that the trunk and arms of a man had been discovered in a vacant lot at No. 975 Fell street. A thorough inspection of the lot failed to reveal any evidence of a tragedy, and after the police had made an exhaustive search, the responsibility for the telephone call was passed up to some practical joker.

Some of the elements of mystery were swept aside when George Dogherty, residing at Fell and Laguna streets, went to the morgue and identified the head and hand as those which he had seen in possession of Dr. Graham, a walking delegate of the Tinners' Union, who left today to attend a labor meeting in Chicago.

"Graham got them from a medical college," said Dogherty, "and carried them around as a josh. He exhibited them to his friends in saloons."

"BORROWED" ON POOR ASSETS.

Appointment of Receiver for Hall Manufacturing Company Brings Queer Methods to Light.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—The appointment of a receiver for the properties of the Belding Hall Manufacturing Company followed close upon the alleged discovery by the creditors of the concern that its president, Jesse Edson Hall, had appropriated to his own use at least $315,000 of the corporation's funds.

So far as can be discovered, every dollar of this money went into mining stock, which was backed up with no tangible property; theatrical ventures, which made no money, and other "securities," which the creditors are willing to sell in a lump for something less than $4000.

Indications yesterday were that Hall would not voluntarily return from Canada, and that criminal prosecution would be instituted, to bring him back to this country, by the First National Bank, which holds notes of the company aggregating $100,000.

It is claimed that Hall has been "borrowing" the company's money for at least two years. There has been little effort on his part to conceal this fact. The money, taken out of the business was secured only by promissory notes signed by Hall. As he has no other property than the $60,000 worth of Belding-Hall stock, which is worthless until all outstanding bills are paid, it is expected that the $315,000 which he borrowed and the $40,000 which he lent irresponsible persons—$355,000 in all—is a total loss.

A pathetic feature of the case is the condition of the missing man's two children, who are living at the Hall home in charge of a housekeeper. Since Hall left Chicago they have received no word from him; neither have they received any money with which to meet the household expenses.

STEUNENBERG TRIAL.

PETTIBONE CASE MUST GO OVER.

JUDGE WOOD WOULD WAIT TILL BORAH IS TRIED.

Formal Ruling Not Yet Made, but on Opposition to Continuance Court Holds Delay Is Necessary—Senator's Case May Require Four Weeks.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

BOISE (Idaho) Sept. 7.—The State filed a motion in the District Court today for the continuance of the case of George Pettibone, for alleged complicity in the Steunenberg murder.

The case has been set for October 1. The defense opposed the motion, but Judge Wood, although making no formal ruling, said it would be necessary to continue the case until the trial of Senator Borah is concluded.

The court acknowledged he would make a ruling next Tuesday. Attorney Hawley of the prosecution, who is defending Senator Borah, said the government claimed it would require four weeks to try the Borah case, but the defense was of opinion it would not take more than two weeks.

THE NAVY.

PACIFIC CRUISE IS DENOUNCED.

NAVAL JOURNAL DECLARES FLEET IS UNPREPARED.

Technical Magazine Points Out Mechanical Defects in Warships and Says It Is Undesirable to Send Vessels on Long Journey When They Are Not Fit for Battle.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "The more the Pacific cruise under present conditions is considered, the more strongly it appears to be an undertaking about equally compounded of ill-justified vainglory and cheap politics."

The foregoing is the conclusion of the Navy, a technical journal devoted to the discussion of naval problems, as it will appear in the September issue of that publication.

The Navy is opposed to the Pacific cruise, not on account of the supposed offense to the Japanese, but solely on account of the unpreparedness of the fleet. Before discussing the fleet and its shortcomings in the matter of equipment, the Navy points out what it considers the structural defects in the Missouri, which, it says are so glaring that the commanding officer has been forbidden to fire the twelve-inch guns dead ahead because the forecastle deck is not strong enough to withstand the effect of the blast from these guns. In commenting on the battle tactics employed in the recent maneuvers, the Navy says:

"Rear-Admiral Mason, at the head of ordnance, has done exceedingly good service in supplying efficient sights for the guns, but the range-finding and fire patrol apparatus are still wholly unsatisfactory. Range-finders that cannot give the distance of a hostile ship within an area of less than 500 yards are, if not wholly useless, altogether inefficient, for this area is more than twice the area of a twelve-inch gun at 6000 yards.

"It is obvious, therefore, that such an error would very seriously affect the shooting efficiency of our ships. Luckily, new and admirably efficient apparatus has been devised and ordered, and in time our fleets will escape this disadvantage. But it seems to be undesirable that this great fleet should be sent to the Pacific Coast at an extra cost of hundreds of thousands of dollars for coal, when, as a matter of fact, it is not fit for battle."

The charges in The Navy are declared false by officials of the Navy Department.

"If these charges are true," said an official of the department today, "the determination to send the fleet to the Pacific Coast is already bearing fruit. If the navy is really as badly off as is charged, it is time that fact is known and Congress shall be impressed with the idea that the defect should be remedied at once. I do not agree with the allegations, but I do not doubt that the long cruise will develop a number of defects that ought to be remedied."

BELL LEADS THE EAGLES.

Californian Elected Head of Grand Aerie, and Seattle Gets the Next Meeting.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NORFOLK (Va.) Sept. 7.—The official announcement today of the vote in yesterday's election of officers of the Grand Aerie, Fraternal Order of Eagles, showed the election of the full administration ticket, headed by Theodore A. Bell of California.

Seattle was chosen as the next place of meeting over Jamestown, N. Y. The proposition for a standard uniform is strongly opposed, with the result yet in doubt. If the standard uniform prevails, it will simply require the standard uniform for a specific number in each Aerie with the right to the Aeries to continue individual uniforms if desired.

A resolution was adopted requiring unqualified closing of all Eagle homes on Sunday.

Teetotalers Bad Company.

A canny Scot was brought before a magistrate on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. "What have you to say for yourself, sir?" demanded the magistrate. "You look like a respectable man and ought to be ashamed to stand there."

"I am verra sorry, sir, but I cam' up in bad company fra Glasgow," humbly replied the prisoner.

"What sort of company?"

"A lot of teetotalers," was the startling response.

"Do you mean to say that teetotalers are bad company?" thundered the magistrate. "I think they are the best of company for such as you."

"Beggin' yer pardon, sir," answered the prisoner, "ye're wrong, for I had a bottle of whusky an' I had to drink it all myself."—[Reynolds' Newspaper.

IN SHADOW OF WHITE HOUSE.

REAL PRINCE CAUSES STIR.

Washingtonians Join in Doing Him Honor.

Scientists of Foreign Lands Feted at Capital:

Rumor Says Mrs. Garfield Is Aiming High.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Society was divided this week between the northern centers which were occupied with the entertainment of a real live Prince of royal blood, and the festivities at home, arranged in honor of the several hundred delegates to the International Zoölogical Congress recently held in Boston. Many of those near and dear to social-official Washington shared in both series of feastings and fetings. All are unanimous in declaring the son of King Oscar of Sweden a most democratic and diplomatic young person. Washingtonians also agree that his English was 90 per cent. better than their Swedish. Indeed, they are generous in their praise of his fluent speech, and declare that this mastery of our language added much to the venerable reputation acquired by the Prince in this country.

The delegation of visiting scientists was over two hundred strong and included leading men of science from Great Britain, France, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Russia, Mexico, Japan and other countries, and their wives and daughters. From the moment of their arrival, Tuesday afternoon, until their departure on Friday, the entire party was "personally conducted." The gentlemen were taken in charge by their brother scientists here and immediately invited to write another chapter in the already brilliant history of the Cosmos Club, which has for its headquarters the famous "Dolly Madison House" on Lafayette Square. The ladies were equally well entertained by the following special committee: Mrs. Adams, chairman; Mrs. Irving W. Adams, Mrs. Henry F. Blount, Mrs. Frank Baker, Miss Baker, Miss Eva Baker, Mrs. Cyrus Adler, Miss Edith Coyle, Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Ransome and Miss West, daughter of Commissioner Henry L. West, who gave the address of welcome to the delegation on behalf of the District.

A day of sightseeing on Wednesday was followed by a large reception at the Congressional Library in the evening. The various government laboratories were opened Thursday morning for special inspection by the scientists, and in the evening another large reception was given. This time the scene of merriment was the institution given by the English philanthropist, James Smithson, for "the diffusion of knowledge among men," from which beneficent gift to the young republic has sprung all of the scientific bureaus of the government. Here the mind could feast at will. The dress of the Americans of yesterday would be compared with that of today, and the history of our country, as told on rock or tables of stone, be read by him who understandeth. Here also science is brought within the comprehension of the untrained mind in the only room of the kind in America—devoted entirely to the use of children. The wall decoration is not the least of its attractions, it being done after a Celtic pattern.

As Labor Day is by common consent regarded by the devotees of fashion as the dividing date between the summer and autumn season, a social upheaval is in progress. People who, like Gen. and Mrs. Corbin, have been here more or less all summer, are now taking their vacation, and those who went abroad early in the spring, are hurrying home as fast as the steamship companies can bring them and will reopen their suburban homes while directing the remantling of their Washington residences.

The Secretary of Agriculture, the chatelaine of whose home is traveling on the continent with no date set for her return, headed the list of returning officials. He reached here the last of August and was foremost in making welcome the world's distinguished men of science.

The Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Metcalf have started eastward from their California home, and are expected to reopen their home here sometime next week. According to present plans, the next arrivals in officialdom will be Secretary of Commerce and Labor and Mrs. Straus, who have covered more miles since leaving the Capitol, than any other members of the Cabinet circle, except, of course, Mr. Roosevelt's "Traveling Secretary" and his wife, who are booked to leave Seattle September 10, for a trip to the Orient which will bring them home by way of the Siberian railroad and through Europe in time for the beginning of the formal season.

Mrs. Garfield was here for a few days recently, but apparently more on business than on pleasure bent. She came primarily to look after the needs of the larger home she will occupy during the coming winter and in which, Dame Rumor says, she will inaugurate the social programme by which she hopes to reach the height of her ambition—even the position of mistress of the White House itself.

This youngest member of the "boudoir cabinet" takes as serious a view of her duties to her family of four boys as she does of her obligation to her husband. After inspecting her future home, she paid a visit to Mr. Garfield's newly furnished and redecorated offices at the Department of the Interior, and heard it whispered approvingly in official circles that he had planned to save the government the neat little sum of $200,000 on the management of the Patent and Pension offices alone, without the dismissal of a single clerk. Then she started back to the boys and the farm in Ohio, where she will remain another month.

The farm, by the way, is the one at which Hon. and Mrs. James A. Garfield brought up their boys, and where the news of his election to the highest office in the gift of the people was officially announced to him.

Admiral and Mrs. Dewey, during the coming season, will occupy the latter's home in K street. This makes them next-door neighbors of the Secretary of War, and marks the reopening of the residence which was a hospital center during the entire régime of the Hitchcocks as members of the Cabinet circle. The Admiral and Mrs. Dewey, since their marriage, have lived in the house given to the former by the people of Washington to commemorate the battle of Manila Bay. While this house is delightfully arranged for social purposes, it will not accommodate the large guest list of the Admiral of the navy. The change into larger quarters is taken as an indication that Mrs. Dewey's health is sufficiently restored to permit her to take again an active part in social life.

The Dewey home on Rhode Island avenue has been taken by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mitchell. Mrs. Mitchell began her social career here as Miss Augusta Hancock, niece of Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock, and continued it as the wife of Col. Luther Hau, U.S.A. She emerged from the retirement of mourning for her first husband to introduce her three charming daughters, one of whom has since become Mrs. Jay Lippincott of Philadelphia, and another Mrs. Charles Mason of this city. The youngest daughter is unmarried.

The new home of the Comptroller of the Currency and Mrs. William Barret Ridgeley is assuming an unwonted activity in anticipation of the approaching marriage of the eldest daughter of the house, Miss Catherine Cullom Ridgeley, which is set for October 24, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the wedding of the parents of the bride-elect. Miss Ridgeley and her sister, Miss Eleanor Ridgeley, are exceedingly pretty girls, their beauty being of the Saxon type, inherited from their mother, the first Mrs. Ridgeley, nee Miss Cullom, daughter of United States Senator Shelby Cullom, of Illinois. Both girls were sent to a finishing school abroad, and Miss Catherine especially is a fine linguist. As Mrs. Phelps Brown, it is confidently expected she will hold the position she won in the hearts of the people, when, as "the lovely Miss Ridgeley," she gave much of her time and her talents for the benefit of those less fortunately placed.

The Congressional circle will have lost at least three of its popular maidens before Congress convenes in December. The first to go was Miss Elizabeth Richardson, who was married on Wednesday at her father's home in Huntsville, Ala., to Thomas B. Howell of Richmond, Va. As the engagement had not been announced, the wedding was the greatest surprise of the season.

Early in October Miss Elizabeth Wyndam Washington, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Joseph E. Washington of Wessyngton, Tenn., will become the bride of H. Stuart Hotchkiss, and probably will come to the capital for the winter.

No date has yet been set for the marriage of Miss Carolyn Huff and Murray Cobb, which, it was thought, would take place at the country home of the bride's parents, Representative and Mrs. George Huff, near Greensburg, Pa., until rush orders were given to fit up the new Washington home, which will be ready for occupancy early in November.

Mr. Cobb is now visiting the family of his fiancée, and society expects to be notified of a decision as to time and place before his return to Washington.

J. B. Eastman, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Walton, D. Jones, T. J. McCarthy and Miss Dorothy C. Noyes of Los Angeles; E. S. Larsen, Jr., of Berkeley; Mr. and Mrs. Boos Harbost of Pantteville; Mr. and Mrs. J. Frandsen, Miss C. Frandsen and James H. Norris of Oakland; Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Bartech, Mrs. H. M. McCoum, Miss A. Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Haltman and L. W. Halloway of San Francisco, and Mrs. F. E. French of Chico are the Californians who were seen in Washington within the week.

GRACE PORTER HOPKINS.

GERMAN STUDENTS' GUEST.

Royal Swedish Visitor's Last Day in Gotham Was Such a Jolly One.

Hoch soll er leben,
Hoch soll er leben,
Hoch, Hoch, Hoch.

This German song, says the New York Tribune of September 3, which is equivalent to our own "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," was sung last night to the accompanying banging of beer steins by eighty members of the Society of Old German Students in honor of Prince Wilhelm of Sweden, who was their guest at dinner at the Arion Society. It was the climax of the last of his six days' stay in New York, for at midnight he left for Boston.

Although nearly all the diners were older than he, the Prince entered heartily into the spirit of the affair, and it was evident that after the many social functions of which he has been the center he welcomed the change to the "Deutsche gemutlichkeit" that prevailed last night. Especially was this so when the long tables were cleared after the dinner, and the affair resolved itself into a "kommers," an institution older than Heidelberg itself.

The tall, thin champagne glasses made way for short, thick beer steins, and in the democratic enjoyment that followed it would have been impossible to distinguish the Prince, who sat next to Prof. Carl Beck, president of the society, from the others who took part. The speeches at the close of the dinner were short. Prof. Beck proposed the toast to the guest of honor, which was drunk with a shout of "Hoch! Hoch!"

Justice McLean of the Supreme Court toasted the Grand Duke of Baden, Prince Wilhelm's maternal grandfather, and Prof. Learned of the University of Pennsylvania proposed the health of Emperor Wilhelm.

Prince Wilhelm spoke briefly in German, which language he spoke well, but somewhat haltingly. He also suggested the health of the Grand Duke of Baden as his toast, the orchestra playing "Die Wacht am Rhein."

The Grand Duke is one of the three honorary members of the Society of Old German Students, and it was because of this that Prince Wilhelm was entertained. President Roosevelt and Prince Henry of Prussia are the other two honorary members.

Then came the "kommers," with its beer drinking and German student songs.

The last day of his highness in this city was a busy one and included a visit to fire headquarters, where he witnessed a drill; an inspection of a model tenement house, a trip to Ellis Island and luncheon on Staten Island.

Prince Wilhelm had an opportunity of seeing how the New York firemen do things. He pressed a button that sounded an alarm in the engine house. In five seconds, timed by the royal visitor's own watch, the three horses of the engine and the two belonging to the hose cart were out and hitched up.

"Really remarkable," said Prince Wilhelm to Commissioner Lantry.

The party retired to a point opposite fire headquarters for a further exhibition. It was raining furiously, but the Prince was too much interested to mind that, so while Minister Lagerkrantz held an umbrella over him he waited for further action. Another alarm was sounded.

The party then proceeded to Staten Island, where the Prince was the guest at luncheon of Ernest Flagg, the architect, at his summer home, at Dongan Hills.

Following luncheon came the visit to Ellis Island, which was reached by the quarantine steamer Gov. Flower, from St. George. Prince Wilhelm remained only a short time on Ellis Island, but he expressed himself as well pleased at the treatment accorded there to new arrivals from abroad.

While there he talked to a Norwegian woman, who complained to Minister Lagerkrantz because of her detention at the immigrant station.

The National Firemen's Association of America, in session at Oklahoma City yesterday, selected Chicago for its 1908 convention.

PLAYSHOP'S BUFFER.

HIS PATIENCE LIKE ANGEL'S.

Theater Box Office Man Is Victim of Public.

Must Always Be Polite and Can't "Sass Back."

What Transpires After His Wicket Is Closed.

Ever stand behind the box office at a theater and see him work? It is instructive. It gives one a broad idea of the flexibility of human nature; the india rubber quality of temper; the value of training. Not one untrained man out of 10,000 could stand the ordeal without coming forth a physical wreck inside of a week.

The treasurer of a theater is the one man with whom the public comes in personal contact. Every one knows that a show house has a manager, for this name appears in print, and on the programme—and occasionally a prosperous individual who seems to have nothing to do is seen chatting with the newspaper critics, or buying them drinks.

Also, there is a doorkeeper, but he is an automaton, and there are ushers, but they are incidents. Actors and musicians, stage hands and the like, inhabit an unknown world. But the poor treasurer has to stand behind his little brass wicket and take it all. He is the real buffer between the public and the playshop, and he can make or mar the best theater or company.

The theater treasurer is a man of infinite patience. He must never lose his temper, never be flip, never "sass back," and never make a mistake. He must know the exact location of every seat in his house, and its cost, and just what sort of seat every one coming before him will like, or take, provided his likes cannot be satisfied.

He must never pass out to an "easy mark" a seat that a "kicker" might want when the "easy mark" will be just as well satisfied with a poorer one.

He must be an adept at selling the higher priced tickets first, if he can. A good treasurer will always sell you a $1 seat if that is the house maximum, unless you call for a cheaper one.

He must know by sight all the "regulars" and always have their special seats for them, even when these have not been ordered previously.

He must be able to answer the telephone, sell over the counter, keep cash straight and answer more fool questions than any other human being on earth, all at the same time. And yet folks think he has a sinecure, and that selling pasteboards at a box office is a joke! No harder work for a mortal was ever invented.

The treasurer has lots more to do besides selling tickets, however. He is the bank teller; his most important work is done when the window is closed. This consists in getting ready to sell, and in counting up and balancing after he has sold.

ALL TICKETS IMPORTED.

Most people never think about where the theater admission slips come from, or, if they do think, imagine that they are printed here. Time was when locally printed tickets were the rule; some business house generally furnished them for the advertisement on the back of them. But gradually the theaters in cities have outgrown this. Tickets now come from great central printeries, where a specialty is made of this work. Philadelphia leads in this business, and practically all those used in Los Angeles come from there. San Francisco used to furnish them, but the earthquake put that town off the map in this respect. Fort Smith, Ark., is another great center, and so are Kansas City and Cincinnati.

In whatever place he desires the tickets made, the house manager has a plat of his showshop, giving the number, row and location of every coupon seat in it. This is registered and filed, and all thereafter needful is a wire to fetch any specified set of tickets desired. These tickets are printed from forms made up to impress a large quantity at one turn of the press, and are numbered automatically by a machine that changes, according to the rules whereby it is set, which depend upon the seats in a row, rows in a house, and the like. The machinery is expensive and complicated, and ticket printing is really a separate and intricate branch of the typographical art.

Tickets come to the box office man in bundles, each day or performance by itself. His first duty after opening a bundle is to count every ticket in it, for he is responsible for the "capacity," or known number of seats in the house, and it is upon him that a shortage will fall.

Having counted and verified them, he next "nests" or "racks" them. That is, for a week ahead he puts each performance's coupons in a separate drawer or rack. Nesting tickets is a tedious job, and may lead to serious mistakes in selling if not done with accuracy. He then draws forth and puts away all seats covered by standing orders for that performance.

In each drawer is usually a small till, wherein is kept the money for its own tickets. This is to facilitate counting up. When a few dollars accumulate in a drawer of a future date, it is taken out and a credit slip substituted. Once a week, a complete reckoning is made, and for that week cash, tickets and accounts must tally exactly. Otherwise, the salary of the treasurer suffers, if it is short.

Three more of those injured in the wreck of the north-bound Rock Island express train died in the hospital at Waterloo, Iowa, yesterday. This increases the death list to fourteen.

MANY TRAGIC DEATHS.

FIVE VICTIMS OF FATAL FRIDAY.

WEEK'S LIST OF ACCIDENTS ALMOST UNPRECEDENTED.

Deaths from Violence Average More Than One a Day—Coroner Kept Busy Holding Inquests and Several Cases Yet to Receive Attention from Him.

Yesterday proved a busy day for the Coroner, when at the various undertaking establishments of the city he officiated at inquests held over the bodies of five unfortunates who met tragic deaths in the long list of accidents reported Friday.

According to the reports at the Police Station, the past week has been one of the most unusual in its history in the number of accidents in which men and women met death.

Beginning with the killing of Ben Doherty of Ventura, who was run over by a switch engine in the Santa Fé yards a week ago Friday night, the accidents came so thick and fast that the regular force of police surgeons were hard put to it to handle all the [illegible].

Doherty was killed while trying to [illegible] on a new pair of shoes. On Saturday night Fred Rebolledo, love-mad for the so-called "queen" of Sonoratown, ran amuck in a North Main-street lodging-house and wounded three men. Valentine Avilla, Sacramento Sanchez and Bijado Alvarez were the men shot. The two former are in a desperately dangerous condition at the County Hospital. Alvarez died early yesterday morning at the County Hospital and Rebolledo will be tried for murder.

On Sunday Mrs. Amelia Cochran attempted suicide by shooting herself with a revolver. She fired three times before she managed to point the revolver straight enough to do any damage. She is now in a dangerous condition at one of the local hospitals.

On Monday J. D. Ostergood, a well-known ranchman of Burbank, was seriously injured in a runaway accident at First and Broadway.

On Tuesday Thomas Ferguson, a [illegible] living at No. 475 South Mott street, was thrown beneath the hoofs of his runaway horses and was badly trampled. He is now in a dangerous [illegible].

On Wednesday Miss Louise Pfiffer of No. 317 South Hope street ate ant paste by mistake and died.

On Thursday Thomas Purcell was killed and Robert Henecke seriously injured in a runaway accident on South Spring street.

Friday completed the long list of accidents with five victims. Safareno [illegible], a Mexican living at Savannah, was run over and dangerously injured by a passenger train. [illegible] Cummings, 13 years of age, of [illegible], was stricken with heart [illegible] while swimming at Bimini [illegible] and was drowned. Mrs. Kate [illegible] of No. 724 Towne avenue was [illegible] at her home after having [illegible] sleep with a gas range going [illegible]. Edward Bejar was struck and badly injured by a Main-street [illegible] a short time later. Beatrice [illegible] committed suicide in a North [illegible] resort and Gabriel An[illegible], a Goldfield miner, committed [illegible] East Fifth street.

[illegible] about twenty other accidents of less importance, complete [illegible] most fatal weeks in the history of the police department.

[illegible] WINGS SAIL AWAY.

[illegible] Yacht Fleet Speeds to [illegible] Enjoy Three Days in [illegible] Stag Party.

[illegible] of the South Coast Yacht [illegible] is in commission is on the [illegible] to Catalina Island, which [illegible] today. This is the final meeting [illegible] club, and takes the form of [illegible] stag party at the Isthmus. [illegible] Monday the whole fleet will [illegible] San Pedro under the command of Commodore Stewart. The [illegible] left San Pedro yesterday at different times, and the stragglers were [illegible] into camp on the island by the [illegible], which carried red [illegible] for the direction of the late [illegible].

[illegible] two weeks the Committee on Arrangements has been making preparations for the final yachting event of [illegible] season, and the 200 members who [illegible] San Pedro yesterday expect to [illegible] the best outing ever managed by [illegible] club. Every year the cruise at the [illegible] of the season is the star event of [illegible] summer, and no efforts have been [illegible] to make this the best of all. [illegible], after the noon meal, camp [illegible] be broken, and the boats will [illegible] back to San Pedro in one fleet.

Foreign Notes.

[illegible] than 8000 people own all the [illegible] of Great Britain.

The gross earnings of the Tokio [illegible] railways are from $6000 to $8000 [illegible], and probably reach $15,000 a day [illegible] the flower season begins.

[illegible], which has the reputation of [illegible] the most progressive of the [illegible]-speaking countries, has over [illegible] miles of railroad and 11,000 miles [illegible].

[illegible] Norway and Sweden thirty-six [illegible] out of every 1000 live by seafaring. The next best average in this [illegible] is in England, where there [illegible] seventeen in every 1000.

The Johannesburg Chamber of Commerce is again urging the Transvaal [illegible] to promote legislation requiring the registration of firms and [illegible] in partnership on the lines already taken up in the Cape Colony and [illegible] and mediated by the Portuguese government for Lourenco Marques.

[illegible] owner of the paper called Wasps, [illegible] so offensively objected to [illegible] Bernhardt being decorated with [illegible] Legion of Honor, that he was subsequently convicted of libel and made [illegible] Mme. Bernhardt $100 damages.

[illegible] British War Office has ordered [illegible] horseshoes from United [illegible] makers, because a better article [illegible] lower price could be obtained.

A Kobe newspaper gives the cost of [illegible] wedding apparel of a Japanese [illegible] of fashion. She wears $13.80 [illegible] of clothing under her kimono, [illegible] costs $25. The obi costs another [illegible]. [illegible] tying paraphernalia [illegible] to $17.50 and a set of footgear [illegible] to $8. Combs and hairpins, [illegible] with gems, cost $245; a [illegible] $7.50; a diamond neck clasp, [illegible] handkerchiefs, 25 cents each; a [illegible] $150—about $918 in all for [illegible]. A middle-class woman [illegible] $150 worth of clothing [illegible] according to the same newspaper.

[illegible] Kinds of Worms.

"[illegible] are we all worms?" asked [illegible] of his mother.

"[illegible] What put such an [illegible] head?"

"[illegible] the minister said in his sermon [illegible] that we were poor [illegible] and papa told sis she was a [illegible]. What kind of a worm am [illegible]"

"[illegible] a glowworm, dear; you [illegible]."

FINANCIAL FRAUDS.

By George B. Cortelyou,

Secretary of the Treasury.

THERE is no work under the jurisdiction of the United States Postoffice Department which presents more difficulty to its officials than the administration of the law relating to the detection and suppression of the swindlers who use the United States mails to prosecute a guerrilla warfare upon the people of this country—and especially upon those whose industry and thrift have enabled them to put by a little surplus against the inevitable "rainy day."

I have been asked to say a few words on the subject of financial frauds that operate through the mails, and take pleasure in responding to such a request in the hope that what I shall say may have the effect of preventing some hard-working and thrifty person, who has contrived by dint of self-denial to save up a little surplus, from falling a ready prey to the hundreds of schemers who are living by their wits and making fortunes from honest but credulous individuals.

Perhaps the most important thing to the possible victim is to know what are the most common characteristics of fraudulent schemes—the "signs" by which those familiar with their operations recognize their fraudulent character.

One of these earmarks is the promise of excessive profits or dividends; another is the actual payment of excessive dividends—at the start. One or both of these features invariably accompany all such schemes. And in the days when frauds in the mail are numbered by the thousands and competition for the spoils of the people's savings is almost as keen as it is in legitimate lines of business, the throwing of bait in the form of several large monthly dividends has come to be regarded as a practical necessity. There was a time when the mere promise of big profits was enough to insure a liberal response, but today the use of "dividend bait" is regarded as a necessary and highly profitable investment on the part of those who wish to secure the largest possible returns.

The great "Fund W" swindle, operated in Chicago in the early '90s, may be cited in illustration of the type. It is especially typical not only because of its immense success but because it has apparently furnished the model upon which many succeeding frauds have been based. It is true that many, perhaps most, of the present day schemes are seasoned with the "investment" flavor, rather than that of speculation, but the principle of their operation and appeal is the same. This is the way in which the historic "Fund W" was worked:

Under the name of "Fleming & Merriam's Mutual Coöperative Fund W" an appeal was made to the people to send their money for the purpose of creating a "great centralized fund" to be used in speculative operations in grains, provisions and stocks on the Chicago Board of Trade and the Stock Exchange—the emphasis being placed on the opportunities offered by the Board of Trade.

In all the printed matter put out by these clever swindlers the plea was substantially this: "The great fortunes of the 'kings of the pit' have been built up because these men had capital enough to swing the market their way; there has been no guess work, no chance, no gamble about it, for they had the ready money with which to back their gigantic deals; they knew the irresistible power of great capital in one controlling hand and were able to make the whole country of smaller speculators—whose capital, although immense in the aggregate, was under scattered control—pay tribute to them.

"It is time the common people, the small speculators, learned this trick of the captains of industry, concentrated their scattered capital in one irresistible body, placed it in capable and expert hands and recovered from the kings of the pit some of the millions which for years the smaller speculators have been contrbuting to these swollen fortunes. Your available money, added to that of thousands and tens of thousands of other small speculators, will form a centralized fund of proportions which will dwarf the available money of the biggest speculator who ever operated on the Board of Exchange; the manipulation of the market by the means of this huge fund will be based upon the investigations of a corps of the shrewdest and most capable crop and market experts in the country, for the huge proportions of the fund itself and the profits at stake not only render the employment of the best talent necessary but also easy, as the proportion of the expense to the aggregate profits will be trifling.

"For purposes of convenience we have placed shares in this great 'Fund W' at $10. If you send me $100 you will get the profits on ten shares from the moment your remittance is received—if $1000, the profits on 100 shares."

This is the gist of the appeal which went out to the cities, towns and farms of the country. The response was instantaneous and enormous. Although the scheme was in operation only a few months it took in over $2,000,000. In the mails of the day on which Postoffice Inspector Stuart of Chicago enforced the fraud order against this swindle more than $15,000 in postoffice money orders alone were received at the "Fund W" office. The check books of the concern showed that this money with that received in other forms of remittance was to be used to pay a "dividend" amounting to $20,000. A further examination into the affairs of the swindle established the fact that the current receipts from victims were used right along to pay dividends without any regard whatever to any deals on the board or any profits therefrom—and these "dividends" were put out where they would do the most good in stimulating those who received them to increase their "investments" and to spread the news of this quick and easy road to wealth among neighbors and friends. Some of these so-called monthly dividends amounted to more than 12 per cent.

Here was actual fulfillment, not promise! When the victims cashed those "dividend checks" and found that they were honored, any misgivings they had harbored disappeared and they felt that their financial future was mor ethan assured. They showed these remittance letters to the friends they wished to favor, and this process multiplied the victims in a cumulative ratio besides drawing a big increase of "investments" from the original victims. Of course the number of the earlier victims was very small in comparison with the crop which this cumulative process of culture developed when once the effect of the stimulant was realized from a broad territory. Therefore it mattered little if the first or original crop of victims received a total of "dividends" amounting to their original investment with a good profit added. So long as new victims multiplied in numbers with each incoming mail and the older ones added to their speculative contributions the "dividend" game could be played with impunity.

"Investors" by the tens of thousands poured an ever-increasing volume of money into the treasury of this infamous get-rich-quick swindle, and when the Postoffice Department shut down the iron gate of the fraud order, thousands of angry letters of protest were sent to the head of the department at Washington. These protests demanding the inspector's removal were so strong and carried evidence of actual profits so plausible that the postoffice inspector was summoned to Washington to explain the situation. The only explanation which he made or needed to make was to produce the proofs that the concern had been paying "dividends" from moneys received as investments, not from profits actually earned. He was told to go back to his work. Subsequently the case was turned over to the Department of Justice for criminal prosecution and the men in the swindle—or at least some of them—were convicted and sent to the penitentiary. But the work of these swindlers has lived after them in thousands of other schemes fashioned on the pattern of the "Fund W" in every essential feature.

Of course violations in almost infinite number have been devised, and some of them possess a degree of refinement which makes their likeness to the original difficult to distinguish. But the possible investor will do well to consider that the actual payment of or promise to pay an excessive rate of return is sufficient ground for the suspicion that the scheme is questionable and should be sifted to the bottom before any money is put into it.

This nation has enjoyed a long period of unexampled prosperity. As a result, thousands of men who a few years ago were either poor or only moderately well to do have become comparatively wealthy and have made more money than they need in the operation of their regular businesses. In fact, there is a great multitude of these new capitalists who have retired from their former occupations to live on their money. The millionaires of a few years ago have become multi-millionaires and the working people have prospered and saved a surplus.

This means that everywhere there is an accumulation of capital seeking investment at reasonable rates, and the man who has a proposition which is essentially sound has only to make proof of this fact in order to command all the money needed whether the enterprise requires millions or only thousands. He has no need to deluge the mails with circulars and form-letters making appeals to "the people" to come in with their savings. If his enterprise has real substance and bottom he can get the money from a few capitalists with less trouble than is required to write one set of circulars and form-letters. And he does not have to promise "big monthly dividends" or anything of the kind. Capital is not impatient when it is secure; semi-annual or quarterly dividends will answer its purposes very well, and it is generally suspicious of anything which promises an extravagant percentage of return.

In view of these facts, there is but one conclusion to be drawn. The investment enterprise which has to conduct a house-to-house campaign, by means of the United States mails, or by solicitors, or both of them, to collect the savings of the working people makes practical confession that its proposition is not solid enough to command the confidence of those who are constantly looking for places where they can put their money and get a return insignificant in comparison with that promised by this class of financial outlaws.

"DON LUIS" AT REST.

The funeral of Lewis Williams was held at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, at his late residence on Harvard boulevard, the service being conducted by Rev. Baker P. Lee, rector of Christ Episcopal Church. A brief ritual service was also held at the grave in Rosedale Cemetery at which Mr. Lee officiated. The pall-bearers were Robert Kenny, F. P. Vickers, Alexander Mills, C. A. Rockwell, Wesley Clarke, Charles Drake, L. W. Blinn and George W. Parsons. The same gentlemen acted as pall-bearers at the funeral of Mrs. Williams last June.

KENNEDY CALLED EAST.

Mayor's Secretary Herbert D. Kennedy started with his wife last night for Rockland, Me., in response to a telegram announcing the serious illness of Mrs. Kennedy's father, Robert W. Messer. Mr. Messer is a wealthy retired lime manufacturer of Rockport and has many warm friends in Los Angeles. On account of his age there is little hope of his recovery. During Kennedy's absence the position of Mayor's secretary will be filled by Charles McKeag, former secretary to Mayor McAleer, and the details of the Los Angeles-Utah Oil Company, which were in charge of Kennedy, have been placed in the hands of Pitt P. Hand.

A Postal Will Do.

Write it today for copy of illustrated booklet telling all about 150,000 acres of irrigated land in Snake River Valley of Southern Idaho, to be open to entry October 1, 1907.

Who Are—Who Are—Who Are We? Times Contestants, Don't You See?

ALL OVER BUT THE SHOUTING.

"Times" Scholarship Contest Has Whirlwind Finish.

Much of Interest Happens on the Final Day.

Results to Be Announced as Soon as Possible.

The scholarship contest stopped last night at 12 o'clock, marking the last moment of the most remarkable contest ever conducted by the Los Angeles Times and one of the greatest the country has ever seen.

The closing hours were fraught with fevered interest; old and young, and large and small, strangers and friends crowded the rooms at headquarters. The telephones were ringing, mails were arriving, and people were handing in belated good fortunes for the deserving contestants.

The spirit of the scene has no parallel except the joy that the night before Christmas brings to healthy-minded children, for surprises were the order of the hour, and all was bustle and rush and good-natured raillery.

Downstairs the candidates were jostling each other at the subscription counter, cashing in the coin that means so much to them in their contest. Geraldine Fuller, the Polytechnic girl, was handing in her last subscription, with a relieved expression, and just beside her was Fanny Wolff, the Los Angeles High School girl, engaged in the same interesting duty.

The Colton lad, Percy Hamilton, came in on the 7:30 o'clock train. His face wore a triumphant expression for he had his pockets full of money and little blue checks. He has lived the strenuous life for some time and has made a worthy race. He was telling the clerk over the counter how he had made his running. Beside him, elbow to elbow, stood the Hollywood candidate, young Benjamin, who felt much better as he handed in a number of subscriptions at the eleventh hour.

WHIRLWIND FINISH.

Huge scores were turned in. George Pelker of Pasadena had among his final surprises fifty annual subscriptions and one five-year subscription, but he waited for Elwyn Van Zant to arrive before cashing in these splendid results.

"Here's the Wagner family," exclaimed an excited contestant, as Edna Wagner's relatives, in single file, from mother and big sister down to baby sister, entered the scholarship-room. They bore in triumph two large suitcases, containing 36,000 coupons.

Wallie Swain followed close on their heels. Roy Jones of Santa Monica had taken the soldier boy out in his automobile in the afternoon, and the Santa Monica people had given him 16,000 points. Margaret Chung, the Chinese girl, handed in a package of 7000 coupons at a late hour, and so on runs the tale.

THE FINAL SCORE.

The final score in this unparalleled contest will be printed probably not later than Wednesday morning, but at any rate as soon as the enormous amount of clerical work incident to the final settlement can be accomplished. Six or eight accountants are busily engaged in wading through the avalanche of coupons and subscriptions, and will keep steadily at work until the last little slip in the packages, piled mountain high, can be accredited to the proper person.

No sort of prediction can be made as to the final outcome of the exciting race. Scores mounted up by leaps and bounds at the last. Every minute brought some new feature to the fore and reported help for some candidate or another. Yesterday the wildest rumors were flying about in regard to the reserve scores of the different candidates. Chonita Palomares, the pretty Spanish girl who has had the support of old California residents, was said to be holding in reserve 50,000 points which she would put in before midnight. The dainty little Covina "Blossom," who has been working for a scholarship in the U.S.C. College of Liberal Arts, where she intends taking a straight college course, came in yesterday afternoon, and it was whispered by the children that her total was in the neighborhood of 45,000 points.

The jolly Whittier girl, Helen Wilson, arrived early in the afternoon and deposited her last effort—then went off to the matinée to relieve her mind.

AVALANCHE OF COUPONS.

Every one talked in large figures. An immense package of coupons came in for Zeda Fish. There was no time to count their contents, but they were said to contain in the neighborhood of [illegible] points. Coupons in neat packages arrived for the benefit of Elwyn Van Zandt. Muriel Eells sent her treasures in a large parcel by the Wells Fargo Express Company.

That irrepressible worker and bubbling enthusiast, Stanley Tolley, brought his coupons in two large suit cases. They were the results of the most unique social functions ever given at Ocean Park, for during the past summer at the Tolley home there have been nightly "coupon parties" when all the family and the friends and neighbors were called in to cut and sort and mark coupons for one of the best racers of them all.

Ben Hitchcock was ominously quiet yesterday. He was not seen at headquarters until a late hour in the evening and the other contestants almost had nervous prostration over the rumors that were constantly floating in. Some one had seen him in conference with some prominent Arizona capitalist at one of the leading hotels. These men formed the committee on arrangements for the annual Arizona picnic on September 12. What Ben and the moneyed Arizona man conferred about will probably be revealed in the final count.

School is out, children. The great work in the cause of an education is done. Now comes the play time. Now comes the reward that will make the efforts of the summertime fade into an agreeable background that will cause the triumphant winners to forget their victories for the nonce, and that will be sufficient to console any who came out at the little end of the horn.

Turn about is fair play. All during vacation while others were resting, the brightest of youngsters on the Coast have been laboring for their own advancement and for The Times. Next Thursday The Times will give these boys and girls a new definition for a good time.

All will meet at the familiar headquarters on the great day. Special cars will be ready with banners flying and a brass band waking the echoes. The guests of the day will be whirled away from city sights and sounds, and will startle the quiet countryside with their horns, their buzzers, their yells and their songs. They will be conveyed to the beach and will take a swim in the briny deep and play with the breakers for a while. Then up, and away, they will speed to "The Outpost," to be the guests of Gen. H. G. Otis, at his historic country home. They will there taste the joys of a real old-fashioned barbecue, something that has never yet entered the ken of some of these young people. Instead of entering a building for the formal exercises of the day, the bestowal of the prizes and scholarships will take place in God's great outdoors, under the spreading sycamores, with the lilt of the birds, and the sweet surroundings of animate nature.

COUPON CLIPPINGS

A rare chance for studying fashions in coupons was afforded by the many and various packages that [illegible] yesterday. The most artistic [illegible] displayed. [illegible]hange of Policy Urged.

[illegible] (Nev.) Sept. 5.—[To the Ed[illegible] of The Times:] Much has been [illegible] and written as to what the fu[illegible] policy of the government at [illegible] will be regarding the [illegible]. Of course, as a nation, [illegible] go on with our task, but [illegible] the Philippines shall be a [illegible] in the future, as in the past, [illegible] depend entirely upon ourselves.

[illegible] has the burden been heavy? [illegible] made the task hard? Was it [illegible] payment of the original $20,000,000 [illegible] the subsequent $7,000,000 [illegible] the Friar lands, the maintenance [illegible] army in those islands, or of our [illegible] in those waters? Hardly. With [illegible] exception of the first two items, [illegible] expenses could not have been [illegible] if we never had taken the [illegible] nor do they constitute a [illegible] burden to a great and prosperous [illegible]. Moreover, they are but a [illegible] in the bucket compared to the [illegible] which have been recklessly [illegible] in the administration of [illegible].

[illegible] McKinley policy for [illegible] administration of the Philippine [illegible] was never calculated to [illegible] success. "The resources [illegible] Philippines shall not be ex[illegible]" the decree which went [illegible] Washington early in 1899, [illegible] this general idea was [illegible] Taft, then Governor, as [illegible] Philippines for the Fili[illegible] ultimatum was empha[illegible] assertion: "If you don't [illegible]." Many American citi[illegible] resident in the islands got [illegible] more tenacious of pur[illegible] hoping against hope [illegible] Congress [illegible] approved July 1, 1902, was [illegible]. It provided a com[illegible] unsatisfactory law for [illegible] government of the arch[illegible]. Moreover, it emphasized the [illegible] expressed regarding the [illegible] government, and still [illegible] restricted the so-called ex[illegible] of the islands.

[illegible] this all. Having discour[illegible] American capital and industry [illegible] developing the natural resources [illegible] Philippines, having restricted [illegible] sources of wealth to the [illegible] what then? We proceeded, [illegible] "lifting" process, to establish [illegible] elaborate and expensive civil [illegible] ever seen in a colony! [illegible] policy of discouraging honest [illegible] development of the natural [illegible] of the islands, and encour[illegible] expensive and elaborate civil [illegible] caused thousands of Fili[illegible] to leave their provincial [illegible] and seek fame and fortune in [illegible] which simply meant securing [illegible] job. They were learning [illegible] art of self-government and [illegible] the time content. We [illegible] lifting "these people to a [illegible] enlightenment and experience [illegible] fit them for self-govern[illegible] people on earth were ever so [illegible] If they have risen at all it has [illegible] their own unaided effort.

OLD CALIFORNIA DAYS.

SHEEP DRIVING FINALLY ENDED.

Battles of Forest Rangers and Sheepmen.

Gun Play Frequently Result of the Collisions.

Strange Disappearances Not Accounted for.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

In the old days of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, before any forest reserves, or national forests, as they are now called, existed, there flourished an industry in Eastern California from Bakersfield to Lake Tahoe, which was detrimental to house-building and permanent stock raising. This was the immigrant or transient sheep business.

Up to within five years ago something like 500,000 sheep used to leave the pastures around Bakersfield every year, about March 1, after the lambing season, and infest the mountain ranges from Monacho Meadows to Lake Tahoe. These sheep were driven in bands of from 2000 to 3000 sheep each, and were principally owned by Spanish and French Basques, Portuguese and Frenchmen, who were mostly aliens, and who owned no land and avoided paying taxes when possible. Some of the bands were owned by business men of Bakersfield who had Basque and French foremen to run them.

They would cross the Sierras early in the year by way of Tehachepi and Walker's Pass. In good seasons the former pass was used the most, and in dry seasons the latter. Crossing at Tehachepi they would spend about two months on the Mohave Desert and as the food dried up they would work their way north and arrive at Owens Lake about April 25. Crossing then by way of Walker's Pass they would come into the Owens Valley at Olancho and work north from there.

The cattlemen had to fight for any mountain feed, and little did they obtain until the national forests were established and the Department of the Interior gave out the orders that no sheep were to be allowed in the Sierra National Forest, but it was one thing to issue these orders and quite another to enforce them.

THE RANGERS.

The work of keeping the sheep bands out fell to the forest rangers, who had their hands full from 1901 to 1906. Court decisions, moreover, were for a time against the rulings of the Department of the Interior, so that the sheepmen were, in a way, encouraged in their persevering disregard of the national forest regulations. At last, however, the backbone of this illicit industry is broken. Court decisions are upholding the rangers in their work, and serious trouble is rarely met with.

DRASTIC METHODS ADOPTED.

It was not till 1902 that drastic methods were taken by the rangers to enforce the regulations. Before that time the rangers would occasionally drive the sheepmen out, but they would go right back in again and it was impossible to keep them outside the forest borders.

The first good fight between rangers and Basque sheep herders took place in the Black Rocks, about twenty miles north of Independence. George Naylor, then a ranger on this part of the Sierra National Forest, received orders to keep the sheep out and was determined to do so. Naylor was the sort of man who generally does what he sets out to do. The day of this particular fight he traced a band of sheep to an old sheep corral and found the sheepmen doctoring their sheep before starting for the mountain meadows at the head of Kings River. The owner was a big, 200-pound Basque, with a hard name and a mean disposition, willing to do anything to get food for his "sheeps." A young cattleman by the name of Norman Mairs was with Naylor. Naylor ordered the Basque to take his sheep out of the forest. It was "no understand Englis" at first, but when Naylor insisted, he understood well enough, but would not budge his sheep.

The corral was built of dry sagebrush, which would burn as if coal oil had been poured on it. In spite of the fact that the owner and two herders stood ready with rifles to keep him off, Naylor slipped quietly off his horse and shoved a dry branch of the sagebrush into the fire, which was heating the sheep dip. In a flash the corral was ablaze in a dozen places. The Basques found no time to quarrel with Naylor, but rushed around cursing and waving their coats, getting the sheep out of the corral. When once they were out and started, Naylor took good care to keep them going, and had them beyond the forest borders in short order.

It was the summer of 1903 that Naylor, Grant Clark and Henry Bell had the big fight on Magee Creek back of Long Valley. On this occasion they found about five bands of sheep inside the forest and ordered the herders to vacate, but the herders were in force and refused, and one Frenchman, Louis Girard, informed Naylor that he had 200 rounds of ammunition and he would not budge until it was gone.

Grant Clark commenced to expostulate with him, meanwhile edging closer until he was near enough to make a grab for the rifle which Girard had ready to use on the first man who would touch his sheep. There was a scuffle and a rifle shot. Clark seemed to be getting the worst of it. Naylor believing that his fellow-ranger would be shot, drew his pistol and fired three times, wounding the Frenchman, who dropped his gun and ran down the meadow.

The Frenchman was unable to escape and was taken to Bishop to a doctor. When the rangers got back to Magee Creek the sheep were all out of the forest.

A GOOD RESULT.

This fight did a great deal of good. It showed the sheepmen that the rangers meant business and were not afraid to use their guns if the occasion demanded it. The wholesome awe it bred among the sheep herders probably saved the lives of rangers and herders for some years thereafter. Girard was well again in a couple of months, but he never attempted to take sheep into the Sierra national forest again. Of course, the fight caused consternation on both sides, the forest officials sent out orders that rangers were not to use force, but were to withdraw and report if sheep men refused to leave the forest. Naylor was disgusted with these orders and resigned, never to go back on the force. He was exonerated by the grand jury of Mono county the next summer.

There was no more fighting until the next season, when Charles H. Shinn was appointed head ranger of the Sierra forest reserve (northern division,) as it was called in those days. The following winter it was decided by the ranger force under Mr. Shinn and Superintendent Newhall that during the next season they would keep the sheep out. They came very near doing it, too. Ranger Bigelow was in charge of the east-side district, with him were Rangers John Galloway, Henry Bell and Gus Goodale, all good and tried rangers. Things ran smoothly at first and the bands coming up the Owens Valley in April went straight through without a trespass.

In the first part of May, 1904, soon after sunrise one morning, while patrolling about seven miles below Independence, Bigelow found thirteen bands of sheep inside the line on one township. He was alone, and it took him till 9 o'clock that night to drive them outside the line. After warning the sheepmen not to go back, he then went to Independence and telegraphed to Fresno for permission to hire help, and without waiting for a reply to his message, which he knew would be to "go ahead," he secured the services of several cattlemen. Luckily, Rangers Callaway and Bell also showed up about 10 o'clock that night, having just escorted the advance bands past Big Pine, where there was not much danger of their being driven into the forest until Goodale, who was stationed at Round Valley, could handle them.

At break of day the next morning Bigelow, Bell, Calloway and four cattlemen, the latter only too glad to get the chance to give it to the sheepmen, whose sheep were destroying the spring feed for their cattle, started out in different directions.

MIXED THE SHEEP HERDS.

It was to be an exciting day. At 6 in the morning the first band was sighted just inside the forest. This band had entered at George Creek and had crossed the township they were in and were making a run to get out when they were caught. Bigelow stopped them and turned the band back the way they had come. A sheepman will do anything rather than try to drive his sheep back by the trail he has just passed over, for all the feed is gone and the sheep, when they are once started on their march in the mountains, will not travel back without much urging.

Bigelow had not been with the sheep long when Calloway and Bell came in sight, their horses on the run, then Bunny, another cattleman, came with his fine cattle dog, and things commenced to move. Just here the Frenchman, who owned a half interest in the sheep, started off on a run for his mule, which the rangers had carefully kept in the front of the sheep. His rifle was on the mule and Mr. Frenchman decided that "something was doing" and he wanted that rifle, but Bunny took down his rope and reached the mule first and had it roped and the rifle in front of him before the sheepman could get there. This saved someone from being hurt that day as the Frenchman was a dangerous man when fighting for his sheep. By this time they had the sheep strung out in a line for about one mile and with the help of the dog, waving coats and yelling, they had the sheep on the run, scattering them as they went.

Bigelow now spied a dust in another direction and started off after it, meeting Henry Bell on his way. They found two bands of sheep about one mile apart and about two miles inside the forest line. Each took a band and held it for the other rangers to come up with the remnants of the first band. Then they commenced driving them all together. It was amusing to watch the bands. First the pack donkeys came together and sniffed at each other; then the great leaders of the three bands had a rub; then the sheep, with many a bleet, as the three bands were made up of ewes and lambs, came together; then the herders, three to a band, lined up on the outside and cursed the rangers in Spanish, French and Basque.

DECIDED TO BE GOOD.

That night at the sheep camp at Fort Independence there were about forty sheepmen in wait, and it would have been bad for the ranger if he had come into the camp. The sheepmen tore their hair and swore vengeance on Bigelow, and made threats of putting him in a rock pile at the first meeting, but by the next morning they had decided to call a truce and keep their sheep outside the line.

This was the last of it. It took only good patroling the next season, 1905, to keep the herds out, and then the Forest Service had jurisdiction over the forests and some local sheep were allowed. Now the stockmen of Inyo county can obtain feed for their small bands of sheep and cattle, and tourists in the mountains can obtain feed for their saddle and pack animals, and one sees fine feed where in the old days there was dust.

Some of the owners of the old wandering bands have gone back to their native countries; some have entered other business; some have bought ranches and are taking even chances with the American stockmen and have become good citizens of the United States.

AN INTERESTING INSECT.

WASPS USEFUL AND NUISANCE.

BOTHERSOME NEIGHBORS WITH INTERESTING HABITS.

They Are Found All Over the Earth, and Though They Eat Up Many Things They Might Be Still More of a Nuisance—Hornet Is the Worst of Them All.

[New York Evening Post:] Among the varying types of insect life, nature assigns to the wasp so many useful, and, to man's thinking, destructive duties, that the riddle of unfolding its life has always been captivating. Not unlike the bee, in one particular, over a thousand species of this great family infest and bless the earth. What between destroying shrubs and certain trees, capturing useful and nauseous insects alike, acting like conscienceless pirates, annoying cattle, taking possession of barns and outhouses, disfiguring fruit, attacking picnic parties in the woods and by the sea, and, withal, assuming the role of cannibals and vegetarians at one and the same time, it seems an enigma of science to place so uniformly beautiful an insect.

In social habits, the vespidae, or wasps proper, come nearest to the bee, though widely differing in many regards, especially in that the community is broken up at the close of summer, and has to be reproduced and annually reformed. As fall approaches the family members slowly die off, only a few females remaining to pass the winter under stones, in hollow trees or exposed roots under hillside rocks. As the first warm days of spring approach, the lady wasp emerges from her hiding, and proceeds to form a fresh nest for her new colony. In the selection of a suitable spot, the common wasp selects a hole or burrow in the ground, which, if not ample enough, is made available by deepening and widening. For nest building she prefers small pieces of old wood or dried leaf fiber, which, by grinding and thoroughly mixing with a secretion from the salivary glands, is formed into a mass resembling papier-maché when dried and spread out. Under careful manipulation this soon takes the form of a pillar suspended from a cave's roof, at the lower end of which, three deep, hollow, cup-shaped cells are made, and one egg laid in each. It is not long before other cells are added, and when the first larvae (grubs) appear, the mother's attention is divided between feeding the young and enlarging and keeping the house clean.

NO WASP INDIGESTION.

Suspended in the cell, with its head down, each grub somewhat resembles a small barrel, being thicker in the middle than at either end. The head and body consists of fourteen segments or parts, and it is provided with three teeth set in the mandibles. The mother displays a great anxiety in providing for the grubs, and much of her time is consumed in this way. All the food given them is thoroughly masticated, so that indigestion is not known to wasp language, and dentistry must be a lost art. On the fourteenth day the larvae cease to feed, and forming a satin-like covering within the cell (resembling mercerized cotton,) assume the third or pupae stage. This lasts—according to the weather—about ten days, when the perfect insect emerges. In this fashion, from time to time, during the earlier half of the summer, two or three grubs occupy in succession the refurbished cells. Young worker wasps are the first produced, and these immediately devote themselves to aiding the mother to enlarge the comb, clean the nest, and feed the new larvae (males and females) during the last half of the season. These being much larger than the neutrals or workers, require extended cells, and begin to appear as greater food supplies come in and the fruit trees ripen. Their cells, too, are carefully kept apart from those of the workers.

As with the male bee, the male wasp is stingless, but unlike the bee, his body is elongated, and he carries longer antennae than his mate. He dies on the approach of fall.

In the United States and South America, there are several families of the Vespa, and about seven species are found in Great Britain. The latter are generally classified as ground wasps, their habit of building in ground burrows being distinguished from that of the tree builders. The nests of tree wasps are much larger and more round than those of ground colonies, and in the female a bright yellow adorns the first and front of the antennae.

Of all the wasp tribes, the most persistent and destructive bears the name Crabro, or hornet, which, in the British Isles, is found only in the southern or warmer parts. Occurring in numbers in any country where the willow, lime, birch, ash and alder trees abound, their destructive habits are soon in evidence, as the younger branches of these trees are dexterously gnawed and quickly stripped of their bark for nest construction by the pests. The best fruit of orchard trees is subjected to great damage by the hornet, and if once intoxicated by fermenting fruit juices, it becomes maddened and dangerous.

ALL OVER THE EARTH.

In all, about fifty species of the genus Vespa are found spread over the earth, of which Eastern Asia can boast of the handsomest and largest. The Magnifica of East India, and the Mandarina of Japan and China, have wings measuring fully two inches across. With its nest of clay, the Orientalis holds sway in Eastern Greece and Egypt, while the Polistes store honey in countries bordering the Mediterranean Sea. This same species of South America stores only poisonous honey, owing to the nature of the flowers from which it is gathered. In the same region, the pendant nest of the Chartergus wasp is found, closely attached to the boughs of trees, the combs arranged in beautiful funnel-like passages, one within the other, with spaces between and an opening to each comb leading from gallery to gallery.

For those wasps known as the carnivorous group, nature has instituted some wise and wonderful provisions. The larvae must be fed on meat, and to supply this the mother wasp provides large quantities of caterpillars and numerous other insect grubs. Before placing these in the cells, the parent proceeds by stinging through the principle nerve ganglion each and every larva and caterpillar found. The insect is not killed, but remains in a state of stupor until the wasp grub appears and is ready to devour it.

NUMEROUS WASP ENEMIES.

In turn, among numerous wasp enemies, are found two species of beetle, the Rhipiphorus paradoxas and the Lebia linearis, which find their way to the cells, and consume thousands of wasp larvae. Nature again, as if balancing by poetic justice her end in view, arranges that the Volucella (round, rolling) larvae of the Ichneumon fly, while being eaten by the wasp grub, turns upon, and, so to speak, rends the wasp larvae. This strange phenomenon is brought about by the habit of the Icheneumon-fly species burying their eggs in the bodies of certain living caterpillars, which die and are eaten as the eggs hatch out. Pending this change, the mother wasp seizes the afflicted caterpillars and carries them to her larva cells. The Ichneumon egg within the caterpillar's body is evidently not affected by the paralytic stroke imparted by the mother wasp, so, as the wasp grub is in the act of eating the consciousless caterpillar, the Inchneumon grub turns and devours the wasp larvae. The conclusion is obvious. Had the mother wasp only known of the poisoned or "embalmed" caterpillar, she could have avoided visiting the Ichneumon "stock yards."

In this way nature holds the scales of retribution, and while man's discomforts, occasioned by the wasp, are numerous, the untold benefits conferred are many.

Woman Classified.

The elevator in a sky-scraper where men and women share the offices of a powerful insurance company was crowded almost to capacity, when it stopped to take on board a tenant of lower offices, accompanied by his wife. Instantly every man in the elevator removed his hat. This was not a tribute to the wife's superior looks, for many of the women stenographers and clerks already in the car were fairer to look upon. It was not in compliment to the richness of her furs nor her waving plumes, because the raiment of some of her self-supporting fellow-passengers was fully as good. It was purely the tribute from the primitive man to the primitive woman, whom he may support and protect, as compared with the woman who can and will support herself. The woman who works at his elbow day after day is not his ideal woman.

As we left the car, a young woman whispered: "Pleasant, is it not, to be shown in this unmistakable fashion the status you take in masculine estimation when you work for your living?"—[Anna Steese Richardson in the September Woman's Home Companion.

To Civilize the Tarahumares.

Enrique C. Creel, Mexico's richest man and her Ambassador to the United States, is the son of a Yankee storekeeper who went broke trying to do business with the shiftless Mexicans. When it came time for the boy to start out for himself, and the start was an early one, his father had only a handful of Mexican dollars to give him.

"Never mind," said Enrique, "I shall work, save and be rich."

Today he is worth $225,000,000, a far vaster sum in proportion to the wealth of Mexico than are the millions of Rockefeller in proportion to America's wealth.

As Governor of the State of Chihuahua, Señor Creel is undertaking what he regards as his greatest work—civilization of the Tarahumare Indians, a depraved tribe of snake eaters. He secured from the Federal government the grant of a million acres of land in the middle of the State, had houses built and moved the Indians out of their wretched burrows in the ground. Each Indian was given a piece of ground, and he had to work it whether he liked or not.—[Washington Post.

A Business College Talk

FACT 1: No business college in Los Angeles, or in California, or in the United States, has turned out "30,000 graduates" in 44 years or in any other period.

FACT 2: In point of years, the Woodbury is one of the two oldest business schools in this city, and, in all probability, has registered and graduated the largest number of pupils. The other oldest is the Los Angeles.

FACT 3: Heald's San Francisco business college is perhaps the oldest in the State, and Mr. Heald the oldest man in point of business college service.

FACT 4: Since the earthquake—which destroyed his San Francisco school, Mr. Heald has organized a CORPORATION, or Trust, which now controls about nine of the formerly independent smaller schools in the State.

FACT 5: The Southern California business college—the youngest of the four in this city—came under the Heald control a few months ago. As a "Heald College," therefore, it is not 44 years old, nor has it, or any other school in the "chain," turned out "30,000 graduates."

To Prospective Students:

FACT 6: Of relatively small importance to YOU are the above Facts compared with THIS: The WOODBURY BUSINESS COLLEGE is not only one of the oldest in the State, thus possessing the prestige and effectiveness of long experience, but retains the vim and activity of youth, and the vigor and virility of manhood. It is an INDEPENDENT school—strong, original, practical, SUCCESSFUL. It belongs to no "chain" or trust, class or clan—absolute MERIT its only alliance.

The Woodbury confines itself strictly to distinctive business college work. It does not spread its efforts over a dozen "departments" or "schools" such as foreign languages, telegraphy, drawing and various polytechnic subjects. Nor does it undertake to maintain THREE to FIVE confusing and conflicting "departments" in SHORTHAND to correspond with the various POLY-position systems published. It conducts ONE strong, up-to-date DEPARTMENT of shorthand, teaches one one-position SYSTEM of shorthand—the GREGG—thus concentrating the students' and teachers' efforts, preventing divergent activities, avoiding distracting influences, steering clear of petty jealousies and disputations among pupils and teachers, and, in every way, fostering conditions that make for "THE SUCCESS OF THE STUDENT," which is the school's motto.

IN CONCLUSION—Should the Woodbury idea and methods and the splendid ONE-position GREGG shorthand attract you, we shall welcome you cordially. You will find our school vibrant with enthusiasm and life. Our teachers are strong, helpful, sympathetic, inspiring. You will receive an impetus successward that will last through life. Upon graduation some business office will want you at a good salary.

Do not hesitate to call, write, or telephone for catalogue and information. We shall not worry you with solicitor or uninvited calls.

Respectfully,

Houses, Lots and Lands—Review of Building and Development Contin

BOOMING THINGS.

REALTY ACTIVE IN SAN DIEGO.

CITY WITH BAY AND CLIMATE HAS STIR ON.

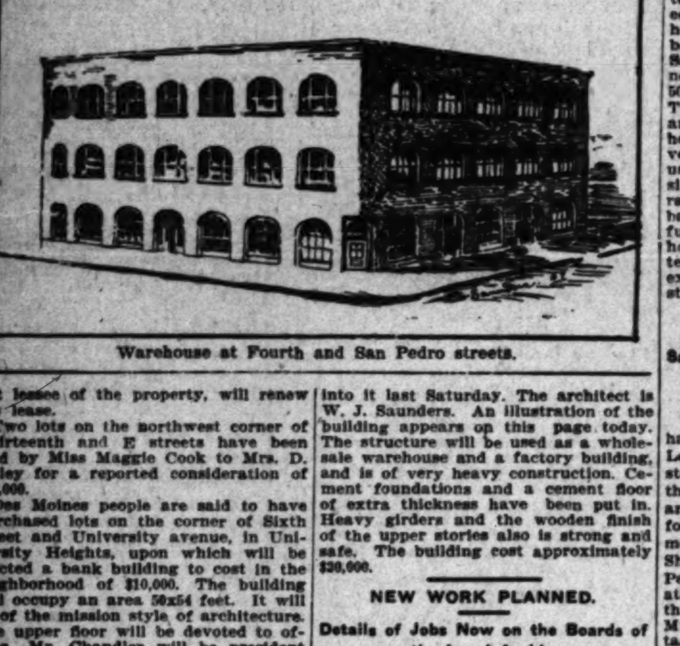
Corner at Fifth and E Streets Sold for Hundred and Fifty Thousand. Trust Company Will Improve With Six-story Concrete Building—Another Structure Planned.

The northwest corner of Fifth and C streets, San Diego, 100 feet on each street, has been purchased by the Commerce Trust Company, the intention being the erection by the company of a six-story reinforced concrete building. It is considered one of the finest building sites in the business section of the city. The consideration was about $150,000. The lots are occupied with cheap wooden structures. The Commerce Trust Company has been organized, with a paid up capital of $500,000, for the purpose of absorbing the National Bank of Commerce and the Security Savings Bank and Trust Company of San Diego. The directors of the new company will be: Julius Wangenheim, president of the National Bank of Commerce, and of the Security Savings Bank and Trust Company; George W. Marston, Frank S. Jennings, Charles T. Hinde, N. E. Barker, J. S. Hawley, Jr., Edward Grove, B. McKensie, Melville Klauber, Nat R. Titus and L. M. Arey.

C. T. Spalding of San Francisco, has bought four lots from Ed Kingston, for $15,000 in the Florence Heights property, consisting of a strip of land 100 feet wide extending from Date to Elm street, and facing on both Fifth and Sixth streets, San Diego. Mr. Spalding expects to spend at least $50,000 in the erection of an apartment house.

Col. A. G. Gassen and C. W. Pauley, owners of the fifty-foot lot, adjoining the Isis Theater on the north, and extending through from Fourth to Fifth streets, announce that they will construct a three-story pressed brick business block on the lot, which will cost about $60,000. The building will be occupied by the Chadbourne Furniture Company. The removal of the furniture company is due to the fact that Harry L. Stine, who recently purchased the New York block, corner of Sixth and D streets, for $225,000, wishes the quarters the company now occupies.

The sale is reported of the El Cajon Hotel to M. Vanhouten, a wealthy sheep raiser of Idaho, the consideration being $10,000. D. M. Knoles, the present lessee of the property, will renew his lease.



Warehouse at Fourth and San Pedro streets.

Two lots on the northwest corner of Thirteenth and E streets have been sold by Miss Maggie Cook to Mrs. D. Daley for a reported consideration of $12,000.

Des Moines people are said to have purchased lots on the corner of Sixth street and University avenue, in University Heights, upon which will be erected a bank building to cost in the neighborhood of $10,000. The building will occupy an area 50x54 feet. It will be of the mission style of architecture. The upper floor will be devoted to offices. Mr. Chandler will be president and A. H. Baxter vice-president of the banking institution.

The Ralston Realty Company reports the sale of 200 lots in the Normal Heights section of San Diego, in the past fifteen days, the average price paid being $350 per lot, making the sales for the subdivision total about $70,000.

Hanson W. Carter of Syracuse, N. Y., has secured an option on water front property at National City, whereon he expects to erect a woolen mill, 100 by 180 feet, in size, and three stories high. Mr. Carter will arrive here in a few days to complete the arrangements.

Three lots on the northwest corner of Eighth and A streets have been sold to Thomas J. Dugan, of New York city, for $25,000. Mr. Dugan plans to erect a family hotel on the property, with a capacity of 250 rooms. The lots have a frontage of 150 feet on Eighth street and 100 feet on A street. The building will either be of brick or reinforced concrete construction.

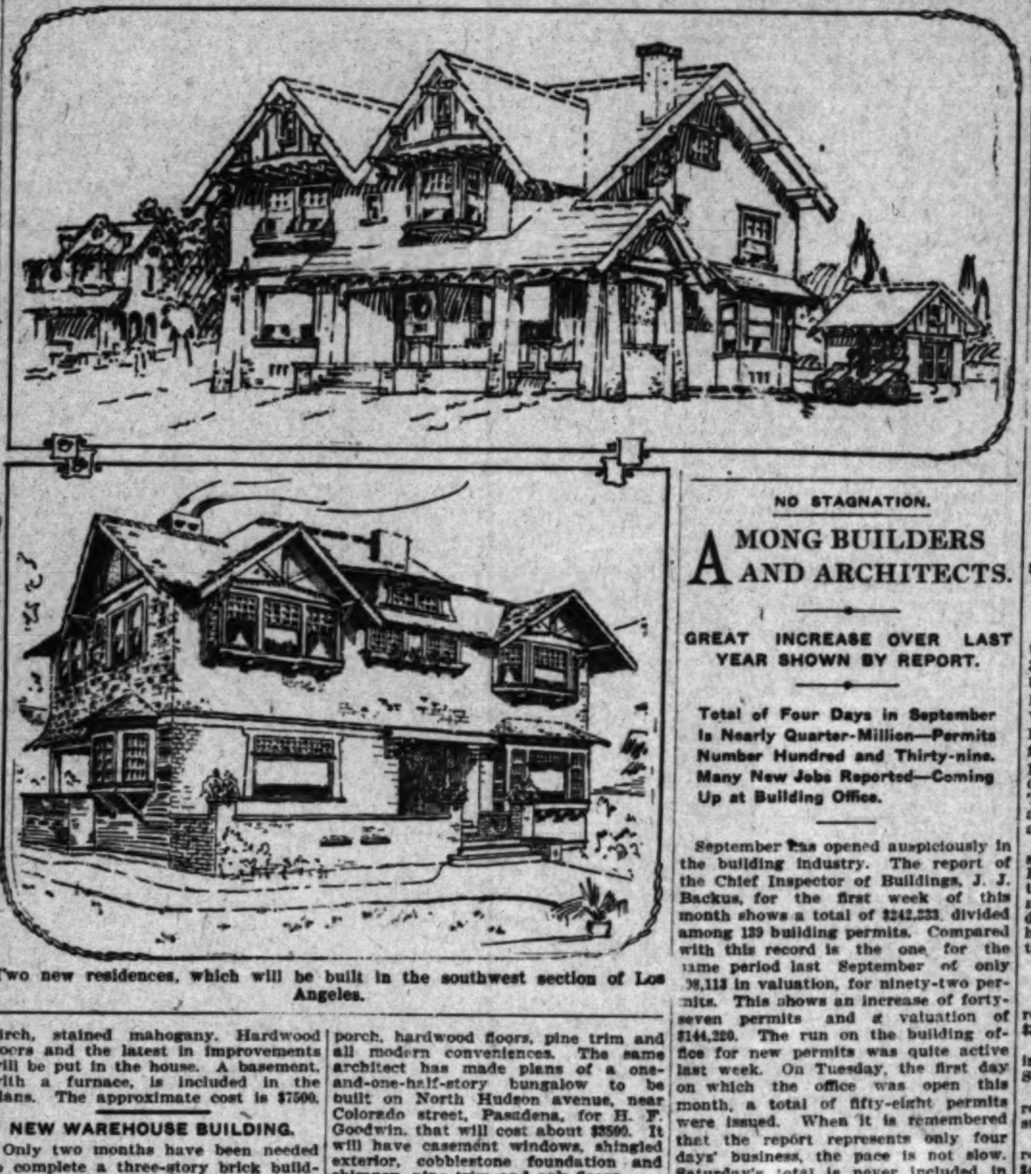
TWO HANDSOME HOMES.

Both Will Occupy Fine Sites in the Southwest Section—Bareford and Peasley Building.

Drawings of two new houses are illustrated on this page. The residence of C. H. Bareford, which is being erected on the north side of Dorchester avenue, near Western avenue, is the top one in the group. It is a two-story, nine-room dwellings, and has an attractive exterior. The features of the exterior are the wide veranda and handsome entrance. Large windows also are prominent, all of which will be of plate glass. The building was designed by P. J. Von Tress and E. R. Jeffery. H. L. Hagerman is the contractor.

On the first floor are a living-room, den, dining-room, besides a kitchen and other appurtenances. All the principal rooms on the ground floor will have beamed ceilings and wainscoted walls. A broad stair leads to the second floor, which is divided into four bedrooms, a dressing-room and a bathroom. A large balcony opens off one room, and there are also plenty of closets. Hot water will be used in heating. There will be a large basement. The approximate cost is $10,000.

The smaller picture shows a house to be built from plans by Frank M. Tyler for William K. Peasley on the southeast corner of Wilshire Boulevard and King street. It is a two-story, nine-room house. There will be five rooms and a greenhouse or fernery on the first floor. The second floor will be occupied by four bedrooms, a bathroom and plenty of closet room. The finish on the first floor will be of quarter-sawed oak in all the main rooms, with the exception of the dining-room, which will be finished in birch, stained mahogany. Hardwood floors and the latest in improvements will be put in the house. A basement, with a furnace, is included in the plans. The approximate cost is $7500.



Two new residences, which will be built in the southwest section of Los Angeles.

NEW WAREHOUSE BUILDING.

Only two months have been needed to complete a three-story brick building at the northeast corner of Fourth and San Pedro streets, which is 100x135 feet in dimensions. This building was begun July 8, and the lessees moved into it last Saturday. The architect is W. J. Saunders. An illustration of the building appears on this page today. The structure will be used as a wholesale warehouse and a factory building, and is of very heavy construction. Cement foundations and a cement floor of extra thickness have been put in. Heavy girders and the wooden finish of the upper stories also is strong and safe. The building cost approximately $30,000.

NEW WORK PLANNED.

Details of Jobs Now on the Boards of the Local Architects.

Following details of new work on the boards of the local architects and designers are taken from the columns of the Builder and Contractor:

Henry Hyde Dwight has drawn plans and is having erected under his supervision a two-story, n-room frame residence on San Rafael Heights, Pasadena, for Charles D. Willard. It will be modern in every detail.

Fernand Parmentier is making plans for the interior arrangement of the storeroom at No. 164 North Main street for John G. Althouse. He is also making plans for the fittings of the store on the corner of Market and Main streets, for the same party.

Kelly & Newbery have prepared plans of two seven-room frame cottages to be built on Eighty-fifth street, between Main and Moneta avenue for T. E. and T. W. Burger.

P. August Westburg has prepared plans of a one-and-one-half-story, ten-room bungalow to be built at Pomona for Mrs. Grace B. King. It will have stone porch and foundation walls, cement floor, rustic and shingle exterior, beam ceilings, mantels and paneled walls.

John P. Krempel has drawn plans for a three-story and basement brick building, 32x102 feet, to be constructed on East Seventh street, between Wall and San Julian streets, for Adolph Nabel. The first floor will contain two storerooms, the upper stories being subdivided into rooms, twenty-eight in all.

C. H. Brown has drawn plans for a two-story, ten-room frame and stone residence, 60x70 feet, to be built on Shatto Place, near Sixth street, for W. S. James. The first-story exterior will be of stone, above which shingles will be employed. Mahogany, oak and red curly birch will be used for inside finish on the lower floor. The upstairs rooms will be white enameled, the bathrooms having tile floors and wainscoting. Furnace and storerooms will be in basement.

Frank M. Tyler has drawn plans for a nine-room frame residence to be built on Boyle Heights for George W. May. He has also made plans for a large seven-room bungalow, to be erected at Hollywood for S. Carver. It will have first-class appointments, a special feature being an interior court. The same architect is also preparing plans for a two-story, nine-room frame residence to be constructed on Gramercy Place, near Sixteenth street, for George Ward. It will be Old English in style, and will have stone porches, plate-glass windows, hardwood floors, built-in detail work and furnace heat.

C. F. Driscoll has prepared plans of a two-story frame building to contain two five-room flats. It will be built on the corner of South Madison and Colorado streets, Pasadena, for Mrs. J. W. Keese, and have cement porch, hardwood floors, pine trim and all modern conveniences. The same architect has made plans of a one-and-one-half-story bungalow to be built on North Hudson avenue, near Colorado street, Pasadena, for H. F. Goodwin, that will cost about $3500. It will have casement windows, shingled exterior, cobblestone foundation and chimney, pine trim and oak floors.

The new reinforced concrete bank building to be erected for the Glendora Bank will be begun at once, under the supervision of W. J. Saunders. All the work will be done by day labor.

Plans have been completed by Architect Clements and work will be started shortly on a three-story business house for Will Jereshaw, which is to be on Third street, between C and D, San Diego, adjoining the Horton Annex. The building is to be of brick, 50x90 feet, and will cost about $21,000. The lower floor will be used for stores and the two upper ones for a lodging-house, which will have all modern conveniences. The part of the building used for lodging purposes will have sixteen rooms to each floor, all arranged to form suites, with private bath. The same architect has also furnished plans for the new schoolhouse at Lemon Grove, with the exterior walls of cement plaster over expanded metal lath. The cost of this structure will be about $3200.

TRADES FLATS FOR RANCH.

San Jacinto Valley Lands as Part Payment for Apartment Building at Twenty-ninth and San Pedro.

AMONG BUILDERS AND ARCHITECTS.

GREAT INCREASE OVER LAST YEAR SHOWN BY REPORT.

Total of Four Days in September Is Nearly Quarter-Million—Permits Number Hundred and Thirty-nine. Many New Jobs Reported—Coming Up at Building Office.

September has opened auspiciously in the building industry. The report of the Chief Inspector of Buildings, J. J. Backus, for the first week of this month shows a total of $242,333, divided among 139 building permits. Compared with this record is the one for the same period last September of only $98,113 in valuation, for ninety-two permits. This shows an increase of forty-seven permits and a valuation of $144,220. The run on the building office for new permits was quite active last week. On Tuesday, the first day on which the office was open this month, a total of fifty-eight permits were issued. When it is remembered that the report represents only four days' business, the pace is not slow. Saturday's total is never included in the report, but there were several large permits issued yesterday, which will appear in next Sunday's record. There are also several large jobs coming up for this week. One $90,000 building for the Hicks-Hagger estate, to be located on South Main street is now in the office, and the outlook for a continued activity in such buildings seems good. Following is the classified report, compiled at the building office by Mark Cohn:

	No. of permits.	Valuation.
Class C	8	64,921
Class D, one-story	40	41,225
Class D, 1½-story	6	17,650

Still a Light-keeper.

Ida Lewis, keeper of the Lime Rock light, in Newport Harbor, at 66 years of age, is still on the rock where she has been for fifty years, and the number of lives she has saved has increased to eighteen. Night after night she keeps the vigil she has kept for more than 18,000 nights. Her father was appointed keeper of the station in 1854, and, becoming a paralytic, for seventeen years of the twenty-five that he was in charge the actual work devolved upon his daughter. Miss Lewis was appointed keeper twenty-eight years ago.

"MOTHER WHEATON."

Incidents That Turned Her Life's Activities To Helping Inmates of Prisoners.

Elizabeth Ryder Wheaton has spent twenty-two years in the prisons, reformatories, stockades, rescue homes, saloons, and dives, and on the streets, railway trains, and elsewhere working for prisoners and others. Her earliest years were a society life in an Ohio town. And at first it seemed hard for her to give up fashionable society, home, friends, reputation, and all, and to "take the way of the lowly Nazarene."

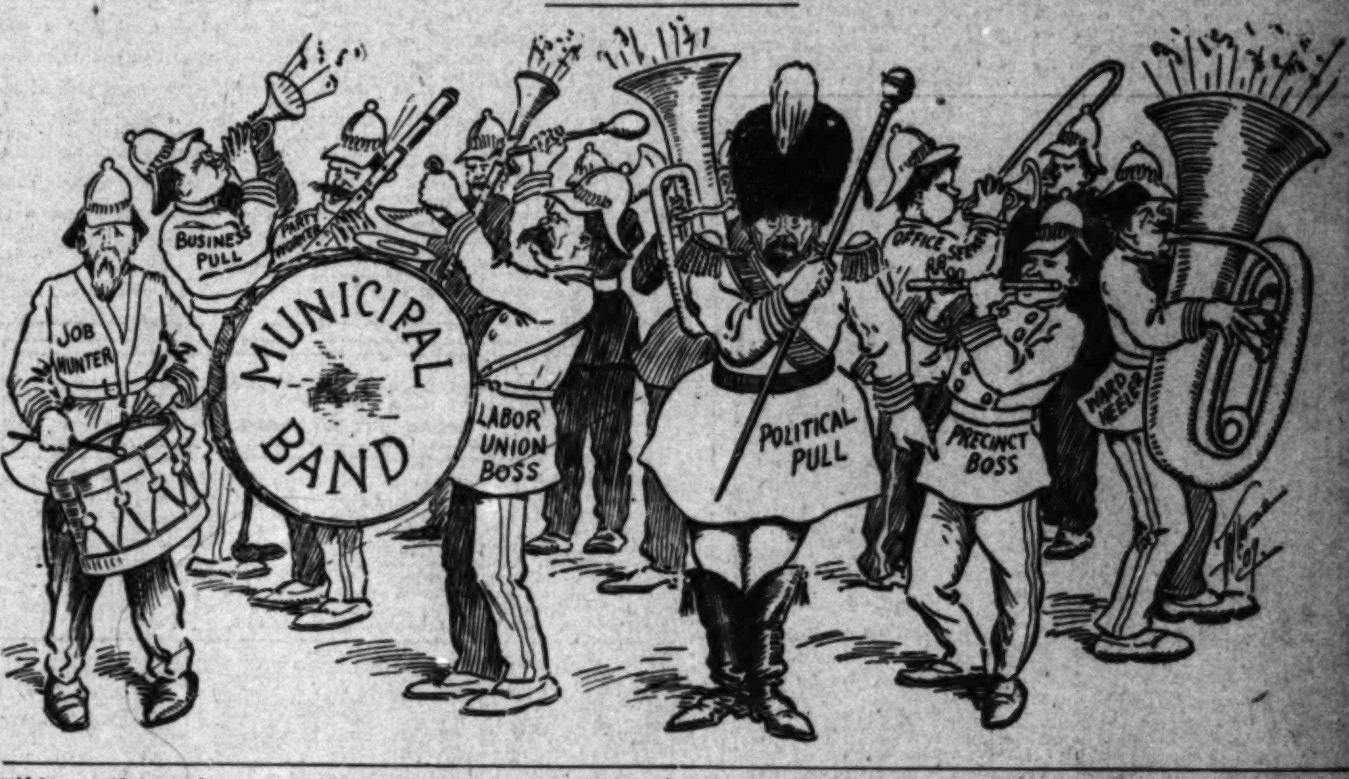
As a young woman she had visited a State prison with a party of friends. While waiting for a guide she had seen a young man brought in by an officer. She saw him searched, and, later as the heavy iron doors closed behind him with a clang, her sympathies were aroused. While being shown through the prison she saw this young man with his hair close cut, dressed in prisoner's garb, placed by the side of hardened criminals. Then her first interest was wakened to try to make the burdens lighter for the prison bound.

As she was leaving the prison she noticed some small articles made by the inmates in their spare moments. Among these was a miniature statue of a prisoner dressed in stripes, in one hand a ball and chain, the other hand shading the eyes. On the pedestal were the words, "What shall the harvest be?"

The impression made by this statue is still fresh in her mind. She has visited all the prisons and places of detention of any note in the United States, Mexico, Canada, and Europe.

MUSIC—Activities of Composers, Players and Singers.

THE "MUNICIPAL BAND"—OR POLITICS IN ART.



MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

What a graft that "Municipal Band" would be!

Of late it has been urged by various promoters, and has been made the subject of editorial comment in newspapers. Ambitious amateur composers and bandmasters in mediocre jobs have been more than enthusiastic; they have been soaring in an exalted ether of perpetual inspiration.

Now a large city band, perhaps bearing the "municipal" title, but supported by subscription, endowment or other private means, would be a very desirable combination. If properly conducted, it would be an ornament to the town, an inducement for music-lovers, and a great dispenser of real musical knowledge.

But the would-be promoters are all going at it in the wrong manner; they want to try a little mixture of tunes and politics. And the result would doubtless be a jangle unequalled in studied cacophony.

If in the various fundamental and of course necessary departments of city service, the dispensations are strange and the ways oftimes devious, how much more mysterious would be the financing and general direction of a city band?

Meaning no disrespect to the City Fathers, that body would have no more idea of how to conduct, manage or preserve a band than would they have capacity to sit in technical judgment on a Salon picture-hanging.

It's not a matter of brains; it's a matter of education and experience.

What sort of job—for instance—would Harley Hamilton, Ferdinand Stark and Henry Schoenefeld make of buying fire hose? They would get gold-bricked worse than any rube that ever gaped on Broadway.

It's hard enough to keep track of municipal money when the guardians have some idea how it's being spent—some judgment as to the real cost of purchases, but when the aldermanic venture is put forth into unknown regions, when they attempt to rule in a language they cannot speak—then the villager rises like the spirit of corruption in a charnel-house, and the institution becomes, not an ornament, but a disgraceful scandal.

And that, in all probability, would be the eventual course of a band conducted as a city institution.

What fine chances for political prowess could be found in the composition and conduct of such a band.

The director would not only be a director in the baton sense, but he would be a king-pin boss of the shop in all directions.

They couldn't keep the totem serpent out of the way either. Just at the moment of some big concert the riding delegate would butt in and call a strike because the copper that made the brass that made the plating that gilded the buttons that held up the third cornet's pants had not been mined by an organized miner. "Riding delegate" is perhaps a proper term; in these days of "labor temple" graft they all ride; walking is no longer necessary.

The bass drummer would be liable to find himself out of a job if some third cousin consents to have an advertisement printed in an open shop. The first clarinet would be fired for playing a solo; that would be an exhibition of independence. The whole band would be suspended if they ever attempted music in 9-8 time; that is altogether too many notes for one union measure; eight is the limit. In a municipal institution, you understand, great care would have to be exercised in order to set a good example to private undertakings.

The ramifications of band politics are practically endless. They could breed nothing but disruption and discontent, and, since a musical organization is of itself an unusually hard combination to handle, these matters would be magnified to a degree scarcely believable.

If we are to have a "municipal band" in an unofficial sense of the term, it must be supported by the business men, by the railway companies or by other private means, and kept entirely free from political influence.

The city might far easier subsidize an opera than a band. In such an appropriation not every man who had voted for the present Mayor could claim a job. Not all ward-heelers could assert stage prowess, but there's scarcely one, who, in the absence of some softer public snap, couldn't allege a little tooting ability. Politics, which after all, is nothing but the violent blowing of your own or some one else's horn, is great training for such an aggregation.

The tenth season of the "Philharmonic Course" of concerts will soon commence. Under this heading have been grouped the principal visiting artists of wide celebrity, generally in a well-diversified series, and indications are that this season will be well comparable to any other.

Mme. Gadski will be the first, singing at Simpson Auditorium October 22. This is her concert farewell for three years, as the Metropolitan Operahouse and foreign operatic engagements will henceforward consume most of her time.

The second star is Maude Powell, one of the foremost women violinists of the present time.

The third, coming in January, is Herbert Witherspoon, the distinguished American bass, probably the leading male oratorio singer in this country.

The fourth will be no less a person than Ignace Paderewski, who, while having rivals to his claim of piano kingship, certainly has been the greatest financial and popular success of any pianist alive.

The fifth artist, while new to Los Angeles, is a world-celebrity. She is Mme. Teresa Carreno, surpassing piano virtuoso.

Mme. Lillian Blauvelt, the delightful little American soprano, will be the sixth and last artist.

In substitues for these, in event that any should not be able to come, the management has been astonishingly prodigal, the substitutions in one or two instances actually surpassing the original numbers.

They are Josef Hoffmann, the sterling little pianist; Fritz Kreisler, probably the greatest living violinist, and Mme. Louise Homer, the great American contralto of the Metropolitan Operahouse.

Promising Composer.

Tito Ricordi, the head of the celebrated publishing house of Italy, has given much encouragement to the young American composer, Albert Mildenberg of New York City, who has spent the greatest part of this year in Italy preparing the score of his new opera "Eve," a Biblical subject.

The house of Ricordi has produced most of the important works written by the greatest composers of operatic music that the world has known. The names of Rossini, Bellini, Verdi, Boito, and latterly the names of Puccini, and Leoncavallo have been added to their remarkable list of composers, says Musical America, and it is not at all unlikely that an American composer's name will be added to this list of writers very soon.

Mr. Mildenberg is a native American but has spent much of his time abroad. Mr. Ricordi in commenting on Mildenberg's music said:

"Your score is perfectly beautiful; it is well written and artistically constructed; it is in the nature of a great surprise to me to find an American musician gifted with the melodic invention that you have. Your work is new, absolutely new in idea and development, still it has many of the ideas especially in the recitatives of the old Italian school.

"However, the fault in your work is, like so many other operas, in the libretto. You Americans as yet do not know the lyric stage; still I must say that you have a beautiful opera and after the libretto has been reconstructed you will have a work worthy of a presentation in any operahouse."

This comment coming from a judge like Ricordi is a great encouragement for the American who has to come so far away from his home for a recognition of his legitimate work.

Several impresarios in Milan have offered to produce Mr. Mildenberg's opera in various cities in Italy, but he has refused these offers because of the fact that these cities offered were not the principal cities of the country and Mr. Mildenberg desires a production in Milan, and the news of this being an accomplished fact may be looked for very soon. This will be one of the first grand operas written by an American composer to be produced in a large city of Italy, and sung by the best singers.

"The reason why I have refused to have my opera produced in Venice," said Mr. Mildenberg, "was because I desired to have the representative Italian critics present at the production of this opera, and I am willing to stand by what they say. Milan is where these critics are and Milan is where I would like to see the work presented."

Paragraphs.

Henry W. Savage is to produce a fantastic operetta called "Prince Hugo's Honeymoon," by Oscar Strauss.

Emma Calve will arrive in New York on September 17, and her season will begin with a concert at the Portland, Me., annual festival.

A prize of $100 in gold is to be paid to the party suggesting the best name for the Belasco Theater in Pittsburgh, which is to be operated as an advanced vaudeville house, commencing September 2. The theater was at one time called Duquesne.

A new sketch by C. T. Dazey, called "The Higher Law," dealing with diplomatic life in Washington, was brought out at Keith's Theater in Philadelphia recently by Rose Coghlan and her company. It contains one or two very strong dramatic situations, and inasmuch as it has something to do with a former administration it should arouse considerable comment.

Henry Miller is spending several weeks in Canada, preparing for the new play in which Laurence D'Orsay and Miss Cecilia Loftus will be starred. The play is a German comedy of military life, and in the English adaptation the scenes will be laid in the British garrison at Quebec. The title of the translation is "The Lancers."

Dr. Hans Richter, the Hungarian conductor, has been spending a good deal of his time lately in felling trees on his estate at Raab, in Hungary. It is said that he is developing into quite a sportsman also, and that when he shot his first rabbit, a few weeks ago, he was "frantic with delight."

Miss Ellen Terry was born in Coventry fifty-nine years ago. Two houses in that English city claim to be her birthplace. One house has the sign: "This is the birthplace of Miss Ellen Terry;" the other, just opposite, bears the legend: "This is the original birthplace of Miss Ellen Terry."

A Chicago musician, Héniot Levy, won the first prize for the composition of a trio for piano, violin and violincello in competitive contest under the patronage of the Prince of Monaco, recently held at Paris, open to the composers of all nations. Among the judges were Saint-Saëns and D'Yndy. Six years ago Mr. Levy won the first prize at a similar contest in Warsaw for the composition of a sonata for piano and violin.

Charles Andress of Chicago is now collecting photographs of performers and circus people for the largest photograph ever made. When completed it will contain over 2000 people. This photograph is being made irrespective of any particular show. The center will be made up of the representative circus men of the past and present, in this and foreign countries; and the rest of the photograph will be of performers and musicians, staff officers, etc., of the various shows throughout the country.

Beerbohm Tree is absent-minded. One day he took a cab and gave the driver an address. Throughout the journey he was reading letters, and when the house was reachd he alighted, still reading, and knocked at the door. When the door was opened Tree looked up abstractedly and said to the amazed servant: "Come in! Come in!" Still reading, he reëntered the cab and returned to the theater with his mission unaccomplished.

A Paris paper recounts a strange tale of a descendant of Carmen, the heroine in Prosper Mérimée's story. It seems she had a daughter who married a gypsy singer, Yarko, from which union resulted a child named Thiecla, who fell in love with a British soldier at Gibraltar, by whom she had a child named Minty. When the soldier was transferred to India he sent the mother and child to France, where they found Yarko, who taught Minty to sing. The latter appeared in the principal theaters of Europe and America, her greatest success being in the role of "Carmen." Then she suddenly disappeared, some supposing her to have been poisoned by the gypsies in England for having betrayed her race.

"Of all the stories that come to our ears in the course of a year," said the pawnbroker, "those in which violins are concerned are probably the most pitiful. If you could learn all the details which led up to the sale of that case full of instruments you would have enough pathos to fill several volumes. A musician won't sell his violin until everything else is gone, and then he will usually starve for several days before he is ready to take the final step. Now, I don't see how any one can become so attached to a fiddle; but of course I ain't a musician. Really, I'd rather not have the things around. I don't like them. The cut and the shape and the general appearance of a violin is enough to give a man the blues. They're a sad instrument at best, and I often think they must be made more so by the experiences some of them are taken through. Sometimes I get some very rare fiddles. When the old, mellow-toned ones come in here you can bet there's something behind it—some story that the papers would like mighty well to get."

Who would ever imagine that Mme. Melba, one of the reigning queens of song today, once went forth, armed with a pail of paste in one hand, a huge paste brush in the other and a roll of bills under her arm? Such a thing, however (says the Strand Magazine), actually happened in the early days of her career, when she was hungering for opportunities to sing in public. While Nellie Mitchell, as she then was, was still a schoolgirl, holiday-making at Sorrento, in Victoria, she got up a concert in aid of one of the local charities. She asked her family to help her to eke out her own meager savings, which she intended to devote to the purpose; but her father, in spite of the fact that he was very fond of music—and still has a fine voice which he loves to use—did not care to encourage his daughter in the enterprise. In the hope of stifling her leaning toward a professional career, he refused any aid whatever. This check, however, did not daunt the plucky little songbird in any way. She determined, having pledged herself, so far, to carry the matter through, cost what it might, without any assistance. Unfortunately, all her own savings had by this time been swallowed up in the preliminary expenses, and there was not a penny left to pay for posting the bills on which she relied to advertise the entertainment. Having tried various ways of circumventing the difficulty without success, she determined to be her own billposter. She went straight to the hotel kitchen and persuaded one of the maids to make her a quantity of paste, which she put into a pail. Then she borrowed a billposter's brush, and as soon as it was dark set off on her adventurous round and posted up every one of the bills she had had printed. The result of her enterprise was a big house and a big success for the resourceful young prima donna en herbe—a success which was a fitting omen of the world-wide renown she was destined to achieve, and of which she is today savoring to the full all the delights.

At a recent sale of antiques David Belasco bought several thousand dollars' worth of old furniture, says the Chicago Tribune. It did not match the furniture in his house, and to those who asked him why he had bought it he said that he meant to keep it, knowing that some time he would write a play in which it would be needed. Some of the theatrical managers who do not like David Belasco then said that they would not be surprised to hear that he had written a three-act play around a dining-room chair, or had composed a sideboard tragedy in five acts. Henry Irving, Augustin Daly, David Belasco, Mrs. Fiske and Richard Mansfield have been foremost in the movement to use real stage fittings. Edwin A. Abbey, St. Gaudens and other noted artists worked with Henry Irving in making those wonderful productions that Irving produced at the Lyceum Theater, in London. The best artists in this country have been employed by the best producers, and it now costs fifty times more to mount a play in which any emphasis is laid upon the scenic effect than it used to cost. In a vaudeville sketch called "The Wyoming Whoop," Will M. Cressy puts a real printing press on the stage. It is not used during the act, but it is there, and its presence helps materially in the effect which the act produces. Even so recently as fifteen or twenty years ago, such an expensive bit of stage furniture would have been looked upon as absurdly extravagant. At a time when one of the best-known theatrical managers in the world was expressing his belief in the dictum that "Shakespeare spells ruin and Byron spells bankruptcy," Charles Kean was putting on productions that cost a lot of money and that made an effort to be historically correct. Byron's "Sardanapalus" was produced with a wealth of reality. Kean's "Macbeth" also was gorgeously mounted. But in the productions that are seen upon the stage of today much of the fine effect is made possible through the lighting. The old gas and limelight effects have been superseded by electricity. When Irving came to this country on one of his tours he brought with him many tanks which he used in his limelighting effects. They were all stacked on the sidewalk in front of the theater in Kansas City, and their presence there gave rise to the report that they contained oxygen, that Henry Irving was a dying man, and that his life was prolonged only by the use of the oxygen in the tanks.

TOPICS OF THE STAGE.

Of all the people in Mr. Healy's opera company, now at the Los Angeles Theater, Arthur Cunningham is by far the best known to Los Angeles. He has, indeed, been a very great favorite here in past appearances—a favoritism deserved by his superior ability. Cunningham as a singer is entirely out of class with all the rest of the company save Aida Hemmi. As an actor there is none better in the aggregation.

Arthur Cunningham
best-known principal of the light opera company, playing at the new Los Angeles Theater.

His career has been a very interesting one.

He was born in Montreal, of Irish parentage, and as his father was a celebrated fiddler of his time, Cunningham junior's bent for music came naturally.

But first of all he was a stenographer and for several years was private secretary to Sir Joseph Hicks, general manager of the Grand Trunk Railway. After he had saved sufficient money to pay his London tuition, he studied for two years there, and from 123 applicants was chosen for baritone of the Holy Trinity Church, Sloane Square.

Here he was heard by Sir Charles Villiers Stanford, who liked his work so well that he secured for him the title role in the approaching production of "Shamus O'Brien," and preceding this, remember, Cunningham had done no stage work.

With this production, the baritone toured England, Scotland and Ireland, and at last was brought over to this country. "Shamus" was not a hit in New York, and the management of the Broadawy Theater withdrew it.

Henry W. Savage, however, had heard Cunningham, and engaged him for the famous original "Castle Square" opera. Following two seasons with Savage, Mr. Cunningham went to Hammerstein, and sang Father Michael in "La Poupee." Engagements with Augustin Daly, Francis Wilson and De Wolf Hopper followed, and at length Mr. Cunningham was employed to alternate in the leading role of "The Highwayman."

It was while singing in this piece that he was seen by W. H. Leahy, manager of the Tivoli of San Francisco. His success was immediate, and two years after his original engagement there, he sang Alfio in "Cavalleria," in the well-remembered production under Mascagni's baton. Later he sang the Toreador to Zelie De Lussan's "Carmen," and at this performance Fritzi Scheff, who was in the audience, heard him. Following a season with Mlle. Scheff, he returned to the Tivoli, then ensconced in the splendid new theater destroyed by the earthquake.

In the holocaust Cunningham lost not only his permanent position at the Tivoli, but a beautiful home which he had just completed for himself and his wife, known professionally as Lilian Raymond.

THE DRAMATIC WEEK.

"The Prince of Pilsen," one of the few musical comedies of worth in the past few years, will return for its third—or fourth?—visit to Los Angeles, this week, commencing tomorrow night at the Mason Operahouse.

"The Prince" is still a Henry W. Savage show, and a good production is promised. Mr. Savage is at least more to be believed than many other producing managers.

Dan Mason will be found in the role of the Cincinnati brewer. He is said to be a successful comedian. George F. Moore will play the French concierge, Francois, while Lillian Lawson will play the little French maid, Sidonie. Hayden Clifford will be the English earl. The two sopranos are Octavia Broske and Reba Dale. The prince this time will be Edward Mora, said to possess a fine baritone. William Weedon, lyric tenor, will take the part of the American lieutenant.

A pretty chorus and a capable orchestra are also announced.

"The Primrose Path," Margaret Wycherly's new emotional play, will have its first western performance this week, at the Belasco. Miss Stoddard will have Miss Wycherly's role.

Following "The Primrose Path," the Belasco will offer George Broadhurst's new play, "The Mills of the Gods," for the first time west of Chicago.

Another stock novelty is to be offered at the Burbank, beginning today.

It will be Clyde Fitch's play, "The Woman in the Case." Maude Gilbert will have the title role, while an auxiliary part of equal importance will fall to Blanche Hall. William Desmond will be assigned to the principal man's part, about whom the dramatic struggle wages.

The story is an interesting and absorbing one, and the play is well constructed.

A Japanese act, presented by O Hana San and her company, will be the headline feature of the Orpheum show this week. The sketch is entitled "A Geisha's Dream," and is presented with full Japanese scenic accessories.

The Balzers, who come direct from Germany to the Orpheum circuit, are said to offer something new in acrobatic performances. Leona Thurber and her little darkeys have a singing and dancing act. The Balfour quartette, local aspirants for vaudeville honors, will give classic melodies.

The hold-overs are Ferreros, Emil Subers, Mlle. Martha and Fred Ray and company.

"The Singing Girl," which formed the opening offering at the Los Angeles Theater, last Monday night, will be put on again this evening, and will continue during the rest of the week.

It will feature Aida Hemmi in Alice Neilsen's old role, Mr. Weiner in the tenor part, Messrs. Bates and Kunkel in the comedy assignments, and the minor support in a variety of characters.

"It's Never Too Late to Mend," which will be presented by the Ulrich company for the week commencing today, is not the play familiar to theater-goers of twenty-five years ago, but a new "romantic drama," from the pen of Owen Davis. It concerns the happiness of a jolly tar and his "Nancy." The other principals are an old merchant and his erring young wife, a beautiful waif and her vagabond foster father.

Sappho and Phaon.

One of the most important and interesting events of the coming theatrical season will be the production to be made by Harrison Grey Fiske of Percy Mackaye's poetic drama, "Sappho and Phaon." Mme. Bertha Kalich, who became an English-speaking actress of eminence upon her assumption of the title part in Maeterlinck's "Monna Vanna," will have the role of Sappho, and the production is promised for the early part of October.

Mr. Mackaye is the young poet-dramatist whose first work, "Jeanne d'Arc," found acceptance at the hands of E. H. Sothern and Miss Julia Marlowe last season. The success of that piece—in this country, at any rate—was hailed with satisfaction by all lovers of the imaginative in the drama, and it is a source of even greater pleasure to note that in "Sappho and Phaon" there are indications of a material gain, and that its qualities are such as to command attention, whatever its fate when brought into the glare of the footlights.

"Sappho and Phaon" will more than compensate the student of the drama who reads the play in advance of its production. Those defects which marred "Jeanne d'Arc" in a certain degree are not apparent in the newer play. There is present a more vital and cumulative dramatic interest. The dramatic movement is rapid; the tragedy becomes vivid and real, and the story gains in sweeping and compelling power as the plot unfolds. As a piece of poetic writing it ripples melodiously and evenly, says the Chicago Tribune. So much depends on a proper comprehension of its meters and rhythms that it is to be hoped that Mr. Fiske will be able to secure players who can read verse sufficiently well to bring out at least a part of its tragical and emotional significance.

The opening scene of the play is placed in the indefinite future, but the later acts go back to a period 500 B.C. In his task of carrying his readers and his audiences back over the centuries, Mr. Mackaye puts a severe tax on credulity, but his skill is so precise that the deed is accomplished without the least forfeiture of confidence or interest.

The first act, which is in the nature of a prologue, is the scene of an excavation at Herculaneum. A box, many centuries old, is brought to light by a workman, and it comes into the possession of an American tourist, whose imagination is vivid. Upon opening the box he finds among its contents a number of vials, the handles of several brushes, and a number of other objects, and at once he jumps at the conclusion that he has discovered the make-up box of Actius, the Roman actor. He unearths also the manuscript of the tragedy of "Sappho and Phaon," by Varius, and ruminating over his discoveries and their possible significance, the American begins to dream, and in his vision of the Herculaneum of other days he sees the gay and thoughtless throngs of Pompeians, utterly oblivious of their impending doom.

As the dream continues, the modern scene fades from view, and in its place is seen the dressing-rooms in the private theater of Varius, who, accompanied by Horace and Virgil, has come from Rome to watch a performance of his own play. Actius is making up for his part, and Naevolia, cast as Sappho, and with whom Actius is madly in love, is teasing her lover. Once more the picture fades, and the interior of the theater is brought into view, the performance of "Sappho and Phaon" claiming the attention.

Pittacus and Alcaeus are the most persistent wooers of the fair Sappho, who is adored of all men, but each suitor in turn is rejected and not until she sees Phaon walking past in the street does she learn what love is. To Phaon her love goes out boundlessly despite the knowledge that he is a slave. Even the revelation that Phaon is in love with Thalassa, a slave girl, by whom he has two children, does not discourage Sappho, but rather it increases her determination to bring the man to her feet. Calling to her aid all a woman's artifices and wiles, she finally attracts Phaon, but he comes not as her slave but as her lord and master.

Alcaeus and Pittacus, the disappointed suitors, learn of the romance, and in jealousy plot against the lovers. Phaon is taken into captivity. He escapes and goes to the temple to offer a sacrifice to the gods. The strains of a lyre reach him and in his hatred of the plotting Alcaeus he creeps forward, thinking to find in the musician the object of his hatred. He strikes a cruel blow behind the pillar and kills his little son.

He is seen bending over the tiny body when Thalassa, the mother, enters with a babe in her arms, seeking for the child. Phaon suddenly comes to a realization that his duty to the slave girl compels him to relinquish Sappho, and, taking up the body of the dead child, he goes once more into the temple, accompanied by Thalassa.

Sappho likewise sees in a flash the utter hopelessness of her love, and with a despairing cry throws herself into the sea. Her final speech is one of the most beautiful passages in the entire drama and, being well worthy of quotation, follows:

'Tis the sea,
The teeming, terrible, maternal sea
That spawned us all. She calls me back to her,
But I will not go. Her womb hath wrought me forth
A child defiant. I will be free of her!
Her ways are birth, fecundity, and death;
But mine are beauty and immortal
love.
Therefore, I will be a tyrant of myself—
Mine own law will I be! And I will make Creatures of mind and melody, whose forms
Are wrought of loveliness without decay,
And wild desire without satiety,
And joy and aspiration without death!
And on the wings of those shall I, I,
Sappho!
Still soar and sing above those cliffs of Lesbos.
Even when ten thousand blooms of men and maids
Are fallen and withered—there.

Henry Kolker, who played Guido Colonna to Mme. Kalich's Monna Vanna, will create the part of the slave, Phaon.

Art and Artists.

BY ANTONY E. ANDERSON.

Work of the Art Students' League.

One of the most interesting of the art schools in Los Angeles is the Art Students' League. Only a little over a year old, it is still in its beginnings. Yet its growth has been steady, and there can be no doubt, it seems to me, that it will some day be a great power for artistic good in our community.

At first it had a local habitation, but not a name, and consisted of a handful of earnest young men who were drawing from the nude three nights a week under the instruction of Hanson Puthuff. At the suggestion of a brother artist it was brought downtown (the class had hitherto met on Avenue Fifty-two, in Mr. Puthuff's studio,) and day classes were added. Then it received the name of the Art Students' League of Los Angeles.

The league is now under the instruction and guidance of Warren T. Hedges, a graduate of the Chase School of New York, though Joseph Greenbaum has joined his forces with Mr. Hedges and has a special life class for women. Mr. Puthuff has gone to Chicago. But the policy—it may almost be called the ideal—of the school remains the same. This, in the words of its artistic little circular, is "to give all the advantages of academic training in drawing and painting, while still leaving to the student that freedom which makes for individual development;" also, to supply a convenient place of study for art workers and art students. This "convenient place" is Blanchard Hall at present.

The study room is large, airy and well lighted. The instruction to be gotten there is of the best, for both Mr. Hedges and Mr. Greenbaum are well trained, the one in New York and the other in Munich and Paris, and both show a natural aptitude and liking for teaching. Some of the work done in the school is surprisingly good—free, individual, yet always with regard for the absolute necessity of strong construction.

In the painting class of Mr. Hedges, Edith Osborne may be mentioned as a young woman of most unusual promise. She has an almost unerring eye for that harmony which comes from good color. Mr. Greenbaum's class, too, has its very promising members. Many newspaper artists are in the night classes, and there are six of these young men at present in Mr. Hedges's Saturday afternoon class. Their instructor has been a newspaper artist himself, and he knows their particular needs.

The league has received the unqualified support of some of the best-known of the painters of Los Angeles. In proof of their interest, these painters have contributed pictures to be hung in the rooms of the league, to be changed every two months. This gallery, which opens today, will be free to the public on Monday and Sunday afternoons. Among the contributors are William Wendt, John M. Donovan, Elmer Wachtel, Hanson Puthuff, Marion Kavanaugh Wachtel, Joseph Greenbaum, Granville Redmond and Benjamin Chambers Brown. Other painters of note will undoubtedly follow this handful of generous leaders.

The league, it will be seen, is a school with an idea—and that idea is also an ideal—artistic growth for the individual man or woman who seeks its instruction, as well as the spread of appreciation and understanding of art in the community at large.

The Painter's Plaint.

In a recent number of the Book News Monthly, Frank Reed Whiteside, presumably a painter, raises his voice in protest against the public's method of judging pictures. He also complains of the fact that all too often the painter is forced to depend on the writer for his widest publicity—and that he usually suffers thereby. "Where one person," he says, "knows a picture from personal observation, twenty know it through what has been written about it. And so, a story-telling picture, or one with a sentimental interest, has been the phase of the painter's art that has been touched upon—because it was closer to the writer's attitude, and incidentally much more easily described."

He says further: "While there is an analogy existing between the arts, there is a wide difference in the point of view from which the subject is approached.

"The medium of the poet is language; of the musician, sound; of the sculptor, form; and of the painter, color. The poet is not expected to write concrete form, nor the musician to play visible color, nor the sculptor to model sound. Why, then, should the painter be asked to paint a story? And yet, in almost everything that is written about pictures, the idea, the meaning of the picture, is discussed, to the entire exclusion of all the qualities that, to the painter, are reasons for its existence.

"When a painter writes about a picture—and there have been such notable instances as Leonardo Da Vinci, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Whistler, and John La Farge—he speaks of the qualities he sees in it, qualities of selection, color, form, and composition, but has little to say about the subject."

This is Mr. Whiteside's conclusion: "If a layman desires to understand pictures, and would experience the pleasure that a satisfactory canvas can give, he should visit a good exhibition without being biased by press notices, or reference to artists' names, or titles of pictures in the catalogue. Let him select a picture that seems unusual, tells no story and apparently has no excuse for having been painted.

"Let him try to see how the artist has arranged the canvas, and how necessary to the composition is every little seemingly unimportant object. He should endeavor to see the beauty of the color harmony—the ensemble. If these can be perceived and also something of the same sensations experienced that the artist felt while painting it, the canvas has justified itself. It is then time enough to look up the artist's name. The more intensely the observer is made to feel these things, the greater the canvas."

All this is true enough—yet Mr. Whiteside seems to underrate the number of those who write for the newspapers about paintings from the standpoint of the painter. There is hardly a painter in Los Angeles, for instance, whose art critic has not at some time either practiced painting or studied it; a few of them, indeed, paint even while they write. Such critics are safe and helpful guides to the man who "knows what he likes" but knows not why. They will be able to lead him, firmly, but ever so gently, through dark woods and deep morasses into the Elysian fields. But for their timely assistance, he might wander astray forever.

International Studio.

The International Studio for September has an interesting table of contents. The number opens with an appreciation of the work of the Boston painter, Edmund C. Tarbell, the frontispiece being Mr. Tarbell's much-exploited "Venetian Blind." This picture also appears on the cover of the Studio.

Eva Lovett writes of the recent work in jewelry by Mrs. Hugo Froelich, and Mabel Tuke Priestman gives an entertaining account of "The Craft of Batik Making." "The term batik," she explains at the start, "literally means to engrave, draw or write with a sharp instrument, which was done by the Greeks and Romans, who wrote their letters on wax tablets. Today the word batik indicates the special Javanese method by which materials are decorated."

Other timely articles are: "The Photo-Secession in America," by Maude I. G. Oliver, with many delightfully artistic illustrations from photographs, among them being one of Constance Crawley by William B. Dyer of Chicago; "Recent Designs in Domestic Architecture;" "Painting and Painters," a review of recent important books on art; "Robert W. Little—A Review of His Work," by A. Lys Baldry; "The Mannheim Tercenary Exhibition," etc.

ART NOTES.

Gardner Symons of Arch Beach left Los Angeles yesterday for two years of Europe and the East. He will go at once to Shelbourne Falls, Mass., where he will paint the autumn foliage. A number of his canvases are to be of large size, and are intended for the spring exhibition of the Paris Salon. Mr. Symons took many of his California pictures with him; he will spend the winter in Boston, exhibiting these at the Boston Art Club. William Wendt has gone with Mr. Symons, but he will travel no farther than Chicago, where he is called to serve on the jury of the Art Institute. Many of Mr. Wendt's recent pictures, painted at Laguna and elsewhere, will be shown in Chicago.

Emily White, who returned from a sketching trip at Laguna Beach and Capistrano Mission a few days ago, will leave for Peoria, Ill., on or about September 17, taking with her all her sketches in water color, to the number of forty. They will be shown in the eastern town. I hope to speak at some length of Miss White's interesting work in next Sunday's Art and Artists.

Next Sunday afternoon William Swift Daniell will start the autumn exhibitions of Los Angeles by opening at Blanchard Hall with seventy-five water colors of California landscape and seascape. This will be a private view. On Monday the show will be open to the general public, free of charge, for one entire week, closing on the following Sunday afternoon.

Minnie Luce Hatch is showing some very interesting things in leather work at her Blanchard Hall studio, the purses and shopping bags being especially good in color and graceful in design.

The public schools of Richmond, Ind., have recently purchased "Hills in Springtime," a landscape from the virile brush of William Wendt. It was one of the pictures which hung in the recent exhibition there.

AVOID ONE-IDEA LIFE.

Women Should Diversify Their Lives, No Matter What the Demands May Be.

Women who give themselves up to one idea, letting it obscure other interests, make a very great mistake, because, no matter how worthy the duty o rthe ideal to which they devote themselves, they narrow their lives and their minds by excess of devotion. Chance may—often does—deprive them of the object of their cares, and they are left without an aim, nothing to fall back upon, and there must be a long and often painful period before a new interest can be brought in.

Take for example the case of the girl who is devoting herself to an aged mother. For her sake she shuts herself away from outside enjoyments, one by one her friends leave her out of their scheme of things, saying,

"Oh, what's the

MOTORCYCLES NOW ARE POPULAR FAVORI

How the Speedy Little Fellows Are Making

When you see a motorcycle eating up space at a lively gait, do you classify it as a cross between a runabout and a bicycle, or do you give it credit for being the thoroughbred that paved the way for the motor car? As a matter of fact the motorcycle was really the pioneer machine. Hardly had the bicycle taken its present form before efforts were made in this country and abroad, to adapt to it some form of power-making machinery, the beginnings along this line being various clockwork attachments that look very ridiculous today, but upon which their designers built extravagant hopes.

With the advent of the internal combustion engine, the problem was solved. European manufacturers quickly saw the possibilities offered, and motorcycles were in successful operation while the builders of motor cars were still working out the elemental questions underlying automobile manufacturing.

The foregoing must not be construed to mean that vast improvements have not been made to the motorcycle during the years that it has been on the market, but it is true that correct basic principles were more quickly reached in motorcycle designing than was the case with car building. The improvements have been along practical lines, such as the development of multi-cylinder machines, the rapid perfection of the essential parts of the motors, and the introduction of cushion forks and frames.

If America were not the original home of the motorcycle, it is none the less true that American designers have greatly improved upon the first foreign models, and American motor-

Fall Apparel For Women

A WONDERFUL DISPLAY OF FASHION

Fortunate arrangements with the best New York tailors have made it possible for us to present to our townswomen this autumn the most wonderful collection of finished apparel we have ever shown. In fact, we doubt if this exhibit, in any detail, can be matched elsewhere in town. We urge you to note particularly the many exclusive STYLES, the variety of entirely new MATERIALS, the painstaking WORKMANSHIP, the FINISH, and then weigh all these essentials with the PRICES we ask. It will certainly be worth every woman's while—who has a thought of buying a Fall suit or wrap—to look this collection over, and at once, too, while things are fresh and new, lines and sizes complete.

Autumn Suits Tailored From $22.50 to $165.00

Copies of the most exclusive Parisian models are shown at $65.00, $75.00, $95.00 and up. They are worth coming to look at, even though you have no idea of owning one.

Introductory Sale of Suits AT $22.50

We illustrate above a handsomely tailored suit of the newer type, made of strictly all wool cheviot in plain or fancy mixed blues, tobacco browns and black. Tight fitting, satin lined coat 27 inches long; skirt full plaited, $22.50

Others are here at $29.50 and $39.50, and they are styles you'll not duplicate later in the season near these prices. See them tomorrow while the lines are complete.

Evening Wraps

Each day marks the arrival of something new and gorgeous in the way of evening or afternoon wraps, fashioned of rich laces or handsome cloth—white, black and all the popular light shades.

One of the late novelties is a 36-inch cape made of fine chiffon broadcloth with unfinished edges. Some with plain silk lined hoods, others with deep collars of panne velvet. They are designed for either afternoon or evening wear. White, pastel blues, pinks, chamois, and burgundy shades. Special at $12.50.

New Net Waists $6.50

Women will count it a pleasure to pick from our line of new Fall waists. Not only style and newness, but there's an element of economy about the entire gathering that's most interesting.

Ecru or white net waists with yoke of handsome Princess lace and medallions; collar and cuffs edged with narrow Val. buttoned back; three-quarter sleeves. Our price $6.50. See if you can match it for half as much more.

NEW TAILORED WAISTS $2.50

Ultra stylish looking affairs; severely tailor-made. Long sleeves, open front, laundered white collar and cuffs, fine box plaited fronts; made of nice, soft white materials with green, blue, red and black hair line stripes an inch apart. Specially priced, $2.50.

LINGERIE WAISTS 1-2 TO 1-3 OFF

This week we will close out all of our white lawn waists, and the showing embraces hundreds of them ranging in price from $1.50 to $32.50, at 33 1-3 to 50 per cent. reduction. Worth investigating.

Austrian Wool Suitings $1 Yd.

Another invoice of smart looking all wool suitings came just in time to be seen first by tomorrow's visitors. Handsome plaids and checks in color combinations most in vogue for Autumn wear. Soft toned blues and browns, greens, grays and purple mixtures, done in indistinct plaid effects, expressly gotten up for the long coated tailor gowns. Fifty or more to pick from, 46 inches wide. Specially priced, yard $1.00

MAIN FLOOR

New Plaid Silks at 85c, $1, $1.25, $1.50 —AND UP—

"SIEGEL'S" FOR WOMEN'S AND CHILDREN'S WEAR

Tailored Suits
For Women

The result of our buyer's recent trip to the Eastern style centers are now in evidence. A number of the new suits and coats have arrived. To say that the styles are radically different from last season might be considered a slight exaggeration, because the long coats are again in the lead—not the extreme long, preference being shown the seven-eighths, three-quarter and thirty-inch lengths.

The skirts of the new suits are nearly all in the full pleated effects. Materials are mixed tweeds and cheviots, with a goodly sprinkling of chiffon broadcloth. As to colors, blues are largely in evidence and the Pecan, Leather and Champagne shades are also quite popular.

Expansion Sale

Store Closed Saturdays at 12:30 Noon Until September 15

Unforseen delays in the completion of our Hill Street Extension have upset all our calculations for the coming season's business. Enormous stocks which were ordered in anticipation of having possession of at least a part of the new building are demanding display space that cannot be given them until many big stock adjustments are made.

That's the reason for the reckless price cutting in this Expansion Sale.

$2 to $5 Wash Waists $1.35

Fully three hundred new wash waists—duplicates of those sold all season at $2.00 to $5.00—go in the Expansion Sale tomorrow at a dollar thirty-five each. (Second Floor)

$10 to $15 Trimmed Hats $3

Final cleanup of Trimmed Hats. The collection including many clever creations of the sorts sold throughout the season for $10.00, $12.50 and $15.00. (Second Floor)

50c to $1.50 Persian Bands 25c

Fall styles in dress are sure to create a strong demand for these Persian Band trimmings.

Yet, because we bought at a next-to-nothing price, we can sell the entire lot at 25c a yard; made to sell at 50c to $1.50.

(Trimming Department. Rear of Left Aisle)

$25 to $60 Suits $19.75

Thirty or more faultlessly tailored suits to be sold tomorrow at $19.75 each. some of them silk, richly trimmed with laces and braid; some of Panama cloths and fancy suitings.

Mostly Eton styles. Early season prices $25 to $60. Choice of the lot at $19.75.

(Second Floor)

Jeweled Back Combs at Half

Varied assortment of fancy back combs—some with quaint and rich gold mountings and some beautifully jeweled—at practically half. $2 combs at $1, $3 combs at $1.50, and so on up to the $6.50 and $7.50 sorts at $3.50.

(Jewelry Department. Facing Entrance)

15c to 25c Wash Stuffs 10c

Dozens and dozens of decidedly pretty patterns in colored lawns that have been selling all season at 15c to 25c are now ten cents a yard.

And 33-inch Glasgow Linen finish suiting, the fabric most extensively used for nurses' dresses and aprons, is now ten cents a yard. When such a fabric can be had at the cost of common muslin it pays to lay in a supply for far-in-the-future needs.

High Grade Bedding Liberally Reduced

A few items that will serve to show the rate of savings on many other kinds:

Soft, fluffy and heavy white wool blankets in eleven-quarter size, with either blue or pink border, $4.50 a pair instead of $6.

Fine white wool blankets in eleven-quarter size, with five per cent. of cotton in the warp, to prevent shrinking, pink or blue borders, $6 a pair instead of $8.

Eleven-quarter blankets of exceptionally fine white wool, soft, thick and fluffy blankets of a famous California brand, some all white, others with pink, blue or lavender borders, $8.50 instead of $10.50 a pair.

Silkoline covered comforts filled with one sheet of carded cotton, regularly $1.25, now 95c.

LAUGHING ATHLETICS IN THE SCHOOLS.

ECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

had a friend, the principal of the h school in the town where I used live, who came often to talk over ool affairs with me, more as a recreation than for any other reason. I never been a teacher myself but had been to school a little both as upil and later as an occasional visi- . One day the professor had been ing me of a certain "naughty girl" o was habitually tardy, absent-nded, and sometimes positively sul- .

I know what would cure her!" I d.

"Tell me I implore you!" he ex-imed. "I will adopt any means ailable." The expression of his face s a study in mental disorders. ere were care, despair, perplexity l eagerness depicted in it. It was usual expression at the week end. t strange to say there was underly- it all a certain indefinable "pleas- look," as if the man would con-dict himself if he could.

began laughing, just as if I ldn't help it. I have practiced ghing for many years, as a means grace to myself and other folk. I ghed till I almost cried, and the fessor, looking puzzled at first, soon ned me, not knowing the cause at but from sheer infection.

"What is the matter?" he cried. hat are you laughing about?"

"What are you laughing about?" I ed.

"I laugh because you made me gh," he said.

"And you look a different man," I laimed. "The mental pallor of ur face has gone. Every muscle is ted. You are actually handsome, fessor!"

le glanced with a vanity that was tue in the mirror across the hall. ut you said you would tell me how manage that naughty girl and all rest."

"I have shown you how to manage ur pupils," I said. "You need ghing athletics in the public schools a feature of the curriculum."

"Now Mrs. G.," said my friend, af- ting an air of severity, "we have a od deal of laughing in the public ools, a good deal more than is good the schools. The amount of snick- ng the boys can do in a given time d without visible cause, is beyond ason. As for the girls they giggle nothing and have to be suppressed. fact we have been obliged to set wn laughing in study hours as a sdemeanor punishable like any other ense, tardiness, or wilfulness or in-tention. And here you astonish me actually advocating laughter as a ans of discipline! You would best pear before the county board with ur new concept."

"I will begin with the principal," I lied. "You came to call on me with troubled a countenance as one n seen. You had lost your last end apparently. You were desperate th the case of 'that naughty girl' d you as helpless as a cornered rab- . Now, own up to me that the ormity of her many crimes seems less ce you laughed so heartily a mo- nt ago."

"Why, of course I do feel myself in lighter vein, naturally."

"I have something to say to you out that naughty girl some other ne," I said, eagerly. "I have found t things about her this week you ver so much as dreamed of. We are t just now discussing laughing ath- ics in the schools. I have been rea- ning along this line for a long while. will meet you at your statement as 'snickering and giggling' during dy hours. In my opinion it is im- olation of the innocents to prohibit ickering and giggling unless you of- a substitute. As well make a alk line on the board and prohibit e pupils from growing taller on pain punishment. Tell them they may ow wide but the instant they at- mpt to grow long it is a misdemean- . It is as natural for youth to laugh for brooks to trickle and gurgle wn hill. You suppress the laugh, m up the little stream where the dth is narrowest and the happy-go- cky expression of child and brook ds unnatural, inadequate vent in ppressed, scanty overflow."

"It isn't so scanty as you might ink," said the professor, wincing a tle as I could plainly see.

"Don't interrupt your teacher," I re- med laughing." (And of course he ughed.) Now if I were principal of ur school, or any school, I would in- titute a season of laughter as often necessary, and at irregular times. f course it would be rather a forced ell at first, but when it is once un- rstood that it is coming it will be spontaneous and as essential as the wering of the windows or the closing the register. Mental atmosphere is indispensable as the air we breathe. o through the class-rooms, my iend, and note the care-worn expres- on on the faces of your assistants. rue, the teachers live up to the re- ired standard of looking pleasant, t the look is conventional. The leasant look' is habitual from a sense duty or obligation, not spontaneous d from the heart. Teachers are 're- ired to look pleasant,' I understand. can walk through the crowded reets or look over an audience any- here and pick out every teacher in ght by that same habitual 'Pleasant ok.' Beneath it I see weariness, and lf-suppression, and the furtive gaze one in constant dread of being sur- rised into a sudden expression of ountenance not in keeping with duty. tell you what both teachers and pu- ils need for mental and physical rength is laughing athletics, a bend- g double and holding onto the sides ith laughter that comes from away own deep like water from an old- ashioned well, clear and sparkling."

My friend laughed "that way down ep laugh" that stirred him soul and ody. In a few days he came again. was the professor's custom to drop Saturday evenings for relaxation. e said he liked my suggestions as to hool work even though he seldom lopted my theories. I didn't expect im to adopt them! So I was sur- rised when he exclaimed, tossing his at to the rack in the corner and miss- g it by three feet. "Laughing ath- tics have come to stay in my school! ome to stay!"

"Alarming!" I exclaimed. "Have u consulted the county board?"

"No, I haven't."

"How did you introduce it, then?"

"I just made a visit to each room. I ood straight up before the pupils and id: 'Miss Blank, I feel just like ughing, don't you?' That set her to ughing, you see, being taken by sur- ise in the middle of a weary morn- , and immediately every pupil in e room began laughing. I continued e athletics until I held on to my les as you recommended and the rder I laughed the harder laughed acher and pupils until we had a orus in a new strain that sent the od into the extremities not except- the brain. In three minutes there s a change so vivid I shall never get it. 'That naughty girl' was bborn. At first she resisted as I ild plainly see; but she yielded her int at last and I felt that we had n a victory. It took me several ys to introduce the new athletics o all the rooms but the rumor of departure from the normal antici- ed the actual catastrophe, so that v expectation lends vigor to the periment. As a result in these rooms ere the athletics have been prac- d three days in succession there is ire absence of the snickering and gling which is usually so wearing. ceeding the period there is a sea- of prolonged and sincere applica- to duty astonishing to all concerned. I believe we are past the experiment stage in this one week."

LAUGHING ATHLETICS.

"Have you any particular period for the new study?" I asked.

"No. That will be left to the individual discretion of the teachers. When the clouds hang low, as clouds will hang over schoolrooms you know, on some account or another, then is the time for athletics. Miss Goodale, you know her, has originated a specially-constructed plan which is capital, I think. There has got to be a starter, you know, for everything that goes. Well, Miss Goodale herself sets the pace every other time, and for the alternates the pupils are taking turn about. Before the leader has laughed one single breath the whole grade join from sheer force and for half a minute the fun goes on.

"Miss Goodale says she will keep up the programme until every pupil in the room has acted as leader. That Naughty Girl is one of them. Her turn comes tomorrow. Miss Goodale thinks the experiment will change the countenances of half her pupils in a short time, judging from the rate of beginning. For myself I feel like a new man since I commenced the plan and my teachers who have tried it say the same of themselves. I am coming to think, with you, that the suppression of natural merriment is working the mischief. One little girl said: 'Oh, I feel the laugh tingle right down into my toes. Don't you?' That's the idea—to laugh till one tingles. Good-night."

ELIZABETH GRINNELL.

STREAKS OF HUMOR.

Comforting.

Guest (complainingly:) "This bill of fare is all in French."

Waiter (reassuringly:) "Niver you moind that, sur: the cook is Oirish."

Didn't Believe It.

Mrs. Gasser: I was outspoken in my sentiments at the club this afternoon.

Mr. Gasser: I can't believe it! Who outspoke you, my dear?

Explains Sex.

She: "Why are all vessels spoken of as 'she?' It's because 'hey glide so gracefully, isn't it?"

He: "No. It's because their rigging cost so much."

A Large Contribution.

"When Mr. Casey died he left all he had to the orphan asylum."

"Indeed! That was nice of him. What did he leave?"

"His twelve children."

His Period of Grief.

"So Bob Smith's lost his wife. Is he getting over his grief yet?"

"Not yet, I'm afraid. You know how slow some insurance companies are in settling up."

Kept His Word.

"The doctor said he would put me on my feet again in two weeks."

"Well, didn't he do it?"

"He did, 'ndeed. I had to sell my bicycle to pay his bill."

The Time for Warning.

Pater: This is very sudden, young man. Would you take my only daughter from me without a word of warning?

Slater: Oh, no. If there's anything about her you want to warn me of, go ahead—I'm listening.

Differently Understood.

"You know, dear," cooed the bride, "you promised to let me have all the pin-money I wanted."

"Yes, and you shall have it."

"Oh, you dear! Well, I saw a pin today with pearls and diamonds in it, and I do want it so."

Entering Society.

"Chawles," asked a lady lately admitted by marriage to the aristocracy, who was staying at a hotel, "are there any presentable carriages here?"

"Yes, m'lady," replied her husband's valet. "Well, I wish to pay some calls this afternoon. Go to the stables and tell them to send me the best 'cart-de-visit' they have!"

Fellow Characteristic.

"I'm surprised that you should be so interested in watching those silly dudes."

"Force of habit, I guess. I'm president of a real estate improvement company."

"Well?"

"Well, they're a vacant lot."—[Philadelphia Press.

No Violation of Rules.

"A spark fell on her dress and it began to smoke; in another minute it would have been on fire."

"Oh, what happened?"

"No smoking allowed in that part of the car she was in, so the conductor put her out."—[Baltimore American.

Covered All Right.

Judge: You say the prisoner was in a wagon trying to make his escape when you arrested him?

Constable: Yes, your honor.

"Was it a covered wagon?"

"Yes, your honor; it was covered by my revolver."—[Yonkers Statesman.

Riotous Living.

Londoner: Do you have any bread riots in New York?

American: Yes, right in our own family. Mother's for graham and father's for whole wheat.—[Brooklyn Life.

Needlework Notes.

The girl who can sketch in colors can make an attractive screen by covering the frame with green denim and suggesting an impressionist landscape, letting the denim itself constitute the necessary green tones.

The best method of putting on fasteners is to sew them strongly to a stout piece of silk tape, hemming these strips of tape closely to the opening after all the pressing is done. The fastenings are apt to make shiny places when pressing is done after they are in place.

To finish the edges of doilies or other buttonholed edges, cut the goods a little distance from the line where the buttonholing is to go and hem it back to that line. Then buttonhole the folded edge. This prevents the frazzled-looking edge so often seen after washing, and gives it a padded appearance.

Vacations for Mothers, Too.

People who work for themselves, especially mothers, often glory in not taking a vacation, in staying forever at home, in sticking solidly to what they believe to be their duty. To you, my conservative reader, a vacation is just as necessary as it is to the tired teacher or the faithful clerk; and for the same reason—that you may do it more effectively. The duty which holds you will be better performed, the home that you are guarding will be better kept, and the cheerfulness and courage, and optimism which you need will be more readily summoned, if you take time—not next year, but in the remaining weeks of this very summer—to drink in the stimulant of new faces, new landscapes and new experiences.—[Woman's Home Companion.

Cement for Broken China.

Dissolve a little gum arabic in a little water, so that it is rather thick, put enough plaster of paris into this to make a thick paste. Cement broken pieces of china together, and in half an hour they cannot be broken in the same place. Hot water makes it more firm.—[Boston Post.

SPECIALLY important among the week's events was the luncheon given on Saturday, September 7, by Mrs. C. W. Hartsough, to honor her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Morgan, and her nephew, John D. Morgan, of Fresno, and her house-guest, Mrs. Frank Juliff, of Bisbee, Ariz.

The color scheme was carried out in pink and green, roses being used in artistic profusion. The guests, of whom there were fifteen, were from Los Angeles. Mrs. Lillian Fruling contributed several songs, and Miss Ritchie gave several piano numbers. Glendale people will remember the musical given by these ladies last winter in Masonic Hall.

A very quiet and pleasant coming-out party was that given on Tuesday by her parents to Miss Nellie Mai Williams, in her home on Central avenue, the occasion being her twenty-first birthday. Miss Williams has for some months past been studying to be a nurse, in the Good Samaritan Hospital, Los Angeles, and will take her post-graduate course abroad.

Covers were laid for young girl friends and near relatives. The home was beautified with great bowls of fragrant roses, and the graceful folds of the Stars and Stripes and the Union Jack. In the birthday cake was found two good-sized checks, gifts from her father Menzo Williams, and her aunt in Ocean Park, Mrs. N. Williams. Many beautiful gifts were given to the young girl, who gives up fine social prospects for her career as nurse. She is an artist of unquestioned ability and a well-known musician throughout the valley and in the city.

TALKS ON TEETH BY THE REX DENTAL CO.

CAN PYORRHEA BE CURED ?

That is a question which dentists have been asking themselves for years. And the answer has invariably been—NO.

When we came along and said that it could be cured, and that we could cure it, and could point to hundreds of cases that we had cured as indisputable proof of our contention, the dental profession, to a man almost, took issue with us.

"There is no cure for it," they cried.

And when we wanted to know why, they told us that they had all tried and failed to cure it.

That was the answer THEN, and it is the same old answer NOW, from dentists who are not posted on the triumphs of our AL-VE-O-LAR Method. Old Uncle Jasper declared to his dying day tha "De Sun Do Move"—you remember.

There are none so blind as they who will not see.

The reason why we dwell at such length and so forcibly in all of these talks on teeth, on the Pyorrhea question is this: Unless we could cure the cause of loose teeth and make them tight and the gums healthy and normal, we could not make a successful piece of work with our Alveolar Method of replacing teeth in the jaw without using bridge or plates in cases where pyorrhea is indicated.

MR. SNYDER SAYS HIS PYORRHEA IS CURED.

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 1, 1907.
Rex Dental Co.,

Dear Sirs—This is to certify that for eight years I was troubled with Pyorrhea. My gums were very sore and red and I suffered great pain.

I interviewed many dentists, but they all told me that nothing could be done, and it was with a great deal of skepticism that I called on you several months ago.

After two visits and considerable thought, I made up my mind that I would place my case in your hands. I am greatly pleased with the results and am very glad that I made up my mind to try your treatment when I did.

After a few applications the redness subsided and the pain left me. Today the gums are as natural as they ever were and I can truthfully say that I am cured.

I appreciate what you have done for me, and thank you for it. I am a butcher at the above address, and will always be pleased to recommend your treatment for Pyorrhea.
Yours very truly,
R. H. SNYDER,
127 Sunset Blvd., Box 66.

We have found that in almost all cases where teeth were missing in the jaw there were some loose teeth or diseased gums.

In some cases we have nothing but roots to work with.

The first thing we do is to go after these loose teeth and make them tight, and when that is accomplished the rest of the problem is easily solved. There is no mystery about the Alveolar Method.

It is complicated work and beautiful, but, after all, it is science and not a miracle that we perform. It is the very acme of dental science to put back teeth in the jaws and make them perform the function of natural teeth without using a plate, and the secret is ours. We DO this work and then guarantee it, so the burden of the proof is entirely on our shoulders.

Our guarantee is good.

If you are having teeth troubles and want immediate and permanent relief, come to our offices in the Severance Building, corner 6th and Main, for a free examination of your mouth.

If this is not possible at this time, then send for the Doctor's Book, entitled, "Alveolar Dentistry," which goes into particulars.

The reading of that book brings us patients from all over America.

WILL BE SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS IN BUILDING.

Work on New York's great cathedral of St. John the Divine will be resumed this fall with the aid of money which J. P. Morgan and George S. Bowdoin have given to the fund. Mr. Morgan has contributed $100,000 and Mr. Bowdoin $75,000. With this amount it is hoped to complete the crossing—that is, to carry the building from the choir to the great arch, thus making the [illegible] of the cruciform auditorium. Services are now being held in the basement of the church, but with the completion of the crossing there will be room for a congregation of 5000. So magnificent is the plan for this cathedral that it cannot be completed for 75 years.

PIOUS TALK.

HE LAUDS NOAH TO THE SKIES.

[illegible] ARK'S NAVIGATOR ON A HIGH MOUNT.

Rev. Thistledown, the Colored Parson, Gives an Unctuous Dissertation on the Floating Zoo and Tells How the "Capting" Served as Hypnotizer and Joke Editor.

That the interest in the lectures on the subject of "Rise to the Occasion," which are being delivered once a week by Rev. Ebenezer Thistledown, has not abated was forcibly illustrated last Sunday evening, when the fourth of the series was presented to a large and appreciative audience.

Before the sun had set beyond the hills hundreds of people wended their way to Tangerine Terrace to make sure of securing seats in the little church of the "Sanctified Sinners (colored) of the Wabash." They were wise, for the late arrivals, if they succeeded in shoving their way into the church, were compelled to stand during the service. So great was the crowd that hundreds were turned away.

The Rev. Thistledown appeared to be in a reflective mood, for he was to [illegible] giving a story illustrating the [illegible] of a terrible calamity, the [illegible] of the life of a world! [illegible] total destruction of every living thing on the earth. Only the [illegible] taken into the ark by [illegible] the general doom.

[illegible] contemplating this catastrophe so dreadful, the soft-hearted, [illegible] preacher became deeply [illegible] looked on this terrible [illegible] history as one of recent [illegible] but something very satisfying [illegible] old preacher had taken [illegible] time he was ascending the [illegible] and its effects were visible [illegible] black face and the increased [illegible] the big, round eyes.

The presence of the sheriff, the previous Sunday night, who was there to take charge of the contribution box, [illegible] appropriate the contents for the purpose of liquidating sundry small [illegible] by various tradespeople [illegible] the pastor, was humiliating and [illegible] especially to the white portion of the congregation.

During the week just passed these [illegible] admirers of the Rev. Ebenezer Thistledown had quietly subscribed [illegible] into the hands of one of their [illegible] sufficient to pay off all the pastor's personal debts and leave $100 in the pigskin pocketbook of the [illegible] parson.

After the usual preliminaries, the [illegible] arose, and, placing his hand on a small table at his side, with his right pressed tightly [illegible] his heart, he said:

"For the splendid testimonial which [illegible] showered on my head dis [illegible] by de dearly beloved uncolored [illegible] of de congregation, I wants to [illegible] you all wid de keenest anguish[illegible] of my old heart. Such spontaneous [illegible] of the people, such [illegible] and accellerated action of de [illegible] one class of indervidualls to[illegible] of a despised race, am shocking to de tenderest feelings of my bus[illegible] as rare as a day in July. [illegible] touched to such a pitch [illegible] impossible for me to properly express in words de various emo[illegible] dat run after each udder up and [illegible] spinal col-lum of your pastor [illegible] happy moment. Again, I thank [illegible]

[illegible] a moment, overcome with [illegible] then falteringly began his [illegible] for the evening.

[illegible] now to de fourth lecture on [illegible] Occasion.' In my prebious [illegible] you was made aware of de [illegible] characteristicks of Jonah and [illegible] of Sampson and his iron [illegible] of David and Gerlier. To-[illegible] I as[illegible] your unobstructed 'tention [illegible] my discourse on Noah, de ark [illegible]

[illegible] you drew your 'tention for a [illegible] of time to de study of de [illegible] times of old Noah, you [illegible] de fact, standin' out large, [illegible] was a most won-day-ful man. [illegible] thought will enter into the [illegible] dat if ever a [illegible] to de occasion, dis man Noah [illegible] identical man. And you will [illegible] in de course of my remarks, dat [illegible] man kept a risin' day and [illegible] other de probacation happened or sublime indifference interfered [illegible] to practice dis form of athletic [illegible] of de body.

[illegible] a man dat had more sides [illegible] any udder man dat ebber [illegible] particular freak of nature [illegible] versatility. And dat's what [illegible] mighty powerful. It ain't [illegible] dat de doctahs can't tell [illegible] is it somethinr dis[illegible] dat he was tryin' to live [illegible] was dat faculty of being able [illegible] to de occasion of all kinds at [illegible] without a hitch or a holdin' [illegible] if de occasion comes like [illegible] to climb. He was a weather [illegible] of de flood wattah. He fore[illegible] in advance, beforehand, of the [illegible] precipitation of wet[illegible] world evah saw. He was a [illegible] a fust-rate carpenter [illegible] for he built de ark, [illegible] boat dat ever floated. He [illegible] of de biggest man[illegible] evah corralled under one [illegible] was de fust sailor we evah [illegible] He was a natural-born pilot [illegible] he sailed de great [illegible] unknown, troubled wat[illegible] no compass or landmarks. [illegible] greatest director-general and [illegible] dat evah was or will be, for [illegible] all de details for housing a wiggling and obstrepyrous combination of living things, providin' all de fodder and udder paryfernalia required for forty days' lodgin' and extray rations for a while after dey came out of de ark.

"He was a born hippernotizer. He subdued the savage nature of de most contankerous and untamed animiles and reptiles, by de power of his eye and personal magneticism. He made eberbody and eberything come his way and dey all thought dey was a-havin' their own way.

"Some people, carpin' critics, who do say dat Noah had no pussonel interest in de wellfair and de salvation of de people dat was goin' to be drown-ded in de great flood; dat he did not give them timely warning—say, thirty days' notice in writing—of de terrific calamity dat was soon to appear in deir midst. That as a matter of fac' he simply announced in an offhand way dat de fall rains would soon begin, and dat de percipitaytion would probably acceed de normal.

"Now, de records show dat Grandfadder Noah, time and time again, told de people that shortly there would be a commencement of de biggest rainy season evah heard of in dat or any udder country; that it would be a regular gulley-washer, fast and furious and would keep it up for forty days and nights, and eberything would be drown-ded, 'ceptin' them that entered into de ark of sabety. Dat dey was welcome to de horspertallity of de ark he was den building—preparin' for a rainy day, as de sayin' is.

"De people told Noah dat he was no wedder profit and ter go and get a reputaytion before axin' them to believe dat he knew what was behind de clouds. Dey even added insult to misery by calling him Noah Hatfield, the rain-maker. Dey told him, as dey winked de udder eye, dat dey had private information by wireless dat dar wasn't likely to be much of a shower, and dey guessed dey would stay out and go down to Long Beach.

"Capting Noah said he was sorry, and just went right on buildin' his floatin' palace, de Cabrillo. I calculate it was a tremendyious undertakin'. Dere was a thousand things to do in fittin' up de ark, dar was wirin' fer electric lights and telafone exchange, sewer connections, bathrooms, lavytories, and so fourth, and so fourth.

"The anamiles and other inmates insisted on havin' extras and specials, rooms en suite, meals served ally carty in their rooms, and a hundred other whimsickal fancies too numerous to mention in full, but here is a few of Noah's troubles. The whale, which in the years of after life, was to rise to greatness and fame by swallowin' Jonah, was there in all his rotundity and lengthness, and insisted in having a plunge bath with running salt water. Even de small fry struck for a swimmin' hole, dey didn't want to be classed with those misfortunates called fish out of wattah.

"De lions and de streakered tigahs sent in a reckwizition for a jungle of commodyous subdivision and accesserays. De elefants wanted de pribalidge of takin' deir trunks to deir rooms, de black bear couldn't bear de white bear, and de white bear couldn't bear de cinnymon bear, and de cinnyman bear couldn't bear de grizzly bear, and so fourth, and so on. And Noah had to bear wid de whole bear family, so he pervided sepayrate quatahs for each bear, and den let em growl. De jackass said he would kick if he didn't have a special hall with perfect accowsticks that would bring out de rosenaness of his cultahed voice in all its notorious beauty while giving his daily free recitals.

"Many of de inmates wanted to exercize de same pribalages dey was used to. De dog wanted to worry de cat, de cat wanted to ketch de birds, de birds wanted to grab de early variety of worm. The camel wanted a little desert, just a small Mojave—with acaycia, close in. De alleygator wanted a private dentist to keep his 876 teeth sharpened up for any emergencie, and so it was, a thousand whims and hereinbefores of a queer lot of summah boarders. But Noah just kept a risin' to ebry occasion until ebrybody and ebry living thing dat walked, jumped, crept, swum or flew was tentified. Did dey get ebrything what dey axed for? Dey thought dey did. But Noah was a hipnotizer of the thirty-second degree, and he just made em all think dey got all dey grabbed for.

"Noah nevah had no 'sperience with running managaries, buildin' arks, runnin' summah hotels, and udder missesllaynius etcetterns, but he just riz to de occasion ebrytime without slipin' a cog, and he was a howlin' sucksess.

"For instanter, the giraffe, with his head in de air, demanded a room with a tower for de reason dat he must have space to stretch his neck. Noah just tied de giraffe's rubber neck into a sailor's knot and hustled him up under de mansard roof. He was hypnotized by Noah most beautifully and thought he had the Effel tower all to hisself.

"After ebrything was in shipshape, Noah hauled in de gang plank, closed de doahs of de ark and established de curfew law, climbed into his sailor's hammock and awaited devilopments.

"De unbeleeven people came and frew rocks at de ark and hollered through de keyhole disrespectable wireless messages to Noah. Such as, 'say, old rain-in-de-face, you and your happy family of freaks is a loosin' a whole lot of fun by bein' shut up hibernatin' in a houseboat on dry land, ten miles from eben a frogpond, and not a cloud as big as a mustard plaster to be seen in de whole sky.' And some feller would say, kind er teasin' like, 'of course it will rain some day or it would be a mighty long dry spell.' Den dey would all laff. You see how old dis joke is?

"Noah stuck his head out of de secon'-story window and told dem to keep off de grass and don't pick no fruit, dat he was sawin' wood and sayin' nuthin' to nobody. But dat was a figger of speech, for he kept right on talkin'. He told them that they had better run home and blow up deir life perservers for dey would suttenly need em. He said he was sorry dey didn't take passage on de Cabrillo ark, but he carried no hard feelin's 'ginst nobody, for he'd axed them perlitely to come on board as his guests, but that dey rejected his invite and called him a crank, but he hoped to prove to deir dissatisfaction dat dar suttinly would soon be a very moist time for de space of forty days and consuckative nights and he advised dem to corner de market on umberrels, as dey would soon go up.

"Noah knew what he was talkin' about, for one ebening, soon after he worked off dat little joke about umberrels, he heard de rain patterin' on de roof of de ark. He raised a window, and looked out, and saw de unbeleevin' crowd standin' close to de ark, with deir umberrels up, but all de time dey kept shootin' off deir moufs at Noah and lafin' regular hoss laffs.

"By and by it got ter rainin' harder and harder, and de wattah rose ovah deir gum shoes, den dey took a reef in deir laff. Now Mistah Noah was something of a joker hisself, so when he saw dem climin' up to high places and ringing' de wattah out of deir socks, he ha, ha'd! and told dem they had bettah run right home and have a nudder think about de size of de shower now comin' on.

"It may not be known to my hearers, but it am a solum fact, dat all de jokes dat we hear and read about, came down from de ark. A kind of potsam and jetsam from de flood. Now, Noah was a solum old joker from away back and it gave him a large pain when he thought of all de good jokes dat was goin' to perish with a drown-ded people, a condemned and executed publick. So he sent out trusty agents and collected up ebery joke in existence, includin' all that Adam first started out from de garden of Edom. So Noah had' em all emba'med for posterity. It is from dis emba'med collection dat we get our newest and best jokes.

"Noah printed a book of jokes for the entertainment of the voyagers. It was entitled 'A barrel of jokes for forty rainy nights.' The only copy in de world is in be British Museum.

"On de morning of de third day, de scoffers had removed ebery vestaybule of a laff from deir faces. De poor, unfortunate people now surrounded de ark by thousands, de ark still rested on de ground, but de wattah was pretty deep and de people came out '- skiffs. Dey told Noah dat dey still thought dey was right, dat dar wasn't goin' to be much of a shower, but dey didn't want to be onreasonable, so dey had decided to accept his invite to be guests on his fine yacht, so shove out be gang plank and dey would all come aboard. But Noah said, dat de hour for sailin' had arrived and de anchors were stowed in de lunkerheads, dat time and tide, also autermobiles, waited for no man, woman or child, and dat dey was just goin' to back out into de stream as soon as de wattah ris a few more inches. So Noah said, 'Adieu, ta-ta,' and slambed down de window.

"After a time the tempest increased, de wattah fell from de clouds in torrents, and Noah felt de ship lifted up by de risin' waters and float off. De next mornin' he looked out and saw dat de wattahs covered de housetops and de giant redwood trees, wid only a few strugglin' human beings clingin' to de mountain tops. A few days more and Noah and his associates in de ark was de sole survivors of a drown-ded world.

"Dis closes de story of de most calamalous rain storm dat evah struck dis earth, and also closes de account of de most versertileist man dat evah wabbled on his quakin' ball.

"Brudder Sunset Bullfinch will close dis meetin' by singin' 'We'll Climb to de Stars on de Rainbow's Back.' Let ebrybody sing."

WASHINGTON'S BOUDOIR CABINET.

MRS. J. R. GARFIELD.

Wife of Secretary of Interior Is Youngest Matron in Boudoir Cabinet, and One of Most Dignified Figures in High Official Set.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

Mrs. James Rudolph Garfield, wife of the Secretary of the Interior.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Out on the farm at East Mentor, O., so intimately connected with the memory of the second martyr President of the United States, one may make intimate acquaintance with the third generation of the Garfield family. Mrs. James Rudolph Garfield, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, takes a serious view of her duties to her four small sons. When Vanity Fair in Washington is in full swing with outdoor fetes and spring romances and weddings and belated dinners and luncheons, she turns a deaf ear to the voice of the siren and departs with her flock to the farm. This spring she left Washington in May and she will not return until October. Here Mrs. Garfield forgets the perplexing problems connected with precedent and etiquette and tradition, and for five months she fishes, rides, golfs and hunts with her boys and gets up strength for the winter ordeal.

Mrs. Garfield impresses even the casual observer with her personal dignity. She is reserved to a degree, and there are few indeed in Washington or in her home city, Cleveland, who can boast of intimate friendship. Those who like to draw comparisons assert that she is very much like Mrs. Roosevelt, when that lady played a minor part in the social drama. She keeps close to her home duties and mingles with the official world just enough to keep within the letter of its obligations. As wife of the chief of the Bureau of Corporations in the Department of Commerce and Labor, Mrs. Garfield kept the public at arm's length. There are those who assert that she attaches undue importance to the Garfield prestige and to the fact that she is the wife of one of the rising young politicians of the time. Her sons are also duly impressed by the circumstance that their grandfather was a President, and their father a member of the council of nine. But then over the tea cups Washington is apt to be captious, and there seems to be no fault to be found with young "Mrs. Jimmie" than that she is very stately and stand-offish and has refused to be lionized by the tuft-hunters.

FRIEND OF MRS. ROOSEVELT.

Washington society at best is a complex proposition, and they are wise, indeed, who understand all the ramifications. There are wheels and half wheels and cliques and small factions of cliques, but when all is told the woman who has become intimate with the wife of the President may be counted tremendously successful. Mrs. Roosevelt is the supreme ruler in the world of feminine affairs in Washington. Mrs. Garfield is one of her closest friends. She drops in and chats with "Mrs. Jimmie," and the two may be seen on pedestrian tours accompanied by James the Third and the younger Roosevelt boys. The urbane Secretary of the Interior is one of the most accomplished members of the "Tennis Cabinet," and some are unkind enough to suggest that he owes higher honors to the way he can manipulate a racket. Since the President required the presence of Mr. Garfield so frequently, and as he is the guiding spirit of domestic bliss, it became the duty of the Chief Executive to see that Mrs. Garfield was not lonely during these absences. Mrs. Roosevelt always asked Mrs. Garfield to the terrace of the south grounds where they had tea and admired the prowess of the august players until the subject palled. Then naturally they discoursed on other themes. Mrs. Roosevelt, according to her friends, entertains the highest regard for Mrs. Garfield, and describes her as a thoroughly capable woman.

This friendship has grown with the increasing importance of Mr. Garfield in the various kinds of Cabinets in which he serves. Hitherto the wife of the President has defined her intimacy with her own personal friends and those of certain official rank, with mathematical exactness. The women of the Cabinet families are accorded certain privileges by reason of their rank. They consult with the President's wife on Tuesdays, and they are asked to aid at all the official levees and usually at those of a private character. Then there is another class which forms a sort of corps of ladies—in waiting to the mistress of the White House. Mrs. Rixey, wife of the family physician, and godfather of the youngest Roosevelt boy is one. Miss Isabel Hagner, Mrs. Roosevelt's personal secretary, is another, and Mrs. Loeb, wife of the President's secretary, is always included in this privileged coterie. For the past two or three years, Mrs. Garfield has become familiar in this role. Society is on the qui vive to know to which role the spouse of James the Second will be relegated. It would cause intense heart burnings and untold friction should she essay both parts. She is not the woman to show the white flag and it is unlikely that she will relinquish any of the prestige accruing to one who is so close to the throne.

TAKES DUTIES SERIOUSLY.

Mrs. Garfield takes as serious a view of her duties to her husband as to her boys. The perpetual routine of calling cannot be pleasant, but she has the reputation of performing her whole duty in this respect, something which cannot be claimed by all of the matrons in the Cabinet set. If James Rudolph does not attain the heights of his father, James Abram, it will not be because his wife failed to aid him in the only way prescribed in social Washington—namely, by calling and calling on the same people and asking these same to dinners and luncheons and levees. That she intends to keep up the prestige of the house of Garfield and try for the highest honors which the people may bestow is evidenced by the elaborate plans for the winter. The Garfields have secured the lease of the Bloomer house on Massachusetts avenue, a well-equipped mansion, in the heart of aristocratic Washington. This winter, according to the advance prognostications, Mrs. Garfield will conduct her amenities according to a definite and well-pondered programme.

There is nothing of the breezy West about young Mrs. Garfield, and those who bank on previous acquaintance with the elder members might meet a frigid reception. Some people say that the index to the characters of James I and James II is that to the intimates of the President he was known as "Jim," while the Secretary of the Interior is always called "Jimmie." Mrs. Garfield always says James, with considerable emphasis, and her stand against all such pet names is bearing fruit in the increased dignity with which the Secretary meets the outside populace.

A WOMAN OF CULTURE.

Mrs. Garfield, as the daughter of the President of the Michigan and Marquette Railroad, enjoyed all the advantages of foreign education and travel, and she is a woman of wide culture and many accomplishments. She is particularly fond of music and has devoted much time to the piano and stringed instruments. All her sons are trained in music and to comprehend art, for Mrs. Garfield, while appreciating the practical, is of the opinion that nothing can compensate for lack of culture and the means of understanding the good things in the world of culture. Like most of the social lights in Washington, Mrs. Garfield is a good bridge player, and before that form of "Pons assinorum" became modish she was a noted player of whist. She, however, is thoroughly admirable in her indulgence of the great game of bridge, and cannot be counted among those unwise matrons who spend thousands where they cannot afford hundreds.

It may be accident, but the majority of people say it is design, that the men who make the group of Presidential councillors, as well as those who are the President's closest friends, are men of spotless personal reputation. The home life of James Rudolph Garfield, and his family is of the loftiest type. Mrs. Garfield, though every inch a grande dame, does not lack those qualities which help to make a public man successful, and when she descends from the pedestal it is for a good purpose. She has an ample private fortune, and this was completely and unrestrictedly at the disposal of her husband during the days of wooing fortune. Mrs. Garfield, the elder, is credited with entertaining a very cordial regard for her daughter-in-law, and she is especially fond of her grandsons. All four are manly little boys, who are rather more exclusive than Washington is accustomed to in the sons or grandsons of great men. The small Roosevelts mingle as freely as the bosses before a political convention with black and white and the messengers and newsboys who come their way. Little Charlie Taft and Phil Knox possess the most extensive acquaintanceship in Washington, but the Garfields prefer only the boys from the best families for associates. Their public appearances have been mostly in fancy dress balls, where they were the pink of perfection as Puritan cavaliers of King Charles, or richly-garbed pages.

IS A MODEL HOUSEKEEPER.

Mrs. Garfield is a model homekeeper, and she is keeping apace with her esteemed friend, Mrs. Roosevelt, in the proficiency of her learning. During the summer she superintends the making of pickles and preserves and the canning of all things necessary for the winter amenities. She is well versed in farming lore, and now that Mr. Garfield is compelled to give part of the summer to the work of the department and to make long trips West, she is entirely competent to manage things herself. The farm at Mentor belongs to all the Garfields and will not come to the James Garfields until the estate is finally divided according to the terms of the President's will. But Mrs. James takes more interest in the farm than any of the children. Perhaps she is more concerned in keeping up all the traditions connected with the name to which she aspires to have her husband add new luster. She has kept house there for the past six years and generally she has the entire clan of Garfield and and the Stanley-Browns and their little family with her for at least part of the summer. She plays the hostess most admirably, and in addition to the family parties, the farm is a radiating point for social gayety during the heated term.

Mrs. Garfield is very youthful-looking, which some say accounts for her severely dignified bearing. Like some other notable people, she is trying to live down the crime of being young, and in the meantime to carry off the role with distinction. She is one of the most immaculately neat women in the world. Everything about her suggests the very essence of cleanliness, sanitation and the most approved methods for ease and fashion combined. She is a clever woman with her needle and follows the prevailing fad of stitching during her leisure moments and of making all manner of pretty fancy articles for gifts to her friends. Mrs. Garfield is a well-gowned woman at all times. She shows a disposition to wear blue on all ceremonial occasions, and it is eminently her hue, since she has fair, almost babyish, skin, and clear blue eyes, with soft, brown hair.

RIDES HORSEBACK WELL.

Out at the farm she is noted for her equestrian skill, but in Washington she rarely joins the riding party of the Roosevelts, though she is frequently bidden. Neither does she play tennis on the White House grounds, though Ohio reckons her one of its best women players. Evidently she does not wish to dim the luster of her husband's reputation with the President, for it is alleged that "Jimmie" has not yet beaten his wife at a game of any kind—tennis, golf or bridge.

Mrs. Garfield may be classed in the new division of new woman. She is highly educated, and is determined to eliminate the self-made part of the Garfield traditions from her boys, but she is opposed to women figuring in public roles or among the professionals. She is the kind of woman who finds full play for every activity and accomplishment in the social side of the political life. She thoroughly comprehends politics as it is played in Ohio. She has seen stirring times in her home city, and she knows the path which leads to glory. But her role is essentially that which Mrs. Roosevelt has played so well. She sympathizes and understands, but she does not aspire to be a directing force in the political destinies of her husband. Mrs. Garfield is credited with nursing large ambitions, and the perplexed condition of Ohio seems to give some substance to her dream. Her husband is young, and some time his turn will come to strive for the honors which came so easily to his father. He has made rapid strides up the ladder so far, and the future, as it spreads before her now, has no threatening aspect. The Roosevelt friendship, which both enjoy, is powerful to aid, and no one doubts that it will be invoked when the occasion is ripe.

Lasting Results from using NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

"I am blessed with an abundance of long hair and I use the utmost care in the preservation of it. I have never found anything that pleases me as much as Newbro's Herpicide. It keeps the scalp clean and sanitary and adds a luxurious appearance to my hair that no preparation will give. I consider it most delightful to use and I can truly say that I prefer it above all other preparations for the hair. I like your soap also and recommoned both highly to any lady who wishes a good head of hair. (Signed)

A SAN FRANCISCO BARBER RECOMMENDS HERPICIDE FOR DANDRUFF AND FALLING HAIR.
"I have been using Herpicide in my establishment for some years and my patrons are highly pleased with the good results.
"Our patrons are accustomed to the use of antiseptics, which means that they all call for Herpicide.
"We have no hesitation in recommending Herpicide to any one suffering with dandruff or falling hair."
San Francisco, Cal. (Signed) W. G. SEPPICH.

While it is not natural for every one to have extremely long hair, it is possible for every lady to have beautiful hair, for when the scalp is not diseased, the hair will grow naturally and abundantly.

The chief disease of the scalp is dandruff—which is highly contagious—and dandruff is now known to be caused by an invisible vegetable growth called the dandruff germ. Ordinarily, the first signs of scalp infection are dryness, dullness and brittleness of the hair, although the disease sometimes causes excessive oiliness. Following this, the hair loses its luster, the scalp itches more or less and dandruff appears. Falling hair and baldness represent the last stages of hair destruction.

Newbro's Herpicide—the original remedy that kills the dandruff germ—will cure any stage of this disease, except chronic baldness, which is incurable. Herpicide not only destroys the dandruff germ and stops falling hair, but it is a most exquisite hair dressing, making the hair light and fluffy, and giving it a silken gloss. Almost marvelous results sometimes follow the continued use of Herpicide. It stops itching almost instantly.

AT HOME WITH DIAMONDS.

SKILLFUL AS GEM MAKERS.

WOMEN EXCEL IN DIAMOND CUTTING INDUSTRY.

While Men Do the Splitting the Women Take the Divided Sections and Perfect Them, Working for Very Small Wages as Compared With American Prices for Labor.

Women have always excelled in the art of wearing diamonds, but how many people know that they excel in the art of cutting them, too? Yet they do. Word comes from Amsterdam, in the annual report of Frank D. Hill, Consul at that Dutch port, that in a great diamond-cutting factory there, women are enrusted with the most delicate and difficult part of the processes.

It is an important industry in Amsterdam, is diamond cutting. Thousands of the gems that come from the mines in South Africa are taken to that city to be split and cut and polished, made over from rough stones into the sparkling wells of light that shine on women's necks. In this factory where women are employed over 400,000 diamonds were cut and polished in one year. For thirty years only men were employed, but, in 1875, as an experiment, a few women were taken on, and so dexterous did they prove that now the most important part—the cutting of the diamonds—is done by them.

When the rough gems come in they are first taken in hand by men. They do the splitting—that is, divide the stones that have flaws into pure and flawless gems. The men do this by hand, holding the diamond, which has been firmly waxed in a little frame, in one hand, and with the other pressing the diamond-tipped tool on the weak spot where the flaw is in the stone.

Then the women take the divided sections and perfect them. It is a ticklish task, this diamond cutting, and trying to the eyes. Some of the diamonds are so minute that 400 of them would weigh less than half a carat. Yet even the most infinitesimal angle on their surface must be detected and cut off. The diamonds are still held by being waxed in a little frame, and before the women burn jets of gas ready to be used when melted wax is needed. For eight hours a day the women work, skillfully wielding their little pear-shaped diamond-tipped tools. And they receive for this work the magnificent remuneration of from 8 to 20 guilders ($5.21 to $8.04) a week. To be sure, living is not so expensive in Amsterdam as it is in America, and these women have at least a pleasant place to work in. A shop has been built for them right on the quay, close to the factory, and they have it all to themselves, and plenty of large windows to give them light. Fortunately for them, light is necessary to their work.

The stones are given to the women in pockets by the forewoman, and if by chance a worker loses a gem and cannot find it she must refund its value. This cutting is responsible work, therefore, and it is slow and patient work. Cutting an ordinary stone weighing about 10 carats, is a day's work for a woman.

JILTED REAL BARON TO WED PEER'S SON.

Miss Denise Orme.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Aug. 24.—Better a prospective British baron than a real German one. That, evidently, is the view taken by Miss Denise Orme, the pretty English actress whose marriage to Capt. the Hon. John Reginald Lopes Yarde-Buller, the only son and heir of Lord Churston, has been cabled, of course, to America. Early this year her engagement was announced to Baron Oscar Ernst von Ernsthausen, and it was stated that the wedding would take place in three months. The baron is a naturalized Englishman and earns his livelihood as a stock broker. Even as a business asset his German title does not count for much. German barons are as plentiful as blackberries and they possess none of the hereditary legislative and other exalted privileges of their English brethren. These considerations no doubt appealed strongly to the sprightly Miss Denise when she discovered that the Hon. John, who had been paying her attentions for something like a year, really meant business.

Anyhow, she jilted the German baron and about the time her marriage to him was to have taken place she wedded the Honorable John. Why it was kept secret for four months nobody knows. The heir to Lord Churston seems merely to have imitated the ostrich which is prominently empaneled on the family shield, and is credited with impotently hiding its head in the sand when hard pressed in the chase.

The Honorable John is 34 years old, and holds a captaincy in the Scots Guards. He was A.D.C. to Lord Curzon when the latter was Viceroy of India. There he met Miss Daisy Leiter, the wife, and was desperately enamored of her beauty and her dollars. But another of Lord Curson's A.D.C.'s, Lord Suffolk, who was a real and not a prospective peer, was equally amitten with the Chicago girl's charms and wealth, and cut him out.

That the Honorable John has never distinguished himself in real warfare is perhaps not his fault. He has never had the chance. He is a good oarsman, and came near winning the punting event at the guards' regatta two years ago. His most distinguished appearance has been in the divorce courts. There he figured last year as the corespondent in the suit brought by Col. Atherton, a gallant soldier, for the severing of his nuptial ties. The evidence was conclusive. The colonel was granted a divorce and the Honorable John—or more probably the Honorable John's father—had to pay heavy damages to the aggrieved husband, who turned the money over to a hospital. Of course after that Mrs. Atherton vanished from society—in the company of a duke, it is said—but the Honorable John suffered no ignominy whatever, for society takes a lenient view of the escapades of both peers and prospective peers. And though the Guards have a great reputation for punctiliousness and exclusiveness, nobody suggested that the Honorable John's offense came under the category of "conduct unbecoming a gentleman," which necessitates an officer's resignation.

Of course he cannot live on his pay as a captain—not at least in the Guards—and the allowance he gets from his father is not a big one. That is probably the reason why his wife still continues on the stage. If he survives his father he will come into possession of a fine country mansion and 11,000 acres, and Denise Orme will then be Lady Churston. Her real name is Jessie Smither, but Smither would never do for the stage.

She has had a surprisingly successful career. She is not yet 22, and has been on the stage only two years. In "The Little Michus" she made an immediate hit. She is an accomplished musician and can play as well as she can sing—which is not a little. When only 14 years old she gained a scholarship for singing at the Royal College of Music.

To Reclaim the Everglades.

After many years of discussion without any real action, the State of Florida has at last commenced the work of draining the great submerged tract known as the Everglades. This is to b done by cutting a series of canals leading into rivers on both the Gulf and Atlantic slopes. The section to be drained comprises about 3,000,000 acres, upon which there is very little timber or brush, consequently the work of reclamation will be comparatively easy, and it is expected to have several thousand acres ready for cultivation and settlement by December of this year. Owing to the latitude and the great richness of the soil this land will be of great value when thoroughly drained. It is estimated that 500,000 acres of this land could produce 2,250,000 tons of sugar, now annually imported by the United States. It will also be admirably adapted to the cultivation of rice.

NIPPON WOMEN SEEK FREEDOM.

LONG STRUGGLE TO ESCAPE CONDITION OF SERVITUDE.

She Still Has to Be a Very Obedient Wife or She Can Be Summarily Divorced, While She Has no Like Remedy for Redress Against Her Husband.

The history of woman's struggle for freedom in Japan has been a record of long and patient, if not quite futile, endeavor, hindered and thwarted ceaselessly by the enslaving hand of man. Though, in this respect, the Japanese woman has been less happily situated than the women of occidental lands, she has been decidedly more successful than her sisters in India and other Asiatic countries, owing probably to her keener intellect and her higher and more susceptive moral intuitions.

While the woman of India and China begins her long journey down the twentieth century still practically a slave, the woman of Japan can be regarded only partially as such, writes the Tokio correspondent of the London Standard, for, though her lot is not what western mothers and wives would tolerate, it is incomparably more humane and bearable than it was even a decade or so ago.

Of course, it continues true that her happiest days are those of her childhood, when she can frolic with her brothers and fly kites and play games in the courts of ancient temples or on the hills, but at 15 or 16 she must begin to learn cooking and how to make and mend her own and her prospective husband's clothes, for now she may, at any favorable moment, be matched by her parents with some austere lord, when her childish castles of fancy tumble and her freedom usually vanishes as a dream.

From this fateful moment she is taken in charge by a comparative stranger, whom she must, without question, regard as her possessor and one to whom she is a humble slave. Her enjoyment of life, as western women understand it, is at an end, for the moment of marriage the happiness of the Japanese woman is much more problematical than it is with the western bride; it depends altogether on the kind of man her lord proves himself to be. He may chance to prove a lover, brave and true, whose heart would break rather than prove unfaithful; but should he not, as very commonly happens, she has no [illegible] of appeal, no recourse but [illegible] unto death.

Should she become angry, [illegible] mild way, at her [illegible] lord, or undertake to give [illegible] his overbearing mother an [illegible] estimate of their character, or [illegible] wise wander from the paths of [illegible] tude, as she must be often [illegible] do, she can be peremptorily [illegible] while she has no like remedy [illegible] him.

It is encouraging to note the leaven of dissent from this [illegible] of things is fast permeating [illegible] society, and there is now [illegible] evident a remarkable [illegible] the part of wives to secure [illegible] treatment enjoyed by the [illegible] western lands. This new [illegible] undoubtedly due in a large [illegible] to the teaching of Christian [illegible] aries, as Sir Ernest Satow, [illegible] ish Minister to China, [illegible] fied recently, as the result of [illegible] years' experience in the Far [illegible]

The modern Japanese [illegible] obviously no ambition to [illegible] over her husband or in any [illegible] impose upon the male portion [illegible] population. She reveals no [illegible] emulate the aspirations of the [illegible] woman" as that epithet is [illegible] understood. She is simply [illegible] tented with the frivolous [illegible] istence to which for centuries [illegible] lord has assigned her and she [illegible] tively revolts against the [illegible] attitude which he assumes [illegible] her and her children. She has [illegible] demanded the suffrage, for [illegible] at the present time nothing [illegible] more impossible than to permit [illegible] woman to vote; but she has [illegible] the root of most of her [illegible] evil that the men of Japan [illegible] very suspicious hesitation to [illegible]

Thus, recently, in the Imperial [illegible] the grave and dignified fathers [illegible] nation, as well as the entire population, of Japan, were astonished [illegible] the ·esentation of two petitions [illegible] the women of Japan, one [illegible] political rights and the other for [illegible] rights.

SEEK SHARE OF COAST TRADE.

New Steamer Line to the Mexican Ports.

Canadian Capital in Evidence Below the Border.

Japanese Fail to Compete With Peon Laborers.

BY EDWARD C. BUTLER.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 1.—The Pacific coast of Mexico will be benefited by the new steamship line just placed in operation from Vancouver, B. C. The steamer Georgia, which recently arrived at Salina Cruz, was laden at the Puget Sound ports. The steamer had very little cargo on her first trip, but is making her second voyage with quite a consignment of lumber, hay, oats, etc., from the territory contiguous to Washington. Merchants and manufacturers in that northwestern section will have an abundant opportunity to export their wares to the Mexican west coast. They will thus help to build up Canadian influence, which is on the increase in this country. A. W. Donley, commercial representative of the Canadian government, told me recently that probably not less than $50,000,000 has been invested by Canadians in Mexican enterprises, among them the Federal District street-car system of this capital, which is considered worth from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 (silver.) The heavy investment of Canadian capital in this country necessarily calls for increased importations of machinery and manufactures from home. Several agents of the Canadian steamship line are at work in various portions of this country mobilizing trade.

TO STOP JAP IMMIGRATION.

The Japanese Minister, Mr. Arakawa, recently made the statement that the immigration of Japanese labor to Mexico so far was not a success. This has just been confirmed by an investigation made by Chonosube Yada, the second secretary of the Japanese legation. The labor question in Mexico is one of importance, as is witnessed partly from the fact that Mexican peons, who used to get 12 to 18 cents per day, are now earning 50 cents and more. It was supposed that the peon could compete with the cheapest labor in Japan. But those now carrying on development work in this republic cannot any more afford to pay for unsatisfactory labor from the Orient higher than from the native. It is simply a question of the fitness of the coolies for certain work, and the Japanese Minister and Mr. Yada say the conditions here are too strenuous for their people. The Japanese [illegible] is too ambitious, thinks too much, and with his thinking, wants too much from the world to be satisfied, as is the Mexican peon, with digging and digging alone. The Panama Canal Commission found Japanese labor unsatisfactory for this reason; on the other hand, lumbermen in the Pacific Northwest, where some skill and thought enter into the development of work, found the Japanese laborer to be satisfactory to both the employer and the employed. The report of Mr. Yada will be sent to the Japanese government and doubtless steps will be taken to limit immigration to Mexico. Thus builders and contractors in this country will have to look elsewhere for labor.

TO STUDY IRRIGATION.

Señor Andres Aldasoro, Assistant Minister of Encouragement (Fomento,) has gone to Sacramento, where he is on a special mission for the Mexican government. He was accompanied by his wife, their daughter, Maria Cristina, and Mrs. Claudia N. de Guichard and her daughters, Aurora and [illegible]. Mr. Aldasoro will attend the International Irrigation Congress. The last one was held at Portland, Or., the Mexican delegates being Messrs. Jacobo [illegible] and City Engineer Roberto Gayol. The problem of irrigation concerns Mexico intimately, and, could the government devise ways and means of reclaiming by irrigation the deserts of Northern Mexico, it might equal in profits to the United States Reclamation Service, whose profits last year amounted to $22,000,000. Mr. Aldasoro expects to be gone a month, and will, with the others of his party, visit California, Nevada, etc., examining canals, reservoirs, etc. His object in his visit is to study the waters of the Rio Colorado at the head of the Gulf of Lower California. He will visit the Rio Bravo and other points in that connection. He is accompanied by Mr. Gayol and Engineer Fernando Beltran y Puga, chief of the Commission of River Boundaries.

GOES TO BERKELEY.

[illegible] y Lozano, nephew of Gov. Guillermo Landa y Escandon, of the Federal District, has gone to California, where he will enter Berkeley University. Gov. Landa himself was educated in England, and is a man thoroughly up to date in every respect. He not only encourages public improvements, architectural and material, in the Federal District, but is a friend of foreign enterprises, and a familiar and welcome figure in foreign circles. He has repeatedly aided the S.P.C.A. of this city.

Special colonists' rates from Mexico to California have been announced by the Mexican Central passenger department. Extensive stopover privileges and various routings are given on these tickets, which will be on sale during the next month. Proportionate rates will be granted from all parts of Mexico.

The [illegible] of Los Angeles has arrived in the capital, and will remain several days.

BEJEWELED AMERICANS.

[illegible] Forbids the Wearing of so Many Diamonds by Unmarried Ladies.

[illegible] dispatch to the Minneapolis Journal: Forgetting the ancient dictum about "beauty unadorned," American girls go to whatever functions they go to now, jeweled like a rajah in full durbar. That unmarried women should wear these gems violates the canons of fashion and incites to "vulgarity," which may be [illegible].

At Mrs. J. Drexel's ball Miss Beatrice Mills [illegible] with diamonds; [illegible] was simply a [illegible]. She wore a magnificent [illegible] collar and her [illegible] with a tall feather of [illegible] was far more [illegible] married women, who, however, would [illegible] for quaker-[illegible].

The ball was a most brilliant affair. But to call it a "ball" before midnight would have been farcical, for, as far from dancing no one could move around in the great rooms. However, the band kept on playing inviting waltzes to which the younger guests could keep time only by tapping their toes on the dancing crash.

The royal supper party included Ambassador Reid, Miss Jean Reid Cora, Lady Strafford and her daughter, Miss Colgate.

The belle of the ball was Miss Margaretta Drexel, whose costume and lack of jewels placed her in striking contrast with many young American women around her. Miss Drexel wore a frock of soft pink tulle. Scattered over it were pink rosebuds, in the petals of each of which lay a tiny diamond dewdrop. A wreath of such rosebuds adorned her fair hair and she carried a bunch of little pink roses.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor was undoubtedly the beauty among the married women. She wore a simple gown of pink satin with a big pink rose on her shoulder and a blue ribbon twisted in her hair. Absolutely not one jewel decorated her.

EN ESPANOL.

SUBSECRETARIO LLEVA COMISION.

VISITA DEL HONORABLE SENOR ANDRES ALDASORO.

Tiene Mucho Interes Para California—Asuntos Comerciales de la Republica de Mejico—Primer Viaje de Vapor de la Linea Nueva Desde Vancouver.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

CIUDAD DE MEXICO, Agosto 30 de 1907.—El trafico costeño del Pacifico tanto Mexicano como Americano, se beneficiara por la linea nueva de vapores ahora iniciado desde la ciudad de Vancouver, B. C. El vapor Georgia, recien llegado a Salina Cruz, procedia de los puertos de Puget Sound, con productos caracteristicos de aquella region. Tuvo poca carga en su primer viaje, pero ya hace un segundo viaje, con una consignacion respetable de maderas, heno, avena, etc., procedente del territorio de Washington. Los comerciantes y fabricantes de aquellas comarcas tendran ahora una oportunidad mas amplia para la exportacion de sus mercancias a los puertos Mexicanos del Pacifico. Daran asi impulso adicional a los intereses canadenses que tanto se aumentan en México. El Señor A. W. Donley, Agente Comercial del Gobierno Canadense, me dijo recientemente que cuando ménos $50,000,000 en oro han sido invertidos en empresas Mexicanas por sus paisanos, contandose entre tales empresas las tranvias eléctricas de la capital, un negocio que se aprecia de doce a quince millones de pesos en plata. La inversion crecida de capitales del Canada en este pais necesariamente atrae importaciones de maquinaria y de manufacturas de dicho pais a México. Hay varios agentes de la compañia de vapores arriba indicada que ahora se ocupan juntando trafico a favor suyo.

Recientemente el Ministro Japonés, Señor Arakawa, declaro que la llegada de trabajadores japoneses a México hasta ahora no surte los efectos deseables. Despues hizo otra investigacion el Señor Chonosube Yada, el Segundo Secretario de la Legacion. Confirma la conclusion alcanzada por el Señor Ministro. La cuestion de trabajadores en México es una de suprema importancia, como consta en parte por el hecho que peones del pais que ganaban antes, de doce a diez y ocho centavos plata por dia, ahora ganan de un peso para arriba, una metamorfosis de veinte y cinco años. Se pensaba que el peon Mexicano podia competir con la labor que en Japon se paga a razon de diez centavos oro por dia. Sin embargo las personas que conducen negocios en este pais no pueden soportar trabajo inferior de parte de un extranjero ni de un propio. Simplemente se reduce a la cuestion si sirven para cierta clase de trabajos los coolies Japoneses. Tanto el Ministro del Japon como su Secretario opinan qui aqui no serian utiles sus paisanos. Es demasiado ambicioso el japones, piensa mucho, y su pensamiento alerta requiere mucho del mundo. De manera que no se contenta con excavar terrenos como el peon Mexicano. Por esta razon la Comision Constructora del Canal en Panama no encontro satisfactorio al trabajador oriental, miéntras que, los molineros en la parte norte y oeste de los Estados Unidos consideran aptos y habiles a dichos coolies. El informe del Señor Yada se despachara a su Gobierno, y naturalmente limitara la inmigracion de la raza amarilla a México. Asi los fabricantes, hacendados y contratistas Mexicanos tendran que buscar en otros rumbos para la gente trabajadora.

El Honorable Señor Andrés Aldasoro, subsecretario del Departamento de Fomento, salio ya para Sacramento, California. Lleva comision del Gobierno Federal. Le acompaña su señora y su hija Maria Cristina y la familia Guichard, tambien los Señores Roberto Gayol y Fernando Beltran y Puga, el primero ingeniero oficial de la Cuidad de México y el segundo jefe de las comisiones Mexicanas sobre linderos de rios, etc. Asistiran los señores al Congreso Internacional de Irrigacion, que se convocara en Sacramento. El problema de la irrigacion concierne a México intimamente. Si el gobierno de México concibe un plan para redimir los desiertos vastos al norte de la Republica, pudiera aproximarse a las ganancias hasta la fecha alcanzadas mediante los esfuerzos de las comisiones reclamadoras en los Estados Unidos, cuyas ganancias antaño fueron de veinte y un million de pesos. Hubo época en que la Baja California y otras porciones del sur de los Estados Unidos fueron tan estériles como pueden ser ahora algunos trayectos inmensos de Chihuahua, cuyo unico producto es el mesquite. Los Americanos reclamaron terrenos enormes y antes deformes, y lo mismo puede suceder en la parte norte de la Republica Mexicana. El Señor Aldasoro y su comitiva estaran ausentes como un mes, y visitaran tanto la California cómo Nevada y la tomaran empeño en inspeccionar canales, depositos de agua, rios, etc. Proponen visitar el Rio Bravo y las obras del Rio Colorado.

EDWARD C. BUTLER.

Rainbow Chasing.

How many people go through life deluded with the conviction that if they could only get a little more money, get into a little more comfortable position, own a little better home, or if they could only get over the particular trouble that is annoying them at the time, they would be happy!

I know a man who had a very hard boyhood, suffered great poverty, who is now fifty years old, and he has always honestly believed that if he could only get the particular thing he was after, or get over the particular difficulty that was annoying him at the moment, he would be perfectly happy; but he is the same anxious, restless, expectant spirit today as when a youth. He has been quite successful and has done some very remarkable things, but he is invariably in hot water. There is always something that nettles him, or destroys his happiness, and although he is a well-meaning man, he has made his family, his employés and everybody about him very unhappy, because he is always fretting and worrying, always borrowing trouble.—[Success Magazine.

EDITORIAL ROUND TABLE.

PEOPLE OF THE COAST.

Mayor Herman Wise of Astoria, Or., has secured from the Postoffice Department the application he filed for his appointment as postmaster in March, 1893. The application was in the form of an album containing views of Astoria and points of interest on the Pacific Coast, many letters of recommendation and a long list of signers to the formal petition requesting Mr. Wise's appointment. It bears evidence of having been handled by thousands of people, as it was one of the curiosities of the department, but is still in a good state of preservation.

Alfred W. Chalker, who was connected with the United States Immigration Service at San Francisco until the earthquake and was then transferred to Seattle, has now been appointed to the office of inspector at Vancouver, B. C., the appointment being in line of promotion.

Mayor Overton of Santa Rosa has resigned because of the disgrace he has felt over the elopement of his daughter with a commercial drummer, and the compulsory marriage of the couple a week after the elopement. The City Council of Santa Rosa has refused to accept the resignation.

Miss Mary Schlemer, real Princess of Laysan Island, 800 miles from the Hawaiian group, is a student at Berkeley. When the erroneous report was received that the island had disappeared beneath the ocean, she believed her parents had likewise passed from this life.

Rev. W. M. Collinh of the Baptist Church at Orange, while in Louisville, Ky., recently, had the unpleasant experience of being robbed of his purse containing $6250 by a young woman who invited him to go into a house with her. The woman was arrested and Collins appeared in court against her.

Dr. B. T. Burton who, for many years, was a prominent practitioner in Oakland, has sailed for China under a contract with the Chinese government to take charge in different provinces of the work of destroying the opium habit among government employés.

Capt. E. E. Paine of the Alaska-Pacific Steamship Company has sailed from Seattle for a visit to Southern California for three months' recreation. He is accompanied by Mrs. Paine and several friends.

Mrs. Elizabeth Tozier Weathered of Portland, Or., has been in Honolulu for some time arranging for a party of Hawaiian belles to visit the Pacific Coast.

Charles D. South, a special writer on the San José Mercury, has accepted a position on the faculty of Santa Clara College.

Arthur J. Lowell of Baker City, Or., has received an appointment in the Bureau of Audits at Manila, and has already left to enter upon his duties.

PROMINENT PERSONS.

Lord Alverstone has the distinction of having made the longest legal argument on record. This was when he appeared as counsel for his country before the Venezuelan Arbitration Commission, and his address occupied sixteen consecutive days.

During the recent Cowes regatta J. Pierpont Morgan remained closely abroad his yacht Corsair, and refused all kinds of invitations to hospitalities on other yachts, also all hints that the king had a great desire to see the interior of the Corsair, the saloon of which is decorated with masterpieces, including a few Turners.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, now in her 88th year, has been spending the summer at her summer home in Newport, R. I., to which place she repairs as soon as her birthday celebration is over on May 27. The best part of her day is spent out of doors, and among her daily duties is to read a portion of Scripture from a Greek Testament with Latin notes. A little Greek each day she says is necessary to put her thoughts into order.

The King of Siam and his sister, who have been touring Europe, are reported to have purchased jewelry to the value of £450,000 during the tour.

Gen. Booth, the venerable head of the Salvation Army, while on a recent tour through England and Wales was photographed more than 4000 times. A count kept by a member of the party showed a general average of 200 snap shots per day. Some of the camera fiends would actually climb into the motor car while the General would be delivering an address.

Thomas A. Edison's great success while based on his great natural gifts, yet depends upon his inordinate capacity for hard work. The principle of hard work was forced upon in early childhood when he was compelled to earn his own living and educate himself at the same time.

Ambassador Reid, by his magnificent hospitality during the past season in London, has subjected himself to jealous insinuations by members of British society, that it is inappropriate and pretentions to give entertainments rivalling those of royalty in splendor.

MEN AND THINGS OVER THE SEAS.

The Chinese Famine.

As the crops planted with the seed distributed by the relief committee are now being harvested, the famine in China would seem to be at an end. The loss of lives during the past several months in the famine districts is believed to approach closely to 750,000 persons. The promptness with which funds were subscribed and relief work entered upon by the missionaries who could speak the Chinese language, prevented the loss of life reaching anywhere near what it otherwise would.

Royalty Comes High.

Since George Kessler of New York purchased Riversdale, the Elizabethan mansion on the Thames, he has expended $450,000 on alterations on the property. His ambition is now said to be to entertain King Edward, and when the proffer was recently made in the proper quarter it is said to have been intimated that if he cared to donate half a million dollars to the King's Hospital fund in all probability His Majesty would find time to go up the river and make the acquaintance of the donor for a day, perhaps a week end. Mr. Carnegie recently paid into the King's hospital fund a like sum.

Forbids Tip-Giving.

The Earl of Sefton has provoked a peculiar controversy by having conspicuously displayed in each of his guest chambers the notice that no tips are to be given to any servants. Those who are benefited by the order are the ones who have uttered a jeremiad regarding the same. The giving of tips has become such a burden to guests at the homes of the nobility that his order would have been expected to have been hailed with pleasure. Instead of that the criticisms have been anything but complimentary.

Morocco's Ruler.

The Sultan of Morocco, who is evidently far from being a success as a ruler, is nevertheless a great scholar, learned in all the abstruse questions that distinguish Arabic literature and Persian thought. For instance, the German Ambassador to his court quoted wrongly in a conversation a line from one of the rare old Arabic books he had brought the Sultan from his master, William the Second, of Germany. Abi'el Aziz, unconsciously, almost, repeated the line as it is written, in that beautiful classic Arabic that hardly any one in Morocco speaks. His personal appearance is described as very striking, and he bears himself with such reserve that his intimates are never allowed to forget that he is "my lord, the Sultan," and they his servants.

SCIENCE NOTES.

Brain Workers' Best Period.

Brain workers do their best between the ages of 25 and 45; before that they are preparing for their work; after that their work, no matter how extensive, is largely routine, says Prof. Frederic E. Bolton in Popular Science Monthly. Lawyers and physicians do much of their practice after 40, but the learning was accomplished before 40 or 45. Successful merchants lay the foundations for wealth and success in youth and middle life. The great men that we know are all old men; but the foundations for their greatness were laid when they were young.

Alcohol in Bread.

As flour undergoes fermentation in the process of leavening, it has been supposed that a little alcohol might be retained in the loaf in spite of the oven's heat. This proves to be the case, one German chemist having found from 0.2 to 0.4 per cent. of absolute alcohol in freshly baked English bread, while another obtained a much smaller amount—0.05 to 0.08 per cent.—from German wheat-bread. Besides the alcohol was found a little dark-brown oil, which had the odor characteristic of new bread.

The Sleep of Insects.

Insects do not sleep, as we understand it; they have no eyelids. Consequently, they are unable to close their eyes. But scientific observers maintain that day insects remain quiet at night, and those that work at night are tranquil throughout the day. So that to all intents and purposes they sleep, in that they rest at regular intervals. Whether they "sleep" in the sense of losing consciousness when resting, there does not seem to be any possible way of determining. Indeed, no means have yet been devised by which we can even ascertain how much consciousness insects possess when they are, so to speak, awake.

Light and the Blood.

The effect of light on the blood has been exhaustively studied by Dr. Oerum of the Finsen Institute at Copenhagen. Darkness has been found to reduce the total amount of blood by 3 to 3.3 per cent., while decreasing at the same time the amount of blood contained in the heart. Red light will exert a similar action to darkness, while blue light is apt to result in an excess of blood, and an increase in the amount contained by the heart. Light baths are apt to increase the amount of blood in the course of four hours. Darkness will reduce the amount of blood contained in the heart within three to four weeks, and intensified light will have the same effect in four hours. Darkness will increase, and intensified light will reduce the blood pressure. Animals born in the dark or in red light have a greater weight, but only half the amount of blood of those born under normal conditions.

Speed of Earthquakes.

The speed of earthquakes will outrun the sound of the same, experiments having proved that the rumbling earth sound travels at the rate of about 10,000 to 11,000 feet per second, and the earth wave, on an average, about 1200 feet in the same space of time. From the instant when the first shock was felt at Lisbon to the period when all was over and many thousands of people killed, not more than two minutes had elapsed. Usually from ten to thirty seconds elapse between the first and last shocks of severe earthquake. But this lightning speed is not always the earthquake's mode of traveling. While Caracas, in Venezuela, was almost totally destroyed and 12,000 people were killed in less than twenty seconds by the great shock there many years back, there are cases in which constantly recurring shocks have lasted for weeks. No matter how brief the span, the most frightful havoc can be wrought, and the wave of destruction propagated from the most distant regions.

Another New Fuel.

From Pittsburgh comes information of another new fuel that is expected to revolutionise the coal bills. This one has been developed by a practical coal man, and is composed of 60 per cent. bituminous coal dust, 20 per cent. anthracite coal dust and 5 per cent. cement. Throughout the anthracite and bituminous coal districts acres of ground are piled high with the fine coal dust and waste, all of which, the inventor, Mr. Andes, would use in the manufacture of his product. The combination is made into briquets, and burns without the excessive caking or coking which characterises the burning of bituminous coal.

Rustless Iron.

A chemist of Birmingham, England, has patented a process for preventing iron from rusting. His process is based upon the utilization of phosphorous. It is forced into the surface of the iron or steel, inducing a chemical change upon the surface of the metal which renders it impervious to rust. The system, according to Mr. Coslett, is exceedingly simple to work; it only occupies four hours from beginning to end, and any intelligent unskilled man is capable of dealing with it. The cost of the solution is trifling, and the apparatus employed is such as is readily available anywhere.

The process, he says, produces no injurious effect whatever on the metal subjected to it. Steel springs treated by it retain their original resilience.

Cheaper Aluminum Process.

A process has been invented by a Swedish chemist, named Rinnan, by which aluminum can be extracted from blue clay, thus reducing the price of the product to one-fourth of its present cost. The silicic acid, which is latent in the clay masses, is to be utilized by the new method. A Norwegian engineer, Mr. Linding-Larsen, investigating independently, has also, it is reported, invented a method which seems to be similar to that of Mr. Rinnan.

World of the Solid.

With the aid of the cold furnished by liquid hydrogen, every gaseous substance at present definitely known to the chemist, with the single exception of helium, can be solidified. Even helium, Prof. Dewar hopes, may yield to the processes now being employed by scientists throughout the world.

Liquid hydrogen is so light that the only solid substance that will float upon it is pith. Solid hydrogen has a temperature 436 deg. Fahr. below zero. When exposed to the cold vapor arising from liquid hydrogen, air is instantly turned solid, falls like a miniature snowstorm into the vessel containing the hydrogen, and sinks to the bottom.

Waves in Metal.

Prof. Isaac Ward recently demonstrated before the Institution of Civil Engineers that solid metals may reveal by their structure the vibrations to which they have been subjected.

In explaining this phenomenon, experiments have been made showing that a beautiful wave structure can be imparted to the surface of mercury by the vibrations of an ordinary tuning-fork, and that even the surface of solid lead that has been subjected to similar vibrations possesses a structure resembling that of a vibrating surface of mercury.

Mild steel was defined by Prof. Ward as a "solid solution" of iron and carbon, free from cinders. Metallurgists have doubled the strength of steel as it was known in its early days.

IN THE BIG INDUSTRIES.

American Silk Industry.

The census bulletin on the silk industry shows the number of mills in the country in 1905 to have been 624, employing $109,556,621 of capital, and giving employment to 79,601 wage-earners, whose yearly wages amount to $26,767,943. The cost of materials used was $75,861,188, and the value of the product $133,288,072, of which machine twist and sewing silk, embroidery, floss, etc., amounted to $10,146,071; dress goods and other broad silk goods, $66,917,762; velvets and plushes, $4,502,021; ribbons and laces, $22,636,093.

Southern Iron Industry.

While the production of iron has been undergoing a rapid development in the South for half a century, the increase being from 86,949 tons in 1854 to 2,775,973 tons in 1906, recent comparisons by the Manufacturers' Record show that the South has actually hardly held its own with the rest of the country. In 1854 the South produced 12 per cent. of the American total, but in 1906 it produced barely over 10½ per cent. of the whole. From this a good comprehension is obtained of the enormous industrial development the country has undergone during this period.

Value in Wastes.

New York City derives a distinct value from the rubbish swept up in the streets. At one dump the right to dig over the débris is sold to a contractor for $200 per week, and at another dump a contractor pays $2112.79 weekly for the same purpose. As the bidders have to hire skilled searchers, and presumably hope to turn an honest penny for themselves, the gross weekly receipts from Father Knickerbocker's dustpan must mount merrily into the thousands. The old gentleman throws away in his annual sweepings from $150,000 to $200,000 worth of old rubbers, ribbons, wire pocket knives, bottles, corks, buttons and 10,000 varieties of lost valuables, ranging from a lock of poor dead Fido's hair up to a fifty-carat Kimberly "sparkler."

Philadelphia Industries Moving.

Philadelphia is in danger of losing some of its prestige as an industrial center. The upholstery manufacturers are already looking for new and more favorable locations, and other mill owners say they pay higher wages than those in any other textile manufacturing city in the country. They view with alarm the proposal for a higher tax rate, as a menace pregnant with serious consequences. Isaac Wasserman, a member of the firm which operates the Philadelphia Tapestry Mills, says it will not take an increased tax rate to force mill owners to other cities. They will surely have to go if prices continue as high as they have been for the last year, and if the demands of the operatives are to be met. Conditions are surely disastrous to the manufacturers and to the operatives as well. We are flooded daily with requests for employment.

Conundrums.

When is a skein of yarn like a cross dog? When snarling.

When are seamstresses like men cutting down trees? When they are felling.

When is a farmer like a ship in rough water? When plowing.

When is business like lime? When slack.

Why is a piece of braid cloth like a prison? Because it is barred.

Why is a wagon like a gossiping woman? It has a long tongue.

A Gold Brick Husk Bed.

My landlady, in showing me the room, had gracefully waved her hand in the direction of the bed with the remark, "a nice husk bed—one of our treasures." Now I had heard of the husk bed before—or had read of it—and in my fond imagining it occupied a place apart, as a crisp, airy thing—healthful, restful and a delight to one's jaded body. It is, in reality, an ingeniously contrived instrument of torture which has the rack of the Middle Ages beaten to a standstill. It's an inoffensive thing to the uninitiated; investigated, it proves to be a compilation of dried corn husks, corn cobs, stove wood, and nettles. It's the way they're put together, the proportion of the various ingredients, that does the trick. It takes an artist to make one up properly.

The topography of it is fixed in my memory, for all time. On the side at which I had entered there rose what I termed "The Coast Range." This was a long series of minor eminences running from the stingy little pillows at the head almost or quite to the foot board. Beyond the Coast Range lay a little valley, not quite wide enough to receive my anatomy but possibly created for the accommodation of a very young child. The further side of this little valley, which I christened "The Vale of Innocence," rose abruptly to meet an elevated plateau occupying the center of the bed. This I named "The Land of Little Sticks," partly because of the little hillocks which covered its entire surface and partly because it impressed me as perhaps the most barren and desolate section of the whole outfit. Another valley, "The Valley of the Shadow" lay beyond The Land of Little Sticks, and on the farther side rose "the Rockies," almost majestic in their grandeur. The Rockies were of real service to me inasmuch as they prevented my rolling on to the floor in my restless tossing to and fro upon that veritable couch of horrors.

But the Valley of the Shadow was the ultimate agony! When I first discovered it I felt relieved. It was evidently the work of centuries; deep, capacious and inviting. I sank into its depths and rolled over into a comfortable position, my back against the slope of the Rockies, my feet extended. Then it asserted itself. It was like the bed of a prehistoric torrent run dry. Bowlders rose beneath me and ground into my tortured hide, ledges projected from the mountain side and gored my back while miniature fallen trees thrust the jagged ends of broken limbs into me at a dozen places. At last, mad beyond endurance at the demoniacal contrivance, I rose and lit the lamp, seized the nearest weapon (it happened to be an empty dress suit case,) and vented my anger in mad and fruitless assault. As well try to alter the contour of the everlasting hills!

Defeated and unnerved I made a make-shift couch upon the floor and took my sleep infitful naps till morning broke. I never slept upon that bed again.—[Ernest Russell, in The Outing Magazine.

Don't Get Up Too Early.

"There is no adequate support for the impression that the early morning hours are in any way more wholesome or healthy than later periods of the day. Except in summer time they are apt to be damp, foggy, chilly and among the least desirable hours of daylight. It is quite true that during the summer there is a sense of exhilaration about being abroad in these early morning hours, but this evaporates with the dew and is apt to be succeeded by a corresponding depression and loss of working power later in the day. I have been observing my friends and patients for the past twenty years, in this respect, and am inclined to the opinion that not a little of the depression and nervousness which so commonly develop in hot weather is due to excessive exposure to light, from habits of early rising, inherited from agricultural ancestors, not counteracted by three to four hours' rest in darkened rooms in the middle of the day.

"Secondly, that the exhilaration experienced during the early morning hours is an expensive luxury which has to be paid for later in the day. In fact, I have found, that as a general rule, to put it very roughly, the business or professional man who rises an hour before half-past seven or eight, goes to bed, or loses his working power, an hour and a half earlier in the evening. Each individual has in the beginning of his day about so much working power stored up in his brain and muscle cells. If he uses this up with great rapidity in the early morning hours he naturally exhausts his stock the sooner in the afternoon or evening.

"It is largely a matter of when a man wishes to be at his best. If his occupation is of such a character that he can clear off the brunt of his work in the early morning hours, then let him rise early. If on the other hand he requires full vigor and readiness of mind and body in the latter part of the day, or at night, then he must rise later to get it. Even in pure muscle work it is false economy to work too long hours."—[Dr. Woods Hutchinson in American Magazine.

Back to the Old Ways.

Every physician, indeed, knows in his heart that we have eaten of the tree of knowledge more than we can digest, and that if the known laws of public and private hygiene were put into execution the death-rate would instantly drop 50 per cent. Moreover, the modern serpent in the tree is atheistic, monistic, deterministic, and therefore hopelessly loveless. There can be no cure, nor is there any prevention, of disease unless the little physician is the child of the Great Physician, and learns of Him how wounds heal, how sleep restores, how wise "Nature" persists for years, for a lifetime, through all lives, to outwit, heal and undo the injuries of disease. Aping an unenviable and blind science, medicine has been too prone to materialism, although before the physician's eyes, as before those of no other man, have been the amazing miracles of sexual and mother love, of the healing of wounds, of the giving of the body to be normalised in sleep to something infinitely wiser than we, and of the ceaseless struggle of the hidden physiologic God of Health against the hurts of disease. All these, in addition to the absolute nonexistence of spontaneous generation, would convince men with logical and open minds that materialism, atheism and determinism are the shallow delusions of fools.—[Dr. George M. Gould in Putnam's Magazine.

The Battle of Porpoises.

The two warriors of the sea came together head on and stopped nose to nose. There was a moment's pause, as though the leader wished to review the case thoroughly before action. Then he launched himself, like a bolt of lightning, upon the long, thin, striped fighter from the south.

Quick, so quick the eye could hardly follow the movement, the long, thin despoiler swerved to one side and gripped his foe with his teeth, cutting a frightful gash and letting go to back away. The big leader closed again and fastened his jaws upon the other's side fluke close to the body, biting clear through the hard tissue, the long canine teeth meeting and locking fast like the teeth of a bulldog. Then he held on.

The sea boiled and foamed. The flukes and fins whirled the spray in showers over the surface. A glistening spot of snowy whiteness was all that showed the whereabouts of the contestants. And all the time the big leader fought for his mate, fought steadily, holding with a mighty grip the stranger who had dared to trespass upon his affairs. For half an hour the battle continued, and never a loosening of that deadly grip. Then the fin cut away and the bones broke under the strain, the member becoming useless. Quick as a flash the leader leaped away, letting go his hold and leaving the long fighter with one side useless, one side open to attack. The striped bull knew his weakness, knew his danger from the awful hurt, and he leaped furiously forward to close before the big one could take advantage of the opportunity to get in upon his rear. He gripped the bull leader, seizing him by the under jaw, preventing the deadly hold from behind which would certainly cost him his life.

But the defender of his rights closed down upon the other's jaw, the two locking their teeth together, biting to smash the bones and muscles of their only weapons of assault. Gripped thus, teeth locked and jaws fast they whirled over the sea, straining and threshing with their flukes to either twist or crush the other to submission. Hordes of denizens, attracted by the fury of the fracas, came and watched the affair with hungry eyes, waiting for the inevitable to happen that they might feast.

But the two fighters were tried bulls of the sea. They were about evenly matchd and what one had over the other in weight the other had in length and rapidity of movement. The struggle continued all day and toward dark they still held on, neither daring to loosen for an instant that grip which meant life or death.

Just as the sun was setting the long, thin fellow began to show signs of weariness. He was beginning to feel the strain and his movements lacked the vigor of the early morning. The defender of his mate felt the slackening, felt the giving under the strain, and he redoubled his efforts, shaking, whirling, rolling over and over, twisting, furiously to crush down the failing grip. The sea was dyed purple now with the blood of the affray, for the teeth had penetrated to the veins and arteries, cutting them and letting forth the vial fluid. Suddenly the striped one relaxed his grip. Instantly the big leader did likewise, but as he did so he plunged below and circled swiftly. Before the exhausted one could turn the defender of his mate had fastened his grip upon his flukes, gripping fast upon that thin part of the tail where it joins the body, and chewing, biting, and tearing until the tendons gave way.

The long, thin fellow still fought on, but it was clear that his time had come. He was very weak and could offer no effectual resistance to the tearing teeth which cut into his vital part. In half an hour more the leader backed off and desisted from further fighting. The long, thin, striped fellow rolled slowly upon his side, and as he did so several sharks who had been watching anxiously for the finish, rushed in and began their evening meal.

The savior of his home came slowly over to his mate, nozzled her a moment, and then started swimming slowly for the Condor Reef, while she followed obediently in his wake.—[T. Jenkins Hains, in Success Magazine.

Wall Street as a Manufacturing Center.

Besides being a great market place and money reservoir, Wall street is a manufacturing community, as much so as Pittsburgh, Chicago, Fall River and any mill or factory town. The only difference is in the kind of goods produced.

Wall street's industrial specialty is the manufacturing of stocks and bonds and every other form of securities. That is its principal business, and around it has been built a wonderful and complex machinery for the sale and distribution of its output.

The market and the manufacturing features of Wall street are interdependent. Each is indispensable to the other. Money and credit is the life fluid.

The great fortunes of Wall street have been made in the production and sale of securities, nearly always accompanied by market juggling, and not in speculation. Many speculators have amassed fortunes, it is true, but in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the successful ones have been identified with the manufacturing end of the game, or have made part of the selling machinery.

The machinery of Wall street is called the market. This market receives new stocks and bonds as they are manufactured, and keeps them before the public until their quality is tested and value gauged by income-producing ability or strategic position, and until they find permanent investment lodgment.

This process may take a few years or many, depending on the properties underlying the securities, and upon their management. Some stocks find their way into the strong boxes of investors in ten, twelve, fifteen or twenty years, while others remain in perpetual "solution." Notable in this last enumeration is Erie, which has been a football in the stock market from the very beginning, more than fifty years ago. Other stocks which have been "tried out," like Lake Shore, Chicago and Northwestern, New York, New Haven and Hartford, and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, find permanent resting places in the hands of the investor class.

Without the speculative feature, Wall street would be a dry affair, and the difficulties in the way of marketing the merchandise would be greatly increased. A stock market without speculation would be like a human being without lungs, heart, stomach and other organs, as well as without flesh and blood. It would be mere skin and bones. The manufacturers of stocks and bonds would have to peddle their wares in primitive huckster fashion, from office to office and house to house.—[W. G. Nicholas, in Appleton's.

A Disgusted Southern Colonel.

They tell a story of a Mississippi colonel, who, while visiting Berlin, had enthused over the fine appearance of the military arm, until one day on Unter den Linden his toothpick slipped from his mouth and an expression of horror overspread his countenance. Approaching him was a magnificent specimen of an officer of hussars, debonair, alert, very imposing in his red tunic with white frogs, his well-cut riding breeches and gleaming boots. From the flap of his shako to the tip of the scabbard that jangled against his sabretasche, he was the ideal of a beau militaire, except that he was as black a negro as ever toiled in a cotton field, while on his arm simpered a radiant German girl. It is said that the outraged colonel left by the next train for Vienna.—[Aubrey Lanston in The Bohemian.

Newspapers and Money-making.

Newspapers, it seems—New York newspapers, at any rate—should receive more credit than they get for being in business solely to do good—or in some cases to raise hob—and not from any sordid purpose to make money. John Norris is an authority whom we find quoted as declaring in behalf of the newspaper publishers of New York, that there is hanging over sixteen of them an increase of three million dollars a year in cost of production. This three millions of added expense he divides into $2,100,000 for white paper; $800,000 additional for compositors, $200,000 for stereotypers, and $100,000 for other labor. Not more than four papers of the sixteen, Mr. Norris says, can meet this increased expense and still make both ends meet. Mr. Norris thinks the daily newspaper business is the most precarious venture going. Ninety per cent. of the newspapers circulated in New York he finds to be one-cent papers. The newsdealers, Mr. Norris says, make a vast deal of money out of the New York papers—$1,500,000 from the World alone; organized labor takes an enormous sum from them in tribute and wages—$2,800,000 a year being paid for labor by the World alone; but the returns to capital invested in the newspaper business Mr. Norris considers so unsatisfactory as to imperil the liberty of the press. All of which brings it into the forum of discussion how long the present one-cent papers can continue to be sold for one cent. One cent buys at least a third less of most commodities than it did when one-cent newspapers began to be the fashion, but it buys more newspapers now than ever.—[Harper's Weekly.

Hot Shot from a Preacher.

During the last year or two six or eight revivalists have done a very successful work in the Middle West. The most successful is the Rev. Billy Sunday, whose story is fully told in the September American Magazine.

Sunday is very severe with those who criticise him. Here is a speech he made the other day in one of his meetings:

"I understand that a young woman is going about this town into your homes and business houses peddling that low-down, infamous, malicious, premediated, damnable, dirty, black-hearted lie that at a town or some town at which I was holding a meeting I noticed two young ladies in the audience who were wearing red hats, and that I shouted that if there was a cowboy in the audience I would like to have him lasso those two red heifers. If I ever said such a thing I deserved to be tarred and feathered. I will willingly give $1000 to any man or woman who can prove that I ever did such a thing as that. It is a damnable lie—a lie, a lie! If that's not plain, come to me. I don't very often pay any attention to stories about me, but when any one tries to blacken my character I'll fight with every drop of blood in my body and won't allow any hatchet-faced, frizzle-haired hussy to ruin my reputation. I don't want to carry malice, but I will stand up for my good name. If you see her tomorrow give her my love."

London's Grim Figures.

There are other figures, grimly eloquent. There is a standing army, as the phrase goes, of 80,000 unemployed; add, still, 30,000 women very badly employed indeed; and 32,000 homeless adults; and 35,000 wandering children of the slums; and 15,000 free criminals and you have before you a statistical summary of the situation in the greatest city in Christendom. Interesting, is it not? And with those who do not walk the streets o' night things are only a degree better. It is a fact that 90 per cent. of the producers of the actual wealth of London have no homes they can call their own beyond the week's end and no other possessions than the few sticks of old furniture that will go into a hand-cart for trundling from lodging to lodging. And 800,000 people live in one-room tenements, in which decency is impossible. Every night 30,000 Londoners sleep in four-penny lodging-houses—the four-penny "Doss," and every night 11,000 sleep in the casual wards. Where should they sleep, these secondary millions? In London there are 1,292,737 workers who get less than five dollars a week per family! The week I write of there were 99,830 persons in work-houses, hospitals, and prisons of the great town.—[Vance Thompson in the Outing Magazine.

The Filipino as a Worker.

Cebu presents the fairest opportunity to estimate the capacity of its indigenous workers because the railway construction has been pushed most rapidly there. Within three months the forces composed of men brought fresh from the plantations where they had never known the tools and appliances of civilization, nor scarcely even seen in a white man, were able to proceed with the grading, using picks, shovels and wheelbarrows, at the rate of 110,000 yards per month, an average of 30,000 yards being rock, drilled by hand. Grades of four feet are thrown up without difficulty by the little fellows. And these results were attained despite the fact that the white foremen have left a great deal to be desired, being mostly such representatives of the republic as could be found in the islands unattached by contract to any regularly established business or industry

At first a strong predilection appeared for the use of feet and hands rather than picks and shovels for working earth, and it was difficult to persuade some that the wheelbarrows were not receptacles to be carried upon the backs when filled, according to the ancient custom of burden bearing throughout the Orient. With the use of just a reasonable amount of tact and patience such as should be possessed by all white men in colonizing work, and which is nearly always possessed by the colonizing Britisher, for instance, the foregoing little idiosyncracies of the Filipino were quickly overcome.—[P. H. Ashmead, in The Engineering Magazine, for September.

Lungs That Are Starved.

It is a fact that most of us are victims of our own lazy respiration and deprive ourselves of oxygen that is so necessary if we would keep our bodies at their highest point of efficiency.

Oxygen is absolutely necessary to the existence of animal life. Man gets oxygen from air breathed into his lungs.

Besides introducing oxygen into the blood, the lungs act as excretory organs, removing undesirable elements from the system at each expiration.

In ordinary or unconscious breathing, only 10 to 12 per cent. of the air in the lungs is changed at each breath, leaving 80 to 90 per cent. of the lung capacity filled with stale air.

Forced or conscious breathing of pure air ventilates the lungs, driving out the 80 to 90 per cent. of the stationary or stale air.

All bedroom windows and doors should be wide open during sleep, thus connecting the lungs with the pure air of the outside world.—[The Dilineator.

Matrimonial Missteps.

Divorce, so often termed national evil, would be more appropriately called a national symptom. One need not be an alarmist to see in its increasing frequency a sign that something is wrong with the institution of matrimony itself, with the people who marry or with social conditions.

Every divorce has a twofold effect, public and private—the effect on society at large and on home and family, the latter the more destructive of the two since on these stability of government depends. Practically each of the seventy thousand divorces granted annually in the United States means the breaking up of a household, a serious menace indeed to the nation.

And yet those who advocate no divorce at all, or even but for one cause, may be as far wrong as those who would impose no restriction. Not every home is a blessing to its inmates or to the community. The one, for instance, where either parent is in a state of frequent drunkenness, or where brawling and fighting are constant—is it of any advantage to children to continue in a home of that kind? Or one where the husband is shiftless and improvident, placing upon the wife the burden of support—would it not be much better for herself and the children if she would get rid of him legally instead of adding others to their number to be also cold, hungry and miserable? Are such homes of any benefit to the public?—[Ida Husted Harper, in the Delineator.

Moral Shock from Indiana.

"No measure to prevent procreation of the humanly unfit could be more drastic or more anti-ethical," says the London Lancet, "than the newly-enacted statute framed by the Legislature of Indiana." The preamble to the new law is scientific enough. "Whereas," it reads, "heredity plays a most important part in the transmission of crime, idiocy and imbecility." The enacting clause of the law provides that two skilled surgeons of recognized ability shall examine the confirmed criminals, idiots, imbeciles, and perpetrators of crimes of violence against women. If, in the judgment of the experts and the board of managers, "procreation is unadvisable and there is no probability of improvement of the mental condition," it shall be incumbent upon the experts to perform such a surgical operation as will answer the purpose of the new law. "But this operation shall not be performed except in cases that have been pronounced unimprovable." In no case shall the consultation fee be more than $3 for each expert. To the London Lancet this piece of legislation is worthy of the greatest amount of attention, for it is fraught with grave peril.—[Current Literature.

BITS OF VERSE.

Aurora Borealis.

Even as the glory of the northern lights
On some still winter midnight strikes
the soul
Spellbound with visions, and the boreal pole
Becomes a flaming ladder that unites
Heaven and earth; so, love, your beauty smites
My spirit dumb with wonder, and the whole
Sky of my life burns with the aureole
Of your strange being blazing on the heights.

Love is no less a mystery to me
Than the aurora of the Northern sky.
'Twas the cold midnight of my destiny,
When from the void you came to glorify
My firmament with unknown ecstacy:
Yea, and I know not whence you came, nor why!
—[Elsa Baker, in Broadway Magazine.

One Moment of Doubt.

Suppose you should forget,
After our love and tears,
To wait for me in that shining place
That lies behind the years!

Suppose I should forget,
After my lips are dumb,
To go to you, O heart of my heart—
Suppose I should not come!

Never yet was a soul,
The past remembering,
But who, one moment in the dark,
Doubted the coming spring.

And never yet was one
Who on this earth has trod,
But for one instant told his heart
He doubted even God.

Wherefore, then, blame me, love,
That, mortal that I be,
I stand one moment, lost, dismayed—
Then face eternity!
—[Charles Hanson Towne, in Ainslee's.

Garden of the Rose.

Her soul is like a garden fair,
Where many pleasant blossoms grow;
But, though I sometimes enter there,
There is a path I do not know.

The way I go to find it, lies
Through dewy beds of violet,
They mark the portals of her eyes
Where modesty and truth are set.

And back of these a hedge is placed—
A hedge of lilies, tall and white;
These are her maiden thoughts, so chaste
I almost tremble in their sight.

But, blushing through them, and above,
Half-hid, but stirring to unfold,
I spy the roses of her love—
And so again I grow more bold.

Thus, half in prayer, I seek and wait
To find the secret path that goes
Up from the lily-guarded gate
To her heart's garden of the rose.
—[Charles Buxton Going, in Harper's Magazine.

The Book-worms.

Ho, thou, through the dim folio fondly mining,
We near the end.
A moment in thy sleeping and thy dining
Arrest thee, friend!

Only a little way art thou behind me,
But in my place
The world has grown so thin that now
I find me
Close upon space.

Is it some larger leaf than we have burrowed,
In tinct and pale
And blazon of the title page we furrowed
With sinuous trail?

Is it the answer to some wild of dreaming
Before me there?
Some airy lift, some hint of boundless gleaming,
Which way I fare?

Life! And beyond, outlook of glorious weather—
Wide wanderings!
Ho, friend, bestir thee in thy fragrant leather!
I feel my wings!
—[Harriet Prescott Spofford, in Scribner's.

Cured by Imagination.

Miss Elizabith Whiteman, matron at the county jail, is of the firm opinion that there is much in imagination. In her charge are two women, a mother and daughter, who are or were addicted to the use of morphine. They entered the jail about eight weeks ago, and for a time it was necessary to give the women the drug. Finally Miss Whiteman substituted a small tablet of a strychnine compound of the same size and shape as the morphine tablets, and a number of them were given the women. She increased the use of the strychnine tablets until the women were not using the morphine, although they thought they were. Recently she stopped the use of the tablets and there was a wail from the woman's department.

"I must have some morphine or I'll die," exclaimed one of the women.

"You'll be all right," Miss Whiteman said. "You have not had a morphine tablet for more than two weeks, and you seem to be doing all right without them."

The women little dreamed that the matron had "switched" tablets on them.—[Indianapolis News.

Aladdin in London

He stood up as he spoke and began to gather his papers together. To Alban the scene was amazingly false and perplexing. He was perfectly aware that this stranger had no real interest in him at all; he felt, indeed, that his presence was almost resented and that he was being received into the house as upon compulsion. All the talk of obligation and favor and justice remained powerless to deceive. The key to the enigma did not lie therein; nor was it to be found in the churchman's suavity and the fairy tale which he had recited. Had the meeting terminated less abruptly, Alban believed that his own logic would have carried the day and that he would have left the house as he had come to it. But the clever suggestion of haste on the banker's part, his hurried manner and his domineering gestures, left a young lad quite without idea. Such an old strategist as Richard Gessner should have known how to deal with that honest original, Alban Kennedy.

"We will meet at breakfast," the banker repeated; "meanwhile, consider Mr. Geary as your friend and counsellor. He shall by me so be appointed. I have a great work for you to do, Mr. Kennedy, but the education, the books, the knowledge—they must come first. Go now and think about dinner—or perhaps you would like to walk about the grounds a little while. Mr. Greary will show you the way—I leave you in his hands."

He folded the papers up and thrust them quickly in a drawer as he spoke. The interview was plainly at an end. He had welcomed a son as he would have welcomed any stranger who had brought a letter of introduction which decency compelled him to read.

CHAPTER VIII.

ALBAN KENNEDY DINES.

Silas Geary led the way through the hall and thence to the winter garden. Here the display of plants was quite remarkable and the building one that had cost many thousands of pounds. Designed, as all that Richard Gessner touched, to attract the wonder of the common people and to defy the derision of the connoisseur, this immense garden had been the subject of articles innumerable and of pictures abundant. Vast in size, classic in form, it served many purposes, but chiefly as a gallery for the safe custody of a collection of Oriental china which had no rival in Europe.

"It is our patron's hobby," said the curate, mincingly, as he indicated the treasures of cloisonné and of porcelain; "he does not frivol away his money as so many do, on idle dissipations and ephemeral pleasures. On the contrary, he devotes it to the beautiful objects—"

"Do you call them beautiful, sir?" Alban asked ingenuously. "They seem to me quite ugly. I don't think that if I had money I should spend it on plates and jars which nobody uses. I would much sooner buy a battleship and give it to the nation." And then he asked, "Did Mr. Gessner put up all this glass to keep out the fresh air? Does he like being in a hot-house? I should have thought a garden would have been better."

Silas Geary could make nothing of such criticism as this.

"My dear lad," he protested, "you are very young and probably don't know what sciatica means. When I was your age, I could have slept upon a board and risen therefrom refreshed. At fifty it is otherwise. We study the barometer then and dust before we sit. This great glass house is Mr. Gessner's winter temple. It is here that he plans and conceives so many of those vast schemes by which the world is astonished."

Alban looked at him curiously.

"Is the world really astonished by rich men?" he asked.

Mr. Geary stood still in amazement at the question.

"Rank and birth rule the nation," he declared vehemently; "it is fit and proper that it should be so. Our aristocracy is rightly recruited from those who have accumulated the wealth necessary to such a position. Riches, Kennedy, mean power. You will know that some day when you are the master of riches."

Alban walked on a little way without saying anything. Then almost as one compelled to reply he exclaimed:

"In the East End, they don't speak of money like that. I suppose it is their ignorance—and after all it is a very great thing to be able to compel other people to starve for you. Some day, I'll take you down to the sweating-shops, Mr. Geary. You'll see a lot of old china there, but I don't think it will be worth much. And all our flowers are for sale—poor devils, we get little enough for supper if we don't sell them."

The curate expressed no profound desire to accept this promising invitation, and desiring to change so thorny a subject entered a delightful old-world garden and invited Alban's attention to a superb view of Harrow and the Welsh Harp. In the hall, to which at last they returned, he spoke of that more substantial reality, dinner.

"I am sorry to say that I have a Dorcas meeting tonight and cannot posibly dine with you," he explained to the astonished lad. "I shall return at nine o'clock, however, to see that all is as Mr. Gessner wishes. The servants have told you, perhaps, that Miss Anna is in the country and does not return until tomorrow. This old house is very dull without her, Kennedy. It is astonishing how much difference a pretty face makes to any house."

"Is that Miss Anna's portrait over the fireplace, sir?"

"You know her, Kennedy?"

"I have seen her once, on the balcony of a house in St. James' Square. That was last night when I was on my way to sleep in a cellar."

"My poor, poor boy, and tonight you will sleep in one of the most beautiful rooms in England. How wonderful is fortune, how amazing—er—how very—is not that seven o'clock by the way? I think that it is, and here is Fellows come to show you your room. You will find that we have done our best for you in the matter of clothes—guess-work, I fear, Kennedy, but still our best. Tomorrow Westman the tailor is to come—I think and hope you will put up with borrowed plumes until he can fit you up. In the meantime, Fellows has charge of your needs. I am sure that he will do his very best for you."

The young butler said that he would—his voice was still raised to a little just dignity, and he, in company with Silas Geary, the housekeeper and the servants' hall had already put the worst construction possible upon Alban's reception into the house. His determination to patronize the "young man" however received an abrupt check when Alban suddenly ordered him to show the way upstairs. "He spoke like a Duke," Fellows said in the kitchen afterward. "There I was running up the stairs just as though the Guv'ner were behind me. Don't you think that you can come it easy with him—he ain't the sort by a long way. I tell you, I never was so astonished since the Guv'ner raised my wages."

Alban, of course, was sublimely unconscious of this. He had been conducted to an enormous bedroom on the first floor, superbly furnished with old Chippendale and excellent modern Sevres—and there he had been left to realize for the first time that he was alone and that all which had happened since yesterday was not a dream but a hard, invincible truth so full of meaning, so wonderful, so sure that the eyes of his brain did not dare to look at it unflinchingly. Boyishly and with a boy's gesture he had thrown himself upon the bed and hidden his face from the light as though the very atmosphere of this wonder world were insupportable. Good God, that it should have happened to him, Alban Kennedy; that it should have been spoken of as his just right; that he should have been told that he had a claim which none might refute! A hundred guesses afforded no clue to the solution of the mystery. He could not tell himself that he was in some way related to Richard Gessner, the banker; he could not believe that his dead parents had any claim upon this foreigner who received him coldly and yet would hear nothing of his departure. Pride had little share in this, for the issues were momentous. It was sufficient to know that a hand had suddenly drawn him from the abyss, had put him on this pinnacle—beyond all, had placed him in Anna Gessner's home as the first-born, there to embark upon a career whose goal lay beyond the City Beautiful of his dreams.

He rose from the bed at length, and trying to put every thought but that of the moment from his head, he remembered that he was expected to dine alone in the great room below, and to dress himself for such an ordeal in the clothes which the reverend gentleman's wit had provided for him. Courageous in all things, he found himself not a little afraid of all the beautiful objects which he touched, afraid to lift the Sevres pitcher, afraid to open the long doors of the inlaid wardrobe, timid before the dazzling mirror—a reluctant guest who, for the time being, would have been thankful to escape to a carpetless floor and glad to wash in a basin of the commonest kind. When this passed, and it was but momentary, the delusion that a trick was being played upon him succeeded to it, and he stood to ask himself if he had not been a fool to believe their story at all, a fool thus to be made sport of by one who would relate the circumstance with relish tomorrow. This piece of nonsense, however, was as quick to give way to the somewhat cynical common sense with which Alban Kennedy had rightly been credited as the other. He turned from it impatiently and began to dress himself. He had last dressed in black clothes and a white waistcoat for a school concert at Westminster when he was quite a little lad—but his youth had taught him the conventions, and he had never forgotten those traditions of what his dead father used to call the "decent life." In his case the experience was but a reversion to the primitive, and he dressed with every satisfaction, delighted to put off the shabby old clothes and no less content with his new appearance as a mirror revealed it to him.

The dining-room at "Five Gables" was normally a little dark in the daytime, for it looked upon the drive where ancient trees shaded its lofty latticed windows. At night, however, Richard Gessner's fine silver set off the veritable black oak to perfection, and the room had an air of dignity and richness neither artificial nor offensive. When Alban came down to dinner he perceived that a cover had been set for him at the end of a vast table, and that he was expected to take the absent master's place; nor could he forbear to smile at the solemn exercises performed by Fellows, the young butler, and two footmen, who were to wait upon him. These rascals, whatever they might say in the kitchen afterwards, served him at the table as though he had been an eldest son of the house. If they had expected that the ragged, shabby fellow, who entered the house so stealthily an hour ago, would provide food for their exquisitely delicate sense of humor, they were wofully disappointed. Alban ate his dinner without uttering a single remark.

And last night it had been supper in the caves! There must be no charge of inconsistency brought against him if a momentary shudder marked this recollection of an experience. A man may bridge a great gulf in a single instant of time. Alban had no less affection for, no less interest tonight in those pitiful lives than yesterday, but he understood that a flood of fortune had carried him for the time being away from them, and that his desire must be to help, but not to regret them. Indeed, he could not resist, nor did he wish to resist, a great content in this well-being, which overtook him in so subtle a manner. The sermons of the old days, preached by many a mad fanatic of Union street, declared that any alliance between the rich and the poor must be false and impossible. Alban believed it to be so. A mere recollection of the shame of poverty could already bring the blood to his cheeks, and yet he would have defended poverty with all the logic of which his clever brain was capable.

So, in a depressing silence, the long dinner was eaten. Methodically and with velvet steps the footmen put dish after dish before him, the butler filled his rarely lifted glass, the whole cere-

FRESH LITERATURE.

NEW BOOKS REVIEWED.

[BY A TIMES REVIEWER.]

Wisdom in Parvo.

THE TRAINING OF THE HUMAN PLANT. By Luther Burbank. (The Century Co., New York. Price 60 cents.)

Mr. Burbank's little book, hardly more than a brochure, even though it is printed in big type, on thick paper, is yet one of vital and timely importance to our day and generation. In it the author, out of the richness of his experience and investigation, urges an ideal training looking toward an ideal race. "During the course of many years of investigation into the plant life of the world," he says, by way of introduction, "creating new forms, modifying old ones, adapting others to new conditions, and blending still others, I have constantly been impressed with the similarity between the cultivation and development of plant and human life."

Mr. Burbank shows that we Americans are more crossed than any other nation in the history of the world, and that we meet the same results that are always seen in a much-crossed race of plants; if we follow the teachings of science, we may produce the finest race ever known. He demands for the child of the race—most sensitive of living things—first and foremost a heredity and environment of love; differentiation in training, sunshine, good air, and nourishing food. The fundamental principles of education, he declares, should be the subject of earnest scientific investigation, including all the [illegible] tend to produce men and women with sane, well-balanced characters. He quarrels with her—in a gentlemanly and ben trovato manner—on first sight, and when he falls in love with her, has to fight with her for herself. She is surrounded by several delightful girls, and they have lovers also—plenty of them. Even the obdurate doctor—whom we suspect of being a tease—appears on the scene to increase the supply. He does it rather effectively. The various affairs range from pure comedy to tragedy, a compound of laughter, tenderness and tears.

There are only two things—both of them minor—to be regretted in this delightful book. It is so sweet and human that the intrusion of a family ghost, although a highly respectable and far from horrifying specter, strikes one as a needless taint of morbidity. Then, in the last few pages, for the first time the fine reserve of the author is cast aside in a straining for effect—pardonable, perhaps, for the true inwardness of Barbara's feelings must be shown.

A Cat and the Fates.

THE SIAMESE CAT. By Henry Milner Rideout. McClure, Phillips & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

The framework of this tale is a story that in less skilful hands might be melodrama, bosh, or a penny dreadful. Mr. Rideout is a skilled writer, and besides that, apparently a man with the observing eye. The real merit of "The Siamese Cat" is not the story, but the flesh with which Mr. Rideout has dressed his skeleton—glimpses of the East, of Bangkok, Ayuthia, Singapore, Colombo, Port Said, strange men and stranger crafts, sailors and dealers in precious stones, the wild and strange East, full of smells and troubles.

Mr. Rideout has done here a capital piece of work. In the suggestive quality, the ability to impart facts without didacticism, he shows a quality which has been associated with the name of Kipling almost alone. He has also the feeling for color, both in nature and in words—which is fine and true. This present story is slight in many respects, but the manner in which it is done counts for much, and gives hope for something still better.

DISCLAIMER OF AUTHORSHIP.

Beautiful Epitaph Used by Mark Twain Part of a Poem Written by an Australian Author.

Mistaken reference is so often made to what is termed the "epitaph written by Mark Twain for his wife," that it is worth while to set the matter straight.

The epitaph referred to was not placed upon the tombstone of Mr. Clemens's wife, but upon that of his daughter Susie. It was not original with Mark Twain, but was taken by him from a little poem written some fifteen years ago by an Australian poet named Robert Richardson. It appeared in a book of poems by Richardson, which was published in Edinburgh in 1893, under the title of "Willow and Wattles."

The verse used as the epitaph is as follows:

Warm summer sun,
Shine kindly here,
Warm southern wind,
Blow softly here.
Green sod above,
Lie light, lie light.
Good night, dear heart,
Good night, good night.

The verse has so often been referred to as being Mark Twain's own composition that he has recently had the name of the actual author of it carved upon the stone.

APPRECIATION OF HOWELLS.

Andrew Lang Admires Literary Brother Taken Simultaneously With Him "In Flagrante D. Litto."

In a recent article, in an English periodical, by Andrew Lang, he takes friendly issue with Mr. Howells in regard to some views expressed by the veteran American concerning the kind of characters now popular in fiction. But although differing, in a friendly way, from some of Mr. Howells's judgments, Mr. Lang feels frank and cordial admiration for him.

"No man has written more in the higher criticism of modern novels than Mr. Howells," he declares. "His knowledge of them is cosmopolitan. Spanish, Italian, French, Russian, and, I dare say, Finnish, Romaic, and Portuguese novels are all familiar to him, while, if there is a promising young 'fictionist,'" he humorously adds, "among the Samoyedes or Eskimo, Mr. Howells is the man to lend him an applauding pair of hands."

And he refers, with genial jestfulness, to the fact that he and Mr. Howells are literary brethren, because the degree of Litt. D. was conferred on both of them by Oxford University a few years ago. "Are we not both Docters of Letters? Both simultaneously taken, as the man said, in flagrante D. Litto!"

FAST GAINING FRIENDS.

THIRTEEN YEARS OF ESPERANTO.

HOW THE UNIVERSAL LANGUAGE HAS PROGRESSED.

It Is Being Taught to French Army and Navy Officers; the Chamber of Commerce in London Gives Examinations in It; and Secretary Root Thinks It Useful for Consuls.

During the past year the number of translations in Esperanto have increased rapidly, the number of Esperanto clubs and magazines have become larger, and most significant of all, one or two scientific treatises have recently been written and published in Esperanto originally. All this progress has been made in little over a decade, for although Esperanto was made public eighteen years ago, it has really had but thirteen years of existence—and its real strength and growth did not begin until the Paris exposition of 1900.

In a recent address at Chautauqua, Henry J. Forman of the North American Review, gave a short account of Esperanto history. He said that the first society devoted to the study of Esperanto was organized in St. Petersburg in 1894. It did very little work, however. Into France Esperanto made its way as early as 1888, one year after its publication. It there came to the notice of that fine scholar, linguist and traveler the Marquis de Beaufort. He had been thinking himself upon the problem of a universal language. After twelve years of work he created the language "Adjuvanto," "the helper;" its idea being much like that of Esperanto. He found that Esperanto was in many respects superior to his own, and so he gave up his own Adjuvanto, though it had represented so much of his life work. He compiled a text book of French in Esperanto, which he published in 1892, and in 1898 formed a society for the study of Esperanto.

The Paris exposition brought a great many scholars to France, and the French Esperanto Society made an effort to bring it to their notice. They succeeded in this to a large extent, and since then Esperanto has been spreading rapidly all over Europe.

There are now 100 clubs in France devoted to the propaganda of Esperanto, all connected with the central society. Esperanto is being taught to the army and navy officers of France; and there is now a bill which has good prospects of being passed before the Assembly, providing for the teaching of Esperanto in the schools of France like any other language.

There are now 100 clubs in England, but Esperanto made little progress until 1902, about which time it was taken up by W. T. Stead. The London Chamber of Commerce now gives examinations in Esperanto just as in any other language.

In America Esperanto has not been growing so rapidly, the trouble seeming to be that it has not been brought sufficiently before public notice. Secretary Root has told me, however, that he thinks seriously of introducing it as a requirement of preparation for the consular service.

There have been three international congresses held. The first was at Boulogne-sur-Mer in 1905, at which Dr. Zamenhof was decorated with the cross of the Legion of Honor. That in Geneva last year was attended by representatives of twenty-eight nations. It was a most impressive sight to see them all gathered in one of the churches of the city for services in Esperanto. The last congress was held at Cambridge, August 12, and was considered most important as an opportunity of bringing Esperanto before the English-speaking world.

The purpose of Esperanto in its commercial and scientific aspects, and for purposes of travel, can readily be seen. Its usefulness there is very great, but the founder of Esperanto had another object in view, to make the nations of the earth brothers. The ideal object of Esperanto is the promotion of human justice and brotherhood, and whatever may make to a better understanding among the nations of the earth. We are working for treaties, for arbitration, but mutual understanding by means of a common language would do more than all the treaties in the world. Perhaps this object in Esperanto fills its adherents with more enthusiasm than the more general purposes. Dr. Zamenhof is very desirous that Americans, with enthusiasm and strength as a nation, should take it up. He feels that it is not merely our Pan-American but our world-wide position that calls upon us to be leaders. In a pamphlet addressed to us as he says: "O Americans, this language whose ideal is the future union of mankind we hand on to you, in the name of freedom, peace and justice for which the forefathers of most of you suffered so much."

WRITERS TALK SHOP.

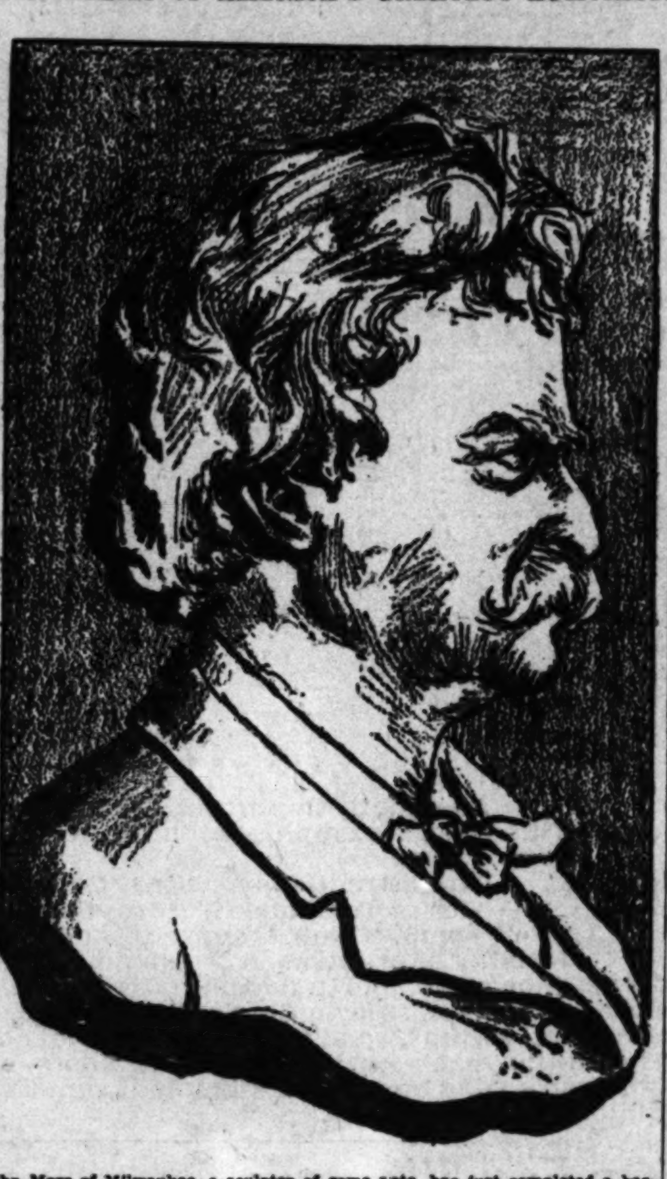
Gorky and Caine Meet in a London Music Hall—Latter Complains of Russian Failure to Pay.

Maxim Gorky and Hall Caine, met recently in London, and, of all places in the world, it was at the Empire Music Hall, the acknowledged haunt of London's demimonde. Moreover, they were introduced by the librarian of the London Library, who had accompanied Gorky to the festive resort. The two author-preachers had much in common in regard to the deplorable aspect of social life so largely in evidence around them; but it did not depress them to the extent that might have been expected.

Then they talked "shop." Maxim Gorky told Hall Caine "The Christian" is one of the most popular foreign novels in Russia, and that as a drama it has been played with great success for many years.

"Yes," answered Caine, thoroughly moved, "and I have never received a kopeck in royalties. One cannot but regard with pain the excesses of czardom, but there must be something radically vicious in a people who can derive moral instruction and amusement from my plays without offering any financial recompense."

BAS-RELIEF OF AMERICA'S GREATEST HUMORIST.



John Marr of Milwaukee, a sculptor of some note, has just completed a bas-relief of Mark Twain. A copy was sent to Mr. Clemens, and he replied in a characteristic letter. The sculptor is a native of Saxony, but he has studied almost entirely in America.

TO TRAIN AUTHORS.

WANTS FOUNDED A NEW SCHOOL.

"WORLD'S WORK" EDITOR WOULD TEACH WRITING.

In Address at Last Convocation of University at Chicago, Walter H. Page Advocates Graduate School to Place Writers on Footing With Lawyers, Doctors, Etc.

Schools for authors should be a part of every university, according to Walter Hines Page, who is editor of the World's Work. Taking as his subject "The Writer and the University," he sets forth his views in an oration at the sixty-fourth convocation of the University of Chicago, which was recently held in Chicago.

Universities grant recognition to and train dentists, horse doctors, engineers, cooks and sociologists, and Mr. Page thinks that the neglect of authors should be realized by schools which would clear up "the pathetic misunderstanding that the whole of organized education has about the subject of writing." In this connection the Chicago Record-Herald reports him as saying:

"Take the whole flood of books and the worst written books year after year are written by our scholars and academic men. They are monstrous, dull productions, and I cannot conceive of any man reading them a hundred years hence.

"Up to this time, the writers' craft has been a 'harum-scarum,' rough and tumble business," he continued, "with lots of superstition and little training or experience. Let us have professional post-graduate schools to teach men to write. At present it is not considered good form in academic circles to write well. If a scholar writes something people can understand he is accused of popularizing and 'playing to the gallery.'

"Only those should be admitted who have a bachelor of arts degree or an equivalent degree—such men and women who mean to make their living and career by writing, who have an aptitude for the art and to whom the right use of words gives a keen joy. There should be one teacher for every six or eight students.

"The main thing is to acquire not information but skill. Each student should write a thousand words a day for examination by the class. All styles should be studied and there should be a definite, well-planned course in literature and languages. It might be well to compel the students to write sonnets for a month. It is a profound conviction of mine that we will lose the writing soul if we ever expect to save it by scholarship alone.

"Ninety-five per cent. of all the reading done by the people of the United States is the writing of living authors, writin within the year, and much of it within the day it is read. The writing of dead men forms but a small part of our reading. The intellectual standard actually is set for the mass of the people by us journeymen. The writers' profession is now third or fourth among the trades in point of numbers, surpassed only by teachers, physicians and lawyers. The journeyman writers are a large, influential and self-supporting class, and they cry out for training."

SHAKESPEAREAN LIBRARY.

An American and an English Printing House Will Collaborate in Interesting Series.

A publishing announcement of equal interest to scholars and the general public is made by Duffield & Company, New York, and Chatto & Windus of London. These two houses have arranged for the publication of a series of books to be called the Shakespeare Library, in which will be included various volumes indispensable to a thorough understanding of the poet, but never before issued at reasonable prices.

The library will be divided into four parts. Part first will include "The Old Spelling Shakespeare," published in forty volumes and in the orthography of the poet's own time, the text under the editorship of Dr. Furnivall. Part second, "The Shakespeare Classics," under the general editorship of Prof. I. Gollancz, editor of The Temple Shakespeare, will include the various romances, histories, plays and poems used by Shakespeare as the originals or direct sources of his plays. Part three, called "Shakespeare's England," will include volumes illustrative of the life, thought and literature of England in the time of Shakespeare. A fourth part, to be called the "Lamb Shakespeare for Young People," will be based on Charles and Mary Lamb's tales, in which an attempt will be made to insert skilfully within the setting of prose those scenes and passages from the plays with which the young reader should early become acquainted. The work will be done under the special supervision of Prof. Gollancz, the editor of the library.

The first of the volumes in the second part, the backbone of the library, will be Lodge's "Rosalynde," the original of "As You Like It," edited by W. W. Greg, M.A. Other volumes to follow shortly will be Greene's "Dorastus and Fawnia," the original of the "Winter's Tale;" Brook's poem of "Romeus and Juliet;" "The History of Hamlet," "The Play of King Leir and His Three Daughters," and various other Shakespearean source books.

Among the first volumes to appear in the Shakespeare's England section will be "Robert Laneham's Letter," describing part of the entertainment given to Queen Elizabeth in Kenilworth Castle in 1575; Shakespeare's "Holinshed," edited by the late W. G. Boswell Stone; the Shakespeare Allusion-Book, in which the allusions originally collected by Dr. Ingleby, Miss L. Toulmin Smith and Dr. Furnivall, will be for the first time arranged in chronological order and supplemented with further material. The whole library is expected to be completed between September, 1907, and 1909.

ENGLISH AS IT IS WRIT.

San Salvador Correspondent Struggles Manfully With the Language, and Sends It to the Mat.

Some of the most delicious bad English seen since the famous Portuguese book is that sent to D. Appleton & Co. by a correspondent in San Salvador. The Appletons are among the chief publishers of Spanish books in this hemisphere, and they receive many remarkable letters from Southern America, but they consider this the best thus far:

"D. Appleton & Co., New York.

"Dear Sir: After greet you fondly, Y have the honor, to aim, the follows words, with the object to inform you, that having news about your plenty Library. Y' am asking yourself a favor if you please send me the price of a 'Chemistre,' but applied and not theoric, being in the same time, in the english languish, and lastly send me the price and the name of the Author.

"Pardon me the mistaken. . . .

"Your most faithfull Friend,

"PABLO A. ZAVALA."

PEOPLE AND THINGS LITERARY.

Frederick Trevor Hill, who has not only written fiction, but who has also distinguished himself as an investigate along historical lines, is spending the summer in Europe, engaged in historical research in the Library of the British Museum and in the Bibliotheque Nationale at Paris.

The Children's Magazine with its September number absorbs Boys and Girls of Ithaca, edited by Miss Martha Van Rensselaer. Miss Van Rensselaer has joined the editorial staff of the Children's Magazine and will conduct a department of garden work, out-door and nature study, continuing the lines she was following in her former publication.

The Carnegie Institution of Washington has arranged for the publication by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., of a critical edition of the "Vulgate Version of the Arthurian Romances," by Dr. H. Oskar Sommer, of London. The manuscript of the first two parts of this work is already completed, and they will probably be published in the spring of 1908.

"Under Castle Walls," is reported as being a success in England, under the name "Springtime." The author, H. C. Bailey, has just written a new book which will be published by D. Appleton & Company this fall, under the name "A Gentleman of Fortune."

D. Appleton & Co. have secured for their fall list a gift book, devoted to the life of "Mary, Queen of Scots." The text is by Walter Wood, edited by W. Shaw Sparrow, with pictures in color by James Orrock, R.I., and Sir James Linton, R.I. Each picture is specially mounted.

The insurance gamblers have found their place in fiction. David Graham Phillips has finished the manuscript of "Light-Fingered Gentry," his next book, to be published this fall. Though published as a serial, Mr. Phillips has completely rewritten the book, largely reconstructing not only its sentences, but its plot as well. Though it has the insurance scandal as a background, it is essentially a love story, the romantic element being larger than ever before in a work of his.

Among E. P. Dutton & Co.'s forthcoming books, ready in September, are "The Sea Charm of Venice," by Stopford A. Brooke; "A History of Astronomy," by W. W. Bryant; "Church Furniture," by J. C. Cox, LL.D., F.S.A., and A. Harvey, M.B., and "The Care of the Body," by T. Cavanaugh, M.D.

The London Spectator says of "The Substance of Faith, Allied with Science," by Sir Oliver Lodge, that "His book, we are sure, will be a source of happiness and consolation to many, who, confused by the new discoveries of history and science, have become shaken in their religious faith."

Among the elaborately illustrated books which The Macmillan Company will publish this fall will be one on "The Norwegian Fjords," both text and pictures being by A. Heaton Cooper. This is not to be a guide book but is of a type of book that has grown popular in late years, in which the life of the people and the scenery of the country are dealt with in intimate fashion. Many of the illustrations will be reproduced in color.

After many delays the second volume of the new library edition of the poems of William B. Yeats will be published September 14. It will be recalled that the first volume, containing Mr. Yeat's lyrical poems, appeared about a year ago. Volume II contains his dramas in verse, and includes in addition to those already published, but not only easily accessible, the drama "Deirdre," which was first produced in Dublin last winter, and has never appeared in print.

In the preface of "The Golfer's Guide," a new publication of the J. B. Lippincott Company, the author writes as follows: "This book is intended mainly for beginners, but the author wishes to disclaim any connection with the following recent incident: An equally venturesome writer, preferring expert opinion before offering his MS. to a publisher, submitted it to a well-known professional player. In due course the reply came back, 'Dear Sir, I have read your book with much pleasure, and it seems a very nice game. I feel bound to say, however, that I prefer golf.' "

The latest book by Maarten Maartens disports itself among the many hygiene crazes, the medical and medicinal fads, fancies and follies of the moment. It reveals the impulse in our present-day social world, of the modern medical specialist, and its story works out the slow deliverance of two souls, by varied developments among cosmopolitan scenes from the pitfall delusions and deceits of our lifelong race after health. It bears the strange title, "The New Religion, a Modern Novel."

Among the fall books will be a two-volume work called "Queens of Beauty and their Romances." It is written by W. Wilmott Dixon, and relates the histories of some of the most beautiful and witty Englishwomen, beginning with Lucy Hutchinson and ending with the Sisters Bermingham, including Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, the Lindleys, the Sheridans, the Berrys, Mary Bellenden and Molly Lepel, the Beautiful Gunnings, Lady Charlotte Bury and Mrs. Morgan. The interest of the work is greatly enhanced by the introduction of a series of portraits.

A. M. Kirby, recognized as one of the leading American authorities on daffodils, has written a history of the daffodil family with many suggestions as to where and how to grow them. The most charming and earliest of the larger flowered spring bulbs—the Lenten lilies, which "take the winds of March with beauty"—are gaining rapidly in popular estimation. The author has had a life experience with bulbs of all kinds, and grown what is probably the most complete collection of daffodils in America, and has made a hobby of studying them. This is the first book of its kind dealing with American conditions.

To the list of titled English authors must now be added the name of Lady Tennant, whose first book, to be published this autumn, embodies a novel idea. The author's husband, Sir Edward Tennant, is a famous collector of pictures and owns one of the finest private galleries in England. Lady Tennant has embodied a description of these pictures in a sort of fairy tale which she has made to include the story of each historical event depicted. The book was written originally for her children. Sir Edward has shown his interest in the work by giving the publishers permission for the first time to photograph the majority of the pictures, a number of which are to be reproduced in color.

A new edition of W. W. Vernon's "Readings on the Purgatorio of Dante" will make accessible in a revised form a work that has for some time been out of print. Mr. Vernon's Readings are recognized as among the most useful of all books to the Dante student. Practically they take the form of lectures, and include the complete text with an English prose translation in parallel columns, accompanied by a running commentary which is based largely on the famous Latin lectures of the medieval scholar, Benvenuto da Imola. The new edition will be published in two volumes, uniform with the two volumes of the "Readings on the Inferno" and will be followed in the near future by "Readings on the Paradiso."

Almost simultaneously with the completion of Dr. Henry Charles Lea's "History of the Inquisition of Spain," the Macmillan Company announces a new edition of the same author's "History of Sacerdotal Celibacy in the Christian Church." This well-known work on a subject which has had so little influence in shaping the course of European religious and political development, has been out of print for a number of years. The demand for a new edition has led the author to revise it in the light of the most recent historical research, and in its enlarged form it will doubtless continue to occupy the place which it has so long held as an authoritative, impartial account of a matter which has affected so largely the destinies of Christendom.

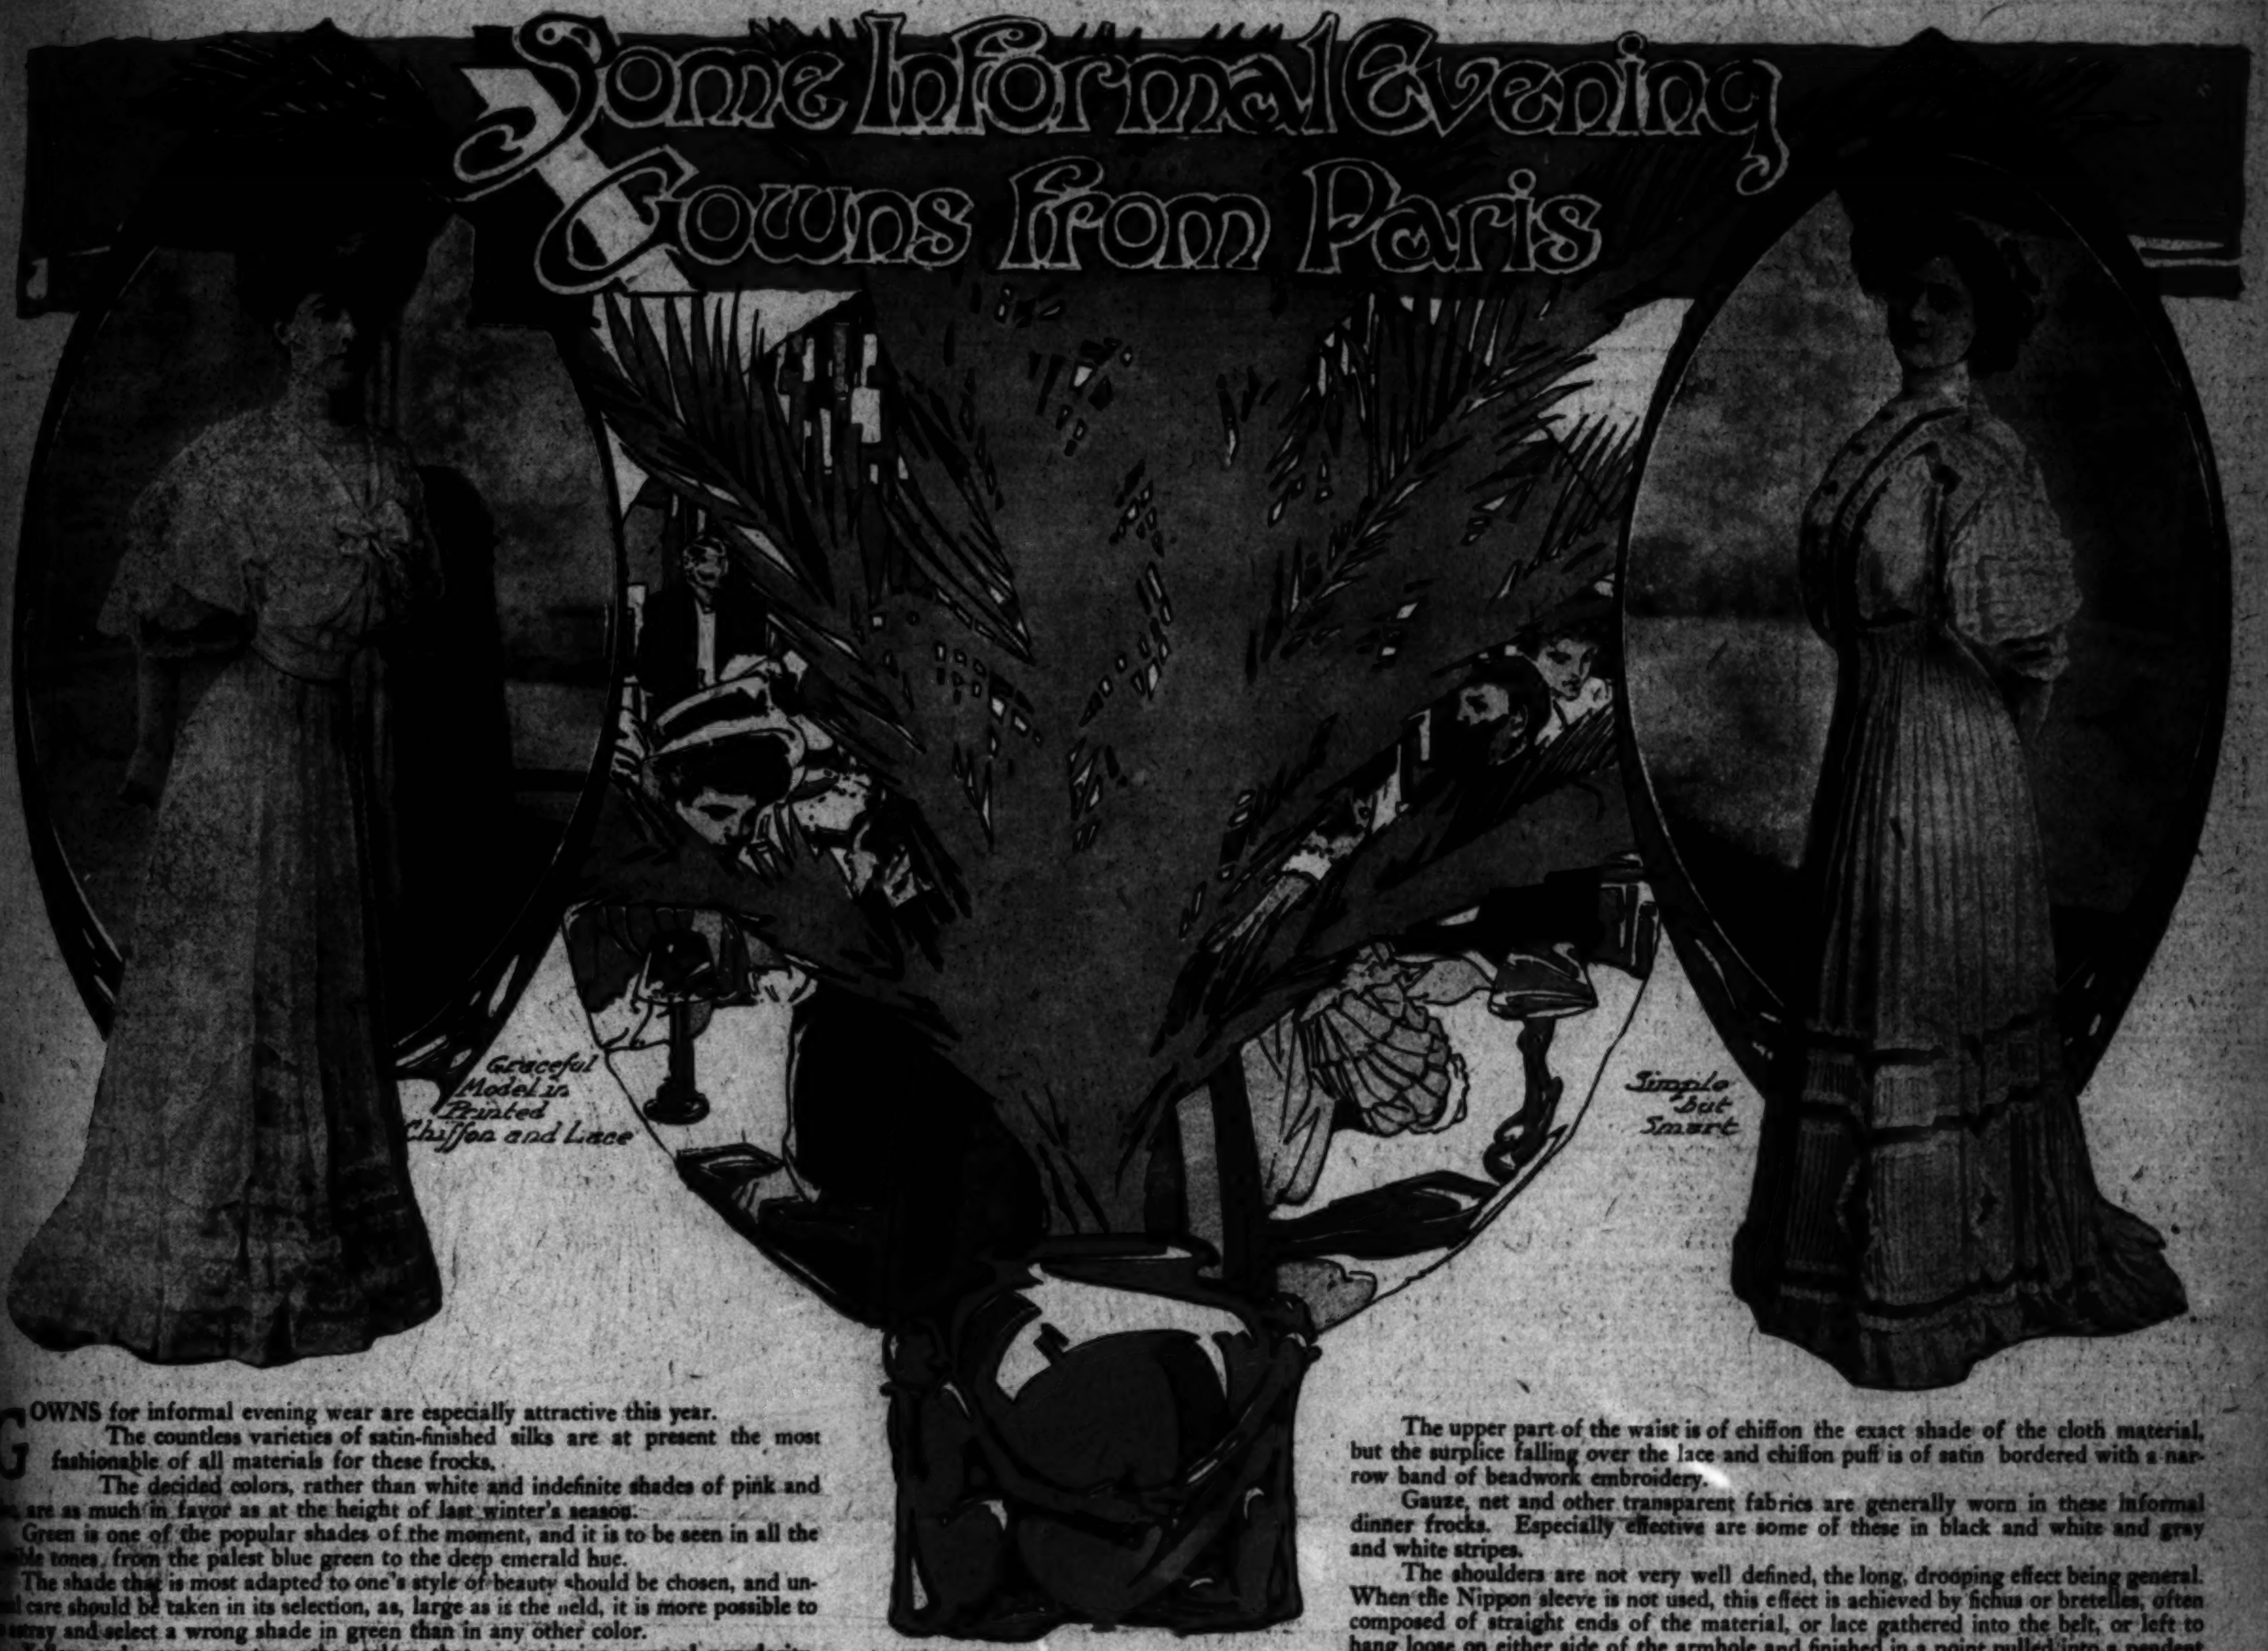
Some Informal Evening Gowns from Paris



Graceful Model in Printed Chiffon and Lace

Simple but Smart

GOWNS for informal evening wear are especially attractive this year.

The countless varieties of satin-finished silks are at present the most fashionable of all materials for these frocks.

The decided colors, rather than white and indefinite shades of pink and lilac, are as much in favor as at the height of last winter's season.

Green is one of the popular shades of the moment, and it is to be seen in all the possible tones, from the palest blue green to the deep emerald hue.

The shade that is most adapted to one's style of beauty should be chosen, and unusual care should be taken in its selection, as, large as is the field, it is more possible to go astray and select a wrong shade in green than in any other color.

Yellow and mauve are two other colors that are enjoying unusual popularity, but the latter, while so much in demand for afternoon costumes, is not a good evening shade.

Most of the informal dinner gowns shown are embellished with beadwork. embroidery and lace embroidery, with tiny balls and crystals of fine glass, and, while expensive, a very little of it will give a very distinctive tone to a frock.

There is a style of gown made up in a soft silk that is just now extremely smart, and for its effect depends mainly upon its simplicity. The skirt is long and graceful, but untrimmed, being swung from a tightly draped Empire belt, that is carried down unusually far in the front—that is, for an Empire model—while in the back the line is in no way exaggerated.

The upper part of the waist is of chiffon the exact shade of the cloth material, but the surplice falling over the lace and chiffon puff is of satin bordered with a narrow band of beadwork embroidery.

Gauze, net and other transparent fabrics are generally worn in these informal dinner frocks. Especially effective are some of these in black and white and gray and white stripes.

The shoulders are not very well defined, the long, drooping effect being general. When the Nippon sleeve is not used, this effect is achieved by fichus or bretelles, often composed of straight ends of the material, or lace gathered into the belt, or left to hang loose on either side of the armhole and finished in a point pulled into a pendent tassel or pampille.

In fact, all dangling ornaments—tassels, big and little; pampilles and ribbons and lace knotted in the form of tassels—make the finishing touches of many of these costumes.

Ribbon, principally the pompadour design, is utilized for many purposes. It trims the foot of gauze or taffeta gowns, and, in case of the former, is often introduced beneath the transparent material. It also serves as fichus, scarfs and bretelles.

There will be a great choice of printed cloths—the thousand-stripe cloths on backgrounds of Maryland and olive being the most prominent of all.

BOOKS THAT COUNT

FICTION PANCOAST

I WISH I had room on the page for the interesting and helpful letters I have received concerning the Reading Chapter. I am quite sure they would be very much better worth reading and pondering than my own remarks on the subject.

However, if I cannot yield all the space at my command to these letters, I can yet quote from them freely enough to give the girls interested in reading a fair idea of what other girls are thinking along the same line.

Two of the letters I have had I mean to put in the place of prominence today because the writers differ so entirely in their views. I would like to know what the other girls think on the subject.

One is a college graduate, the other is entering college, and I would be interested to learn the girls' opinions as to which is which, as well as to hear from them which style of reading appears to them the more commendable.

Here is the first letter:

May I say a word on the reading question? It seems to me that when one considers the enormous volume of that mythical library of books "with which every well-educated person is familiar," one may well stand appalled at the task before him, or her.

There is, however, only one thing to do—abjure unnecessary work. By unnecessary, I mean the work which amuses without instructing, or instructs without beautifying the mind.

A modern novel may be more of a classic than an ancient Greek essay, but it is not likely. Get into the habit, when you enter a large library, of turning naturally to the shelves marked "Sociology," "Philosophy," "Biography," above all "Literature," rather than to the inevitable fiction.

If you must read fiction, read Thackeray seven times rather than some modern vaudeville once.

It is no shame to read a good book many times, any more than it is to meet a good friend more than once.

Our girls do not need to be given lists of the "six best sellers"; they need to be taught that psychology is more absorbing than trashy fiction, and that political economy is more vital than ancient romance.

They need, too, to know the "unread Americans." How many girls who can glibly quote "Evangeline" recognize even the names of "William Wilson" or "The Man in the Crowd"? Let them know and love Emerson, Thoreau, George, Whitman, Hawthorne; above all, for original genius, Poe.

I am not myself a believer in systematic reading. Given a good foundation, "love will find out a way." The greatest readers are desultory ones.

For myself, sometimes I become interested in an author by mere accident. I read everything he has written, read biographies of him, read about his friends; in short, read him to death, and then turn to another author.

If any member wishes to know of books relating to any standard author or along one of the following lines: Political economy, English poetry, philosophy, Darwinism, English literary movements or psychology, I shall be glad to help her to the best of my ability, if she will send to Mrs. Herrick for my address. There are several abler than I to help the systematic reader; let me be of service to the desultory one!

LAMIA (Philadelphia).

I wish I could have given the entire letter. Some time I may print other parts of it. But I must leave space to quote from my other writer. She starts out boldly with her confession of faith:

I am a crank on systematic reading, and believe that one never does read until she reads systematically.

Needless to say, if one knows nothing of literature, it is desirable to get, first of all, a bird's-eye view, chronologically arranged, of the whole field.

For this purpose, I know of no better method than to get some good outline of English literature and follow its study lists of reading—a little Chaucer, a little Spenser, a little of "immortal Willy," a little of Milton, and enough English history all along as shall serve to throw light on manners, customs, periods.

Pancoast's "Introduction to English Literature" is excellent for this purpose. It is very complete, interesting in style, generally fair in its estimates, and, as it is used extensively in school, can be purchased cheaply at second-hand stores, its cost now being, I think, only $1.10.

Green's "Short History of the English People" needs no commendation of mine. It, too, can be procured cheaply, and is best to use for the historical side of this work.

For those students who are better read, nothing is more fascinating than the study of the developments of our various literary structures.

I thrill with delight when I recall the pleasure with which I pursued the first course of this kind I had ever followed, a course on the English novel, using "The English Novel," by Cross, as an outline. Of equal interest, perhaps, is a course on the essay, and the drama also affords an interesting form for study.

One other method I have tried and enjoyed, and this I recommend to those who either desire to work more intensively or to those who dread to tackle a long list of books.

Select some well-known author, poet, novelist or dramatist. Read his works in connection with the text of some complete and careful biography.

For instance, say Byron. Take Moore's "Life of Byron" and read that portion relating to his childhood and early school days. In the light of this, read "Hours of Idleness," and so forth, through the book. At the end you will have read Byron or Tennyson or Browning, as the case may be, complete. More than that, you will have a distinct personal touch with almost every poem.

As the natural result of such a course of reading, one reads the works of contemporary writers, the friends or enemies of one's original study.

She cannot read the letters of Byron without getting a personal acquaintance with Shelley, Moore, Sheridan, Rogers, Hunt and Keats, and a desire to read their writings. This method of reading will, I believe, be found one of the most conducive to "more-ness."

If there should be any whom I could help by more detailed information, I would be glad to do so.

L. C. L. (Philadelphia).

Do you wonder that I felt proud when I read those letters and knew that there were girls like that in Each and All?

I don't believe they themselves appreciate the help it is to me to know that I can turn to them for suggestions for the courses some of the girls may want.

Another girl, a college graduate, too, [illegible] of reading on English and American history [illegible] hold for those who desire them.

As I said at the beginning of this talk, I [illegible] opinion of the girls on the two plans [illegible] my two friends.

One point they at least have in common, [illegible] is of settling upon the works of one man and [illegible] all they can about him, his surroundings, [illegible] his circumstances.

That is a plan I have myself pursued for [illegible] I know of few ways more satisfactory for [illegible] really acquainted, not only with the writings of [illegible] man, but with the man himself.

I have printed these letters at such length [illegible] because they are sure to interest the girls who [illegible] care for reading, and also because they will [illegible] whole new field of thought to those girls who [illegible] improve themselves, to widen their field of [illegible] and of information, and are yet in doubt [illegible] about it.

With no intention of criticism of "Lamia" [illegible] or of differing from her in her assertion that [illegible] read are the desultory readers, I yet think that [illegible] statement applies chiefly to those who already [illegible] and love books and have the habit of reading.

Those who have not will find the guide [illegible] leads them in a rather straight path a good [illegible] When they have once learned how to read with [illegible] joyment and profit they will wander far and [illegible] and high and low, as suits their tastes.

THE LIGHTER SIDE

But many grown women do not belong to [illegible] families. I myself have known houses where I [illegible] not believe three books were read from one [illegible] end to the other, and in still more homes the [illegible] reading is newspapers, paper-covered fiction and [illegible] lightest sort of story books from a library.

The cheap magazines often furnish good [illegible] matter, but I wonder how many girls read the [illegible] tive articles compared with the number who [illegible] the stories.

Not that I mean to make light of stories [illegible] fiction in any shape. If one is reading only for [illegible] ment, it makes little difference what one [illegible] long as the stuff is clean and harmless.

But if one has a higher end in view, it is [illegible] to know how to direct one's course in order to [illegible] one's aim. And that is what I hope our [illegible] Chapter is going to help our girls to do.

One word more. Many of you [illegible] not yet in Each and All who could help the [illegible] Chapter, as well as other branches of our [illegible] their judgment and counsel.

Will you not try to bring them in? And [illegible] such outsiders see this, will they not come in [illegible] selves to help us and give us the chance to [illegible] if we can?

Christine Terhune

P. S.—Every mail brings a host of letters [illegible] or the other (or both) of these two questions: [illegible] I address your letters?" or "How can I get a [illegible]

Address all letters to me, in care of the [illegible] you see our page, inclosing a stamped, [illegible] envelope, if you wish a personal answer.

For the badge—send [illegible] cents in stamps, [illegible] ter or money order, made payable to me, and [illegible] to me in care of this newspaper.

WHAT THE WORKERS ARE DOING

THE girls interested in our Reading Chapter are so many now that I am printing parts of some of their letters today in the hope that those possessing common interests may get in touch with one another and form circles in reading the same books:

History and Fiction

I am a great reader. The books I like the best are history and fiction. I pledge myself to read fifteen minutes or more every day. L. E. A. (Hollister, Mass.).

Books on Gardening

I should like to belong to the Reading Chapter, and for a course of reading prefer books relating to gardening, both flowers and vegetables. If there are any members with like interests, I should like to exchange ideas with them. E. A. C. (Portland, Maine).

Recommends Books and Suggestions

I am going to tell you the names of a few of the books I have enjoyed, as perhaps some of the girls might care to hear of them. "The Castaway" is the life of Lord Byron, and I think it a splendid book. "The Gray Cloak," by Harold McGrath; "Blindfolded" and "Nedra," "The Day of the Dog" and "Cowardice Court," by George Barr McCutcheon, are all favorites of mine. There is just one more I would like to name; it is "Lavender and Old Lace," by Myrtle Reed. It is a sweet, dear book, and has a probable plot, too.

I have little time to spare, but while I nurse baby and occasionally in the evening I find a few minutes to read. I wonder if your girls could suggest some good books.

I am such a bookworm that I have almost ruined my eyes. I read almost everything. It is very hard for me to get to the Public Library, as baby is very heavy and is more than I can manage, so I read all and everything I can get otherwise. I take several magazines and a newspaper. E. B. H. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

Who Will Suggest Reading for Her?

May I become a member of your reading circle? I am a junior at High School and spend all my vacation at Long Beach, Cal., where I have nothing to do most of the time but read and rest. I hardly know what line of reading I want to take up. I enjoy good novels, especially historical ones, and all kinds of biography. A. M. C. (Corona, Cal.).

She Wants Deeper Fiction

I am very anxious to join the Reading Chapter. I wish to read books by Hugo, Lytton, etc., and hope to tackle more serious ones in time. I also wish to study the works of our best poets, for I love poetry. In fact, I suppose one would classify my list under "more serious fiction," or better still, "deeper fiction." I am now reading "Les Miserables"; it is certainly a great work.

I am so tired of the so-called popular novels of the day. They are empty, shallow, and, apart from being entertaining for the time, nothing more can be said for them, while a great many of them, in my opinion, are far from elevating. There are millions of books that are glorious, and which we are better for having read, and I would be more than glad of any suggestions in this line.

I pledge myself to read at least fifteen minutes every day, unless, of course, sickness interferes; the pledge to go into effect tonight. E. P. D. (Aspinwall, Pa.).

A Good Way to Make Time

Your little talk a short time ago on snatching moments in which to read came to my memory when I found myself with a book in one hand, while I stirred the oatmeal for breakfast with the other! That gives me a few minutes a day, and I try to do much more in all the spare moments I have. SHEILA (Somerville, Mass.).

A Book on China

For the benefit of any one of the club who is interested in reading about China, I wish to say that she will find "Alone in China," by Julian Ralph, one of the most interesting books on the subject. A. J. McC. (Roxbury, Mass.).

Books That Have Helped Her

I am very much interested in the Reading Chapter, and would like to be a member. Although very fond of reading, I have not read much; but among the books that have helped me are, first, the Bible; then, "Put Yourself in His Place," "In His Steps," "Intra Muros; or, A Dream of Heaven," and "The Master Christian." ELLEN (Los Angeles, Cal.).

A Book She Likes

You ask the girls to write and tell you of good books they have read. One book in particular which I wish to speak about is "Near to Nature's Heart," by E. P. Roe. It is a love story, and very interesting, indeed. I wish to join the Reading Chapter. I always put in fifteen minutes a day reading in the evening. NOD (McKeesport, Pa.).

Interested in Nature Books

I want to join your Reading Chapter. So far, since I left High School, I have done no systematic reading. I wish you could let me have a list of books on nature—the habits of birds and wild animals; how to know trees, herbs and flowers. They need not be too simple.

My husband and I often take walks in the fields and woods around here, and I want to know more about the things we see. My course in High School included none of the natural sciences, and I have no knowledge of botany or zoology, except what little I have picked up.

As I shall have to buy the books, and my pennies and dollars are all needed for other things for some time to come, I could not promise to read fifteen minutes a day each day for a little while. As to reading books over and over again, it is one of the joys of life.

For some years now, Henry Seton Merriman has been my favorite author. Except the two latest books he wrote, I cannot count the number of times I have read his stories. Kipling, too, has helped many a lonely hour with his inimitable stories. I never did like any poetry except Shakespeare's. Mrs. J. R. S. (Lonsdale, R. I.).

The History of Our Country

I wish to join the Reading Club. I enjoy historical novels, and think the history of our country is most profitable for me. B. M. V. (Philadelphia).

History and Biography

I am very fond of reading, and do a great deal of it. I am much interested in history and in autobiography, and, of course, in biography as well. I have just been reading Senator Hoar's "Autobiography of Seventy Years," and I promise a treat to any one who will read it or the "Memoirs of Von Hohenlohe."

I have lately read John D. Wise's "Recollections of Thirteen Presidents," which I enjoyed very much. I would like to join the Reading Chapter. I read fiction, also, as well as current magazines. EDNA S. R. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

From the foregoing letters can be gained a slight idea of how widespread is the interest in our Reading Chapter, and how varied are the literary preferences of its members. I hope these letters may establish associations of pleasure and profit for all our book-lovers.

Another Ranch Girl

I am interested in burnt wood work. I have no outfit, but I am trying to find out a little about pyrography before I do any of it. I am making a sofa pillow now embroidered with the California poppy, the state flower.

If any girl is interested in fancy work I would exchange it for something else in that line. I am on a ranch. I do much of the housekeeping and have many recipes if any girl would like to exchange. I would like to hear from some of the girls who are interested in the same line of work as I. M. S. (Pomona, Cal.).

Our ranch girls never have to wait long for correspondents. Plenty of girls are eager to write to them.

Exchange Wanted

I would like some pieces of silk lace if any of the girls have any, and I will make other things in return. I will send some good books to the shut-ins. G. S. (Fall River, Mass.).

Has any one silk lace she wishes to exchange?

Gives Silk Pieces; Wishes Children's Songs

I am a dressmaker and support myself and my little daughter by my work, so you know I must be very busy all the time, but I shall find time to help the members if what I do interests any of them.

I can send silk or calico pieces for quilts, or samples of drawn work (I can do almost all kinds of embroidery), and I would also like to exchange postcards. No doubt there are other little things I shall be able to help with as I learn to know the members. Perhaps I could help some one with dressmaking, but as it is a difficult thing to write about I am not sure.

I also play the piano, but not well enough to help any one. I wish some one would tell me the name of some children's songs.

My little daughter is only 4½, but she has a remarkable voice for a child. NATICK GIRL (Natick, Mass.).

The offer of pieces will be welcome, as it always is, and I hope that the children's songs may be forthcoming in return.

Two Esperantists

I am studying Esperanto, and shall be glad to help other students by correspondence or by supplying missing lessons. I have them all and can make as many written copies as are requested, if postage is paid.

If any of the members will write to me I will answer. Any subject will interest me, and that of "young mothers" especially. I shall be glad to help in any way. Mrs. G. M. K. (Woonsocket, R. I.).

Please enter my name on the page as one who wishes to correspond in Esperanto with others who are interested in the international language. Mrs. MARY R. C. (West Philadelphia).

I hope both these members may find Esperanto correspondents in Each and All. We have a number and hope for more.

A Friendly Offer

If any of the girls come to Phoenix I will be glad to help them all I can. It is very lonely to come to a strange town, where everybody simply stares at you. R. C. (Phoenix, Ariz.).

I do not know how many of our girls may be able to accept this kindly invitation, but it is quite possible it may help some of them.

Another Favorite Verse

Here is a little verse which I think excellent. Perhaps some time you may find space on the page for it:

Life is only bright when it proceedeth
Towards a truer, deeper life above;
Human love is sweetest when it leadeth
To a more divine and perfect love.

L. B. J. (Shamokin, Pa.).

I am always glad to put the girls' favorites on the page, when I have space for them. I wish I received them more frequently.

OBJECTS AND AIMS OF EACH AND ALL

PERHAPS some of you, seeing this page for the first time, wonder just what the Each and All Society really is; what there is about its aims and objects to create so widespread an interest among "young girls of all ages."

The society was founded in February, 1905, with Christine Terhune Herrick for its president, and with an almost instant membership of girls in nearly every state in the Union and in Canada.

Its object is to help girls help themselves by developing their talents into something the world wants; to solve difficult problems—the sort a girl wants a calm, unbiased, out-of-the-family opinion upon—and to promote the exchange of general help.

Any girl may belong. There is no red tape about it. The sending of your name for membership gives you the range of every opportunity the society boasts. And Mrs. Herrick stands ready to welcome, to advise and to help.

Another Helpful Dressmaker

I am a dressmaker and would be pleased to send paper patterns to any member wishing them.

I wish to suggest a dainty way to send pressed flowers in a letter. Take the flowers (from one to ten, according to size), press in a book until they lie flat, then take a piece of white paper and put on it the same perfume as that of the flowers, fold the flowers in the paper and send in the letter.

I am 38 years old, but I am not an old maid; I am a bachelor girl. I can make the bachelor girl shirtwaist, the latest craze of the season. NOD (McKeesport, Pa.).

We have many "bachelor girls" in Each and All. Perish the thought that any one could call them old maids!

An Each and All Pennant

A club pennant was mentioned on today's page. I have been thinking of making one of blue felt and putting "E and A" on it in letters of yellow felt, the same as any club or school pennant. What do you think of it? EDNA S. R. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

I think well of it. Why shouldn't we have a pennant? Are there any other suggestions on the subject?

EACH AND ALL

GO IN and do the best you can,
Nor waste your time in sighing;
The mind's the measure of the man,
And strength is born of trying.
And though you meet a sad reverse,
The world is still your debtor;
'Tis only that some do things worse,
That some can do them better.

There is a place for one and all;
Each has his given powers.
Think what a sorry hush would fall
Upon this world of ours
If all the birds in all the vales
That now with songs are ringing,
Because they are not nightingales
Should cease their joyous singing!

This life's a game of crack the whip,
And every man must play it.
Some strange force keeps us on the skip;
There is no way to stay it.
If you can't be the leader bold,
Why, you can be the lummox
Who at the lash's end is rolled Heels over head, "Kerflummux!"
—Nixon Waterman.

(Sent by Lamia, Philadelphia.)

CORESPONDENCE AND POSTCARD EXCHAN

ADDRESSES of correspondents and postcard collectors will be given only to other members of Each and All. In order to secure these, the signature and place of residence as given on the page should be sent to me, accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope for reply.

I hope to be able to exchange cards with all members who wish cards from California. To any one who wishes I can send leather cards for pillow tops. Mrs. J. J. T. (San Francisco, Cal.).

I would like a few correspondents, married girls with babies. We would be more interested in each other. RUBY'S MAMMA (Everett, Mass.).

I would like to hear from girls who do their own sewing. I am particularly interested in postcards, and I am trying to make a collection. I would like views of the western and southern states and foreign countries. DOT (Portsmouth, N. H.).

I would like to receive leather postals, as I am making a collection for a pillow. I would willingly exchange fancy work patterns for shirtwaists, collar and cuff sets. I have also many doilies and a hat pattern. These are in shadow work or solid. I am 16 years of age, and would like to correspond with the girls my age. L. M. F. (Lehighton, Pa.).

I would exchange historical views of Virginia and Jamestown Exposition postals with any of the members for leather postals. Mrs. J. E. B. (Buxton P. O., Va.).

As I have received a number of cards from girls in my own country, I would like very much to receive postals from foreign countries, and also from girls anywhere about my own age, between 18 and 19 years old. The ones I have already received are from younger girls. Of course, however, they are acceptable, and I think a great deal of them. E. B. G. (Everett, Mass.).

I am very anxious to collect view postcards from each state in the Union. I do not care for the leather or comic cards. Mrs. C. G. (Boston, Mass.).

I should like to correspond with girls under 17, but will exchange postals with any one outside of the state of Massachusetts. A SCHOOLGIRL (Beachmont, Mass.).

I can exchange some lively letters with the "rainy-day members," as I call the troubled souls that never smile. But I am especially interested in the members from California, as I expect soon to go to that state. I would be very glad to exchange letters and postal cards with any member. Mrs. L. M. W. (Millville, N. J.).

I am an invalid, and use a wheel-chair for the street, having been lame for several years. I am 24 years old, and would be pleased to have one or two correspondents in my own city for the exchange of letters and postal cards. J. M. T. (New Bedford, Mass.).

I am 14 years old, and very fond of music. I would like very much to exchange postcards. M. H. (Meyersdale, Pa.).

I am not talented in any special line, but can do a little of everything—paint, play the piano, do embroidery, skate and dance. I am very fond of beautiful scenery, and have traveled quite a bit in Canada and the middle Atlantic states. I would like my name on the correspondence and postcard exchange, and will answer all letters and exchange cards. Mrs. W. H. M. (York, Pa.).

I would like to correspond and exchange postals. I can send scenes of Nogales, Ariz., as we live on the boundary line. C. E. N. (Nogales, Ariz.).

Please enter my name in the Postcard Exchange for foreign and domestic cards. I prefer pretty scenery and views of public buildings. A. M. L. (The Palms, Cal.).

I am 17 years old, and would like to correspond or exchange postcards with girls of about my own age. C. H. (Plymouth, Mass.).

I would like to exchange postcards. I like scenery and leather postals—in fact, all kinds. I would like to get some from western and southern girls, and will answer all I receive.

I am taking Graham's shorthand, and will be glad to help any one as far as I can. L. B. (Du Bois, Pa.).

I am one of the barred-out (deaf), and would be pleased to exchange postcards with members from all the states. ANTOINETTE (Los Angeles, Cal.).

I would like to exchange postals with girls in New York, Philadelphia and foreign countries. I am in very delicate health, and this dear Each and All Society will give me something to think of. C. A. A. (Seattle, Wash.).

I am a "postal fiend," and am trying to get enough postal cards for a cushion and album—leather or paper—and so I wish either cards. All favors will be promptly returned. I would like to correspond with girls in Europe, especially in France. M. H. (Kittanning, Pa.).

I am 20 years old, and would like to exchange postal cards with American girls in the western and southern states. I would like to correspond with at least one girl from every state. I am studying to be a stenographer. BELLE (Salem, Mass.).

I would like to enter the Postcard Exchange and exchange cards with some girls of my age—16. E. C. (Howard, Pa.).

I am 15 years old, and can do plain cooking and housework. I am interested in sewing, but can do very little in fancy work. ANXIOUS (Shamokin, Pa.).

I am very good at making sofa pillows and all kinds of fancy work, and would exchange some patterns with some of the girls.

I would also like to exchange postcards and correspond with any girl outside my state who is my age, which is 16. H. C. (Nashua, N. H.).

I am a telephone operator in a suburban exchange just outside of Boston, and I would be pleased to hear from other operators. I would also like to have my name on the Postcard Exchange. ARRAWANNAH (Jamaica Plain, Mass.).

Bert Morgan

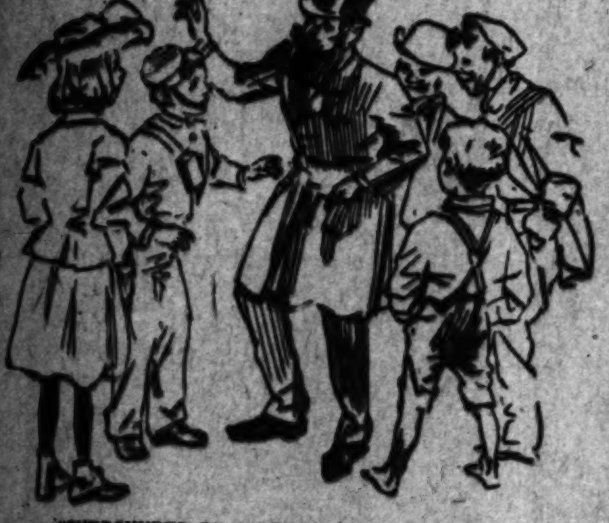
AS BERT and Wellie drew nearer they could see from the wild gestures that the man must be at his wits' end.

"Guess he's crazy!" muttered Wellie.

Without replying, Bert darted forward, pushed his way through the crowd and greeted the stranger in French.



"SURROUNDED BY A GRINNING AUDIENCE."

The poor Frenchman, upon hearing these words spoken in his native tongue, threw his arms around Bert and burst forth into exclamations of joy, much to the delight of the bellboys and others surrounding the two.

But after he had succeeded in calming the Frenchman to some degree, [illegible] learned that he had been endeavoring to get some boy to call a carriage and to tell him the location of his hotel. He had strayed from the hotel and had been unable to find the way back.

When Bert called a carriage, he insisted that the lad accompany him, and as soon as he learned that Wellie was with Bert, he invited him also.

All the way to the hotel the Frenchman talked volubly, and continued his conversation even after they had reached their destination.

Finally he handed Bert what looked like a slip of paper and shook his hand heartily in farewell. Then he went over to where the astonished Wellie was sitting and also shook hands with him, smiling pleasantly [illegible].

Once outside the hotel, Wellie fired a volley of questions at Bert!

"Say, how do you happen to know French? What does the old geezer want? How did you charm him?"

"Hold on; one at a time, please," replied Bert, smiling.

"I picked up French while at school," he explained; "you see, I read and studied quite a great deal.

"The Frenchman's name is Dubois—Professor Dubois. He's a scientist and [illegible], and is shortly going to make a trip to South America to continue his research. He is in England [illegible] arrangements for certain supplies and scientific instruments. It will be some time before all of these goods can be secured by the [illegible], so, in the meantime, he's going to do a little mountain climbing in Switzerland."

"Well, what else?" demanded Wellie, for Bert was grinning in a way that made it apparent he still had something of importance to tell.

"That's a secret, my boy. We've both got jobs!"

"Hurray for you!" cried Wellie, enthusiastically clapping his friend on the back.

"Yes," continued Bert, "he wants us to go with him to South America as assistants, and he thinks that in the meantime we'd better come along with him to Switzerland. Of course, I accepted the job, and I told him I knew you would, too."

"Would I! Well, I guess. Bert Moran, you're a peach!" And Wellie turned a series of handsprings down the street.

"He gave us our month's salary in advance, and here's your share," continued Bert, handing Wellie "what was equal to $16 in United States money," as Wellie termed it.

The lad weakly grasped the roll of bills. Then he sat suddenly down on a doorstep.

"Well, I'm jiggered!" at last he managed to stammer. "I never had so much money before in my life!"

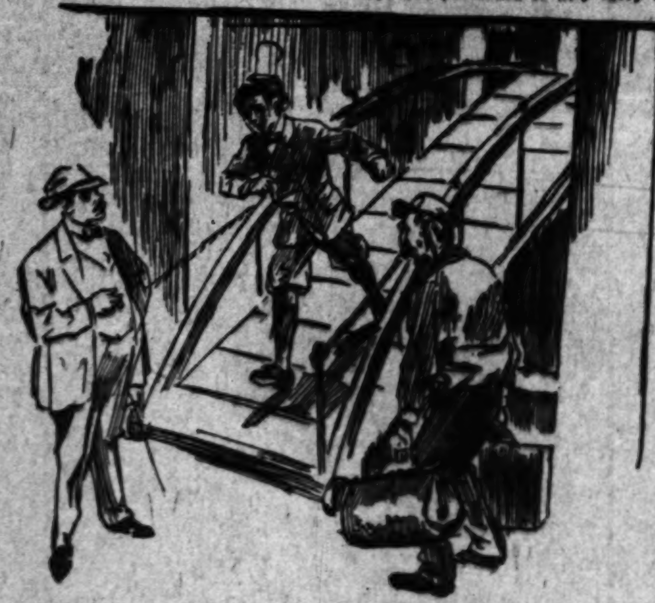
"Come on, let's get something to eat," said Bert, realizing with joy that for almost the first time in his life he was genuinely hungry.

They selected a small but clean restaurant and enjoyed what Bert thought was the best meal he had ever eaten. Wellie was still most too overcome by the surprise of their good fortune to say much, but he proved conclusively that he was possessed of a hearty appetite.

Bert told Wellie that "le professeur" had engaged rooms for them at the hotel, so when they had sauntered around for a time they retraced their steps to the hotel. Here they dined sumptuously. After dinner Professor Dubois engaged in conversation for several hours with Bert. Already he seemed to show a great fondness for the lad, and freely discussed with Bert many of his plans.

On the morrow the party left for France, and from there they traveled to Switzerland.

Could Mr. Morgan have seen his son now, during days spent in strenuous mountain climbing, he would no longer have thought the lad was afflicted with a weak heart or was at all sickly.



"RUSHED DOWN THE GANGPLANK."

Just as their time in Switzerland was drawing to a close, Professor Dubois decided to explore the Mer de Glace glacier.

As they approached it, from a distance it looked like a great, smooth river of snow, flowing down toward the valley. As they drew nearer, however, numerous rocks and fissures could be seen, and places where the ice rose in humps and ridges.

A heavy snow had fallen recently, and the guide warned all to be very careful about venturing out upon the ice. They were not roped together, inasmuch as the professor had declared his intention of not going upon the ice at all.

The guide was relating tales to the lads about the glacier, when suddenly there came a great crash and crackle of ice; and an immense ice cake with irregular, jagged edges thrust itself high above the surrounding surface. But this was not the main reason for their astonishment. Not a sign was there of the professor!

In spite of a careful search and loud shouting he was not to be found. The guide shook his head hopelessly.

"He must surely have wandered out upon the dangerous ice. When the ice broke and that great crack yawned I fear he fell into it. If so, there is no hope," said he.

The boys could not but agree with the guide. Sadly they returned to the hotel.

Among the professor's effects they found the address of his lawyer. To him they wired of the professor's death, and then journeyed to Paris to place in his hands what belongings the professor had taken to Switzerland.

"Again we're out of a job," said Wellie, as they came from the lawyer's office.

"Yes, this one didn't last long. Poor old professor!" sadly muttered Bert.

"He was a nice old codger!" was Wellie's sympathetic response.

Wellie had nearly all his money in a wallet when he left the hotel in Switzerland, and in some way the wallet had found its way into a valise. Unfortunately, the valise had been lost on the way to Paris. Still Bert had about $16, and with some of this they could reach England, where Wellie was sure they could find employment on some of the ships where he was acquainted.

They arrived at the steamship office. Bert reached his hand in his pocket and then drew it forth with a worried expression. After hurriedly looking in another pocket his anxiety increased. Then he frantically searched every pocket. The money was not there!

"Can't find it!" he announced to Wellie.

The other pursed his lips ruefully. But nothing worried Wellie very long.

"We've simply got to get on board a boat, somehow," said he.

Suddenly he clutched Bert by the arm. "Here comes a party of English tourists with more luggage than they can manage. Grab one of their valises and take it on board for them. Then hide when you get there!"

Bert and Wellie walked swiftly up to the party of travelers, touched their caps and proceeded to help carry the baggage on board. No one accosted them. Once on the ship, they hastily hid.

After a while the boat started off and the commotion subsided. Bert and Wellie had been unable to get together, but both were hidden behind great boxes.

They had not proceeded far when Wellie was discovered, dragged forth and put to work under the steward. Bert still remained huddled behind his box. The passage was rough and Bert was tired and hungry when they arrived at Liverpool.

As the boat was made fast Bert heard a step approaching. A moment later the box was moved. He darted swiftly out from his hiding place and ran for the gangplank. To his surprise and great joy, as he raced down the plank he found Wellie by his side, likewise running for dear life.

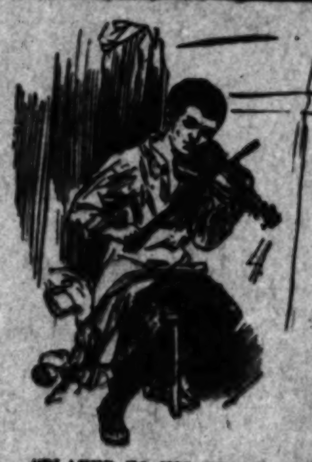
Giovanni



"PLAYED TO HIS HEART'S CONTENT."

A GRAND French nobleman was once traveling quietly through Italy, accompanied only by his secretary.

Stopping at a village to change horses, they were at once surrounded by a troop of ragged urchins. One, much cleaner than the others, and fairly neat, played a violin while the others danced.

After dispensing a few coins, the chaise proceeded on its way. It had gone some distance when the horses were thrown back on their haunches, and the driver, with an excited shout, lashed out with his long whip.

"There's a brigand on behind the chaise!" he explained to the French nobleman.

The "brigand" was found to be Giovanni, the little lad who played upon the violin. He begged and pleaded for the "signor" to take him to France, where he might learn to be a great musician.

Greatly amused, the nobleman permitted Giovanni to accompany him, and, when they arrived at Paris, secured a position for him in the kitchen of a friend.

One day the master of the house invited a number of guests to a banquet. As they dined there came through the open window the sweet strains of a violin.

Charmed with the music, a servant was sent to fetch the musician. Giovanni was dragged before the company and commanded to play.

"Who ever taught you to play, my lad?" asked a celebrated count.

"No one," replied the boy.

The count was astonished. He asked Giovanni's master to permit him to see that the boy received musical instruction.

Not many years passed before Giovanni realized his ambition and became one of the most noted musicians of the day.

A Dog Hero

A VESSEL was once driven upon the coast of England. The sea was very high and there was no possible way to put a boat off to rescue the men, who could be seen clinging to the wreck.

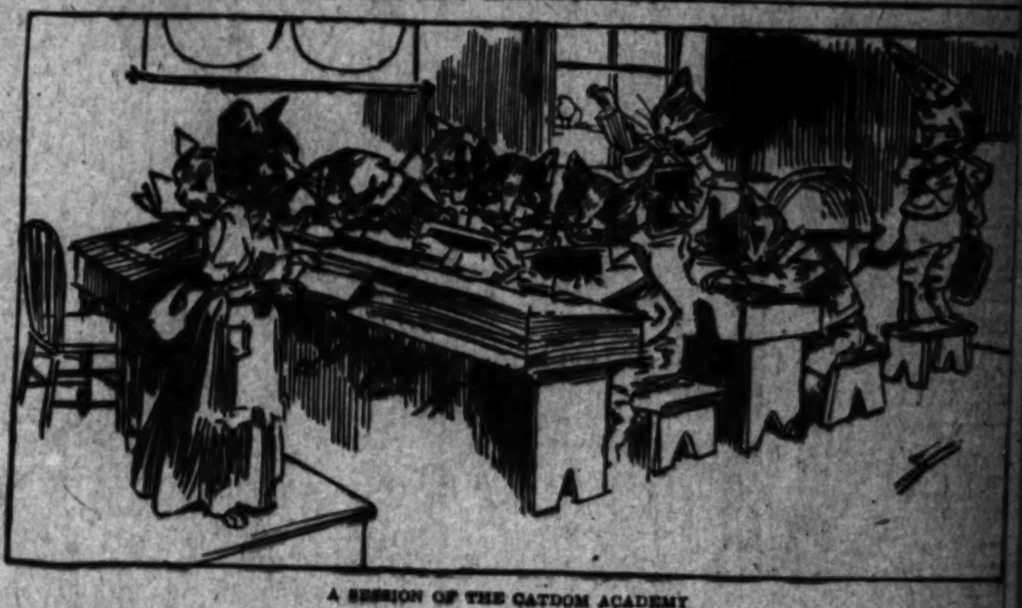
Presently a gentleman came up with a great Newfoundland dog. Placing a stick of wood in the dog's mouth, he motioned toward the wreck.

"CAUGHT THE ROPE."

The dog immediately obeyed his master's command and swam bravely out to sea. He found, however, that he could not get near enough to deliver the stick. While he was paddling along, one of the crew of the doomed vessel threw a rope to him.

Instantly the intelligent dog knew what was required of him. He let go the piece of wood, grasped the end of the rope in his mouth, and soon made the shore. Thanks to the noble animal, all were saved.

Miss Pussykin's School



A SESSION OF THE CATDOM ACADEMY

A VERY good pussy-cat goes to school—
Not like the froggies, by rushy pool;
For, so select is Miss Pussykin's school,
Each little Pussyville cat has a stool.

Though I say "cats," course I mean just "kits"—
Kittens get through long before they're cats;
Nor was there ever such learned kits,
None so skilful to catch sly rats.

Mousing, behavior and virtue taught,
Show in the manner of cats well bred;
So that the pupils of Pussykin taught,
Have all their comrades in Catdom led.

Our Selfish Club

"I REALLY do believe that Clarence is the most selfish person in the world," said Edith emphatically.

We, that is, Helen and Catharine and George and I, nodded.

Helen observed, "It does look rather mean for brothers and sisters to hold a council about another brother, but I think it's time we did our very best to break Clarence of this habit. If he's not cured now I don't think he ever will be."

"If he could only see himself how bad it looks!" sighed Catharine.

Each of us looked to the other to suggest a plan. At last Edith spoke:

"Well, suppose we let him see just how it does look. Suppose we form 'a selfish club,' and be just as selfish toward one another and our friends as we possibly can. It may cause some embarrassing situations, but we can easily explain everything afterward."

"Agreed!" cried we all, and the "Selfish Club" became an active organization.

Operations began at the breakfast table.

"Catharine, will you please pass me that orange?" asked George, nodding toward the only orange that remained upon the table.

HIS FIRST SURPRISE

Clarence looked surprised, for ordinarily George would have politely insisted that one of us take it, but he actually started when Catharine—Catharine, the most generous little girl there ever was!—retorted surlily:

"No, I want it myself!"

Mommy, of course, was in the secret. "Helen," said she, "when will you be ready to help me with that embroidery?"

Clarence expected to hear Helen answer, "Right away, mother," as she always did. Instead, he was shocked when she said shortly:

"I don't think I can help you, mother; I want to have a little pleasure myself today."

I was the next "offender." Tommy Ryan, my particular chum, dashed in and shouted without ceremony:

"I say, Jimmy, I want to borrow your canoe for today."

Now Jimmy and I are so very, very chummy that usually we take one another's things without even asking. What belongs to one belongs to the other, you know. Clarence almost dropped when I said, just as ugly as I could:

"You can't have it! Do you suppose I want all of my things broken?"

Tommy felt dreadfully hurt. He turned and went away without a word. I had to slip out the back door and catch up with him and explain all about our club. Of course, Tommy was enrolled as a member, and he then went off to get the canoe.

But the club disbanded that evening. Father had come in tired and not feeling well. After dinner he asked Edith: "Do you think you could help me check up a few accounts, dear?" Edith always begs to act as father's private secretary when he's home, and she's proud as can be of her ability to assist him.

"Can't tonight, papa; I've arranged to go to the theater."

Clarence's knife and fork dropped with a clatter, as he gazed open-mouthed from one to the other. He had not once spoken of our selfish acts, but now he drew himself erect, his eyes flashing indignation, and said, slowly and deliberately:

"Edith, how could you do so?"

Then poor father, who wasn't yet in the secret, turned sadly to Clarence.

"My boy," said he, "have you any right to reprove your sister?"

Clarence flushed and dropped his eyes.

"No," he replied, in a low voice; "but I never thought before how disgusting an act of selfishness appears to others.

"I now see my fault clearly," he confessed, "and I shall do all in my power to correct it."

Father's face just shone. "My boy, nothing you have ever said has pleased me more."

So you see our "Selfish Club" really did serve its purpose.

Only Thing Left

The schoolmaster was trying to teach his class composition, and he was having great difficulty.

Said he: "If I should ask, 'What have I in my hand?' the answer should be, 'You have an apple in your hand.'

"Now, suppose I should ask, 'What have I on my feet?' what should you say?"

"Shoes," was the first reply.

"Stockings," replied another boy.

"No," said the teacher, impatiently, "both of you are wrong. Remember what I have just said."

For a moment no one seemed anxious to try to answer the question; but at last a lad raised his hand with an air which said quite plainly that he was perfectly sure of his knowledge.

"Corns!" he shouted, triumphantly.

First Visits to the Countr

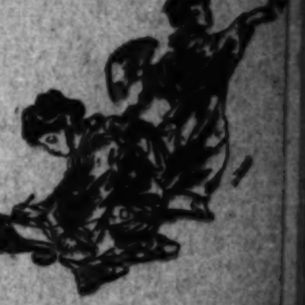
THE questions and answers of boys and girls upon their visit to the country are often tr amusing.

One little boy from the slums w with great difficulty, coaxed to go. said he heard there were "thresh machines" in the country, and he didn want to go there to be thrashed. Th same little boy, when asked why the chickens interested him so greatly, re plied, "I've only seen them that's bee peeled in the city."

Another little boy once went to th country on a visit. Seeing his aun plucking the feathers from a chick that evening, he asked: "Auntie, d you undress all the chickens before pu ting them to bed?"

The cows were favorites with Lott a little girl of 5. She begged to be per mitted to milk, and, finding herself rath er unsuccessful, thought she'd "bette begin on a calf first." Lottie also want ed to know if you had to buy gum fo the cows to chew on, and whether th milk that came from a separator wa the same as that which came fro cows. She thought it was so funny too, that "all hens ate with their noses."

Oyika



"TENITA CHASES THE BUTTERFLY."

TWO little Japanese maidens, Tenita and Oyika, were busily engaged with their brushes, writing out their daily exercises. No one would ever imagine that the queer characters, so carefully painted, represented words, but they really did.

Tenita happened to glance up from her work. There, flitting about her head, was a beautifully colored butterfly. Unable to resist the temptation, Tenita darted after it. This way and that she scampered, but the magnificently appareled insect always eluded her. Suddenly, in place of the butterfly, there stood before her a wonderful fairy—for even Japanese boys and girls have their fairies, you know.

"Tenita," said she, "I am sorry to see that you like to engage in such idle pastimes. I am the fairy who rewards only studious boys and girls.

"Oyika has been keeping faithfully at her work. Already she has finished half her exercises, and I am going to help her with the rest. She deserves such a reward."

With swift strokes the fairy completed Oyika's exercise, while Tenita was left wondering what excuse she should make for her tardy progress.

Rule Didn't Apply

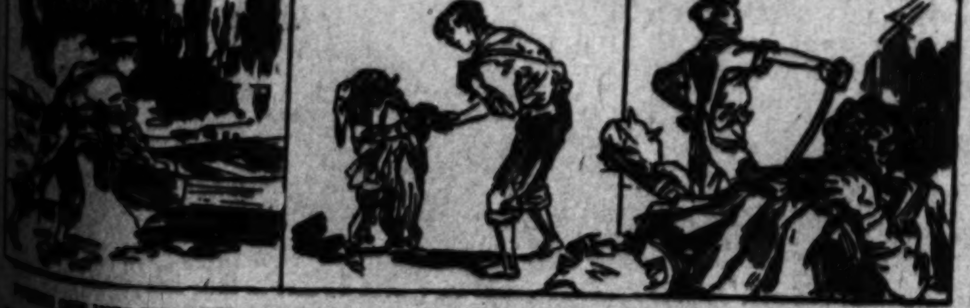
Johnny had listened attentively to the wise old doctor's advice, but you could see he wasn't quite convinced.

"No, doctor," said he, "it might be all right in some families to chew each mouthful thirty times, but it wouldn't do in ours."

"Why not?" asked the doctor.

"'Cause there's seven of us boys and girls at home, and by the time I'd finished one mouthful there'd be nothing left for me to eat."

GIANT OF ENCHANTED ISLE



"[illegible] INTO THE LAKE." "RECEIVED BY THE DWARF." "KILLS THE HORRIBLE GIANT."

[illegible] had a hard time of it. He lived with his uncle in a [illegible] built amid the forest. [illegible] uncle was a woodchopper, and [illegible], too, was obliged to go [illegible] morning and toil until [illegible].

[illegible] he came home with [illegible] he was beaten by [illegible] sent supperless to [illegible] was a very cruel [illegible].

[illegible] the boy was going [illegible] in the forest chopping [illegible] found himself standing [illegible] a beautiful lake, in the [illegible] was a pretty isle.

[illegible] that his uncle had told [illegible] island was called Enchanted Isle, and whoever journeyed there never returned.

Sitting down on the bank he dreamed of wonderful treasures and mighty dragons that might be upon the island.

That night Henry received a more severe beating than ever before, inasmuch as he had brought such a small load of wood.

"Tomorrow I will go to the enchanted isle," he resolved; "I could hardly lead a worse life there than I do here—and if I should die it will matter nothing."

Early next morning he crept silently down the rickety ladder from his bed of straw in the loft. He stole to the lake, clambered into the boat his uncle kept there, and was soon gliding toward the little island.

Arriving there, he tied his boat fast and climbed up the bank, his heart beating fast with hopes of adventure.

He had not gone far before he saw a light. Keeping this always in sight, he drew nearer and nearer. After a while he heard a horrible crunching sound.

Peering through the thicket he saw an immense and horrible giant munching upon bones, while others broiled in a great pot.

Thoroughly frightened, the lad withdrew quietly and made all possible speed back the way he had come.

But when Henry reached the edge of the lake he was dismayed to see that his boat had been set adrift. The next moment he was startled to hear a deep voice at his elbow saying:

"Now that you can't return, perhaps you'll do the service we ask of you."

Henry turned to see an ugly dwarf standing beside him.

"This island," explained the dwarf, "once belonged to me, my relatives and my friends, but the horrible giant has come and we no longer live in peace. There was once a hundred of us, now there are but twelve. The giant has eaten the rest. And you have come to deliver us!"

Taking Henry by the hand, he led him into a great cavern, where the dwarfs now hid, and spread before him a fine meal.

When the lad had eaten his fill, the dwarf brought forth a magnificent sword and handed it to him.

"If you wound the giant ever so slightly with this sword," said he, "he will surely die. Slay him for us and we will give you great reward."

Henry took the sword and went on his way to where the giant still sat at breakfast.

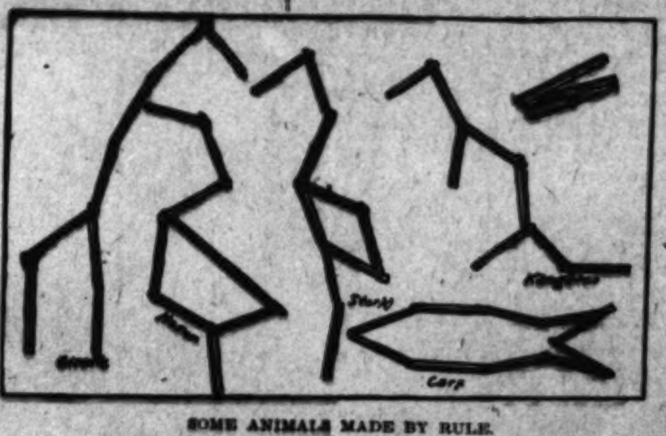
No sooner did he see the lad than he leaped to his feet, grasped a great club and made a terrific lunge with it. But the boy leaped aside, made a quick dart with his sword, and wounded the giant in the arm. In a moment the monster lay dead.

The dwarfs were jubilant. They presented Henry with great bags of gold and gave him a flask of magic wine, which made any one who drank it kind and amiable. He was then provided with a boat.

Very shortly the boy entered his uncle's hut. The man at once sprang upon him and beat him. Then he spied the flask of wine. He drank it—and the very next instant he had become the most kind-hearted person in the world.

With so much money they were now able to build a great castle and to live in comfort and happiness.

Menagerie by Rule



SOME ANIMALS MADE BY RULE.

It is very entertaining and amusing to see how many figures you can make with a long, jointed rule.

Here are some of them. Doubtless you will be able to find many others.

WASH DAY THE WORLD OVER

LAUNDRY METHODS AS OBSERVED BY GLOBE TROTTERS

WASH[illegible] R[illegible]ub! R[illegible] rub! That's the way it [illegible] whole wor[illegible] over. Th[illegible] women wash that we may be [illegible] wash [illegible] wash our coats they wash our shirts and skirts! Washday! No matter where you go, to what re[illegible]mote place on the planet, you [illegible] it. Since the time Father [illegible] and Mother Eve discarded figleaves for woven stuffs humanity has been plagued with the washing of attire.

It's washday and ironing day in civilized countries—and if they don't iron in the "lands beyond missionary union" they wash just the same.

It's rub, rub, rub! And the women never seem to tire. Not even in our enlightened and happy land, where the frills and flounces and feminine fol-de-rols compel women to be clean only by the sweat of their brows.

Not even in those dark countries where women wear garments unenhanced by the dressmaker's art do they seem to tire of rubbing and drying and smoothing their abbreviated habiliments.

It's man's nature to be clean—and woman's to keep him clean. And so the old world runs its laundry establishment unceasingly, whether it be in Trinidad or Holland, Venezuela or Mexico.

But the laundries of the planets are run in strange and diversified ways. They don't starch and ruffle collars and ruffle laces in many places near the antipodes—and nearer home!

PICTURE to yourself the world's great washdays.

In America, Holland, Mexico, Venezuela, Switzerland, Holland, Trinidad, New Zealand—there you will find typical examples of clothes-cleaning.

Supposing you were to take a globe-girdling tour, and naturally you wouldn't want to be bothered with trunks and such paraphernalia. Perhaps you'd take only a suitcase. Now, you'd have to get your clothes washed. Positively.

Suppose you were in Trinidad, and to your questions about starched laundering the dusky skinned women returned vague and mystifying replies. Somehow you learn 'tis washday in Trinidad! From the town the women, in gaudy colored dresses, with bundles of gaudy colored clothing in their arms, wander. And you follow.

Beyond is a forest, and asphalt lakes—lakes steaming with the hot, pitchy substance, smelling intolerably. Yet the dusky-skinned, sphinx-eyed women make their way thence—and lo, they begin to wash. Yes, actually in the asphalt lake. But look closer. That which sizzles and steams is not asphaltum, but water, hot, steaming water. In the bottom of the lakes is the material of which they make public thoroughfares in civilized countries; on the surface, water of the right temperature. And so they rub and scrub and wash the clothing. Launder them—starch them? No.

Now jump on the witch's broom of your imagination and take a trip to New Zealand. It's washday there.

In many other countries women fret and fume over heating water, and in the big cities they worry over gas bills. Not so in New Zealand. Nature, in a benign mood, gives the women water already heated.

EASY WITH HOT SPRINGS

They don't wear pretty clothing there. The women don't rejoice in laces and ruffles, nor do they fret over pleated and shirred skirts, nor do they bother washing silks in gasoline. No, indeed. See them. A row of coarse, dark-complexioned women, with straggling, disheveled hair. They don't use soap. They just throw the clothing into the boiling pools, the natural hot springs of the island, and beat it with stones. Then they wring it out, and place it on the grass to dry. And the week's washing is over.

In Venezuela the women are a little more particular. There they also disdain tubs and washboards, and are content to knead their garments over nature's streams.

Outside of the villages of the country are long pools, where women usually engage in the family washing.

Among the natives of Mexico they make it both wash and bath day. Some of the natives are very poor, and as expedients arise from necessity perhaps the custom of washing the children while they wash clothing arose from the scantiness of bodily attire. In some early day a family found that its clothing was dirty. What were they to do? Dame Nature's impulse to keep clean arose in their crude, untutored hearts and they desired a wash. And a bath. Why not both at once? So that primitive family betook itself to the forest, where in a pool they doffed their attire and washed the clothing.

So today it is a familiar sight in Mexico to see children bathing themselves in the same pool or stream in which the mothers wash their clothes.

In most lands, half-civilized or civilized, women do the washing. On their backs fall the burden of the world's wash. They bend over streams in Mexico and over tubs in America. But in one country—lo and behold you—the men actually do the week's washing. Blessed country for the women! What housewife must not pine to live within its golden boundaries!

The country is Morocco—fierce and tumultuous Morocco—Morocco of terrible brigands and turbaned Turks. Of course, the men don't do all the washing, by any means, for this would mean for women the dawning of a feminine millennium. But they do a good deal, and they're experts on the job, too.

They don't use tubs. However, they're partial to soap. Picture them to yourselves—a long row of gaudily dressed men, in vari-colored turbans, marching to the river with their wash. They lay the gar[illegible] river and [illegible].

And the washing is over in Morocco.

But, one hears the man remonstrate, they don't [illegible] have such "washing" in Morocco as in more advan[illegible] countries. Imagine, for instance, any man—even a Moroccan bandit—starching a collar or ironing a pleated shirt! It's simply impossible. Of course, in the United States almond-eyed Chinamen wash for the "Mellie Mellicans." The Chinese laundry is an institution here. But while some Chinamen do [illegible] kinds of clothing, you can't get all Chinamen to launder every kind of garment.

So, after all, women are the real mistresses of the fine art of laundering. In Holland there's scarcely a woman who will not wash some of her clothes. Housewifely women that they are, they delight in the work. Even wealthy women, with scores of servants, go to the kitchen on washday and wash—if only a few handkerchiefs. Young women, as soon as they are able to learn, are taught the principles of laundering clothes. In Holland women wash in public on the Zuyder Zee.

Here it is really refreshing to see the [illegible] buxom women! With skirts pinned up, sleeves [illegible] they busily wash along the river, soaping the clothing and rubbing it until it is creamy with suds. [illegible] tenderly and carefully they handle each garment [illegible] how solicitous they are that every spot vanishes [illegible] only when it is spotlessly clean do they pin the garment on the line.

Then as they wash they gossip—good-natured[illegible] happily. Their laughter rings merrily along the [illegible] —ho, ho!—for merriment reigns when it's washday on the Zuyder Zee!

In Lucerne and other cities in Switzerland [illegible] are public laundries. Housewives [illegible] not [illegible] bother washing clothing in their kitchens [illegible] baskets full of garments there and wash them.

But it's in Japan that washday has lost its [illegible] for women. Washday! Why, they've so [illegible] wash it's mere child's play. And the [illegible] little creatures of women delight in washing [illegible] dainty trifles with which they clothe themselves [illegible] it is a delight.

First, they have little bedclothing to wash in Japan. Very little. But, you say, are not the Japanese among the most cleanly people in the world? And do they not sleep in beds?

Where are the sheets? There are no sheets. [illegible] the pillow-cases? There are no pillow cases. [illegible] Japanese sleep on futons, folded during the day [illegible] kept in closets, and for a pillow they use a [illegible] cylinder, covered with a small cover of the size of a pocket handkerchief, which is discarded as soon as it is dirty. How about towels, napkins, handkerchiefs? They are of paper. Neither tablecloths [illegible] napkins are used. Then, you say, what's the use of washday? Ah, don't forget the bright [illegible] kimonos, the pretty obis, or sashes, the tabi, or short stocking, and the fragile and ethereal [illegible] garments that remind one of sylphs rather than women of flesh and blood. So, after all, washing is a necessity even in the fragrant land of the [illegible] blossoms. But it's not conspicuous. DOMESTIC SCIENCE.

BY EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

September is here with its wealth of fruitage. Whether the housewife "laughs out" with the year, depends upon her mental attitude toward housekeeping.

If like Julia Marlowe, she "loves to cook" and has mastered the art of "making a little money go a long way as far as the table is concerned," now is her opportunity. Commercially prepared canned goods have gone up appreciably since the pure-food law went into operation, but that does not affect those put up at home, which are pure anyway. Take grape juice, for instance; almost a household necessity in sickness and in health. The pure juice will cost about as much as if bought at a store. Chile sauce, that delightful condiment that costs from 15 cents to 25 cents per pint, can be made for 9 cents, even if tomatoes have to be purchased at 6 cents a quart. If raised in one's own garden, the cost is hardly worth mentioning. So also with cucumber pickles and canned tomatoes. There is easily a saving of 25 per cent. in putting them up at home.

If one has the fruit and vegetables growing, it is a good time to bear in mind those who are not so favored. A glass of translucent home-made jelly, a can of crisp pickles or fine flavored peaches, a bottle of grape juice or catsup will make a dainty and appreciated Christmas remembrance or a kindly gift for an invalid. Then there are always hospitals anr orphanages, old ladies' homes and mission boxes for workers on the outposts of our own land, where a bit of choice fruit is a luxury seldom attained by the missionaries, but greatly enjoyed and laid aside for rare occasions when it comes their way.

GRAPES FOR HOLIDAYS.

Have you tried packing away clusters of grapes for use at holiday times? There are several ways in which they can be preserved, one of the newest being a French method by which vine growers keep the markets supplied with fresh outdoor grapes all winter. Naturally, such grapes are expensive, but there are plenty of people glad to pay the price. Bunches of the finest grapes are gathered when the sun is hot, and cut in such a way that to each bunch a piece of the vine, five or six inches long, remains attached. The bunch of grapes depends from this stem, an arrangement essential to the success of the undertaking.

A large number of wide-necked glass jars are filled with water and ranged in horizontal rows on racks in the cellar, and into these the stems are inserted, the clusters of grapes hanging outside. The grapes do not touch the bottle, but are supplied with moisture from the stems immersed in the water. The temperature of the cellar is kept low and uniform and the water in the bottles is renewed as fast as lowered by evaporation.

Another way to keep grapes, pears and other fine fruits for winter's use is to make an air-tight cask or pasteboard box, place a layer of cork dust at the bottom of the box, then a layer of grapes, and so on alternating fruit and dust. Do not allow the bunches of grapes to touch each other, and see that every particle of the fruit is covered with the dust. Pack compactly and do not allow any loose ones to get in. Always use whole bunches for preserving and gather them when the sun is hot and the grapes a little more than three-fourths ripe. When cutting the bunches leave about an inch of stem. Keep the box or cask tightly covered in a cool place. Grapes are also preserved by being packed in cotton and laid carefully in a glass jar or other tight receptacle.

UNFERMENTED GRAPE JUICE WITHOUT SUGAR.

Wash and pick over sound Concord grapes, rejecting all that are soft. Put in a stone jar and place this in a boiler, with cold water to nearly the depth of the jar. With a wooden spoon crush lightly when they begin to cook, at the same time pushing the grapes from the top of the jar toward the bottom. Cook about two hours or until the grapes are all softened. Then pour into a large bag to drain. Do not press or squeeze or the juice will be cloudy. Have ready perfectly clean and well sterilized bottles with the patent china or metal tops. If you do not have these, be sure your corks are new, soaking them first in cold water so they can be pressed in tightly. Reheat the juice to the boiling point, cook steadily half an hour, removing the scum as it raises to the surface. Turn into the hot bottles and seal air tight.

CANNED GRAPE JUICE WITH SUGAR.

Put the grapes, washed and sorted into a preserving kettle and add a little cold water, but not enough to cover. Cook slowly until the skins break, mashing and stirring from time to time with a wooden spoon. When softened and at the boiling point, pour into a new coarse jelly bag to drain. Measure the juice and to each quart allow a quarter pound granulated sugar. Boil again four minutes, turn into hot sterilized bottles and seal while hot.

RAISINE.

To make this famous French marmalade allow an equal weight of pears and grapes, cook in a little water until soft, then press through a colander to remove the seeds. Add the pears, cored and sliced, and simmer until thick, stirring almost constantly. When thick, sweeten to taste, scald, strain through a colander and can.

GRAPE RELISH.

Pick from the stems seven pounds of grapes, rather under-ripe and separate the pulp from the skins. Put the skins in a preserving kettle over the fire with just water enough to prevent their burning. Place the pulp in another kettle and cook until the seeds loosen. Press through a sieve and add to the skins with a half pint vinegar, three pounds of sugar and a teaspoonful each cloves, allspice and cinnamon. Boil until thick. This is fine to serve with game or roast meats.

GRAPE CATSUP.

Wash and stem tart grapes, cook until tender and rub through a colander. To every three pints of pulp allow one pound brown sugar, one cupful vinegar, a heaping teaspoonful each ground cinnamon, mace, allspice, salt and pepper and a half teaspoonful ground cloves. Cook steadily, stirring frequently, until the catsup is reduced to half its original quantity and thick. Bottle and cork when cold.

PICKLED PEARS.

Bartletts not quite ripe or Seckels are the best pears for pickling, though others will answer. If the skins are tough they must be peeled, but Bartletts and Seckels will not require it. Wash the pears, take out the blossom end, but leave the stems on. Cook in boiling water until tender, then take out the pears and strain the water in which they were cooked. Add to a quart of this water a quart strong vinegar, five pounds sugar and a half-cup mixed whole cloves, allspice, stick cinnamon, mace and cassia buds. Stick two or three cloves in each pear. Boil vinegar, spices, sugar and water for twenty minutes, add the pears, scald thoroughly. Take out the fruit and pack in glass cans. Boil the syrup thick with the spices, pour over the fruit and seal at once.

GRAPE BUTTER.

Pulp ripe or half ripened grapes and cook the pulp until soft enough to rub through a colander. Add the skins and cook until tender. Add sugar, allowing to each pound of fruit a half pound sugar or more if the grapes are quite green. Cook until thick, stirring often, then can.

GINGERED PEARS.

This is particularly nice served with ice cream or muskmelon. To eight pounds pears chopped very thin allow four pounds sugar or a little less, one cup water, the juice and thin yellow rind of four lemons (be sure they are not bitter) and one-eighth pound or more green ginger root, scraped and cut in thin slices. Bring the sugar and water to a boil, add the fruit, ginger and lemon, then simmer three-quarters of an hour, or until the consistency of marmalade.

RHUBARD AND FIG JAM.

To five pounds tender rhubarb washed and cut in inch pieces, allow one pound figs (the dried,) the grated yellow rind and juice of one lemon, and four pounds sugar. Let this stand all night. The next day cook slowly for an hour, then turn into glasses. Nuts can be added if desired.

CHOP SUEY.

This, made with young, tender pork as a foundation, is known in Chinese restaurant parlance as "Fine Crop," with chicken it is called "Guy Chop Suey," or with chicken and mushrooms, "Mo Goo Chop Suey." With all of these is served the Chinese condiment, brown and piquant, known as See Yu or Gee Yow. It corresponds to our Worcestershire sauce. It can be purchased of any Chinese dealer, together with the bean sprouts or water chestnuts that go with the dish. For guy chop suey to serve six persons you will need one young chicken cut in pieces, utilizing the giblets; a pound of water chestnuts, two pounds bean sprouts (if you can't get these you may use French peas, tender string beans or asparagus tips;) a little sliced celery, a sliced onion. The water chestnuts should be shaved thin. Have a kettle with olive oil or peanut oil, about six tablespoonfuls, and saute in this the chicken, onion, celery and chestnuts. When almost tender add the bean sprouts, which must not cook too long. If you use string beans instead, chop very fine and saute with the other vegetables. Stir frequently to prevent burning, adding if necessary a half cup boiling water. When tender drain off any liquor remaining, add a little flour to thicken and salt to taste. At the very last add a teaspoonful of the brown sauce and pour over the chop suey. Stir together and serve with rice.

Samplers in Vogue Again.

With the revival of old fashioned embroidery stitches and marking there has come about a desire among the women devoted to fancy needlework to possess samplers just like those that were once used as patterns for all sorts of stitches and designs. It is really difficult for some women to carry in their heads the various stitches they use in even rather plain work, so that either the friendly aid of a fellow embroiderer, a needlework book or its equivalent, the sampler, is required to guide them in their work.

The modern sampler may or may not differ in some of its essential features from the sampler of a century and more ago. Those who have a fondness for accuracy use even the same kind of foundation upon which to make their cross stitch alphabet and rows of fancy stitches. Many new patterns are added and very often there is a quaint little flower or conventional border going all around the sampler. If one does not care to use canvas or linen for the sampler foundation, then silk or wide ribbon may be substituted, but it is well to have that same forethought exhibited by our ancestors and choose some fabric which will last more than a few years.

It is intended by the woman who makes her own sampler that it shall be framed and have a place of honor on the wall, possibly by the side of a sampler which dates back to the nineteenth century. Because of its destined place, however, the modern woman has shown signs of weakening. She cannot bring herself to the point of embroidering her own natal date to be hung where friendly and unfriendly eyes may gaze upon it and perhaps make remarks about it. She openly admits that she has not the courage to do that, so she has compromised by putting in the date of the time the embroidery is done.—[New York Herald.

Do Clever Girls Marry?

"Shall we not be justifid soon in asking women to produce certificates of competency as to domesticity? Is not the time at hand when women should cease their unreasonable competition with men?"

These questions, propounded by Prof. Armstrong, at the meeting of the British Association on Tuesday, were taken up by several well-known people yesterday. Mrs. Ruth Homan, a leader of the movement for the teaching of housewifery to the girls of England, gave the following answer to the professor of chemistry:

"The more educated a woman is," she declared, "the more keen she is to learn. Many university women after marriage come to me to learn all they can about the care of a house and of children. They realise better than the uneducated woman what they ought to know.

"For this reason, I think the educated girl makes the best housewife and the best mother. They also realise how necessary it is that other girls and women should be trained in domestic knowledge, and so you find that all new organizations for training the working woman in the management of a house and the care of children are started by educated ladies and carried on by them."

"I would not send my four daughters to college," said Mrs. Luther Gulick of New York. "I think girls ought to go slowly through a high school, and then specialize in some branch of domestic training, or in something whereby they can earn their own living. I am unlike many American women in thinking so, but I believe a reaction will set in against the college or university training of girls. Only about 50 or 52 per cent. of them marry after taking the higher course."

Dr. Luis Simarro, professor of experimental psychology at the University of Madrid, said the question had not arisen in Spain. He almost wished it would. "A woman in Spain is a woman in the true sense of the word," said the professor; "rather too much so. She has but one idea, and that is to be docile and obedient to her husband. The principal prestige upon which a woman depends in Spain is whether she is pretty, and whether a man considers her so."—[London Daily Mail.

BEADED RETICULES.

The Hand Bags of Our Grandmothers Have Again Come Into Style.

[New York Herald:] If you do not possess a handsome gold or silver purse, then you must become the owner of a dainty reticule, for it is no longer considered fashionable to carry a leather purse or bag, no matter how costly and beautiful it may be, after the noonday hour. By way of the gold bag we have gone back to those quaint little receptacles that were considered a part of our grandmother's costume; they are no less convenient and attractive now than they were in the days of poke bonnets and high waists.

A hand-worked bead bag is the next best thing to a gold and jeweled one. To buy a bead bag means quite an outlay of money, and to make one takes a great deal of time, in addition to which the work is trying on the eyes. But bead bags are so lovely that it is almost impossible to resist the temptation to try what the fancy workshop considers a "very simple pattern." Small bags are very little better than no bag at all. To be useful they should have a capacious interior. The favorite shape is rather longer than wide, and on the bottom of the bag is sewn a very close and well-shaped fringe that harmonizes with the flowered pattern of the bag or contrasts with it very decidedly. One side of these bags is worked with a floral design in natural colors, while the reverse side has one's monogram done in gold on a white background. The mountings are very elaborate, either of gold with jewels or of etched silver, and they are fitted with long chain handles.

Next to the bead bag comes the reticule, a charming article, provided with ample room for all of one's little belongings, coin purse, cardcase and vanity box, if this is not carried separately. These reticules draw together at the top exactly as the old-fashioned kind. They are very easily made, and when completed are quite as effective and ornamental as the more costly bead and gold affairs.

Handsome flowered ribbon makes the daintiest reticules. Ribbons come in such exquisite colorings and designs that they are almost lovely enough as they are for reticules. It so happens, however, that fashion likes to paint the lily, as it were, and to further embellish these ribbons and brocades with bead work. A pattern is selected showing, perhaps, a richly-colored rose or a cluster of flowers on a plain background, and then with her nimble fingers the young woman sets to work to embroider the flowers in beads. The ribbon coloring of this decoration is followed absolutely. A cluster of flowers of average size or one large flower looks much better than tiny flowers when treated in this way. A golden-yellow rose shading to reddish brown on a cream background is very dainty when worked out in gold and reddish-brown beads.

Sometimes the most glorious colorings are found with a pale or dull gray background, which brings out the richness of the flower tones in a delightful way. If the flowers are woven to give that popular shadow effect, then they are all the more suitable for use in the fashioning of a reticule. The ribbon is first lined with a piece of beadwork canvas, so that it will keep its shape and then the beads are sewn on very much as they are in the regular bead work. It is somewhat more difficult to manage on silk than on canvas, for one has to depend on the meshes of the canvas lining to guide one in following out the design.

Black ribbon with flowers is a rare ribbon combination, but when one does run across such a design it is well to obtain a piece of the ribbon long enough to make a reticule, for a black bag is always a good investment. While there is not such a hard and fast rule laid down at present for having every part of one's costume match in color, a harmonious combination is as imperative as ever. With a lavender batiste or linen gown, for example, a reticule of white ribbon flowered with purple iris would be carried. Usually light reticules go with light gowns, and, as nearly all the fashionable set wear light colors or white for summer, there are only occasional times when an all black reticule would be appropriate, though a black one brightened very strikingly with flowers in colors may be carried with any costume.

The size of these reticules varies. An average one measures seven inches from the gathering to the bottom, and there is at least two and a half inches of the ribbon left for the upstanding frill at the top. Many of them are made of two flat pieces sewed together, while a few are made with a circular bottom to which the outside is sewn with slight fulness. Either silk cords or narrow flat bead worked bands are used to gather the top of the bag and to carry over the arm or in the hand.

A striped ribbon lends itself well to the reticule idea. Flowered ribbons showing a striped edge are very novel and dainty when the flowers are beaded, and alternate stripes are thickly incrusted with tiny beads the same color as the silk stripe in the ribbon. Borders are novel and attractive, especially if they are kept rather narrow and do not cross the bottom of the bag. A bead fringe is the best finish to such reticules.

SCHOOL FOR WIVES.

Domestic Duties and Morality Taught in a Paris "University."

[Manchester Chronicle:] "The School for Housewives" sounds well for Paris, where generally we expect to hear rather of the "School for Scandal."

But Mme. Adolphe Brisson (telegraphs our Paris correspondent) prefers to call her institution simply the "University." It rather rejuvenates the word "university," which has come too often to possess a meaning of obsolete studies and the fantastic pride that results therefrom.

But a university that perfects a Parisienne in the art of being a lady—that is a charming idea! Mme. Adolphe Brisson is the daughter of the famous Francisque Sarcey, the theatrical critic, now deceased, and the wife of Adolphe Brisson, also a theatrical critic, a dramatist, and the editor of the "Annales Litteraires and Politiques."

Mme. Brisson first conceived the idea of forming a circle of the lady readers of the "Annales" so as to study questions of household economy, intermingled with lectures on literature and politics. Accordingly she installed her classes in the rooms of the "Annales." But the idea grew, and it would appear that it will still grow; it may in the end revolutionize ideas of the education of young ladies.

Every day in the week during the season the different classes are in full swing. These are eminently useful, and the instruction is given by experts in dressmaking (cutting and fitting,) typewriting, fashions, singing, lectures (history, art,) house management. They last from 2 to 4 o'clock in the afternoon. From 5 to 6 o'clock every day lectures are given by the most noted authorities in Paris on literature, art, hygiene, music, and last, but not least, morality.

Among those who have lectured are Sardou, Bourget (the famous novelist,) Mme. Severine (the brilliant journalist,) and Mme. Dieulafoy (the traveler.) The cost of the lessons is on the average about eight shillings a month, or thirty shillings for the full four months.

The ladies of Paris will flock to the reopening in October.

GIRLS' WRESTLING BOUT.

Jiu-Jitsu Display by Sir L. Brunton's Daughter Before Dignified Professors.

[London Express:] Miss Lauder Brunton, the daughter of Sir Lauder Brunton, who is the president of the International Congress on Social Hygiene, made her debut yesterday as jiu-jitsu wrestler before an assembly of grave and serious professors and educational authorities from all parts of the world.

The display was organized by Mrs. Roger-Watts, who is advocating jiu-jitsu for the school curriculum. If rightly taught and practiced, she maintains, it is of the greatest moral and physical benefit, whether it is adopted in youth or old age.

The greatest interest was shown in the display, which came as a welcome "turn" amid the solid discussions of the day. Mats were spread in the Great Hall of he Imperial Institute in the most approved music-hall style, and the learned professors crowded round and made the ring.

First of all, three pretty little girls entered, dressed in black silk knickers and the white kimono-like jacket of the jiu-jitsu wrestler. Mrs. Roger-Watts, in a similar costume, drilled them in the gestures and the movements of the wrestler, and the children went through their paces vigorously, throwing imaginary foes.

The professors nodded approvingly. The sturdy little limbs and the strong arms of the children and their healthy, shining faces were sufficient testimonials to the worth of Mrs. Roger-Watts's ideas.

One little girl of about seven years demonstrated a "throw," and sent Mrs. Roger-Watts flying to the mat. The child looked a little puzzled as to how it happened when, following the law of jiu-jitsu, she put out an arm and vanquished the big lady.

The second part of the performance was between Miss Lauder Brunton—in a business-like wrestling costume—and Mrs. Roger-Watts. The two ladies fell about extremely gracefully, and about sixty different "throws" were demonstrated.

Mrs. Roger-Watts arose after each fall and explained the theory. "Some of them are extremely pleasant," she said.

Then the two ladies had a serious struggle, which ended in a draw, and the professors applauded loudly.

"Chorosho," said a spectacled Russian. "Epatant," was the verdict of the Frenchman, while a German professor thought it was "Ausgezeichnet," and called loudly for more.

Dr. Clement Duke, physician to Rugby School, in a paper dealing with a record of the physical examination of 1000 boys at their entrance to public school life, said it was depressing in the twentieth century to have to register the large number of acquired preventable deformities which are presented by the most-favored class of boys in Great Britain—deformities occurring between the time of nursery life and the completion of education in the preparatory school at the age of 13.

"Some of these infirmities arise from faults in nutrition during infancy, which entail rickets," he said. "These defects in nutrition, as a cause, tend at the present day to involve the children of the rich even more than those of the poor in their sequent physical evils.

"Many of these deformities, however," Dr. Duke declared, "are incidental to unnatural school methods, and the disfiguring effect produced by faulty postures, permitted or practically compelled during school life, so that the supple bones become molded imperceptibly, but surely, into abnormal forms."

How to Cook Asparagus.

The ordinary method of preparing a bunch for the table is to lay it on its side in a pot of water and boil it, says the New York Post. Most folk cut the binders and allow the stalks to float around in the vessel like derelict logs in a Maine freshet. When served the tips are as mush, while the stalks are too hard for mastication. This is criminal negligence. Worse—it is criminal ignorance. It takes five years to get an asparagus bed started, and, as the roots are gluttons, requiring a vast amount of rich food, assiduous care and constant attention, a meal of it is entitled to our highest respect. Buy an agate ware or porcelained pot six inches in diameter and nine inches high. Place the bound bunch of grass therein on end, first having trimmed the bottom even and square. If the bunch is seven inches high, pour in water until only two inches of the tips remain above the surface—that is, give it five inches of water. Then let it boil and boil and boil until the stalks are perfectly tender. Pierce them with a fork to find out. The tips will in the meantime be cooked by the steam and will be firm yet tender when served. Then you will have a delicious asparagus, each stalk and tip a morsel fit for gods and goddesses. The stalk is quite as tasty as the tip; yet by the old method of cooking most of the former is too hard for mastication by anything less powerful than a rock crusher.

New Bonbonnieres.

New bonbonnieres from Dresden are quaint little pots of flowers—all of china, even to what is apparently the earth in which they are planted. Either set in square pots or shallow bowls dainty rose trees in miniature, crocuses or tulips spring up from the center, apparently as fresh as though just from the greenhouse or conservatory. Every flower is as perfect as its natural prototype and shows the blossoms, fresh green leaves even to the thorns. The top of each jar comes off, disclosing a receptacle for bonbons.

Mere Dummies.

Bishop Williams of Michigan, speaking to a New York congregation lately, said: "The body of many a woman of fashion is often no more to her than the dummy in the milliner's window—merely the lay figure on which to display her gowns, fashioned after the latest designs set for the demimondaine of Paris."

A Reversed Elopement.

THE NICE OLD GRANDMOTHER TELLS A GOOD STORY.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

As if floating down through the still air from some gray tower, the hour of 5 was sounding from the cathedral chimes of the big clock on the stairs; but already, on the short December day, the darkness had fallen. All the people staying in the big country house were gathered in the hall, where the fire burned riotously on the hearth. The oldest granddaughter sat beside the tea table, and about her, on the arms of chairs, on window ledges and even on the floor, loitered, lurked and reclined the rest of the party.

"But I have told you so often," said the nice old lady, as she glanced at the group before her.

"And it was so long ago," she urged, in lax remonstrance. "Why, that was in 1902, when I was only 19 years old."

"I don't care," said the youngest granddaughter, who was sitting almost at her feet; "I love those dear old times, when everything was so picturesque and romantic. I can understand how a girl could elope in those days!"

"Yes," said the nice old lady, thoughtfully, "I did elope." Then she laughed. "It was a curious elopement. I don't believe there was ever one quite like it before or that there has been since. A reversed elopement. That is what I call it, my dear."

"Tell us," urged one of the young men, earnestly. He was engaged to the oldest granddaughter, and they were only to be discovered with difficulty in the obscurity of a curtained window. "Tell us about the reversed elopement."

"Well," began grandmother, "when I told my papa of my engagement he was very angry."

"'Engaged!' he cried, angrily. 'Married! Never!'

"'Of course,' I answered, dutifully, 'I should not think of doing it without your consent.'

"'Then this marriage will never take place.'

"I smiled at him.

"'How can it?' he asked, defiantly.

"'Because you will consent, because I'll make you,' I answered confidently.

"'You'll see this time,' he replied, with conviction.

"'You'll see,' I answered, just as confidently.

"'You promise,' he said, 'that you will not marry this man without my approval?'

"'Yes,' I answered, promptly.

"He nodded in a way that I did not understand.

"Alec and I had arranged that the next morning he should make the formal request for my hand. You may imagine my surprise when a note, addressed in papa's handwriting, was given to me as I came downstairs.

"'My dear,' the note ran, 'I find that I am unexpectedly compelled to go to town, and take the next steamer sailing. You need not feel the least anxiety because of my sudden departure, and you must remember your promise. Lovingly, Your Father.'

"'Oh, the dear old fox! Oh, the darling coward!' I exclaimed. But I was not at all pleased with him then for running away.

"Indeed I was very angry. I saw just how he had caught me, for he knew, of course, that I wouldn't break a promise when once I had given it. He knew that I could twist him round my finger if I could reach him. Now he had slipped out of my hands altogether. Oh, I was furious! When Alec came down, I laid the case before him in indignant tones.

"'Of course, we can wait,' I concluded, doubtfully.

"'Not at all,' he said, in a tone that made me jump. 'We are going to be married at once.'

"'But my promise,' I gasped.

"He frowned.

"'Of course, you must keep it.'

"I nodded.

"'You're sure that you can make your father give in, if you can talk to him?'

"'Absolutely.'

"'Then we'll find him, and you'll make him consent.'

"'But he's gone!' I cried. 'He's going to sail today.'

"'He's only been gone a few minutes,' Alec replied, 'We can catch him at the station. The train may be a little late, for it is often late. There's an automobile all ready at the door—'"

"Oh, one of those dear, rumbling, bumbling old automobiles!" interrupted one of the grandchildren, clasping her hands, ecstatically.

"In an instant," continued the old lady. "Alec had me into a coat and had lifted and almost thrown me into it, jumping in after me, and with a turn of his hand we were spinning away at thirty miles an hour."

One of the listening grandchildren laughed as the old lady paused.

"Thirty miles an hour," the grandchild said. "Think of considering that fast in one of those pounding old machines over those rough old roads."

"Anyway," continued the grandmother, a little haughtily, "we considered it very fast, and it seemed to me that we were flying. And that is the way I came to start on my elopement.

"We reached the station platform just in time to see the train disappearing down the tracks, and out of sight around a curve. We stood there, indignant and helpless. Alec was the first to recover himself.

"'When is the next train?' he demanded of the station man.

"'Not till 12:45,' answered the man.

"'I must be in town before that,' answered Alec.

"'The trolley'll take you almost as soon as the train,' the station man answered.

"As the man spoke we heard the gong of a trolley car. In a moment the car was in sight up the road. Alec took my hand, and we ran. It was an elopement. Breathless, we reached a point where we could signal the motorman to stop.

"We clambered in.

"'Now,' said Alec, as he showed some money to the conductor and the motorman, who was listening, 'I'll make it all right with you. This is a special train. Do you understand? It doesn't stop anywhere for any one.'

"Well, we finally reached Brooklyn, crossed on the ferry and arrived on the dock just in time to see the Erthania, on which father was, steaming out of the harbor.

"We stood there looking at each other, when suddenly a voice cried: 'Hello!' almost at my elbow.

"In a moment Alec's hand was being wrung by a man whom I had never seen.

"'Glad to meet you, Charton, old man!' Alec cried.

"'What are you doing here?' asked the other, looking at me in some surprise.

"'Why,' Alec laughed, 'to tell you the truth, we are eloping.' And he turned to me. 'I don't think that you know Mr. Charton Rogers.'

"Mr. Rogers whistled.

"'Eloping!' he murmured.

"'At least,' said Alec, 'if it is not the conventional thing, and we are not being chased by a parent who will not give his consent, it is almost the same, for we are chasing one to get it. And he's just escaped us on the Erthania.'

"'You want to get hold of the Erthania,' said Mr. Rogers, quite as if he were speaking of a new direction for cooking lobster.

"'Rather!' replied Alec.

"'I've got the Veloz at the next pier,' he went on, briskly. 'She's all steam up. I was just off to see a yacht race. Having a race of our own will be better than watching one. She's the fastest thing afloat. We'll catch the Erthania. Come!'

"How we rushed through the little waves! But she didn't go fast enough for me. And Alec walked up and down more and more restlessly as the time went on. We were under way and off from the bridge in no time, and before I knew it we were far down the harbor. The crew had discovered at once that something unusual was going on, and every man was on deck or in the rigging. I saw Mr. Rogers's face grow longer, and I understood that he was losing hope. He held constant consultation with his captain, who constantly shook his head.

"'I say,' said Mr. Rogers, suddenly wheeling round on us, 'all you want to do is to get a word with the old gentleman?'

"'If I could only speak with papa a few words I am sure I would be all right,' I answered, fervidly.

"'Well,' said Mr. Rogers, 'we've the wireless telegraph. We might reach him that way.'

"Of course I had heard of wireless telegraphy, which was just beginning then, but I didn't understand it; and, like a great many others, in my heart I didn't really believe in it.

"'Could you do it?' asked Alec, anxiously.

"'We can try,' Mr. Rogers answered.

"I stood in the doorway of the cabin. I had not the slightest confidence in what they were trying to do. It all seemed to me to be too wonderful to be true. I waited unbelievingly while they ticked away into space."

"That wonderful?" again interrupted the youngest grand-daughter. "Oh, poor, dear, unsophisticated granny. Did you really think telegraphing from one ship to another not twenty miles apart was wonderful?"

"We did think it wonderful," her grandmother replied. "Suddenly I heard the instruments begin to tick-tack. There was a shout.

"'It's our signal,' exclaimed Mr. Rogers. 'They must be answering. It can't be anyone else.'

"'They wish to know what we want,' the operator reported.

"'Say that Mr. Manton Lloyd is on board the "Erthania," and that his daughter—no, some one on important business wishes to communicate with him.'

"The instruments clacked busily.

"'Mr. Lloyd is there, and asks what is wanted of him.'

"Alec called me.

"'Your father is here,' he said, solemnly, though we were just out of the harbor, with no sign of papa in sight of course. 'What can you say to him now to make him change his mind?'

"'Say,' I began nervously, and all in a jumble, 'I want my promise back. That Alec Forbes and I have eloped, and that I am firm in my determination. That I will not yield, and that he must in the end, and had better give in now.'

"'Wait,' interrupted the operator. 'They are asking something. They wish to learn the gentleman's name.'

"'Mr. Forbes, Mr. Algernon Forbes,' I replied in surprise.

"'Tell him——' I began again.

"The operator held up his hand.

"'They are sending a message,' he said.

"'This is the message we received: 'Why didn't you let me know? I thought that it was the other man. You made everybody think so. Of course, Forbes is all right.'

"'Oh!' I gasped. 'He didn't see that it was you all the time!'

"'I don't very well see how he could,' Alec answered, crossly; 'I didn't.'

"'And I never thought to tell him,' I moaned, 'for I never thought of any one but you for an instant, and I had nothing but you in my mind.'

"'And he has sailed for Europe to escape,' Alec continued, grimly.

"'So he has,' I replied, blankly. 'Poor papa! And yet it's funny—' I turned to the operator. 'But please tell him now that I am very sorry.'

"'There is a message,' the man announced, and he wrote it out slowly, as the instrument ticked on.

"This was the message: 'Think I have got the worst of it. I'll be back with a wedding present. Bless you, my children, bless you.'

"And that was the end of my elopement," continued the nice old lady. "Mr. Rogers took us directly back to the city, and Alec and I were married at once with him for best man."

"Those funny old times!" mused the youngest grand-daughter. "How different they were. I never can believe that they were really true unless grandmamma tells me about them."

London Corset Club.

Judge Willis was much surprised at Southwark County Court yesterday to learn of the existence of a corset club. "Dear me," he exclaimed, "has it come to a stays club!"

It appears that a number of women pay sixpence a week each into a club, and that when 5 shillings have been subscribed, a pair of corsets is purchased, and lots are drawn to decide who shall possess them.

The defendant in the case which was being heard declared that she received the particular pair of corsets in dispute as a gift. She was asked by the Judge if she had them on.

"No," she replied. "They won't fit me, but I have them with me." And forthwith she produced the corsets, to the amusement of the court.

Finally His Honor decided they were not a gift, and gave judgment for the plaintiff.—[London Daily Mirror.

Prevent Moths.

Get a large dry goods box. Make cover of top by putting on hinges, and line with heavy carpet or tar paper. Tack paper so that there will be no chance for moths to get in, lining lid also. Pack away winter clothing with plenty of moth balls and newspapers. Set box on bricks or pieces of wood to raise it from floor. It will not get musty if left in basement or attic, and you will have no trouble with moths or dust. In winter it can be used to pack away the summer clothing.

Denver Women Form Land Club.

Settlers in the Little Snake River Valley reclamation district will be astonished when they take up their claims September 5 under the Carey act to find a group of Colorado's "new women" installed as their neighbors. This club is being formed by Miss Rose O. Owens of No. 1648 Williams street, Denver, and will be composed of enough young women to take up between them two full sections of land, 1280 acres.

Not wishing to be bothered with land agents and people desirous of selling or leasing their farms at an advanced figure, Miss Owens declines to divulge the names of her She declares that they into the project for the ting comfortably fixed the income from their the steady increase which they are certain the next few years.

Social Letters.

Unless a woman uses in her correspondence she social success, one reads in ator for August. A young wrote a letter of condolence whose husband had committed after defaulting. In the she sent a letter to her own which she intended to enclose tional newspaper clipping jest. By some fatal mishap the clipping into the wrong sent it to the widow with sympathy. The mistake was gotten or forgiven.

Letters of condolence are difficult to write. A calling scribed with the words, "With est sympathy," is an accepted which eliminates the jarring note.

RESOLVED

THAT SCHOOL IS NOT THE PROPER PLACE FOR A MENAGERIE. EVERY LITTLE BOY AND GIRL SHOULD GO TO SCHOOL, LOOK AT THE LITTLE FISHES; THEY ARE SEEN IN SCHOOLS VERY OFTEN. THAT'S WHY IT IS SAID THAT EATING FISH GIVES PEOPLE BRAINS. SOME PEOPLE WOULDN'T GET ANY BRAINS IF THEY SWALLOWED A COLLEGE. EDUCATION NEVER HURT ANYBODY YET; LIKE GOOD AIR, YOU CAN'T GET TOO MUCH OF IT. STANDING LOOKING AT THE MOON, WITH YOUR HANDS IN YOUR POCKETS, DOESN'T ENLIGHTEN THE MIND; IT ONLY MAKES YOUR HANDS WARM— GET A PAIR OF GLOVES FOR THAT. SCHOOL DAYS ARE YOUR HAPPIEST ONES. MANY A MAN WHO HAS PASSED THE SUMMER OF LIFE WOULD GIVE A LOT AND PERHAPS A HOUSE TO BE A SCHOOL BOY ONCE AGAIN.

THE BOOK OF BOOKS.

T Bible? It means The Book, no more, no less. The Scriptures? The same thing—the Writings. Is it arrogance on the part of Israel old and new of its collection of human thought by these It does not so seem to us. At the lowest reasonable estimate to be put on these writings, they form the most important book extant in any tongue. Mankind is judge. The verdict is made up and rests upon the majority of the intelligent of the earth.

The collection of writings comprising the Hebrew and Christian scriptures are extant in more languages than any other product of the human mind ever known. More copies of this work are sold in English each year during the current age than of any other writing. That statement is weakly inadequate to express the fact. There is no comparison between the Bible and any other book in the sale of copies in English. The sale runs to millions a year, and millions upon millions are sold if all tongues in which it is printed be taken. Again its influence has been greater for at least 3500 years than that of any other book. It has nerved martyrs to go to the stake and into the jaws of hungry lions without a tremor of fear. It forms the basis of the jurisprudence of all the leading nations of the world. It has created thrills of joy and lightened with hope eyes where millions of men and women have felt their feet touch the dark, cold waters which separate time from eternity. It makes more men and women honest, true and good than all the other writings ever penned.

Be it noted, we are not touching upon the origin of the book, nor discussing the inspiration or the interpretation of it. That is the special function of the pulpit, not of the press.

What are the indisputable facts about this Book of Books? First, it is not a book, but a collection of many separate treatises, the works of many minds and of many hands. There are two separate collections bound between the same covers. In the first volume, so to speak, the Hebrew scriptures, there are thirty-nine separate treatises. In the second part, the Christian scriptures, are twenty-seven separate treatises, making sixty-six books in the one Book. Some of these treatises set forth a cosmogony, or plan of creation. Others are codes of laws, governing in detail the private and public life of those who follow it. There are historical sketches of persons, of short episodes, and of considerable portions of the life of nations. There are pastoral idyls in prose, letters to persons and to communities, lyric poems, and the visions of seers who claimed the power of looking far into the future.

Taking the Book as it comes to us, and as the ripest scholars who have dealt with it instruct us, these sixty-six treatises cover in actual time of publication a period of nearly 1600 years. Assuming as the ablest critics do that Moses wrote portions of the first five books, and John the Revelation, the various writings come to us from almost 1500 B. C. to almost 100 A. D. There is a hiatus of about 300 years between the last Hebrew prophet and the first Christian evangelist.

These writers, of whom there were in the 1600 years at least forty, and probably half a hundred, were philosophers learned in all the erudition of their time, as Moses and Paul; kings, as David and Solomon; sketch, or story writers as those who penned Ruth, Esther and Jonah; poets, as Miriam, Moses, David and others; letter writers as Paul; biography writers as the evangelists, and seers as Ezekiel and John.

The first collection of these sacred writings was made 1000 years after the first writer made his laws and set them down on papyrus from the Nile. It was after the Babylonian captivity of Israel that Nehemiah made the first collection. This was about 500 B. C. It was 1500 A. D., shortly after the birth of the printing art and of the Reformation, that the "canon" of the Bible was finally made up. But there is no doubt that after the time of Moses the earliest treatises were read Sabbath after Sabbath in the synagogue, and in Christian worship the gospels and epistles were read Sunday after Sunday.

The apocryphal books are excluded from this consideration because their places in the Book is disputed by many branches of the Christian church. We are attempting to reduce the matter to such results as are fairly agreed upon by competent authority.

The foregoing statements do not by any means cover the whole story of the Book. Whatever hand Moses had in the composition of the books which bear his name, they go back far anterior to his time. The most profound critics in at least some instances insist that the song of Lamech, in one of the opening episodes in Genesis, is probably the oldest bit of human composition extant in any tongue. Some critics think the cosmogony of Genesis is of Babylonish origin, and was brought to Jerusalem in the days following the captivity, and contains two separate stories of creation dovetailed into one. This is not conceded by all critics. It might be Babylonish and have reached Egypt before the time of Moses. Egyptian learning was of wide scope, and the banks of the Euphrates and down into India had scholars, seers and poets before 1500 B. C. As little prejudiced a writer as Thomas Carlyle considers the book of Job as the oldest form of the drama extant. He thinks the author was a man of vast learning for his time, and one who had seen with his own eyes the glories of tropic scenes and the rigors of Arctic winters.

There is no other collection of writings in the world in any tongue which can take us back to such primitive conditions of life as the song of Lamech. Job is a drama reaching back to a far distant age, when thought was very simple, yet quite advanced. Some of the Psalms are as archaic in their grand simplicity as the best passages in Homer or Eschylus. No tongue presents an idyl more beautiful than Ruth, or a parable more artistic than the story of Jonah. The visions of Ezekiel and John are as bold in their soaring into the unseen as any literature of the world presents.

Surely here are facts, things undisputed by students who have exhausted human learning in their researches, on which to establish this collection of writings as the Book of Books and these as the scriptures surpassing all others in their human interest.

WON'T YOU BELIEVE?

I have seen the flitting fairies,
And I know the Fairy Queen
Every summer eve somewhere is
Dancing in her silv'ry sheen.

I can tell the tiny tinkle
Of each little elf at play,
Peeping from her periwinkle
When good children pass that way.

Oft I watch the shining shallops,
Bearing each a flower fay,
Race the night wind as it gallops
O'er the streamlet's starlit spray.

Every fairy longs to lisp her
Wonder-secret in your ear.
Listen! Don't you hear her whisper?
Don't you feel that she is near?

Won't you give her full permission,
Round your life her charm to weave?
For, though she's a fay-magician,
She must wait till you believe.

PRACTICAL ETHICS.

THE LAUGH THAT KILLS.

SATAN, or the Spirit of Evil, is always pictured as accomplishing his diabolical purpose with a sinister grin. "Smile, smile, and be a villain," is an old adage that has grown out of recognition of the fact that the same facial expression which may convey the appearance of the sweetest cordiality and confidence-inspiring good will, yet may have lurking behind it the blackest misanthropy or the intent of deepest treachery.

There is a laugh which, like the chiming sweetness of silver bells, or the tuneful ripple of musical waters, cheers the heart and invites the spirit to jest and to innocent abandonment to the hour brightened by the true ring of honest merriment flowing from the mirthful mood of convivial companionship. But there is another laugh, that rankles like a poisoned arrow in the human breast. It is a laugh that in its hollow, taunting tone, in its low, insinuating gurgle, or volume of ridicule and contempt is often as murderous a means when cleverly and persistently directed toward an enemy—as the deadliest weapon.

If the time shall ever come when civilization will have reached that high stage of spiritual advancement, that fine understanding of psychical laws which govern the relation between body and mind, then it will be considered no less a crime of the first degree to undermine the physical and moral health, and to kill by slow, subtle means another, out of sheer malice or revenge, than it now is held as the cardinal degree of guilt to deliberately commit the act of homicide by grosser material means.

Then, those who assassinate their victims with the weapon of skillfully-pointed public and private ridicule, and who with the fiendishly gleeful grin of Lucifer leave no chance unused to deride or to rail at the object of their wicked scorn—then, those who drive a human being to despair and to self-destruction by their vindictive, persecuting jest, will not be left free in destroying ribaldry to sound the laugh that kills.

How many a life of youth has been broken; how many a worthy ambition buried; how much valuable effort crippled; how many needed voices hushed by the blighting sneer or killing laugh! Man robbed of his worldly goods by the force of the elements, may bow in submission, and rise up to begin anew the labor of regaining that which he has lost, but man pursued by the demoniac hatred, the villainous jeer of man, soon sinks into a state of utter hopelessness from the thought that he is deprived of his dearest treasures, his most indispensable possessions—of hope and the spirit of enterprise. Hence he is like one cast adrift on the waters of time, aimlessly, dejectedly struggling against the overpowering sea which soon will engulf him.

There are natures so acutely sensitive to the pointing finger of unmerited scorn, so fearfully do they shrink from the cold, killing laugh of mock respect and smiting raillery of their foes, that severest chastisement would often be preferable in form of corporal punishment or moral rebuke, to merciless, unlimited exposure to a sweeping avalanche of vile caricature and ruinous ridicule.

If wrongdoers may be deterred from working harm to the community by having their folly or their vice jocularly exposed, or ludicrously and graphically depicted, or when misguided mortals cause the public to suffer from their exaggerated belief in their own self-importance, the method of laughing them into soberness and into sane conduct might prove efficacious. Again, when moral suasion has proved ineffective, and where a moderately-proportioned publication of their actions does not tend to lessen the trickery of rogues too sly to slip into the grip of the law, then let resort be had to the same method. So, too, if nothing else will avail to arouse them to a sense of integrity and fair dealing, then let us laugh to scorn conniving individuals and corporations, unscrupulous political officials and designing anarchists who would undermine the safety of the state or overthrow the government. Such as these particularly should be made to hear and to feel the public taunt and reproach as a goad to decency; failing in this, the marks of ridicule should next become a precursor of the more restrictive and sterner measures

Again it is sacrilegious to send the sting of derisive laughter into the profound stillness of the theater whose hush is produced by the fidelity and sincerity with which the artist renders his part as it is to giggle in the presence of the dead, or to give voice to profane laughter in the sacred edifice of the spiritual sanctuary.

Ah, it is the unwarranted, the unmerited laugh that slowly sickens even the strongest when its venom is introduced with sufficient frequency into the human system. Some there are who may and do recover from this as from other disease, becoming immune ever after. Others, of weaker fiber, lapse into a lingering illness, the fantastic horror of which they can never shake off; and so end in hopeless melancholy, or by striking the final blow themselves to make short their misery.

The verdict that we generally hear or read upon such a tragedy is: "Suicide by means of a deadly weapon or poisonous drug." But the real death occurred when the light of hope was extinguished and the presence of peace destroyed in the human heart. The frost of death smote the body when life became odious to the person inhabiting it; and every living day was made a hideous nightmare by the frenzied jibes—the persecuting ridicule or modern instruments of torture. Hence in truth, it is not alone the pistol shot, the flashing knife, or burning acid, but even if more slowly, just so surely there is also the laugh that kills!

Cairo in 1907. By Frank G. Carpenter.

GROWING RAPIDLY.

ALL ABOUT THE BIG CITY AT THE HEAD OF THE NILE DELTA.

From Our Own Correspondent.

CAIRO (Egypt.)—Stand with me on the Hill of the Citadel and take a look over Cairo. We are high above the River Nile, and far above the minarets of mosques which rise out of the vast plain of houses below. We are as high as the tops of the Pyramids, which stand out upon the yellow desert away off at the left. The sun is blazing, and there is a smoky haze over the Nile Valley, but it is not dense enough to hide Cairo. The city, which lies right under us, is the largest on this continent, and one of the mightiest of the world. It now contains a million inhabitants; and, in size, it is fast approximating Heliopolis and Memphis in the height of their glory.

Of all the Mohammedan cities of the world, Cairo is now growing the fastest. It already has only 100,000 less people than Constantinople. It is four times as big as Damascus, eight times as big as Bagdad and fifteen or twenty times the size of either Mecca or Medina, where the Prophet Mohammed was born and died. It has more than doubled its population since I last visited it, and with my glass I can now see the scaffolding about the new buildings which are rising here and there over the plains. The town now covers an area equal to fifty quarter-section farms; and its buildings are so crowded together that they form an almost continuous structure. The only trees to be seen are those in the new French quarter, which lies on the outskirts.

Mohammedan Cairo.

The most of the city is of Arabian architecture. It is flat-roofed, and is made up of yellowish-white buildings so crowded along narrow streets that they can hardly be seen at this distance. Here and there, out of the field of white, rise tall, round stone towers with galleries running about them. They dominate the whole city, and under each is a mosque. Those mosques are the Mohammedan churches. There are hundreds of them in Cairo, and not a few have been recently erected. Every one has its worshipers, and upon every tower, five times a day, the shrill-voiced Arabian priest calls out for the people to come to prayers. There is a man now calling from the minaret of the Mosque of Sultan Hasan, which is just under us. The mosque itself covers more than two acres, and the minaret is about half as high as the Washington Monument. The priest is standing on a gallery, with scaffolding above and below him. His mosque is being repaired, and $200,000 will be spent upon it when the present plans are completed. Just next it is another mosque, recently begun, and all about us we can see evidences that Mohammedanism is by no means dead, and that these people worship God with their pockets as well as with their tongues.

In the Alabaster mosque, which stands at my back, fifty men are now praying, and in the courtyard a score of others are washing themselves before they go in to make their vows of repentance to God and the Prophet. Not far below me I can see the mosque el-Azhar, which has been a Mohammedan university for more than a thousand years, and where something like 9000 students are now learning the Koran and Koranic law.

During my stay in Tunis the Mohammedans were celebrating their Lent or Ramadan, and not a one of the vast population of Tunisia, who believe in the Prophet, would take a bite to eat from sunrise to sunset, and the more devout would not even swallow their spittle. Here at Cairo I have seen the people preparing to take their pilgrimage to Mecca, rich and poor starting out on that long journey into the Arabian Desert. At present many go part of the way by water. The ships leaving Alexandria and Suez are crowded with pilgrims, and there is a regular exodus from Port Sudan and other places on this side of the Red Sea. They go across to Jeddah and there lay off their costly clothing and make their way inland, clad only in aprons and a piece of cloth over the left shoulder. This is so of the rich and the poor. Many of the former carry gifts and other offerings for the sacred city, and such gifts cost the Egyptian government alone a quarter of a million dollars a year. Not only the Khedive, but the Mohammedan rulers of the Sudan, send gifts, and I understand that the new railroad which has been recently completed from far up the Nile to the Red Sea is now giving special rates to pilgrimage parties. It is by no means safe to look upon Mohammedanism as a dead religion.

A Religion of the Lips.

And still I sometimes wonder whether this Mohammedanism is not a religion of the lips rather than of the heart. These people are so accustomed to uttering the words of prayer that they forget the sense. The use of the word God is heard everywhere in the bazaars. The water carrier, who goes about with a pigskin upon his back, jingling his brass cups to announce his business, cries out: "May God recompense me!" and his customer replies as he drinks by giving him a copper in name of the Lord. The lemonade peddler, who carries a glass bottle as big as a four-gallon crock, does the same, and I venture the name of the Deity is uttered here more frequently than in any other part of the world. It is through this custom of religious pretext that I am able to get free of the beggars of the city. I have learned two Arab words: "Allah yatik," which mean: "May God give thee enough and to spare." When a beggar pesters me, I say these words gently. He looks upon me in astonishment and then touches his forehead in a polite Mohammedan salute and goes away.

A City of the Egyptians.

The tourist who passes through Cairo and stays at the big hotels is apt to think that the city is fast becoming a Christian one. He is told that the British are its real governors, and as he drives over asphalt streets lined with the fine buildings of the European quarter it seems altogether English and French. If he is acquainted with many foreigners he finds them living in beautiful villas, or it may be in apartment houses such as [illegible] out of place in any city of Europe or of the [illegible] States. He does his shopping in modern [illegible] gradually comes to the conclusion that the [illegible] is fast passing away. This is not so. Cairo [illegible] the Egyptians. Not one-tenth of its [illegible] Christians, and it is the 800,000 or 900,000 [illegible] make up the life blood of this municipality. [illegible] people of a different world from ours, as we [illegible] we go down and stroll through the city. [illegible] ness in different ways, and they trade much [illegible] now as they have been trading for generations [illegible] Their stores are crowded along narrow streets [illegible] wind this way and that, so that one might [illegible] in them. Every branch of business has its own [illegible] In one place there are nothing but saddlers, [illegible] only shoemakers, and in another the workers [illegible] silver and brass. The booksellers and book[illegible] a street of their own; and so have the clothiers [illegible] ors. Nearly every store is a factory as well, [illegible] of the goods offered you are made in the shops.

I have been in most of the great bazaars of the [illegible] and I know of none more interesting than [illegible] Cairo. In them thousands are buying and selling, [illegible] each narrow street has a stream of color which [illegible] back and forth all day long. From the top of [illegible] key this stream is red and white upon a bed [illegible] and blue. The red is the fez caps and the white [illegible] bans, while the blacks and blues are the gowns [illegible] people below them. The sides of the streets are [illegible] with the goods hanging out of each little shop, and [illegible] whole is like wandering through a world's fair in [illegible] the exhibitors are dark-faced, turbaned, [illegible] men, who sit cross-legged on carpets, with all the [illegible] ures of the Orient piled about them.

The Cairo of the Arabian Nights.

Although the foreigner and his innovations [illegible] everywhere in evidence, native Cairo is much [illegible] now as it was in the days of the Arabian Nights. [illegible] people believe the same as they did then; [illegible] same costumes; the women are as closely veiled, [illegible] the characters of the days of Haroun Al Raschid [illegible] be seen. Here the visionary Alnascher [illegible] narrow, cell-like store, with his basket of glass [illegible] him. He has a long water pipe in his mouth [illegible] ing on the profits he will make from peddling [illegible] growing richer and richer, until the Khedive [illegible] to offer him his daughter in marriage, and he [illegible] her as she kneels before him. We almost [illegible] the glass turned over as it was in the story, [illegible] castles in the air shattered with his kick. [illegible] is a turbaned Mohammedan who reminds [illegible] the Sailor, and a little further on is a Barmecide [illegible] ing his hands with invisible soap in invisible [illegible] apparently inviting his friends to come and [illegible] feast with him. Here two long-gowned, [illegible] men are sitting on a bench drinking coffee [illegible] there a straight, tall maiden, robed in a gown [illegible] from her head to her feet and with a long [illegible] covering all of her face but her eyes, [illegible] wares of a handsome young Syrian, [illegible] how the houris shopped in the days of the [illegible]

Donkeys and Camels.

Oriental Cairo is a city of donkeys and [illegible] the French quarter you may have a modern [illegible] cents a ride, or you may jump on the electric [illegible] and go a long distance for from 2½ to [illegible] may even hire an automobile to carry you [illegible] phalt. The streets of the native city are [illegible] for such things, and you are crowded to the [illegible] and again for fear that the spongy feet of the camels may tread upon you. You are grazed by loaded donkeys, carrying grain, bricks or bags on their backs; and the donkey boy who is trotting behind an animal ridden by some rich Egyptian or his wife calls upon you to get out of the way. The donkey is the best means of getting around through the native city and cheapest. You may hire one for two hours for 20 cents, for a half day for 50 or 60 cents, and all day for a dollar. Every riding animal is numbered. My donkey of today was named "California," and the number on his saddle was 977.

The characters of these bazaars are odd to an extreme, and one must have an educated eye to know who they are. Take that man in a green turban; he is looked up to by his fellows. Your dragoman will tell you that he has a sure passport to heaven, and that the turban is a sign that he has made the pilgrimage to Mecca and thus earned the right to the colors of the prophet. Behind him comes a fine-featured, yellow-faced man in a blue gown wearing a turban of blue. You ask your guide who he may be, and are told, with a sneer, that he is a Copt. He is one of the Christians of modern Egypt, and has descended from the fanatical band which Charles Kingsley describes in his novel "Hypatia." Like all of his class he is intelligent, and like most of them well dressed. The Copts are among the shrewdest of the business Egyptians, and with the prosperity now common in the Valley of the Nile, they are growing in wealth. They are money-lenders and are also land speculators. Many of them have offices under the government, and not a few have amassed fortunes. Some of them are very religious, and some can recite the Bible by heart. They are different from their neighbors in that they believe in having only one wife.

The Girls of Cairo.

But the crowd in these streets is by no means all men. There are women scattered here and there through it, and such women! Talk about your peek-a-boo waists! The Cairo girls have peek-a-boo veils. All their bodies with the exception of their eyes are hidden, and one has to look close through the slits in their veils to see whether their skins are white, black or brown. They are by no means good-looking as they walk through the streets. Those of the better classes are clad in cloaks of black bombazine made so full that they hide every outline of the person. Some have their cloaks tied in at the waist, and they look like black bed ticks walking off upon legs. Here one raises her skirts, and you see that she has on zouave bloomers which fall to her ankles; they make me think of the fourteen-yard breeches worn by the girls of Algiers. The poorer women wear gowns of blue cotton, and a single gown and veil make up a whole costume. Some of them carry babies astride their hips or their shoulders, and the babies are often as naked as when they were born. Not a few of the ladies have eunuchs to go about with them. The latter are as black as my hat, and as sour as the Sphinx. They are to keep the young women from flirting, as they shop in the bazaars.

Nearly all of the women have their faces covered. In the oriental quarters you will not meet any, except the very lowest of the peasants, who has not a long veil of black crepe six inches wide reaching from just below her eyes to her ankles. This is stitched at the corners to her headdress, and fastened in the center by a brass spool four inches long, which covers the bridge of the nose. The eyelids of most of the women are blackened with kohl; they have thick black eyelashes, and one often imagines them beautiful until the wind blows away a veil and you find out the contrary.

The New Cairo.

In striking contrast with Egyptian Cairo is the new European section which has grown up on its edge. That part of the city is having a boom; and lots which sold for [illegible] a square yard two years ago are now bringing [illegible]. There are instances where ground is selling for eighteen times as much as it did in 1905. Property is going up all over this section, and an enormous amount of building is being done. Rents are so rising that the poor Europeans are moving out into the suburbs, and the city promises to have a suburban development just as we have about our American towns.

European Cairo is a city of wide streets, paved with asphalt. It is a city of electric lights and sanitary improvements. It has fine residences, surrounded by gardens filled with tropical plants and trees; and its better stores carry goods which would sell readily in Paris or New York. One can buy almost anything from anywhere in the world at these stores. This is especially so of such wares as are in demand by the tourists and the rich do-nothing class. The peddler of antiquities and fine china, of jewelry and of oriental rugs is also here in all his glory, and during the season he does a big business.

Cairo has many doctors and dentists. The doctors charge $5 a visit whether you see them at their offices or at your hotel. The dentists are mostly Americans, and they are not here for their health. The town is one of newspapers, libraries and clubs. It has its daily journals, in which you can read the telegrams in French, English and Arabic; and it has its loud-mouthed newsboys, who cry the papers on the streets. My shoes are blacked every morning by a boy wearing a turban, and his charge is 2 cents a shine.

Cairo has a good postal system, with a letter delivery several times a day, and it has hundreds of policemen, both on foot and on horseback. A policeman stands in the center of every street crossing to see that all carriages go to the left instead of the right; and there are enough police in every section to make life and property safe.

Cairo's Big Hotels.

Cairo is one of the winter resorts of the world. It is thronged during the season with Europeans and Americans. There are thousands of our rich citizens here every year, and they leave millions of dollars in Egypt. Thirty thousand tourists visited the Valley of the Nile last winter, and it is safe to say that they left upward of $10,000,000.

The hotels of Cairo increase in size and number every year. They are run by syndicates with large capital, and they pay big dividends. Shepheard's, which is so well known everywhere, has 400 beds. The Savoy has 180. The Hotel Continental 300, the Ghezireh Palace can accommodate 400 guests at one time, and the Mena Hotel, right under the Pyramids, has 180 rooms. All these hotels have modern improvements and they charge you roundly for them. At Shepheard's I pay $8 a day for a double-bedded room for myself and son, and in addition there is a charge of 10 cents a day for electric lights. If I have my breakfast in my room that is an extra, and if I am not in the dining-room, at just the moment when dinner begins, I find the doors closed, and have to go to the grill room and pay extra for whatever I order. Four or five dollars per person per day for room and board is the usual price at the first-class Egyptian hotels, and this is so at Alexandria and all up and down the Nile Valley. The prices are somewhat less during the summer and fall; but at such times many of the hotels are closed, the most of them running only during December, January, February and March.

Many people come here to spend the winter, and many find it so cold that they have to leave. It seems to me that the advantages of Cairo as a health resort have been greatly overrated. For the last year or so the city has had an epidemic of dengue or breakbone fever during the winter, and there is scarcely a man, woman or child who has escaped. The climate is better farther up the Nile Valley.

Some California Legends.

WEIRD AND THRILLING TALES OF THE OLDEN DAYS.

By a Special Contributor.

A HAUNTED house in the family sends delicious shivers down the spinal cord of the ancestral tree, but even more delightfully spooky is the possession of a haunted mine, and such a boast California can make on the authority of early legend.

Once upon a time, in the days of old and the days of gold, a miner by the name of Thomas Bowers lived and delved in the vicinity of Pike City.

A shy, silent man was Thomas, doing his prospecting without a partner and even holding aloof from the jolly company of the other miners after the day's work was done. And in the same shy, silent way that he had lived he died—noiseless footsteps across the snow to the brink of the slope where he had been prospecting, and at the foot of a landslide his speechless body—alone in death.

After his remains were buried, decently and in order, there were excited whispers about strange noises at the mouth of the old shaft, and soon, quite incidentally, of course, the mine was abandoned.

The greed of gold, however, taps impatiently at closed doors, and after some little time a thriftless miner hoping for a short cut to wealth undertook to work the old mine again, and suddenly surprised his creditors by paying his bills. But things flowed not as smoothly as they seemed. There was many a slip of nerve between nugget and pick. Every morning the miner found that his sluice had been tampered with, that during the night the water had been turned on by unknown hands. Yet the most diligent search led to no discovery and as a last hope of untangling the clammy mystery the miner one evening inaugurated a watch, well-armed with rifle.

The shadows deepened into darkness, into an absolute blackness. Suddenly, while reconnoitering, a phosphorescent light attracted his attention, and as he boldly advanced toward it he discovered a placard hung from a tree, a sort of spectral transparency, it seems, bearing the following words "Notice! I, Thomas Bowers, claim this ground for placer mining."

When the reader's mind had recovered from its earthquake of astonishment the miner made a snatch at the placard. A pricking thrill went through his fingers, as though they had taken liberties with an electric battery. The luminous writing was gone, but in his ears roared the flowing water of the sluice, and through the roar the sharp, clear-cut tap tap of a pick. Again the flash of warning light—and before him stood Tom Bowers.

The California miner is no coward. The rifle was lifted, fired. With a yell of rage the ghost, brandishing pick and shovel in excited arms, pursued the trespasser.

A race between life and death in a new sense was the one that followed—all the way to Pike City. There, the other miners, celebrating a new find by a dance in a saloon, were suddenly alarmed by terrified screams. Running out, they found—neither man nor ghost, but tossed upon the ground a rifle, and a pick and a shovel with the initials T. B. cut in the handle.

A legend of an entirely different type is connected with the same period of California history.

During the rush for gold in the fifties, a party came west by the Gila River route. The heat was intense. The supply of water gave out. On the hot, barren sands just below Yuma the dying cavalcade pitched their desperate camp.

In the silence of the early night, from one of the wagons came the prattling voice of a little child lifted in prayer:

"Do dear God, give us water, and I never will be naughty again."

And scarcely had the petition gone up to the stars when the sound of running water was heard and up from the dry, hot sands bubbled a pure, life-giving spring.

The water of this New River, as it was called, swept north for twenty miles, at one place spreading into a deep lake two miles wide, but when migration went by the northern route, the pretty tradition naively ends, no longer needed, the New River's spring dried up.

Perhaps no more desolate spot can be pictured than Death Valley with its terrific heat, its lack of water, the soda dust of its plains strewn with mummified animals and the bleached bones of lost prospectors. But fair and fertile once lay the valley, a flourishing pueblo ruled over by a beautiful queen.

Alas! the beauty was only skin-deep, and ambition alone ruled a cold, cruel heart. A palace to surpass the houses of the neighboring Aztecs was her dream, and she cared not how many lives might be sacrifled in speeding the labor.

For miles the tribe carried stone and timber, and when they faltered by the wayside she lashed their naked backs. So sacred was royalty regarded that her people dared not protest, but in her zeal to have the palace erected before accident or possible death, she had forced her daughter even to join the throng of workers, and when the lash was lifted against her own flesh and blood, the princess turned, before sinking down in death from exhaustion, and cursed both her mother and the kingdom.

The gods answered quickly. The sun sent down a heat so fierce that the streams dried up, vegetation became scorched, the animals sought new abodes, while queen and people died as though by plague.

But in the midst of the desolation, the palace half-completed may be seen to this day—if fortune favors the traveler with a mirage.

An amusing ghost story haunts the early history of Santa Barbara Island.

Such were the awful noises heard by ships in passing that every sailor on board devoutly crossed himself, convinced that it was the headquarters of swimming and flying monsters. Unfortunately for the sailors' yarns, it was latterly discovered that some shipwrecked cats had landed on the island, their numerous progeny living sumptuously on dead fish and the eggs and the young sea fowl.

Long before the first white man entered Kern county, that locality was inhabited by a superior race far advanced in arts and devout worshipers of the Great Spirit. In fact, one of their number so excelled in wisdom that the others fell down and worshipped him. And in jealous anger the Great Spirit caused the earth to shake and swallow up the entire population, afterward wiping out every vestige of their idolatry by pouring water into the valley until it became an inland sea.

Later repenting him of the evil and in impatience over his own vengeance, the Great Spirit threw up the earth smoking with heat into the Sierra Nevada Mountains; broke away the hills damming up the lake at its foot, and drained off the water into the sea at the Golden Gate. Then he opened the mouth of the earth and released the Jonahs from their long captivity.

Little took they the lesson to heart. No sooner had the place blossomed into beauty again than they fell into idolatry once more, the worshiped chief going so far as to challenge the Great Spirit to single combat. The answer was a thrust of the gage in their very faces. The race was exterminated forever by a horde of savages from the Mojave Desert, while a whirlwind swept away all vegetation.

But if we are tracing back to the origin of things we must dig deeper, till we reach the legend of Mt. Shnsta, the very first part of the earth to be created.

The Great Spirit broke a hole in the floor of heaven with a huge rock, and went on throwing down more rocks until he could step from the sky upon the top of the pile.

Then caressingly he touched the sides of the heap with his hands, and forests sprang into being. Leaves from the trees he plucked and breathed upon until they fluttered into the air, fleet-winged birds. Beasts and fishes he also formed from his staff.

And so in love he became with the mountain of his creation that he hollowed it out into a wigwam "where he dwelt for centuries, the smoke of his lodge fire being often seen pouring from the cone before the white man came."

MAY C. RINGWALT.

REST.

"Come unto Me—And I will give Thee rest."

A human soul storm-tossed and torn,
  A human heart made sad;
A brain half-crazed with weary thought,
  A form with sorrow clad.

O weary one, who's long absorbed
  Life's cares and bitter pain,
O poor bruised soul, with sorrow fraught,
  Come rest your tortured brain.

For every tear a smile perchance
  May cross upon your way;
For every sigh that's uttered
  You'll sing a minstrel lay.

It may be long in coming, dear;
  And tears fall thick and fast,
But rest assured and live in faith
  The balm will come at last.

The Swastika Fad.

STORY OF THIS GOOD LUCK SIGN NOW BEING PRODUCED.

By a Special Contributor.

THE "swastika" fad, which started in France, is sweeping over America from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Everywhere we are seeing this oldest of known symbols on scarfpins, hatpins, belt buckles, pocket-books, embroideries, pottery and what not. In the revival of this mysterious design history is oddly repeating itself. It was the fad of the primitive decorators of the bronze and iron ages in Europe, Asia, Africa and America long before history dawned, and now, after a hiatus of countless millenniums, it again takes the lead in human preference.

Although this prehistoric symbol is now seen everywhere in the land and is being worn by hundreds of thousands of people, only a small percentage of its beholders or of its wearers, even, can so much as name it. As to its origin, no one knows that—not even the archeologists who have spent lifetimes in endeavoring to fathom its mysteries. It was invented long before history dawned and had reached the new world long before Columbus, or even Lief Ericsson, had put foot upon American soil.

Universal Good Luck Sign.

The swastika is a cross whose four arms, of equal length, are bent at right angles and in the same direction, right or left. Although the symbol has been called by many names in many lands, nearly all countries have now accepted for it the ancient Sanskrit name "swastika," a word which illustrated the sounds of the letter A in Sanskrit grammar. In the estimation of various writers it has been respectively the emblem of the sun, rain, sky and fire gods of various primitive peoples; of Zeus, the ruling god of the Greeks, and, in some primitive religions, of the great God, the Maker and Ruler of the universe. It has also been variously held to symbolize light, the forked lightning and water. It is believed by some to be the oldest symbol of the Aryan peoples, while in the estimation of others it represents Brahma. It appears in the footprints of Buddha, engraved upon rock on the mountains of India. It was also used in connection with Jupiter, the ruling god of the Romans, and with the Scandinavian deity, Thor. But at all times the swastika appears to have been a charm or amulet, a sign of benediction, blessing, long life, good fortune or good luck.

For what is known about the swastika today the world is chiefly indebted to Dr. Thomas Wilson of Washington, who until his recent death was curator of prehistoric anthropology in the United States National Museum. He made an exhaustive study of its migrations, and before he announced his results not even the word "swastika" appeared in either Webster's or Worcester's dictionary, while but one of our popular encyclopedias had a reference to it, and that was erroneous. Dr. Wilson found the insignia in the antiquities of Persia and Egypt, of the prehistoric bronze age in Europe and of all the countries of the extreme Orient. From these most ancient habitations of man he traced it into Africa and America.

Was on the Breast of Buddha.

In Japan it was found on statues of Buddha, one of which had eight such emblems upon its bronze pedestal. He also found that the Japanese employed it on their porcelains and bronzes. He discovered it on articles from Korea, China, Thibet and India. During a visit to the Chinese legation in Washington he found it on the state robes of one of the attachés and was told that in the Chinese language it indicated "many," "a great number"—figuratively, "long life" or "many years." Through the Chinese Minister he received abstracts from historical Chinese works on the origin of the emblem in China. Among these was the work of an ancient Buddhist priest describing the original Buddha as having the Swastika mark on his breast. He received through the legation a series of India ink drawings illustrating the symbol used in this way, also as a sign for the sun, etc. According to this data, it was the practice of the ancient Chinese to endeavor on the 7th day of the seventh month of each year to have spiders weave the swastika on their webs and to thus be assured of good luck. This material also showed that the Chinese Emperor Tai Tsung over 1100 years ago issued a decree forbidding the use of the swastika on silk fabrics manufactured for any purpose. Perhaps a swastika fad then rampant in China got on this emperor's nerves.

Prevents the Evil Eye.

That it is common for the people of Thibet to tattoo the swastika on their hands Dr. Wilson learned through W. W. Rockhill, our present Minister to China, who visited Thibet some years ago. It was learned also that the Thibetan women ornament their petticoats in this way and that it is also placed on the breasts of their dead. The symbol was found, too, upon Thibetan statues of Buddha. Besides appearing upon the carved footprints of Buddha, in India, this sign was found on ancient Buddhist medals of the same empire. Today in certain parts of India parents of young children liable to the "evil eye" draw it on their walls, beside their doorposts or paint it upon the shaven heads of their little ones when there is a wedding in the family. In Persia the symbol is found on ancient coins and modern rugs. On a bas-relief left by the Hittites it forms a border of the robe of a king or priest offering a sacrifice to a god. It was used also in the Caucasus as early as the first age of iron and is still used there in modern times for the branding of Circassian horses.

Many specimens of the swastika were dug out of the ruins of ancient Troy by Henry Schliemann. Some were found even among the remains of the first or oldest of the seven cities excavated. In this land of the fair Helen the ancient symbol was mostly used to decorate stone spindle whorls, although it was found also on pottery, balls, idols and vases of the Trojans.

Used in 3000 B.C.

Swastikas dating back to three millenniums before Christ have been found on pottery dug Egypt. Others are found on the art works Egyptians, down through the dynasties ence. They have been discovered on objects bronze and gold belonging to the ancient is remarkable that the Greek vases on which tika appears in largest proportion are the belonging to what antiquarians call the The ancients of Cyprus put the sign even their statues, including one of Aphrodite of a centaur. It was employed in Italy through epochs of the Etruscan and Roman and into tian period. It was used in France during and iron ages and after the occupation of lius Caesar. The tribes of ancient Britain punched it into their bronzes kelion" which formed the armorial Island of Sicily and also of the Isle of Man have been a modification of it.

But that the swastika found its way to prehistoric times is much more remarkable fact that it was so widely scattered over the with its connected grand divisions. Dr. Palmer, while excavating certain haunts of mound builders, found it on a shell ornament a mound on Fains Island, Tennessee. The this shell ornament is inclosed by a circle son was the first to recognize it as a find suggested to Dr. Wilson an investigation evidences of communication between the prehistoric western hemispheres.

Buddhism Here Before White Man?

Whether there was Buddhism on our continent the advent of the whites, was one of the first which suggested themselves to him. While searches along this line he happened to find tional Museum a mutilated and damaged with another swastika by an employé of the Ethnology excavating ruins of the mound Big Toco mound, Monroe county, Tennessee. shell bears a human figure which to all represents one of the Buddhist divinities. is similar to that of the hundreds of other prehistoric mound builders found in the parts of its style are different from other North American aborigines. The figure knees outward and feet brought together, most. It has a slim waist, winged arms, broad toes, and triple lines of garters or showing different characteristics of physique from those of the ancient North Americans. ure, taken in connection with the swastika associated with the Buddhists in the Orient, above, presented a group of circumstances Wilson thought to go a long way toward evidence of the migration of Buddhists from its presence among our Indians before the this continent by Europeans. This theory, was favored in a series of essays by M. Gus thal, a Frenchman writing in 1864-65. Five cut out of thin worked copper were also the ruins of one of the famous Ohio mound the Hopewell mound, at Chillicothe.

The Indians Used It.

Our mound builders having made the by no means remarkable that many such been found among their descendants, the white man has known them. The Kansas riors, who removed the hearts of slain them in the fire as a sacrifice to the winds, chart bearing the swastika as a sign for the Sac Indians called the swastika the luck." It was embroidered upon the ters of their sun worshipers; also by those apoos, Pottawatomies, Iowas and Sac squaws used the swastika in the silk which they make ashes and skirt

BUDDHA-LIKE CARVING OF MOUND BUILDERS FOUND WITH SWASTIKA IN TENN.

Pueblo Indians of the southwest use the swastika on their dance rattles and pottery. The Navajos reproduce it on their many-colored ceremonial charts of dry sand, and on the war shields of the Pimas it appears in the same peculiar form as found elsewhere only in Europe. The swastika was known not only to our aborigines, but to those of Nicaragua, Yucatan, Costa Rica, Brazil and Paraguay.

How the swastika became thus widely distributed on both continents has been discussed by many ethnologists. Dr. Daniel G. Brinton argued that it, like the cross, was a design simple enough to have been invented independently by many primitive tribes—to have originated in many places by designers ignorant of the fact that others had designed it elsewhere. Dr. Wilson, after assembling all of the data above abstracted, concluded that the swastika was not simple enough to have come to the minds of many persons. He found that it was almost unknown among Christian peoples; that it was not included in any of the modern European or American decorative designs or works on decoration. He discovered that its use in modern times has been confined principally to oriental and Scandinavian countries—countries which hold close relations with antiquity; in Western Europe, where the swastika was most frequent in ancient times, it has become extinct in the last 1000 or 2000 years. He found it used on the same style of ooject in Europe, Asia and America. He came to the conclusion that the distribution of the swastika was due to migration, contact or communication between the peoples of the old and new world as early as the time of the mound builders, the oldest civilization in America, who flourished prior to any historic knowledge which we have of communication between the two hemispheres; that some immigrants from the old world brought this symbol to America long before the days of Lief Ericsson, who is alleged to have landed here about A. D. 1000. As to the swastika's migrations in the old world it has been held that the Phoenicians, finding it in the Orient, brought it across the Persian Gulf to Asia Minor and Cyprus, other peoples bringing it by the overland route from Central Asia and Asia Minor.

Is One Form of the Cross.

"I have come to regard the swastika as merely one form of the cross, the distinction being merely one of detail," said Prof. W. H. Holmes, chief of the Bureau of Ethnology, when I asked him for his theory as to the origin of the symbol. "The cross as a religious symbol, in one form or another, came into existence long before the beginning of the Christian era—so far beyond the beginnings of history, indeed, that there is not the least possibility of obtaining definite knowledge of its earliest origin. The cross was in very general use in America at the time of the discovery. In nearly all branches of art in which surface ornament is an important factor the spaces available for decorative designs are rectangles, circles and ovals, or parallelograms for ready treatment. When simple figures are fitted into these spaces they are introduced in fours, thus filling the spaces evenly and systematically. This quadruple arrangement in a multitude of cases produces a cross."

A VENETIAN PAGEANT.

Had I timed my visit to Venice I could not have done better, for I assisted at a ceremony that originally took place nearly 400 years ago, and will never take place again. I was present at the funeral of a doge! Now Venice has not been ruled by a doge for more than a hundred years, but this particular doge, Sebastiano Veniero, died over 300 years ago and was decently buried at Murano, and one might have supposed that that was the end of him. This was not, however, the place indicated in his will; no attention was paid to his wishes until his remains, with the heart intact, were brought to Venice in June last. Then all that was left of this intrepid doge and brave soldier—for he commanded the Venetian flotilla at the battle of Lepanto in 1571—was placed in the church of S. Giovanni and Paolo, where his statue done by Antonio Dal-Zotto stands in a conspicuous place. I had been saying all the time I was in Venice that it was a great pity one could not see the gondolas decked in gay colors and manned by gaily-dressed gondoliers as in the days of the doges; and then, as though by the touch of a necromancer's wand, I was taken back nearly 400 years. I had not heard of the funeral, and was drifting about idly in my gondola when the scene of splendor burst upon my gaze. You may be surprised at the idea of a funeral being a scene of splendor, but the barge in which the remains of the great Veniero lay was gay in red velvet and cloth of gold, and was towed by a gorgeous gondola with gondoliers in the costumes of his day. In the one black covered gondola sat a cardinal in robes of scarlet, and behind him in an open gondola draped in black came the surviving Veniero, the one living descendant of the fighting doge, an old man the very image of his ancestor, dressed in black broadcloth with a deep mourning band upon his tall hat. There was nothing more interesting in the whole pageant than this gray-bearded descendant of the great doge: the last of his line, too, for my gondolier told me, with a tone of reproach in his voice, that Signor Veniero, though rich, was a bachelor. As the funeral cortege floated by, we followed it to the doge's palace, where it landed and was met by a cortege of soldiers and sailors and a military band playing a funeral march: the very march, I should say, judging from the style of the music, that was played at this doge's first funeral, centuries ago.—["The Lounger," in October Putnam's.

Electric Trunk Line.

CONSTRUCTION WORK IN PROGRESS ON A BIG RAILWAY.

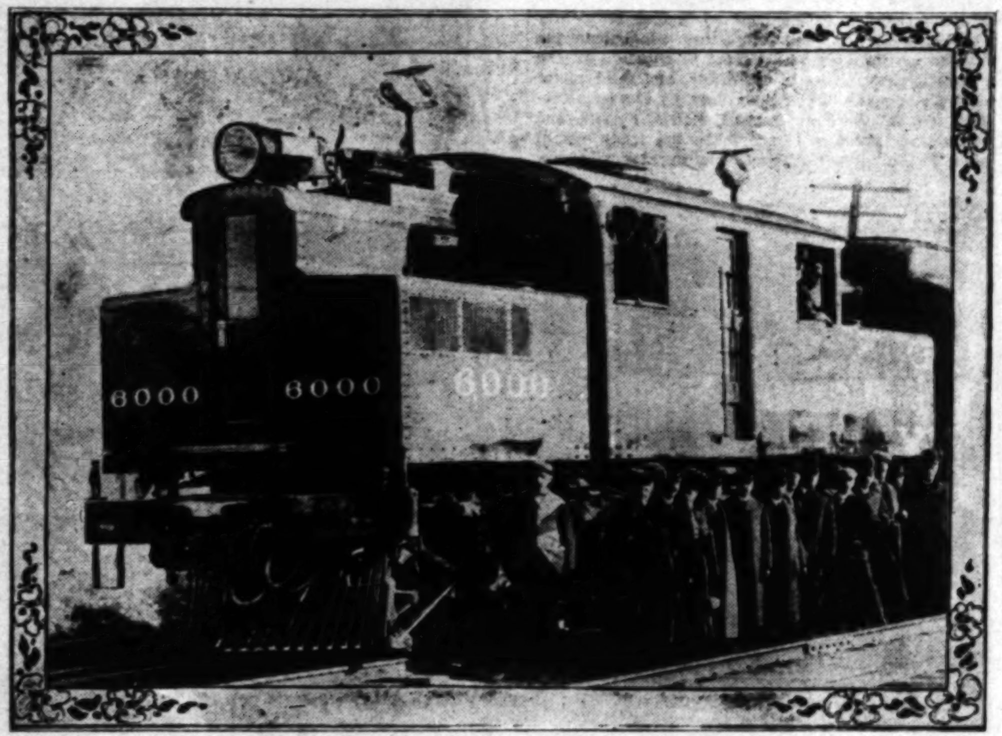
By a Special Contributor.

TRANSCONTINENTAL trains, driven by electricity instead of steam, long the dream of railroad experts, are apparently on the verge of being put into actual use, and on a big scale. Moreover, the electric power that is to drive mighty engines and haul heavy cars will be generated from the swift-running waters of a river, thus utilizing a power that is too often permitted to go to waste.

The work of installing such a road is actually under way by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul company, and in a couple of years the swift waters of the St. Joe River in Idaho will give the energy that will carry freight and passenger trains across the Bitter Root Mountains and possibly all the way from Missoula, Mont., to the Pacific Coast.

That this is the age of electricity has long been recognized, but the displacement of steam engines by electric has not been as rapid as was forecasted a few years ago.

Electric engines have been substituted for steam for pulling trains through tunnels in the Rocky and Cascade Mountains, while James J. Hill of the Great Northern Railroad, has long planned to use electricity instead of steam on the large part of his lines. Heretofore, however, the matter has been simply discussed. The Milwaukee Railroad is the first to expend large sums of money to put the plan into actual operation. It now has over 2000 men at work along the shadowy St. Joe River in Idaho, drilling tunnels, building roadbed, cutting down forests and making corduroy trails over morasses and harnessing the power of the river by means of a system of dams.



TYPE OF ENGINES TO BE USED WITH ELECTRIC MOTIVE POWER.

The roadbed will be opened in less than three years, when electric power will be utilized in lifting great freight and passenger trains over one system of mountains, and possibly over a second.

The stretch of the new line of transcontinental railroad between the Bitter Root Range, in Idaho, and Rock Lake, Wash., is one of constantly recurring tunnels. As the survey now stands, there will be fourteen tunnels on about 150 miles of line, the aggregate length being 10,000 feet, ranging from the 4000-foot tunnel in Lost Pass to the numerous small bores through projecting cliffs not more than fifty feet long.

Following as the line does the very brink of the St. Joe River, it would have been strange if the engineers had not devised some scheme for utilizing the power which is wantonly wasted. The value of the river on the swiftwater division will be apparent when it is known that theoretically 200,000 horse-power can be developed in one reach of thirty-five miles. Dams will be built as closely together as possible and practically every available cubic foot in the river will be harnessed. The cost of development is about $50 per horse power. Approximately $9,000,000 will be expended in this work.

Enough power can be developed, if converted into steam power, to drive 500 big Mogul engines with 160 miles of train, or 20,000 loaded box cars, more than the company now owns on all its lines. But a small part of this vast energy will be necessary to lift the trains to the summit of the Bitter Root Range and to drive them through the 150 miles of recurring tunnels. It is proposed to utilize the residue in propelling the trains still further toward the Pacific Coast goal.

In the thirty-five-mile reach where the power is to be developed the railroad survey runs on a four-tenths of 1 per cent. compensated grade. That is, the grade of the curves is reduced enough below four-tenths of 1 per cent. to compensate for the increased friction. About three-tenths of 1 per cent. is the actual grade, equivalent to 15.8 feet to the mile or 553 feet for the entire distance. Roughly estimated, the minimum flow of the river is 1500 cubic feet per second.

Two and possibly three dams will be constructed, the survey men being already at work. One of the falls will be a few miles above the little sawmill and summer resort town of St. Joe, where a dam 86 feet high will assist in the development of 500-horse power. Another dam is to be built at Cottonwood Island, ten miles further up the river. The construction of the series of dams will result in the overflow of the bottom lands, but these have already been bought up by the company. A ranch recently purchased for $26,000, or $125 an acre, is to be completely submerged.

In many cases a dam from 50 to 100 feet high will back water several miles up the river, although it would spread but a few feet above either bank. As the average height of the roadbed is not more than forty feet above low water the height of the dams is necessarily limited. The dam shortly above St. Joe, at what is known as Little Falls, is to be 86 feet high and will back the water twelve miles up the river.

In addition to running the transcontinental trains, the water power developed is to be utilized in running sawmills, which are invading the territory, heretofore given over to trout, Indians and infrequent, hardy tourists.

One company, subsidiary to the railroad company, has recently acquired 100,000 acres of timber land in northern Idaho, 28,000 acres of which are tributary to the river and the new line of railroad. Some of this timber runs as high as 10,000,000 cubic feet to the quarter section.

Hundreds of thousands of acres of timber land lie right alongside the St. Joe River. The logs have heretofore been floated down to sawmills at the mouth. Hereafter it is proposed to convert them into lumber at the scene of the felling, and transport them to eastern and western markets by the converted power of the river itself.

Tributary to the St. oJe, St. Maries and Coeur d'Alene River and Coeur d'Alene Lake, it is estimated there are 25,000,000,000 feet of standing timber, or enough to keep all the mills at the half dozen established sawmill towns in operation 150 years, during which time nearly three full-grown crops will have matured.

The work of surveying the roadbed, harnessing the swift waters of the St. Joe and laying out the proposed sawmills, has meant many arduous and hazardous engineering feats. Surveyors have been compelled to dangle over a cliff at the end of a rope fifty feet long a half hour at a time before being able to establish a level. Mountains of rock have been blasted down and great cuts filled up. In some places the cost of construction is aggregating a million dollars a mile.

The work has been inspected by President Earling and other high officials, who made a tour of the western reaches of the line recently.

THE PANAMA "CABBY."

As soon as you leave the Colon docks, the cabmen will greet you with all the tricks of the trade. The drivers along Front street have their "bobs" and their "two-bits," just as do the picturesque men on the Strand. By this time you will have been handed a 20-cent "spickety" silver piece of the Panamian republic, which you may have mistaken for your native "quarter." But save that supposed "quarter;" it is worth 10 cents in the currency of the gold-standard nations, and it is all you need to pay the cab driver when you take your second drive along Front street.—[Travel Magazine.

The Geysers.

A VISIT TO CALIFORNIA'S GREAT HOT SPRINGS.

By a Special Contributor.

"When the devil first fell—'tis a story they tell—
He feasted one day, just hard by, sirs,
His gravy did spill on the opposite hill,
And it's boiled ever since in The Geysers."

THIS is the way a rhymster explained it away back in 1865 when he registered at the hotel hidden among the giant oaks and madrones, and far enough from the brink of the Devil's Cañon to be free from the odors and the steam of the Devil's Kitchen. The Geysers had been discovered almost twenty years before by William B. Elliot, who, while hunting one day, climbed a mountain wall and found himself gazing down into a very inferno of seething steam, heavy with sulphur fumes borne from bubbling caldrons among the rocks below.

For nearly twenty years the visitors to this, one of the great natural wonders of California, had been trying to describe either the Geysers or their own sensations on visiting them when this rhymster took pen in hand and gave not only the foregoing explanation of their origin, but the following warning to traveling rhymsters:

"MORAL.

"Now poets, beware! Just think ere you dare,
And keep this tale in your eye, sirs:
By spilling your ink, you, too, make a s-mell,
And we all set you down as 'but 'guys,' sirs."

This hotel register, dating back as it does for nearly sixty years, is not the least interesting thing about the hotel. The geysers as a resort seem to antedate all the other famous show places of California, and the register discloses visits made in the early days by Horace Greeley, Gen. Grant, Pierpont Morgan, Edwin Forrest and scores of other notables. One of the pet traditions of the place is that of a visit of Edwin Forrest, who was carried over the long trail on a stretcher. He had heard that the mud of the Indian Spring, down in the Devil's Cañon, would cure rheumatism. He had a tent pitched as near the spring as possible, and daily took his al fresco bath in the mud through which the sulphur water bubbled. After several weeks he was able to go out on horseback, cured.

When the proprietor of the hotel is reasonably sure his guest is not an autograph fiend, he gets out this old register for his entertainment; and many visitors of recent years have found the signatures of their fathers or grandfathers, without having known that they were ever in California. Beside many of the names of the very earliest visitors are the words "and lady," showing that the pioneer women were as keen sightseers as the women of today.

Even now the trip includes a twenty-mile stage ride. By railroad it is between three and four hours north of San Francisco, through Santa Rosa and Petaluma, the city of hens, and through the miles of vineyards of the Italian-Swiss colony of Sonoma county, where the Tipo Chianti is made, to Cloverdale. From here the stage starts daily, with that easy irregularity of stages, some time after noon. The stage road crosses the Russian River, rounds Robber's Point, where a few years ago the last hold-up occurred on the route; and the bandit, driven from his hiding place on the point, was shot. He fell to the bottom of the cañon, where hardly enough of him could be found for burial. Beyond that the road runs the length of a summer afternoon along the edge of a deep V-shaped cañon, at the bottom of which is the Pluton River, that has its source in the boiling geysers of the Devil's Cañon. The road climbs steadily, nearly 2000 feet, the east-and-west gorge slashing the coast range for twenty miles. With the exception of a quicksilver mine and a sort of half-way house, the country seems void of habitation, but every little while the stage driver throws a mail sack upon a hook fastened to a tree or post for some one who has cleared a space for a small orchard or grain field somewhere out of sight in the mountains.

The sun is but about an hour high when the stage dashes through a great white gateway. Knowing that beyond the gate lies the devil's precinct, one glances to see if over the portal's arch is inscribed the fatal words: "Abandon hope all ye that enter here." But instead there is just a glimpse of the word "Geysers" before the stage draws up at the hotel veranda and the host comes forth to greet his guests, armed with a feather duster.

While he is busy raising a small duststorm from each passenger the guests already there, very spick and span in their afternoon clothes, gather around to look the newcomers over; but the newcomers are too eager to get to the dining-room to care how they look, for a stage ride is the best appetizer in the world. After dinner there is just time for a short climb to Alta Vista to see the sun, a great gold ball, poise for a second on a far point, and then slip away leaving the sky tinted like a Gold of Ophir rose.

Bed feels good after a trip like that, and it still feels good when there is a knock on the door at 5:30 the next morning. But once awake, one falls to wondering if there is a possibility of finding the devil in his kitchen so very, very early in the morning. For the trip to the Devil's Kitchen must be made before the sun is up. Later in the day the steam from his kitchen, his foundry and workshop make the cañon intolerably hot.

The trail leads away under the trees, and one may stop for a moment for a drink of hot magnesia water, which dyspeptics cheerfully climb a ladder to get. Soon the path pitches downward, and a strong odor of sulphur is in the moist, warm air. A stream of water hurries among the rocks, and you find the water hot if you make a misstep on the stones and get your foot in above the shoetop. The farther bank, which the trail follows for a short distance, is covered with loose crystals, and the guide tells you if you are bilious it would be well to stop and take a generous pinch of Epsom salts, which you can scratch down with your fingers.

The trail becomes wet and slippery, and winds through strange rock formations, showing many colors. It is a natural laboratory, filled with all the common salts and alkalies, crystallized on the rocks and in solution in springs that bubble up within a few feet of one another. A few turns of the trail bring you to the Devil's Kitchen. Here the rocks are hot under foot, and the springs are so hot that volumes of steam rise into the cool morning air. Here is the Devil's Wash Basin, which he must have used recently judging from the soapy-looking water standing in it. There is his Wash Tub, with water running over a washboard made of rocks. Yonder is his inkstand filled with black sulphur water. Each of these is a geyser, while a dozen others for which only the devil himself knows the use, spout from the rocks in the space of a good-sized room. The rocks are so hot you must hurry on, but one can't help peering back into the rocky caverns in the hope of catching a glimpse of the master of the place, who seems in a very bad temper, to judge by the way he is grumbling.

A little farther the Devil's Safety Valve throws a jet of steam high in the air. Beyond is the Witches' Caldron, where the water spouts up several inches in the air from a spring whose temperature is 212 degrees. Here, if you can stand on the hot rocks for two minutes, you can boil an egg. But by the time the egg is cooked, [illegible] ready to hurry on up a steep trail, from which [illegible] turn and look back on the rolling clouds of [illegible] fill the cañon. The swirling steam clouds, [illegible] and veiling the form of the rocks and cañon-[illegible] deep rumbling noises coming from unseen [illegible] one a sense of being very near the beginning, [illegible] of things.

Here, as you pause, the guide points out the [illegible] made by last year's earthquake. Some of the [illegible] sers ceased to flow, and new ones were opened. [illegible] of the cañon that was formerly cool is now [illegible] to stay long is stifling, for the wind whips the [illegible] about you, and the rocks are still hot under feet.

So you hurry on, down and then up again, [illegible] the earth is cool and the air is dry. Here you [illegible] self in the Devil's playground, which is the [illegible] extinct volcano. The Devil's Tennis Racquet [illegible] ground where he tossed it carelessly after his [illegible] A little beyond the bent form of an old oak [illegible] Devil's Toll Gate, where every one who leaves [illegible] must bend the knee to His Satanic Majesty. [illegible] side the gate is the Steamboat Geyser, one of [illegible] interesting of all. The steam comes with a [illegible] from some hidden spring. It rises in a [illegible] cloud, and with such force that it knocks away a [illegible] stick held over the hole. The snorting sound is [illegible] tinuous, and a steamboat whistle fitted to it [illegible] much noise for the comfort of the hotel guests.

From an overhanging point one may [illegible] glimpse of the cañon with its hundred—perhaps [illegible] dred—boiling geysers. This point is known as the [illegible] ers' Leap, and thereby hangs an Indian legend, [illegible] shows that the devil has always been up to the [illegible] tricks he practises today. In the time when the [illegible] owned all the mountains and valleys of California [illegible] devil put it into the minds of two neighboring [illegible] be constantly at war as to the ownership of the [illegible] of The Geysers. And it chanced that one day [illegible] the daughter of Chief Sonoma, while drinking [illegible] the cool springs that bubble up among the boiling [illegible] sers, was captured by a young chief of the tribe [illegible] great Temescal. The feud that for some time [illegible] been smouldering burst out afresh at this outrage. [illegible] did it help matters any when it was learned [illegible] young Chief Sotoyome had yielded to the charms [illegible] beautiful captive, and offered her his protection. [illegible] that Wanoma returned the love of her captor. [illegible] yome, now an outcast from his people, submitted [illegible] time to their persecutions, and then decided to [illegible] noma to some far country where they could live [illegible] in peace. But the vengeful Temescal, learning [illegible] young chief's flight, sent a band of braves in [illegible] They overtook the lovers on this ledge of rock, [illegible] two, knowing that capture meant separation, [illegible] arms about each other and leaped into the Witches' [illegible] dron. And the guide will tell you that if you [illegible] ledge of rock on a moonlight night, alone, if you [illegible] love, you will see the forms of the Indian lovers [illegible] on the stream of the Witches' Caldron.

A short walk brings you back to the hotel, [illegible] the cool shade of its great trees, as far removed [illegible] heat and rumble of the boiling geysers as if [illegible] miles away. And though visitors have been going there for more than a half century and none have met the end of the world, there are some so timorous that nothing could induce them to make the trip through the Devil's Cañon.

These are content with the more ordinary pleasures offered—trips over various trails via the "Western Express," which starts every morning, fishing in the various cold mountain streams that are within easy reach, and bathing either at the bath house or in the open-air swimming tank formed by damming the Pluton far enough below the geysers to have the water cool enough for comfort.

The natural Hammam bath is a thing to remember. The bather disrobes and goes to a small closet, to which the steam is piped direct from one of the hottest geysers. This affords the finest vapor bath imaginable, after which a plunge in a pool fed constantly by a pipe from one of the cooler sulphur springs puts the bather in condition to whip his weight in wild cats. These baths have virtues other than that of filling the bather with the joy of living. They and the various drinking springs are recommended as a panacea for most of the minor ills that flesh is heir to in these days of overeating and overdrinking. Rheumatics sometimes prefer even more natural methods, and may be found bathing their lamed members in some of the pools along the Pluton River, far enough from the geysers that the water is tempered by tumbling over the rocks.

And any one inclined to give the devil his dues must admit that though he tempts people to eat and drink not wisely but too well, he certainly tries to square things up a bit by spending so much time in this kitchen of his mixing medicines that will cure.

BERTHA H. SMITH.

PLEASANT ISLAND.

A BIT OF LAND IN THE PACIFIC NAMED FOR THE NATIVES' AMIABLE TRAITS.

[New York Sun:] The solitary little island of Nauru rises from Pacific depths of about 14,000 feet some 400 miles west of the nearest land of the Gilbert group. It is scarcely as large as an American township, and it is an atoll, but it differs so much from nearly all the other atolls of the Pacific that it has attracted much attention.

The atolls rise only a little above the sea level, and after the traveler has seen two or three of them he concludes that they are very monotonous. But a part of the outer rim of Nauru is a verdant ridge about 200 feet high, and what was once the lagoon encircled by coral reef is now a plain, slightly rolling and strewn with coral fragments.

This atoll evidently had a peculiar history that made it different from many of the other atolls. Here and there are bits of volcanic rock and vestiges of ancient craters that help to explain this history.

The time was when volcanic forces lifted the submarine mountain on which stood the circle of coral and the lagoon within it until the lagoon was above the sea level and its waters drained away, leaving a dry plain. So here we see an atoll lifted into the air so that its whole formation may be studied above the sea level.

Nobody knows when emigrants came in their small boats to settle on the little island, but there is every reason to believe that they sailed from the Gilbert Islands. Their habits and arts are very similar to those of the Gilbert Islanders, and there are striking resemblances between their languages. Their names for many plants are almost or quite identical with the names for the plants in the Gilbert archipelago.

It was a case of the migrations, voluntary or accidental, that have brought human inhabitants to many a Pacific isle. Probably a boat or two were driven out of sight of land in a storm and the castaways finally landed on the unknown strand, the progenitors of the few hundred natives who now inhabit the island.

When white men came less frequently than they do now the natives used to throng the beach, welcome the whites with glad shouts and lavish their best hospitality on them. There were factions among them, and they were often at war until they were disarmed by the German warship Eber after the island became a part of the German Pacific possessions.

Every visitor for years past has said that they are the most gentle, peaceable and friendly people that could be imagined, and these attractive qualities induced some British seafarers to give a new name to the island by which it is now everywhere known. Even on the German maps are found both the native name Nauru and the name now in use, Pleasant Island.

Considering its smallness, the island has become remarkably conspicuous in a commercial way. No other island of its size produces so large an amount of copra, the dried meat of the cocoanut.

Several years ago great phosphate beds were found in the interior, and they are proving a gold mine to the German Jaluit Company, which is working the deposits in connection with an English company. The latter discovered beds also in Banaba Island, about a hundred miles away, and the two companies are working both deposits together.

They had hard work getting the phosphates on board ship at Pleasant Island during the first years of the industry, but the steel bridge they now let down over the deck of a vessel as she lies a little way from the shore, carrying 100 tons an hour into the ship, is the greatest wonder in the world to the natives.

There is an island in the Caribbean which is similar in its history to Pleasant Island. It is the Dutch island of Curacao, which was once an enormous atoll, but was lifted by subterranean forces till the ring around the lagoon was hundreds of feet in the air and the lagoon became dry land. On the south side of the island large deposits of phosphates have been discovered and the island is now the scene of an important industry.

The Hotel Clerk.

THIS TIME HE DISCUSSES PAINLESS DENTISTRY.

By a Special Contributor.

MR. ALOYSIOUS McBEAN, the hotel clerk, had a wary, hunted look in his usually calm and reflective eye. Also there was a lump on his lower jaw the size and contour of which might have led the casual observer to suspect that Mr. McBean was engaged in the quaint conceit of holding one of those small pineapple cheeses in his mouth. Every now and then he caressed the bulged spot with a tender hand.

"Where'd you get the aig plant?" inquired the head bellboy.

"Where'd you suppose I got it?" countered Mr. McBean with some heat. "Didn't imagine a party of sincere admirers and well wishers took up a collection and presented it to me as a mark of esteem, instead of a gold-headed cane, did you? Didn't inculcate the clever idea inside that mansard of yours that I was going around with one side of my head looking like bringing home the week's washing merely because some dying friend had bequeathed to me a damp-proof, self-adjustable wen, warranted to fit any face and keep in all climates, did you? I didn't get it anywhere. It originated with me. I'm its proud parents and not so dern proud at that. Mother and child doing as well as expected, but not expected to do very well. Dad blame you, it's a tooth!"

"Better have it pulled and get it over with," counseled the head bellboy.

"So I did, my boy, so I did," said Mr. McBean. "I had it pulled and I had it pushed and shoved and tipped and gouged and filled and unfilled and refilled and tunneled and pastern-fired and blasted and excavated and several other things that you wouln't believe could be done in this town without a building permit. The inside of this here once well-filled head of mine is now little more than a recent site. In me, Hops, you behold the scattered clews which the burglars left behind for the authorities to work on. I am the faint traces of a fiendish crime. My vaults have been blown and most of my gold reserve has been taken by Amalgam Mike and Molar Slim, the Facial Yeggmen.

"It started last night, with a dream. It came to me in my dreams that there was a terrier chasing a woodchuck through my head. I misremember now whether my sympathies were with the terrier or the woodchuck, but any way when I woke up the dog had the woodchuck treed in the subcellar of one of my largest and most cherished jaw teeth and was digging him out. He was a very determined dog, but he needed manicuring. I tried to lure him away with household remedies, but he didn't seem to be the frivolous sort of a Fido that could be fascinated by a wad of medicated cotton on the end of a parlor match. Arnica's a kind of acquired taste, anyway, I reckon. About the time I got dressed the terrier tore down the last remaining partition in the back of my skull and nailed the woodchuck. The woodchuck fought back with great resolution. He certainly was a very courageous woodchuck, I'll say that much for him. It was a truly desperate struggle.

"There was nobody else at the dentist's when I got there, it being early. I was willing to wait. I'm always willing to wait at a dentist's. It's different with a barber shop. But the young man who was reading the Hammer Throwers' Monthly in the front room told me to come right in and have a seat. I took a dislike to that young man from the first. I think I caught him spitting on his hands while I was taking my hat off. Anyhow, he was too robust for a dentist. He ought to have been a boss canvasman. As for me, give me a frail and ladylike person the next time I'm going to have any interior decorations done to me personally. The kind that look like they live on breakfast food and birdseed and take nourishment out of a medicine dropper will be preferred. A big, strong lad ought to be ashamed of himself to be striking women and children in the face with a small but brutal steel drill when the boiler-making and scene-shifting professions are needing brawn the worst way.

"Well, this muscular athlete wadded my palpitating frame into the hideous embraces of a red plush chair, something like the one they use at Sing Sing, only 'tis done quicker up there and with less suffering to the condemned. On one side of me was quite a display of open-work plumbing, and on the other a tasty exhibition of very durable tools. I think 'tis so arranged so that no matter where the hunted gaze of the victim strays he'll be seeing something attractive.

"I also took notice of an electric dingus about large enough, I should say, to run a cross-town car. You'd be astonished, Hops, to see what strides have been made in the denting business. In my early childhood I recall that the dentist traveled from place to place, sometimes pulling a tooth, and sometimes breaking a colt. He practiced his noble art with one pair of iron forceps and a set of brass knuckles, and he gave a man the same kind of treatment he gave a horse, only he tied the horse's legs.

"But nowadays when they prepare to sink a shaft into your innermost soul by way of an unfortunate incisor, it is necessary to start up a neat parlor dynamo, which makes a cheerful sound, like cranking an automobile, and provides an appropriate and timely accompaniment to the song of the official canary bird. 'Tis a lively and tuneful creature, the canary, and soothing to the nerves. All dentists keep them. When a man has the back of his neck on a headrest that's almost as comfortable as an anvil, waiting for a dark stranger to climb inside of him as far as the shoulder pits and begin disinterring a tooth that has roots extending back behind the ear the same as a pair of old-fashioned spectacles, it is a source of great pleasure to him if a small yellow bird wipes its talented nose on the finbone of a late fish and dashes into a melodious outburst of twenty-two hundred twitter-twitters, all of them being twitters of the same size, shape and color. Nothing could be found more pleasing at such a time than to hear the canary singing. Except to hear the canary dying. 'Tis a good thing they keep 'em caged!

"Well, anyway, the moment the electrical plant started in to crooning its eight-horse power lullaby, I got well. All of a sudden the tooth felt fine. I never knew it to be feeling finer. The dog must've killed the woodchuck and then committed suicide. Seeing how intimately I had been associated with both of them during the most active periods of their life, I thought it no more than an act of kindness to show their memory some respect, and I was going away to order flowers when the muscular party quit feeling of his biceps and seized my features and abruptly undid them. I caught a glimpse of myself in the glass. Never before did I realize how much the human face divine could be made to look like an old-fashioned open fireplace.

"There were several things I wanted to say. My mind was full of thoughts burning for utterance; I wanted to tell him I knew the sort of soap he used wasn't going to agree with me. One reason I began shaving myself was because I never could digest the soap my barber favored. But the brand he fancied was Peaches Melba to the way this here dentist's thumb and first finger tasted. I wouldn't care to say as to the little finger because he had left it outside for some reason or other.

"My remarks lacked distinctness. They sounded like the last pint of suds in a sink. Right in the middle of them he grabbed up a crochet needle with a red-hot stinger on it and jabbed it down the tooth as far as my suspender buttons.

"We had words then. But he put his knee in my chest and otherwise calmed me and told me he hadn't hurt me at all; he said it was my imagination. I suggested doing something to appease the imagination before it got violent, but I reckon he didn't hear me. He was calling to the operator in the next room to come and see a typical example of a triple distilled, prime old vatted exposed nerve. So the Second Grave Digger rested his utensils against the palate of his latest prey and came in.

"As near as I could gather from hearsay, not being an eyewitness myself, one of them harpooned the nerve just back of the gills with a nutpick and pulled it about three inches out of its retreat, and the other took a tack hammer and tried to beat out its brains. Any time he missed the nerve he hit me; it must have been fine practice for him. The nerve wrapped its legs around my breast bone and hung on. I understand that they had quite a pleasant and profitable time.

"When I recovered from the swoon the interior of my features was all cluttered with props. Somebody had thoughtfully hung a rubber drop curtain across my proscenium arch to keep me from seeing what was going on behind my own scenes, but I think they were setting the stage for the thrilling sawmill in 'The Old Homestead.' I could taste several different kinds of machinery; also a bed of mortar and a bucket of hot tar which some careless stage hand had left setting in the wings.

"My stalwart friend, the Sinewy Assassin, now invaded me as far as the elbows. He started up a scroll saw working in conjunction with a steam winch that had a hot box, and began turning out a stack of white chips with an occasional red, when the saw would slip.

"At this juncture the tooth blew up with a loud, agonized cry. On again recovering consciousness I found scenes of great excitement reigning. All was confusion. My mouth seemed to be full of things that I had no recollection of having ordered. The handy operator was just getting a small patent posthole digger coupled up. He was deciding that she was the kind of a tooth that should have been pulled in the first place. He expressed his regrets that a tooth which had seemed so open should have deceived him.

"And then, Hops, he pulled her. She made desperate resistance, but he was a strong man and he pulled her. From time to time he harvested sections of gum and jawbone, and, with a splendid little utensil shaped slightly like a can opener, only sharper, he loosened all of the roots north of the floating ribs. It was a thorough job. He spared no pains. Anyway if he spared any I didn't notice it. You should have been there to hear her give the death rattle when he made the final heave and broke her loose from my spinal column. He held her up for me to see.

"'Tis she—the tooth,' he says, smiling kindly.

"'You surprise me,' I replied, faintly, gazing at Exhibit A. 'I thought it was a china cuspidor that the janitor had been slighting.'

"But he was right. 'Twas the tooth. He collected the fixed charges for stumpage and salvage and then he deposited my still breathing remains on the doorstep and I came away with a feeling in the side of my jaw like a vacant lot. My tongue keeps on going over there now to see if it can recognize the old place by the holes where the foundations used to be. I never knew before what a basement there was to a tooth."

"And yet they've got the nerve to call it painless dentistry," said the bellboy.

"'Tis the right name, too," said Mr. McBean. "The dentist doesn't suffer a bit."

Canine Nurses.

COLLIES BEING TRAINED FOR RED CROSS SERVICE IN ITALY.

By a Special Contributor.

A CABLEGRAM to the effect that Red Cross work in the Far East is rapidly going to the dogs struck a blow at an organization in which our nation takes great pride. Then followed the news that Italy, that country which has carried the stigma of unprogressiveness for so long, has sent the work which causes war to lose half its horrors to the bow wows.

One hundred and five canines have received their degrees in Rome and as many full-bred collie dogs have been given a medical kit bearing the Red Cross insignia. These are the property of the Italian government and are considered among the nation's most valuable possessions. Five hundred more are now working hard for their diplomas and Red Cross badges, and these will be for sale to the Japanese government within a few weeks. Thus the rather startling news that Red Cross nursing is rapidly going to the dogs.

The discovery that the intelligent collie dogs who so love to trace up a lost traveler and who will spend days on the scent, could be turned into competent war nurses was made about two years ago by monks of the Hospice of St. Bernard in the Alps.

READY FOR DUTY, SHOWING UTILITY-BLANKET.

A NURSE BRINGING THE SUR

GUARDING A WOUNDED MAN.

The superior of this religious order owned four fine beasts who had frequently brought some lost, half-starved wayfarer to the monastery. Occasionally an unfortunate traveler in whom life had been extinct for some hours was brought to the refuge by the faithful dogs. After this had occurred several times the priest conceived the idea of making a little blanket for the dogs in the pocket of which could be put a small quantity of food and stimulant.

The plan was carried out and within six weeks the experiment was four times proved a success. Four thankful men, in the wake of the Samaritan dogs, came to St. Bernard's and informed the priests that the food and the drink which the dogs had carried to them had come just in the nick of time to save their lives.

Word of the good work of these intelligent canines reached the officials at Rome, with the result that after a visit had been made to St. Bernard's for the purpose of examining the dogs and blankets, and watching them set out on a trail of their own accord, twenty-five fine collies were purchased. Sumptuous quarters were built for them at the Italian capital and they were put under the care of the chief army surgeon, who, with a staff of helpers, proceeded to train the dogs in Red Cross work.

Twenty-five gray blankets, holding two capacious pockets each, were ordered. These were marked with the Red Cross symbol and fitted out with those things most necessary to a nurse when bringing first aid to the injured.

Into one knapsack-like pocket were placed two flasks and two flat biscuits. One flask was for the purpose of containing pure water and the other was made to hold a specially prepared stimulant which could be taken without fear of injurious results by any wounded soldier. The remaining pocket was fitted out with a roll of bandages, a small adjustable splint, a soft silk handkerchief to be made into a sling, a probing instrument such as every Italian soldier knows how to use, and a tiny sponge.

These blankets were put carefully aside until the dogs had passed their examinations successfully. First each dog had to pass the doctor, who either credited him with a perfectly sound body, muscular and organic, and gave him an O. K. slip, or else blacklisted him because of some defect. When twenty-five perfectly sound dogs had been secured they were divided into squads of five with a trainer for each squad.

On September 9 at 9 a. m. the first squad were given their initial instructions. Five regulars in military uniforms were given six hours' start of the dogs. The men tramped in circular courses until they thought they had successfully bewildered the dogs, who were allowed to watch them start, then they dropped down on a mountain pass, beside a hidden stream, in a valley some eight or ten miles distant and in an attitude of exhaustion awaited results. Three of the five were "run down" as soon as the dogs could cover the ground. The remaining two were discovered before sunset of that same day.

It was found that the entire twenty-five dogs could be trained at once and so by the end of the week the entire force was out trailing. Rapid strides they made in this week, too.

In two weeks' time the entire twenty-five understood that when they were let loose in the morning it was their business to find a man. The pack would start out together, noses to the ground and whining softly. In five minutes each dog would have started out on a scent. If by any chance two dogs were after the same man the one who came in second would immediately start off on another trail.

The first lesson, which it took the dogs only two weeks to master, consisted of merely scouring the country in search of soldiers. Perfection in this gained, the blankets were brought forth and strapped on. The dogs were than taught to bark at the man who had apparently fainted until he was roused sufficiently to help himself from the knapsacks which the dog carried on his back. Next these canine nurses were taught to guide the wounded men back to the hospital tents which had been hastily erected for the purpose.

This degree was soon taken also. The next step was a little more difficult. After having learned to trace up the wounded, to offer them food and stimulants, and to guide them to the hospital, it was deemed necessary to teach these clever little nurses how to call for assistance when the soldier was too seriously hurt to move unaided.

They were, by much patience and labor, taught to send forth a wail of distress which will carry a great distance. They will keep it up for a great length of time when necessary.

Just one more step and their preparatory education was finished. This was to teach the beasts to race to the hospital tents for assistance in extreme cases, guiding the surgeon to the sufferer as rapidly as possible. In order to do this satisfactorily the dogs were taught to distinguish between an exhausted man and one who was dangerously wounded. When the man would not move nor offer to help himself from the knapsack then the dog was taught to seek help at once. He was also taught to run for assistance when the soldier so ordered him.

When the wounded man helped himself to bandages, food, etc., and moved about, the dogs learned that they were to sit by his side and cry for help until ordered back to camp or until assistance came.

When the first twenty-five dogs had passed each test successfully and received their degrees, numbers and blankets, twenty-five more were secured. These were added to until the staff of canine nurses numbered 105.

The second installment learned much more quickly than the first pupils, for dogs, like children, are apt imitators, and having the "graduated nurses" to watch, the "probationers" soon mastered their work.

All this went on in time of peace when the woodlands and mountains through which the dogs searched were as quiet as nature meant them to be. Now these sensitive collies are nervous dogs and it was feared that they would forget their mission of mercy and flee in terror if taken to the front during a battle. In order to avoid such a mishap the officials ordered mock battles. The dogs were first held in lash during the fighting and when all was quiet set loose.

There was a panic among the 105 well-drilled nurses during that first battle, and when they were sent forth on their work, with an occasional gun popping here and there ,they shook with fear and refused

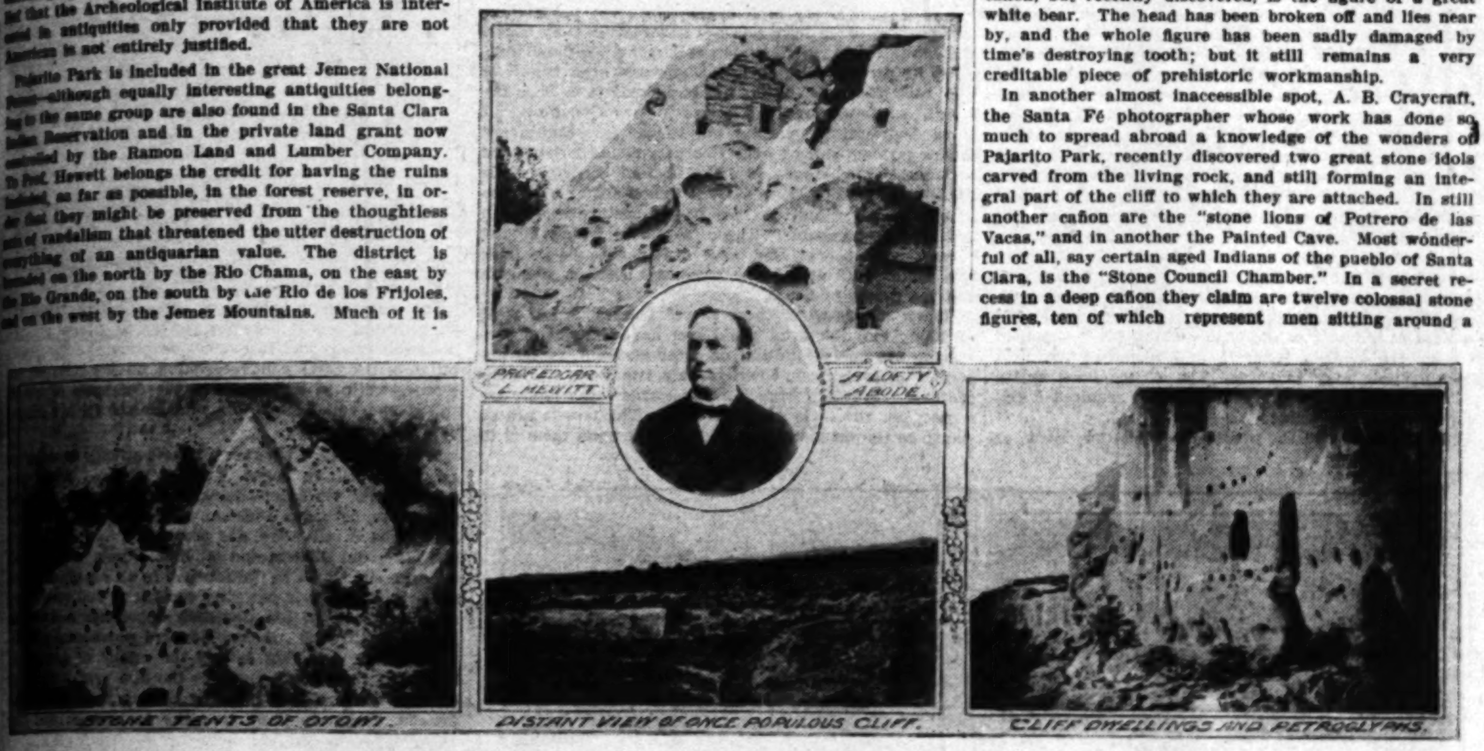
SCIENTISTS INVESTIGATING CLIFF RUINS IN NEW MEXICO.

By a Special Contributor.



PROF. EDGAR L. HEWITT

A LOFTY ABODE.

STONE TENTS OF OTOWI.

DISTANT VIEW OF ONCE POPULOUS CLIFF.

CLIFF DWELLINGS AND PETROGLYPHS.

PROBABLY no more important or interesting archeological investigation has ever been conducted in America than that begun about the middle of August in what is known as the Pajarito Park district of New Mexico, about twenty-five miles west of Santa Fé, and not more than five or six miles from Buckman Station, on the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad. The work is in charge of Prof. Edgar L. Hewett, director of American archeology in the Archeological Institute of America, who is assisted by a number of enthusiastic students of archeology. Three or four months will be spent in making explorations in this little-known region. The time is entirely too short for an exhaustive examination, which must be the work of years; but it is encouraging to see some indication that the common belief that the Archeological Institute of America is interested in antiquities only provided that they are not American is not entirely justified.

Pajarito Park is included in the great Jemez National Forest—although equally interesting antiquities belonging to the same group are also found in the Santa Clara Indian Reservation and in the private land grant now controlled by the Ramon Land and Lumber Company. To Prof. Hewett belongs the credit for having the ruins included, as far as possible, in the forest reserve, in order that they might be preserved from the thoughtless acts of vandalism that threatened the utter destruction of everything of an antiquarian value. The district is bounded on the north by the Rio Chama, on the east by the Rio Grande, on the south by the Rio de los Frijoles, and on the west by the Jemez Mountains. Much of it is heavily timbered, while its scenic features are of great beauty and grandeur. The whole surface at one time was deeply covered with volcanic tufa. Through this, and through the harder rock strata below, the intermittent streams that flow down from the mountains have worn deep cañons and gulches. The district thus presents an aggregate of many hundreds of miles of perpendicular cliffs, gray, yellow, orange and salmon-colored. The mesas are nearly all very narrow, some being mere tongues of rock separating comparatively wide valleys. In these cliffs are thousands of artificially excavated caves, in which the Cliff Dwellers once made their homes.

It is noteworthy that while the cliffs that face toward the south are literally honeycombed with these rude dwellings, there are very few in the cliffs that front toward the north. In one long cliff more than 5000 abandoned homes have been counted. Many hundreds have been partially or wholly destroyed by the slow wearing away and crumbling off of the face of the cliffs. Others, located nearer the floors of the cañons, have been so deeply buried by the detritus falling from above that only the arched tops of the entrances can be seen. In places the piles of débris formed by the falling of fragments of rock from above are more than 100 feet high. It seems certain that hidden behind these masses of earth and rock there are scores and hundreds of buried cliff homes. If excavations shall prove that this conjecture is correct, it is reasonable to anticipate some remarkable discoveries that will shed a flood of light upon the many obscure points concerning the origin, history, fate, manner of life and state of culture of this long-forgotten people. In those hidden abodes will probably be found the household goods, utensils, tools, implements and weapons used by the Cliff Dwellers, for neither the corroding elements nor human vandals have been able to enter or to carry away.

In some of the higher cliffs may be seen five or six tiers of dwellings, one above another, while in others all are located on the same level. The doorway is generally two or three feet wide, and rarely more than four feet high. Sometimes the ceilings are as much as five feet above the floor, but about four feet is the rule. Hence it has been argued that the Cliff Dwellers were a race of pygmies. The evidence is not entirely conclusive, but it is certain that they were not giants. The burial places are found on knolls and elevations in the valleys. The exceedingly slight and haphazard excavations that have been made in them confirm the opinion that the cave men were of small stature.

Just within the door of the cliff house is the main room. Sometimes this is circular, sometimes oval, and rarely rectangular. Some of the larger rooms are more than twenty feet in diameter, while others are hardly six feet square. Each of the large rooms doubtless formed the living apartment of a whole family. Connected with it are often several smaller rooms. On account of their small size and the absence of any way of lighting or ventilating these, it is supposed that they were used as storerooms. The walls and floors are often made smooth and even with a coating of mud plaster; and not infrequently the finger prints of the workmen are distinctly visible. Some of the rooms that are not plastered are decorated with deeply-carved figures of animals, men and symbolic designs; and in nearly all, the walls are even yet black with the smoke of fires that were extinguished uncounted centuries ago. Fragments of pottery, an occasional stone hammer or battle ax, and now and then an arrow point or spear head are discovered. Beyond these faint traces, proving that these are indeed the ruined abodes of men, little has been found to show what manner of men they were, in what epoch they lived, and what was the fate that overtook them.

There appears to be good reason for the belief that the cliff or caveate homes of Pajarito Park long antedated those of the Mesa Verde, Chaco Cañon and other regions. In general, they consist merely of artificial caves, excavated in the rock, which is soft and easily worked. An occasional dwelling is found with the front wall built up of rock fragments carefully fitted together. It seems probable that this rude attempt at masonry was made at a much later date than the original excavation, necessitated by the crumbling and falling away of the original front wall of native rock. Architecturally, the caveate dwellings of Pajarito Park are much more primitive than the elaborate stone structures that formed the cliff dwellings of the Mesa Verde, while the stone weapons and implements, as well as the pottery, display a much lower order of workmanship. It is probable, therefore, that in point of time of construction and occupation the ruins in Pajarito Park are among the most ancient that have yet been discovered in America. This was, perhaps, the metropolis of the paleolithic age, just as the Mesa Verde appears to have been the metropolis of the neolithic age.

In many places are rude, but even at this day fairly serviceable, stairways cut in the rock, that furnished the ancient occupants of these strange abodes with the means of descending to the valley below. At points where the stairways from a number of caves converge are paths worn many inches deep, indicating that they were trodden by multitudes of feet, through long periods of time. On the mesas, above the cliffs, these deep-worn paths or trails may be followed for long distances. Evidently the population was very dense. That so great a population could find subsistence is taken to indicate that climatic conditions must have greatly changed. The streams are now dry through the greater part of the year, making irrigation out of the question; and crop production with the scanty rainfall is impossible.

Along the tops of the mesas are found extensive ruins of communal towns, that were evidently built much after the style of the modern Pueblo Indian communities, such as Taos, excepting that stone was employed instead of adobe. The stones were carefully dressed into the required shapes, and it is evident that the prehistoric architects possessed no mean degree of skill. The most noteworthy of these ruined communal towns are known as Tsankiwi, Tshirege, and Yapashi, each of which evidently contained a population of several thousand. It is generally assumed that these communities were occupied by the same race that peopled the cliff homes. This opinion appears to be based upon the mere fact of proximity. Certainly the ridiculously slight attempts that have been made at excavation cannot possibly justify the positive assertions that some government investigators have made that this was the case. It is at least certain that the ruins upon the mesas represent a much higher state of culture than do the cliff ruins. If they were inhabited by the same race, it must be concluded that as the cliff men progressed from a low to a comparatively high state of culture, they abandoned the caves they had excavated in the rocks and built houses in the open. It is possible that this exodus from the cliffs to the mesas (if such really occurred) may have been due to the discovery that the cliff homes were insecure. No doubt the gradual crumbling of the cliffs that is still in progress even then brought occasional disaster to the cave men. If, as seems probable, seismic convulsions were then frequent in that region, it is possible that the cliff homes were sometimes the scenes of cataclysms in which hundreds of dwellings were destroyed and many lives lost.

Among the interesting features of Pajarito Park are numerous petroglyphs, deeply carved into the rocks. In some places crude but characteristic and unmistakable sculptures of the kangaroo may be seen. These figures were here when the white men first visited the country. Yet the kangaroo has been extinct in America for ages, and it is only through the discovery of its fossil bones that it is known ever to have existed. Where, then, did the Cliff Dwellers obtain the accurate ideas they possessed of the kangaroo? Is it possible that they lived in the same epoch? Other petroglyphs of less interest are carvings of lizards, serpents, turtles, deer, coyotes, wild turkeys, bears, wolves and other animals, and many figures of conventional or symbolic design. In one cañon, but recently discovered, is the figure of a great white bear. The head has been broken off and lies near by, and the whole figure has been sadly damaged by time's destroying tooth; but it still remains a very creditable piece of prehistoric workmanship.

In another almost inaccessible spot, A. B. Craycraft, the Santa Fé photographer whose work has done so much to spread abroad a knowledge of the wonders of Pajarito Park, recently discovered two great stone idols carved from the living rock, and still forming an integral part of the cliff to which they are attached. In still another cañon are the "stone lions of Potrero de las Vacas," and in another the Painted Cave. Most wónderful of all, say certain aged Indians of the pueblo of Santa Clara, is the "Stone Council Chamber." In a secret recess in a deep cañon they claim are twelve colossal stone figures, ten of which represent men sitting around a council fire, while the other two represent squaws with papooses on their backs. That this "Stone Council Chamber" really exists no one familiar with the traditions of the Santa Clara Indians doubts, but no living white man has ever seen it.

Not less remarkable are the stone tents of Otowi, in the cañon of the same name. These were originally huge, solid, conical stone formations, detached from the cliffs, although standing near them. In all, there are about fifty of them. In spiral arrangement, around the exterior, are deeply-cut hand-and-footholds, making it comparatively easy to ascend to the top, although some are fully forty feet high. In some of them, rooms have been laboriously excavated. Examination reveals the fact that some of the stone tents used to be much higher than they now are, and that the elements have worn them down until the higher rooms have been wholly or partially destroyed. Just what was the purpose of these curious places is purely a matter of conjecture. Some suppose that they were devoted to religious uses, or were the dwelling places of the priests. Others think they formed the abodes of the chiefs and rulers. It is said that similar "stone tents" exist in Thibet, but nowhere else in the known world. When the wonders of our own land are better appreciated, the stone tents of Otowi will be considered justification for a journey across the continent.

SNUFF AS MEDICINE.

"Oh, yes," said a tobacconist, as he tapped a jar filled with a cinnamon-colored powder, "I sell an ounce or two of snuff occasionally. To the old, as a rule. The young will seldom look at snuff.

"And those who do use it impute medicinal virtues to it. Thus old-fashioned watchmakers, gem cutters and tailors think that a pinch of snuff now and then improves the eyesight. They think it refreshes and fortifies weary eyes as a cup of tea refreshes and fortifies a weary brain.

"Others think snuff cures a cold. Others take it for the headache. Others still believe that it wards off contagion.

"Personally I believe that snuff taking is less harmful than smoking. Its effect, too, is pleasanter than the effect of smoking—it is a most soothing and fascinating effect, once you get used to it—but the habit is untidy, and therefore it can get no hold upon us in this esthetic age."

Quaint Religious Rites.

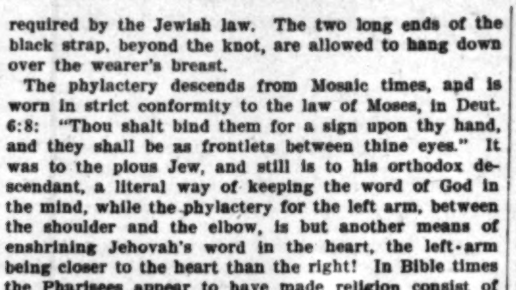
TIME-HONORED CUSTOMS OF THE ORTHODOX JEWS OF TODAY.

By a Special Contributor.

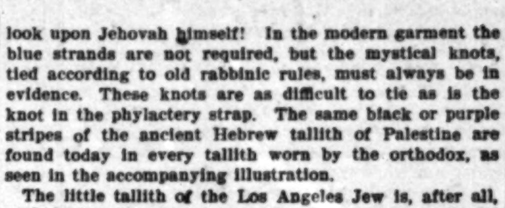
THE orthodox Jew, whether settled in Los Angeles or Moscow, clings with great tenacity to his time-honored religious customs in home and synagogue. In them he lives and moves and has his being, and no secular business is permitted to interfere with his devotion to those rites and ritual observances that bind him so closely to the venerable past. Nine-tenths of the Jews today are of the orthodox stamp, and it is among these alone that we are able to learn what are real Jewish customs, for it is they who have handed down from antiquity those peculiar usages that render orthodox Jewish worship both interesting and instructive to the Gentile observer.

One of the most sacred and interesting objects used by the pious Jew today is his phylactery, so often mentioned in the Bible as a prominent article of ancient Jewish devotion. The phylactery is of two kinds, one being for the head, the other for the left arm. Each one consists of a little box-like receptacle containing Hebrew inscriptions written on parchment. The head phylactery is made of four sections, bound together so as to appear to be just one square box, each section containing a piece of parchment inscribed with a quotation from the Old Testament. The parchment is made of the skin of some clean animal, like the sheep, while the Hebrew writing must always be the work of a professional Hebrew scribe, and be executed in the best possible manner. This little box, holding the scripture verses, is attached to a long leather strap by which it is bound to the head. The phylactery is worn on the forehead between the eyes, being held in place by a mysterious knot at the back of the head. This knot is supposed to mean the Hebrew letter D, and is one of the most difficult knots ever invented. The writer once untied this knot very easily, but found that it required a full hour to replace it again!

Both the strap and the square receptacle are black, as required by the Jewish law. The two long ends of the black strap, beyond the knot, are allowed to hang down over the wearer's breast.



LITTLE TALLITH OR PRAYER SHAWL.



JEWISH PHYLACTERY.

The phylactery descends from Mosaic times, and is worn in strict conformity to the law of Moses, in Deut. 6:8: "Thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thy hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes." It was to the pious Jew, and still is to his orthodox descendant, a literal way of keeping the word of God in the mind, while the phylactery for the left arm, between the shoulder and the elbow, is but another means of enshrining Jehovah's word in the heart, the left-arm being closer to the heart than the right! In Bible times the Pharisees appear to have made religion consist of an elaborate display of the phylactery, one of the charges brought by Christ against them having been that they "made broad their phylacteries." In our day, however, there is but little attempt at such display in the matter of the phylactery's size. It varies from an inch to an inch and a half square, and, moreover, is worn only on week days at private morning prayers. It is not worn even on the Jewish Sabbath, or on any other feasts. Pictures by some of our great artists, showing the phylactery on the heads of all present at a Sabbath synagogue service, are wholly out of place and are misleading. It is against the Jewish law to bear any burden on the Sabbath, and since the wearing of the phylactery would be burdensome, it is thus interdicted by the rabbinic code!

When the orthodox Jew rises from bed in the morning, he first washes his hands to cleanse them of all ritual defilement, then puts on his large tallith, or prayer shawl, and finally "lays" his phylacteries, first devoutly kissing them. Every orthodox male Jew over 13 years of age is supposed to possess a phylactery, but all mourners, bridegrooms, lepers and excommunicated persons are forbidden to don it, while Jewish women and girls are always exempt, as are also scholars while at study.

The Hebrew writing on the phylactery parchment is a fine specimen, generally, of the art of the professional Hebrew scribe. It is required by the rabbinic law that the writing be in very black ink, made of gallnut. The letters must be of uniform size, and no corrections are allowable. If any mistake be made by the scribe in penning the Hebrew words, instead of correcting it, he must destroy the whole parchment and begin over again.

As to the arm phylactery, after being laid on the left arm, nearest the heart, its long strap is then wound seven times around the arm and middle finger. The Bible extract in this is inscribed on a single piece of parchment, instead of four, as in the head phylactery. When not n use, the phylacteries are carefully guarded from profane touch in a suitable cloth bag, in accordance with the rabbinic law.

Other names for the phylacteries are tephillin and frontlets, the former word meaning "prayers," referring to their use at the time of prayer.

While the pious Jew thus wears conspicuously the phylactery on his forehead, on the other hand he wears another object of popular devotion under his everyday clothes, wholly unobserved by the busy world around him. This is the "little tallith," or "arba kanfoth," the latter term meaning "four corners," so named from the fact that this quaint undergarment is, by law, a rectangular piece of cloth, made of silk or wool. In its center is an opening for the wearer's head. It is put on when rising in the morning, the ends hanging down over the chest and back. At all the four corners are fixed the sacred fringes, or tassels, made of four cords, doubled, and with several mystic and symbolic knots tied in them. This tallith, now worn secretly next to the body by nearly every orthodox male Jew on the streets of Los Angeles and St. Petersburg, is in reality a direct survival, in exact shape, of the regular outer garment of the ancient Jews of Palestine, even to the pendant corner fringes. As an outer robe it once reached down to the ankles, and was worn by the better classes. In the course of time, as the ancient dress gave way to constant changes, the pious Jews retained a miniature copy of the ancient tallith as a reminder of bygone days, so that, while its practical usefulness disappeared after the Jews were sent into exile (on the fall of Jerusalem in 70 A. D.) it still continued, in a minimized form, as an object of pious devotion. It was an old Masaic law that every square garment worn by the Hebrews should be provided with tassels, or fringes, in all of its four corners. This old law is found in Deut. 22:12: "Thou shalt make thee fringes upon the four quarters of thy vesture wherewith thou coverest thyself." These tassels or fringes in the corners were sacred, and were ordained to be of blue, this color symbolizing the covenant between Jehovah and the people of Israel.

Had it not been for these sacred fringes, it is not at all likely that the Jews would ever have thought of preserving the ancient tallith, or outer garment, as an object of pious regard, down to this twentieth Christian century. It is the fringes in the corners that alone are sacred, not the little garment itself. The tassels are so sacred to the orthodox Jew that to look upon them is to look upon Jehovah himself! In the modern garment the blue strands are not required, but the mystical knots, tied according to old rabbinic rules, must always be in evidence. These knots are as difficult to tie as is the knot in the phylactery strap. The same black or purple stripes of the ancient Hebrew tallith of Palestine are found today in every tallith worn by the orthodox, as seen in the accompanying illustration.

The little tallith of the Los Angeles Jew is, after all, nothing but the shortened outer robe of common life of Bible days, piously preserved for the sake of its sacred corner tassels. The modern Jew wears his arba kanfoth so as to be able to obey Moses' command to wear tassels in the four corners of every square garment. His piety wholly centers in these corner fringes, not in the garment itself, for they are among the most sacred objects in Jewish eyes. Among the Persian Jews today may still be seen the ancient outer robe, or large tallith, of Palestine, provided with its Mosaic corner tassels, for these Persian Jews are not forced by circumstances to wear the tallith secretly, as an abbreviated garment, underneath their outer clothing.

The form of the Catholic scapular, worn by pious Christians, has a history quite similar to that of the Jewish tallith. Both are survivals of ancient garments. In fact, the arba kanforth might be truly called the Jewish scapular.

The large tallith, or regular prayer shawl of the modern Jews, is a striped, square, woolen cloth provided with the sacred fringes, but having no central opening for the head. It is wrapped around the shoulders or thrown over the head of the male worshiper while at his devotions in home and synagogue. Women are prohibited from wearing the tallith. In fact, Jewish women are prohibited from doing a great many things that are encumbent upon the men, which makes it so much the easier for the women to practice their religion. The large outer tallith may not be worn in cemeteries, out of respect for the dead, who are not able to follow suit!

It was a tassel of the large outer tallith that the sick woman of the New Testament reached out and touched after she had said: "If I touch but the hem (tassel) of His garment, I shall be whole." Thus in the Jewish synagogue today we learn what it was that this woman did. Modern usage, right here in Los Angeles, tells us that it was the sacred portion of Christ's garment—the tassel—that her faith told her would be the right thing by which to come into contact with the divine Healer. As a Jewess, it was the only thing that appealed to her as a means of touching Christ.

While the tallith and the phylacteries are thus interesting survivals of ancient Hebrew religious customs, and fit illustrations of the persistency of ual forms and personal devotions, perhaps is no less remarkable in these respects. is the survival of another old Mosaic ordinan gin of which is found in Deut. 11:20: write them upon the doorposts of thine hous thy gates." As today used, it is a little strip skin parchment on which are inscribed passages, including the one quoted above. it from damage it is kept in a small tin sliding top. A little window or opening through which may easily be seen the Hebrew Shaddai, i. e., Almighty, the inside parchment folded as always to bring this word at the

The mezuzoth, true to the Biblical ordinance, obeyed, is tacked up on the doorposts of Jewish ings, at the entrance to houses and yards, doorways leading into living-rooms. It is the lief of the pious orthodox that the mezuzoth assures Jehovah's immediate presence in the as a reward for piety and faith, but that it also longevity to oneself and children. Where the not settled in large communities, it is not venient to use the sacred mezuzoth outside but in many of the old Jewish ghettos, especially there is freedom from persecution, the mezuzoth to the gateposts and door posts used by the at large. In such places it is carefully examined every fifty years, but the house mezuzoth must after twice every seven years. It is presumable ery pious orthodox Jewish family in Los Ang has a mezuzoth somewhere in his house, great New York ghetto every tenement floor Jewish family is likewise protected by this Jewish let. The pious son of Abraham, on entering his domicile, opens the little window in his touches the holy name of Jehovah (Shaddai) finger, then kisses the finger that touched pronounces a blessing, and passes on.

The mezuzoth is held to be of less sanctity phylacteries, but it occupies just as prominent in Jewish usage and in popular devotion. In the ration of the parchment inscription, minute rules served, while in affixing it to the doorposts and rooms, equally exacting rabbinic rubrics to be followed.

It is often asked whether all these strange are really still in vogue among modern Jews, thousands of Christians imagine they are things past. Yes, orthodox Judaism, with the survival old usages, is still alive, and phylactery, tallith, and other old Biblical and rabbinic objects are us, even right here in California. In all his the orthodox Jew is perfectly consistent, and so than many of his Christian opponents Moreover, through his time-honored ceremonies votions, the orthodox Jew is the means of backward from the present to the dim past, to understand old customs by tracing them present usages to their far-away beginnings, assisting us to comprehend many incidents the New Testament that otherwise would solved.

PHILADELPH

Proposed New Coins.

ST. GAUDENS DESIGNS WILL PROBABLY BE MODIFIED.

By a Special Contributor.

THE designs for a complete new set of United States coins, made by the late Augustus Saint Gaudens and greatly admired by Mr. Roosevelt, will be modified by judicious tinkering at the Philadelphia mint, in the hope that they may be rendered suitable for the purpose by a few changes. The mere fact that pieces of metal money executed on these patterns could not possibly be "stacked" in piles, owing to their high relief, would suffice in itself to make them impossible.

For a long time past much dissatisfaction has been expressed with the designs on our coins. The American Sculpture Society has condemned them; the Numismatic Society has spoken of them in severe terms, and even the Treasury Department has frankly admitted that they are not what they ought to be. It is important, evidently, that something should be done, and, inasmuch as the models furnished by Saint Gaudens are undeniably beautiful, it is to be hoped that they can be turned to account.

Unfortunately, artists are almost never successful designers of money. Such designing is an art in itself, and has certain special and difficult requirements. This is not realized by the sculptor, or painter, who tackles the job with utmost confidence, in the belief that he can do the thing off-hand. As an almost inevitable result, he fails. For a coin is not a background to paint a picture upon, and a design that seems exquisite in black and white may be utterly unsuitable for a piece of metal money.

Saint Gaudens himself was chairman of a commission which was appointed in 1891 to pass judgment upon designs for new silver coins submitted to the Treasury Department by artists, both professional and amateur, who were invited to compete. Many designs were offered; but most of them were utterly impossible, many were freaks, and only two were deemed worthy of honorable mention. Even these two did not meet requirements, and, as a result, the job had to be turned over to the chief engraver of the Philadelphia mint, who is responsible for the patterns of the half-dollar, quarter and dime now current. It was decided not to make any change in the silver dollar.

Certain cast-iron requirements govern the designing of coins, and they must be met. Artists, as a rule, however, will not submit to them, and some of those who entered the above-mentioned competition even went so far as to suggest landscapes in bas relief. It is demanded, in the first place, that a design for this purpose shall be very simple, and of necessity it must be rather conventional—the idea being that the piece of money, whatever its denomination, shall be instantly recognizable and identifiable at a glance.

Tradition governs coin designs to a considerable extent and must be obeyed. For instance, all civilized nations put a portrait of the ruler on the front, or obverse side of a piece of money, and the coat-of-arms of the country on the reverse. In the case of a republic, a head or figure of Liberty usually takes the place of the sovereign. One mistake that ambitions' artists have made was in supposing that any kind of eagle would serve for the back of a United States coin—the fact being that only an heraldic bird, representing the national emblem, will do for the purpose.

It has been suggested that the heads of the Presidents of the United States might appear at least on certain denominations of our coins. Thus the silver dollar of the year 1907 might bear the likeness of Roosevelt, which would be replaced by that of his successor two years from now. The Presidents appear on our paper money; why not, then, on the metal money? The answer to this proposition is that, in the first place, no President ever appears on our paper money until after he is dead; secondly, to put the head of a living Chief Executive on our coins would be too suggestive of a royal prerogative.

Nevertheless, it is a fact that a President of the United States, and even his wife, during their lifetime, have appeared on our coins. Our earliest copper pennies bore the visage of Washington; and in 1792 were minted, by way of experiment, silver dimes with the head of Martha Washington on them. Indeed, it was only fair that she should be thus distinguished, under the circumstances, inasmuch as the bullion from which the dimes were struck was obtained by melting silver dishes sent for the purpose, out of the plate chest, from Mount Vernon to Philadelphia by the Father of his Country.

The President is not the final arbiter in the choice of designs for United States coins. When new designs are made, pattern pieces, as they are called—that is to say, samples—are placed in the hands of the Committee on Weights and Measures of the House and Senate, which select the ones they like best, availing themselves of the advice of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Director of the Mint. The rejected ones are returned to the Treasury. Formerly minted copies of such rejected coins, executed mostly in base metals, were sold to collectors as curiosities at high prices—whence the existence in many collections today of dollars, half eagles, eagles, and double eagles of copper, brass, tin, alluminum, and various compositions. Since 1887, however, their sale has been forbidden.

In 1878 a number of silver dollars of different patterns were struck experimentally, one of them being the so-called "schoolgirl dollar," which was adorned on the obverse side with a youthful profile with flowing hair held by a ribbon. This was deemed a failure, and only two specimens of it are now extant. Another trial coin of the same epoch was the "washlady dollar"—its design a female profile with a great quantity of hair held together by nothing visible. There were also "washlady" halves and "wash-lady" quarters.

It does not seem likely that we shall ever be through with experiments in coin designs. A year after the "wash-lady" and "schoolgirl" series came the so-called "goloid" dollars, which were intended to afford a compromise between the gold and silver standards. They were of silver with a percentage of gold. Nothing more remarkable has ever been turned out from our mints, unless it be the "ring" dollar of 1852, of gold. It had a hole in the middle of it, and for this reason, being larger, was more easily handled; and, in addition, its advocates urged that it might be strung conveniently, like Chinese cash.

Not long ago a joint committee of the National Sculpture and American Numismatic societies suggested that the designs of our coins should be changed every ten years, each new set recording important events of the preceding decade. Strange to say, this idea has not been welcomed by the Treasury, which has likewise evinced no enthusiasm in behalf of a notion, not long ago offered, that a 9-cent coin would be very desirable, on account of the practice that has become popular among storekeepers of making the prices on various articles 19 cents, 49 cents, 99 cents, etc.

Our earliest silver dollars were struck from melted French coins, the design being furnished by Robert Scot, the first engraver of the Philadelphia mint. Since that day, all of our coins have b- designed by government die sinkers, and, inasmuch as they understand the business, it is likely that the same method will be pursued in the future. The process they adopt begins with drawing on a slate a circle a in diameter, over which is spread a layer of pure beeswax. On the beeswax the design is made with modelling tools. When finished, it is reproduced in metal by electrotyping. From the electrotype a reduced and exact copy, the size of the coin to be, is made in hard steel; and an "intaglio" of steel made from this "cameo" is the die that strikes the piece of money, converting it into authorized cash of the realm.

THE HEART'S DESIRE.

I am longing tonight for the lilt of the rain
  As it strikes through the elm tree's bough;
For the warm western wind blowing free up the lane;
  For the croak of the frogs in the slough.

I would take the old shawl from its hook in the hall,
  And alone I would wander along,
Down the lane where the beat of the drops on my cheek
  Would fill my whole being with song.

I swiftly would pass o'er the glistening grass,
  Washed clean by the fall of the rain,
And wandering away from the cares of today,
  I would almost be happy again.

For the drops would wash out all the sorrows and rears
  From my heart now so weary with pain,
And my soul be at rest from the cares that oppress
  Could I feel the soft lilt of the rain.

WEATHER FROM BELOW.

SURPRISING DISCOVERIES ANNOUNCED BY PROF MILNE, THE EARTHQUAKE EXPERT.

[London Daily Mail:] Our climate is hatched down below. Such seems to be the conclusion suggested by an astonishing series of experiments made by Prof. Milne, the greatest master of seismology in the world, as he was described. Many people have had a similar view of the origin of recent weather, but Prof. Milne today gave the British association the first scientific proof.

The tale of his experiments was one of the two new discoveries announced at Leicester, and it unfolds all sorts of possibilities. He has made the discovery much in the same way as the X-rays were discovered. He has been in the habit of leaving an ingenious photographic arrangement in quarries at night, with certain astounding results. The photographic paper was found to be marked from time to time by dark bands, black spots, and what are called singeings. Some of these markings occurred at the time of earthquakes, but by no means all.

It seems certain that most minerals become luminous at frequent intervals. The cliffs of Dover have been seen suddenly to gleam and hilltops become visible in the darkness. A chemist of fame told me that he had extracted bright light from a great variety of stones by simply rubbing them with emery paper. The conclusion is that the disturbing forces which go on even at the very center of the earth are converted before they reach the surface into heat and light, and make all manner of difference to what we call climate and weather. The effect is all the greater as we are at a great earthquake era in the history of the world.

The weather prophets who extract their knowledge from the air, not the earth, expected to cap Prof. Milne. Two Frenchmen have made remarkable discoveries of the course of storms, which might enable a man on a motor car to keep in touch with any storm of which he had notice half across a continent. The discoveries are likely at once to send up the percentage of totally successful prophecies, which is now at sixty-one, to seventy or eighty. Unfortunately time was so short that the announcements were suppressed, as was also the result of the balloon experiments, and there was much annoyance and disappointment.

One other discovery was announced in an unexpected quarter. P- Bottomley was able to prove to the botanists that he has harnessed the microbe so successfully that it may be as useful to the farmers as the shire horse or the spade. There is a small microbe always attached to the roots of clover and other plants of the species which insures their fertility and the fertility of the land. These little beasts the professor has recently taken in hand, and by careful feeding taught them an acquired taste for the tomato, which, under their ministrations, doubles its fertility.

KAISER AS NEWSPAPER READER.

The Munchener Neueste Nachrichten, in an article on the Kaiser's newspaper reading, says he reads uncut newspapers extensively, and with sufficient regularity and sufficient breadth of choice to keep him thoroughly au fait with all shades of public opinion. Newspaper clippings, however, play the chief role in instructing the Kaiser on the affairs of the day. These are sent in folios regularly to the Emperor by the Foreign Office and by the Literary Bureau of the Ministry for Home Affairs. The various technical departments send in budgets of clippings on their special subjects. Newspaper clippings are pasted on foolscap sheets, with name and date of paper. Embellished with imperial annotations and comments, the clippings are subsequently returned to the offices which have sent them, where they are carefully pigeon-holed.—[London Evening Standard.

A Vacation Adventure.

THE AWKWARD PREDICAMENT OF GEORGE AND KIT.

By a Special Contributor.

THE touring car dashed over the crest of the hill, down a bit of steep grade that to any but two imperturbable youths would have been alarming, and sped smoothly out on a long, apparently endless plain. Night was coming on and the clouds which had been gathering for some time began to shed their contents.

The two of them—George Holland and Christopher Dill—were college fellows out on a vacation jaunt. They had left the beaten paths they both knew and were "discovering Nature," as Kit said.

They shot on over the level roadway, searching some place of promise, to stop for the night. The rain slanted steadily into their faces.

Finally they found a barn with its doors hospitably wide open, and with small ceremony entered in. After putting the Old Girl down with solicitous tenderness, they stood in the great doorway and gazed gloomily into the rain. The prospect was not cheerful. Night was coming on, the storm was getting under headway and bade fair to become a tempest; they were in an undiscovered country—wet, famished, uncomfortable aliens.

"I'm going to tackle the house. May be some nice Christian bedridden party left at home who'd let us go in and camp down somewhere till the clouds roll by," said Kit.

It was a little, rather battered old house, with a tiny front porch as the sole ornamental feature. No sign of life were anywhere visible to the naked eye. Kit with his great strides got ahead and reconnoitered the tiny porch.

"Hello!" he exclaimed; then, "Well, the dickens!" then as climax, "By thunder!"

"What's up?" queried George Holland, coming up with his usual leisure.

"Come along and read this, will you? It's regularly spooky!"

"This," proving to be a large card tacked to the little front door, read in this wise:

> "You dear George and Kit, walk right in and make yourselves comfortable. Shall be back tomorrow—too bad, but unavoidable. The house is yours meanwhile."

"I told you it was spooky," remarked Kit, in an appropriate undertone.

Inside, the battered little house held further surprises—further miracles. For one thing, there had been nothing outside to suggest luxury or daintiness or, as Kit put it, a soul. But here there were all three! Here were pretty cushions thrown about apparently at random, dainty draperies at windows and doors, bits of rather good sketches and altogether bad water colors, and one or two fine prints, pinned to the walls on all sides. Here was a lamp, there was a violin; here a chafing dish had a small shelf to itself, there some one had draped a college flag over an unsightly blotch in the wall paper. The effect of all things as a whole was surprisingly harmonious and pleasant. To come, wet, hungry, disgruntled, out of the storm into such a place, was a thing as agreeable as it was miraculous.

"We've died and gone to heaven," rumbled Kit, solemnly. "But where are the angels? I always supposed we should find no end of ang——"

"Kit, will you read this?" There was startled awe in the other's voice. He was pointing dramatically to another placard on the wall, that they had mistaken at first for some sort of a poster. It had the earmarks of a poster. A raggedly-sketched herald flaunted a ragged banner on which appeared these mystic words:

"Hungry, listen! A mince pie waiteth!—doughnuts like that your mother used to make: Take your lantern and go straight ahead. Don't stop till you get the last crumb!"

"Angels!" ejaculated George Holland.

"Angels!" murmured Kit, "and we're on their trail, old man." As, indeed, it seemed they must be. Who but angels could know how hungry two great boys could be, or how mince pie, doughnuts, tarts that their mothers used to make, could appeal to them?

"This is great!"

"We're in luck, Kit, for sure. Come on. Think we're going to refuse any of the goodies the gods provide!"

"Not—not when they're mince pies and such!"

On the kitchen door was a placard, announcing that there were kindlings and dry sticks in the wood house, ready to be used. "Keep warm!" urged the placard. And what could two shivering, damp youths be expected to do but obey?

A hearty meal and a thorough drying by the little old-fashioned kitchen stove, and the two collegians felt refreshed indeed. With true philosophy they had settled down into calm acceptance of their good fortune—"theirs not to question why." The embarrassing possibility of the angels' return at any moment was spared them, since the angels had so explicitly stated that they would not be back until tomorrow. Between now and then stretched a comfortable interval of rest and luxury, to enjoy and make the most of; then sudden flight in the Old Girl, and forever after firm belief in the guardianship of the angels. Forever after they would believe in miracles; the supernatural would henceforth hold for them no foolish terrors.

The question of sleeping had hitherto not troubled them to any degree; but the matter was brought into sudden prominence by a new discovery, and, as it proved, the last one to be made. Kit had been pacing the queer, bright little room, when his big strides were arrested at a door that might—and did!—lead upstairs. It was in the shadow a little, which was doubtless the reason of the discovery not having been made much earlier. Because they were by this time wonder-proof, they read it with stolid calm:

"To whom it may concern—and you needn't pretend it doesn't concern you both!—the bed in the right-hand front chamber is the softest, also the springiest, also the conducivest to sound and refreshing slumber. Kit always did want a feather bed. Better choose the right-hand front!"

They faced each other with fine imperturbability, but each was distinctly conscious of the other's lurking amazement.

"Well?" muttered Kit.

"Let's go to bed," George said; "why not? in the right-hand front. No use refusing a good thing when it's offered to you as polite as that!"

The storm without showed not the slightest indication to abate its fury. It was intensely dark—even the Old Girl with her keen, bright eyes that defied the ordinary night, could not safely travel through this inky void. No; Old Girl was vastly safer out there in her comfortable quarters, and the two young men were vastly safer in here, in theirs. It would be folly to tempt fate by leaving all this comfort and safety behind and sallying foolhardy out into the night.

It may have been midnight—may have been later—when sundry noises below-stairs woke George Holland and sent him up on his elbow in haste. He listened intently, dismally. For sure, Voices were down there, and if Voices, then—angels! The angels had got home!

"Kit—Kit, you!" he whispered in sudden panic, "wake up; I tell you they've got back! 'Sh, for the Lord's sake!"

The Voices were by now distinctly audible. The stairway door must have been left ajar. With a jerk Kit came upon consciousness and the Voices.

"My uncle, they've lit!" he groaned. "We're in for it, old man!"

From below: "Georgy, where are you? Why don't you do something?"

"Great heavens, Kit, haven't I barked both shins, put out both eyes, run violin bow into both ears—always had an ear for music—and stepped on a pin cushion."

That it should have cleared off while they slept!—that they might have been speeding the Old Girl toward safety now, instead of gibbering here like a choice pair of idiots!—that there was no way out of this trap!

"Did you hear what they called each other?" lisped George. 'Kit,' 'Georgy'—oh, my uncle!"

"Your uncle?—mine, too!"

And down below: "Why don't they wake up, Georgy? Did you ever see such sleepers?"

"The poor things are probably all done up getting ready for us. All those things we spoke for, you know—I say, Kit, did you mention tarts, the kind that——"

"The very kind! Georgy, you think of it, at this minute whilst we famish and die, there are tarts somewhere near us!"

It may have been fifteen minutes when the Voices came back. They were now much more subtle and the lapses into silence were suggestive of tarts and strawberry jam. The voices themselves had a numbly suggestiveness.

"Oh, Georgy, aren't we having a lovely time! Aren't you glad you married me?"

Strange there was no answer! Strange how breathless the soft Voice sounded next time!

"But I don't understand about the crumbiness and those crusts of pie—and the pies all cut into. Oh, Georgy, wouldn't it have been dreadful if there'd been tramps here and they'd eaten it all."

"They should have hung for it!" the big Voice growled.

"Well, they left us half, so I almost love 'em!" laughed softly the soft Voice. It was the soft voice that did most of the speaking.

"Isn't this a lovely room?—if we only had a little better light to see by! College girls are such fun—I'm going 'round tomorrow and read all those posters we found stuck up 'round."

In the silence that followed, two long, shadowy figures slid noiselessly across the floor overhead, and, one at a time, slipped over the window sill and dropped to the ground beneath. The rain-soaked earth stood them in good stead, muffling the fall and easing the jar of it. Utterly ashamed of themselves, they crept away toward the Old Girl.

"We ought to be sent up for this," mumbled Kit.

"Oh, sure—sure!" groaned the other, "for six months' hard labor! I never sneaked before—it's a nasty feeling! But how were we to help hearing, I'd like to know? And wouldn't we have lighted out long ago, if it hadn't been for our confounded togs down there? Nice pickle we'd be in if we hadn't brought some old hunting things along—shooting the country in our shirt sleeves, bareheaded!"

Kit's thoughts harked back dismally to the abandoned "togs." "Think of leaving 'em behind, will you!" he groaned. "There's circumstantial evidence enough in my overcoat pocket to hang me! If they get on our track——"

"They won't—trust the Old Girl for that. We'll make a record run first. It's jolly good luck the moon's turned on."

It was now faint daylight. The east flamed with rosy outrunners of day, and things hitherto invested with the mystery of night, stood revealed in their own nakedness or prosaic ugliness—or their beauty. The tourists were in the midst of a houseless plain; there seemed no sign of life anywhere. Yet, surely—what were those moving specks? One speck was red.

The Old Girl shot nearer—the specks were human beings. Nearer still—they were women. Kit uttered an exclamation softly.

"Girls for sure!" he breathed. "I believe they're in some kind of trouble."

The red speck resolved itself into a young person in something red and summery and gay, her face white in startling contrast. She was crouching beside the road, nursing her foot. The other speck proved white all over.

The Old Girl came to an abrupt stop and both young men leaped out.

"Is there any trouble?—is any one hurt?" they chorused.

"Oh, dear, yes!" the White Speck cried. "I'm so thankful you've come—I mean somebody has! We're lost, and she's sprained her ankle.

"We're awfully ashamed of ourselves—it's too silly to get lost in a place you've camped out in all summer. But it was the dark did it. We got turned 'round."

The young women had started out to walk across country from the railway station in the darkness of very early morning.

"We were so anxious to get home," explained one of them, rather pathetically. "We were so perfectly delighted when we found there was that early train! They couldn't scare us telling us we'd have to walk; but we didn't plan to get lost!"

"Or to step on rolling stones. That was such a mistake! When we wanted so much to get—and now it doesn't seem as if we'd ever——"

"There is room in the tonneau; we can easily stow the luggage," eagerly interrupted one of the strangers. "If you'll give us the pleasure of assisting—I'm George Holland; this is Kit—er, I would say Christopher—Dill. If you are equal to being jolted a little, Miss——"

"Warren—Margaret Warren. This is my chum, Jessica Hoyt."

They were presently all bestowed snugly in the Old Girl's lap, and the man at the wheel turned the Old Girl about.

The Old Girl did her best, and in the end crept slowly to victory.

"Why! Why, here we are! This is home!" ejaculated Jessica, suddenly.

The two young men had exchanged startled glances as the motor rounded a corner suddenly and brought them in sight of the house they had fled from a few hours previously. Then had come the "Mig," the "Georgy" and the "Kit," till nothing more was needed to make the denouement more tragic and convincing. Thus was their downfall to be celebrated; thus were they to be confronted with their ignominy!

"Georgy, Kit, you dears! Is it you! Have you come? Did you find our notices and the jam and things? Oh Georgy, wait, I'm mortally wounded! Don't touch me This is Mr.—Mr. Holland, and this is Mr. Hill——"

"Dill," corrected Kit, softly.

"They've saved our live—"

"By George! Dillie, how are you?"

"What! You, Campbell? Not you?"

"The very same, old man! Well, if this isn't—Kit, do you hear, this is my old chum in the academy at home! This is my wife, Dillie. We're on our wedding trip. Well, if this isn't great!"

Explanations and introductions trod upon each other's heels. There were merriment and laughter enough to set the echoes a-ring.

"It's such fun being a chaperone!" the little bride confided to her husband that night when the summer "camp" had settled down to quiet and rest. "I guess it paid to marry you, Georgy; I couldn't have been a chaperone if I hadn't, could I? Makes me feel so dignified and old and grandmothery!"

"And me grandfathery."

"You! Georgy, you're not in it. I'm chaperoning you, too! But, Georgy——"

"What say?"

"Of course I don't know yet, but I'm not sure but what I've found the best man in the world for Mig."

"You found—hear her!"

"The only trouble is, there are two of 'em, Georgy. I can't make up my mind which one——"

"Might leave it to Mig."

"Mercy! why, so I might," laughed the little bride. "Georgy, what a smart boy you are!"

So, as in the end turned out to be wise, the matter was left to Mig—and Jessica.

THE BEGGARS' NEWSPAPER.

"Yes," said the tourist, as he unpacked his huge trunks, "I left all my money on the other side, but dear, what a lot of nice things I have brought back home with me."

He took out a small newspaper.

"Here is something interesting," he said. "It is a beggars' journal. It is published in Paris. The circulation is very small. I paid no less than $3 for this copy.

"It's all about beggars. There's nothing in it that is not of interest and value to a beggar. Listen. I'll translate a thing or two for you."

He translated:

"'Tomorrow at 2 o'clock the funeral service of Baron d'Uzes, the millionaire, will be held at the Madeleine.'

"'At 3, fashionable weddings at the Trinité St. Sulpice, and Notre Dame.'

"'Wanted, for the Riviera, three crippled children.'

"'Our subscribers are urged to use their influence to prevent the réelection of M. Fouquet, of Finisterre, who is fathering a bill to prohibit mendicants from standing at church entrances before and after the various services. We need not point out the loss to the profession that the passage of such a bill would entail.'

"'Wanted, a blind man who can play the flute.'

"'For sale, or to be let on long lease, a splendid corner in a busy and prosperous district, suitable for old woman with hand organ.'"

Making Peacemakers.

HOW GREAT GUNS ARE MADE AT WASHINGTON FACTORY.

By a Special Contributor.

IN the United States Capitol at Washington the long corridor that runs from the terrace at the Senate end to the terrace at House of Representatives extends uninterruptedly for 750 feet, one continuous passage under the entire lawmaking building of the nation. In the Washington Navy Yard the great gun shop in length extends 926 feet 5 inches, nearly 200 feet more. Beside it, to the west, the gun carriage shop, or quadrangle, covers as much ground again, and these two sinister factories are more than trebled in space by the tool shop, forge shop, foundry, pattern shop, cartridge-case shop, miscellaneous ordnance shop, not to speak of the various storehouses which are necessary that the gunmaking may be carried on. Peace at the thundering demand of great cannon is given more territory in Washington than is allowed for the deliberations and oratory of the lawmakers.

Forty-seven acres of land, comprising the old navy yard, are now almost exclusively devoted to making the nation's peacemakers, and appropriation for extra water frontage on the eastern branch of the Potomac was asked during the latest session of Congress. And even without that expansion and the building and equipment which is projected with it, there is a unanimity of opinion in the bureau of ordnance and the entire admiralty that this factory, not excepting the world-famed gunshops of the Krupps, is the finest in the world.

Experts in naval affairs now give the United States navy the second place among the nations of the world, Great Britain far ahead by a long lead, and Germany, France, Japan, Russia and Italy steaming so close after the Stars and Stripes that it is doubtful whether Germany, France and Japan at least may not overtake her, or whether the lead is not already merely a matter of opinion. It was Admiral Gleaves, who said some years ago:

"Ships are built to carry—that is to say, ships are simply gun platforms furnished with motive power for transportation and mobilization." And Secretaary Moody once reported that it requires practically as much time to manufacture the armament of a battleship as to build the vessel. Under these circumstances it is easily comprehensible that with the contracts given as late as June 29 to the Newport News Company and the Fore River Company for two improved Dreadnoughts of 20,000 tons, the gun factory at Washington is [illegible] twenty-four hours a day.

Gun Efficiency of New Navy.

There is some difference between these [illegible] vessels, believed to be distinctly superior [illegible] battleship hitherto designed and the old [illegible] Delaware, the name selected for one of the [illegible] will be 510 feet in length, with a beam of [illegible] displacement on trial will be 20,000 tons, [illegible] draught 27 feet. The speed demanded [illegible] What is pertinent about this seagoing [illegible] which will require a crew of 800 and cost [illegible] plete, is that her main battery will consist [illegible] inch guns, and the secondary battery of fourteen [illegible] guns, together with twelve minor pieces. [illegible] son with the Indiana, which, like her sister [illegible] Massachusetts, the Oregon, and even the Iowa, [illegible] garded as a last expression in battleship develop[illegible]

[illegible] READY TO LIFT A BIG GUN.

[illegible] INTERIOR OF TWELVE INCH [illegible]

[illegible] (1898.) a meaning of the word "dreadnought" [illegible] be ascertained.

The Indiana is 348 feet in length, with a beam of 69¼; her displacement is 10,288 tons and draught 27¼ feet. Her speed is 15.5 knots. With an armament of four 13-inch, eight 8-inch and four 6-inch guns for her main battery, and twenty-nine minor pieces for her secondary battery, she has never exceeded a collective muzzle energy of over 182,000-foot tons. On the new Delaware the collective muzzle energy will equal 400,000-foot tons. In other words, in little more than ten years the fighting power of the battleship has more than doubled. It is quite impossible to estimate the amount of destruction possible from a concentration of ten 12-inch guns. Nothing now afloat could withstand it.

To provide these modern big guns for a navy conceived upon this new basis is the special object of the Washington gun factory. The manner in which the work is being rushed since the Spanish War and with the rumors of war, or war to be avoided by fleet demonstrations, may be imagined from a statement of Admiral Mason in his latest annual report as chief of the Bureau of Ordnance:

"The total shipments from the yard, exclusive of material shipped to and from the naval proving ground, amounted to 20,611,127 pounds, being an increase of 10,[illegible] pounds over the previous fiscal year."

At the gun factory also, as in the new Delaware, requirements have been doubled.

No Fault With Guns.

Criticism since the disasters in the turrets of the Massachusetts, the Kearsarge, the Missouri and the Georgia has been aimed at the construction of the turrets, at the fact of their being superimposed turrets, which require greater hoists of the ammunition, at the smokeless powder, which, according to some authorities, is as uncertain as a woman, but no word has been raised against the construction of the big peacemakers, the guns themselves.

Something over 5000 men are employed at the navy yard. All their effort is a concentration of ways and means to make the big gun an easily-handled, perfectly operating piece of mechanism. Turning and boring the great tube, jacketing its entire length, and shrinking on various hoops till the whole assembled gun looks like an elongated telescope, are the principal stages of interest, but constructing the carriages, testing the [illegible], modeling and adjusting the sights and a countless number of other activities are required before the gun can be covered with heavy oil and sent to the storage-house or shipped to the waiting vessels.

The material used for building peacemakers is what is known at the navy yard as open-hearth nickel steel, fluid-compressed, forged, oil-tempered and annealed. Nickel steel is found more serviceable as being more ductile and more elastic and of greater tensile strength than carbon steel. When this material comes from the great steel companies it is rough-bored and turned, the tubes within one inch of the finished dimensions and all other parts within a quarter of an inch. These great forgings are at once carefully weighed and minutely examined. Measurements are taken to discover whether they will work out to finished dimensions, and parts are assembled, it being the aim to put into one gun only such forgings as come from one plant.

Naturally the lathe is the imperial tool which has most to do with gunmaking, and in the long gunshops of the yard there are the most majestic lathes to be seen anywhere. The section of the building on Dahlgren avenue, nearest the entrance of the yard, is known as the north gunshop. Here are located eight large lathes for the turning and boring of the thunderers. In Washington no gun larger than a 13-inch has ever been built, and the probability is that in the future only the 12-inch will be built up, as it has become the standard gun.

Behind and extending on into the long south gunshop and the breech mechanism shop, are the runways of the big cranes.

The electric traveling cranes have respectively a [illegible] capable of lifting forty tons, twenty-five tons and fifteen tons. Each has an auxiliary hoist respectively of five, two and a half and one and a half tons. There is an additional crane runway suppoting a 110-ton crane (tested to 120 tons,) with a 15-ton auxiliary hoist. There is thus no difficulty in swinging a great gun weighing seventy-five tons up and down the long shop.

Pride of the Gunshop.

No. 1 lathe is the prize piece of the north gunshop. It is capable of turning or boring a gun of 16-inch bore [illegible], and can turn a gun 57 feet long and bore for 51 feet. On this lathe, which has a bed of 128 feet 3¾ inches, the gigantic monarch, the 16-inch gun, capable of hurling a ton of steel a distance of twelve miles, can be readily made.

Seven other similar lathes range down the north gunshop, and then the shrinkage pit is reached. Beyond the pit is the long space known as the south gunshop. The [illegible] end of the building is devoted to the breech mechanism shop.

The south gunshop is 427 feet 11 inches long, and is devoted almost entirely to the construction of guns from [illegible] to ten inches in diameter. It contains fifteen gun lathes, together with a number of other large lathes for making various parts of the breech mechanism, also [illegible] machines and other apparatus.

In the breech mechanism shop proper, the last 250 feet of the long factory, is devoted to the assembling of parts. Here 100 or more machines are lined up along the sides and the guns up to the ten-inch variety are brought here to have the breech mechanism and sight mounting fitted. Larger guns than these usually have their sights fitted upon them after they have been placed in the turrets aboard ship. The great continuous gunshop is the heart of the gunmaking plant. Here the thousand or more workmen toil in three shifts throughout the twenty-four hours, with the result of two and three hundred guns a year.

In order, the processes of building up a big gun, and, for that matter, the smaller guns as well, for it is all much the same thing, are the boring of the jacket, the turning of the tube, the shrinking of the jacket upon it and the subsequent turning of the exterior, followed one by one by the shrinking on of the hoops. Each hoop is turned after it is shrunk on. Then follow the boring of the built-up guns, with the finishing of the powder chamber, the cutting of the thread for the screw bore, the rifling of the gun and the attachment of the breech mechanism.

How the Boring Is Done.

One of the most interesting phases of the boring, when the nature of the steel material on the lathe is remembered, is the use of the "packed bit." All the boring is done by bits. The start is made by cutting out from three to six inches of the bore with the ordinary lathe tool, then the "hog bit," which is a semi-cylinder of cast iron hollowed in the middle and having a hard tool screwed to one front corner is used. It is possible on some of the lathes to make a cut one inch deep, the feed being 3-100 of an inch and the speed seven feet per minute. But all the finish cuts are made with the "packed bit," which is made of wood. That is, the bit is a flat forging, or possibly a steel casting, with a cylindrical shank carrying two tools on the opposite sides of the flat front end. This affair is then built up with white oak into a complete cylinder slightly larger in diameter than the finished hole. When forced into the opening, the cut being light, the bit is under tremendous pressure and is held most rigidly. After every job it is necessary to repack the bit, the same wood being used with additional lining of wood, and in the first relinings even of paper.

For the sake of accuracy when a gun tube or a long hoop is being bored usually it is cut out half way from one end and then reversed to minimize any possible error. As boring cannot be done as accurately as turning, the bore is always cut out first and the turned piece made later to suit the measurement of the hole. That method secures a perfect fit.

Shrinking on a Jacket.

But neither boring nor turning ever reaches such a pitch of excitement in the gunshop as the moment of shrinkage. By custom, shrinkage hour is usually 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

"I have shrunk some thousand or more jackets in my time," says the foreman, "and always at 3 o'clock, and I have never had an accident. I am not superstitious, but I don't see any use changing the time."

Shrinking on a great 12-inch jacket is an event, and never fails to arouse even the veterans of the shop.

The shrinking pit is forty-five feet deep. In fact, there are three wells, one in the center twenty-five feet deep, the two on either side being forty-five. The guns and jackets are heated in three vertical furnaces, in which crude oil is used as fuel. No flame touches the gun.

It takes from thirty to thirty-six hours to heat up a large jacket, which may weigh as much as 34,000 pounds. When the pyrometer, which affords an accurate knowledge of the temperature, registers 700 to 800 degrees Fahrenheit, the jacket is sufficiently baked, and then it is ready for its final resting place over the tube. At the signal of the foreman the big overhead cranes wheel over the pit. The smaller one lifts the lid of the furnace and swings it to one side. Then the great 110-ton crane comes into position; its great shackle is lowered rapidly, and the men every one of whom is automatically perfect in his special duties, with iron rods adjust the chains. At the motion of the foreman—he merely tips upward the fingers of his outstretched hand—the great jacket, with a mighty humming and rattling of the crane, begins to rise out of the furnace. When it is once clear it is swabbed out with wet swabs on long poles. Then the craneman, with his eyes riveted on the foreman, moves the crane slowly with its dangling sixteen-ton burden until the jacket is exactly over the gun tube, which has been placed upright in the pit. This is the psychological moment. Every one, bystanders and workmen, is anxious.

There is but four-hundredths of an inch play all around the tube. If the jacket binds when lowered, there is no end of trouble, delay and expense. Steady nerves are needed to center the jacket. The heat from the baked jacket is almost unendurable, and the red faces of the workmen who steady it with asbestos-gloved hands blister.

Another adjustment and the jacket is centered.

Down bend the foreman's fingers.

The reel unwinds, and the jacket, first slowly and then rapidly, drops until it brings up suddenly on the end of the tube.

It is customary now to jacket the big guns right up to the muzzle. For eighteen hours the mass cools, hastened by water circulating inside the tube. Then when the contraction ceases it has nipped the tube so closely as actually to compress it, and practically the tube and jacket have become one piece of steel.

To Sustain the Pressure.

When a tight rubber band is slipped over a stout piece of cardboard bent so as to make a hollow cylinder the same play of forces is seen as in the construction of a big gun. The tension of the rubber prevents the card from springing open, and the tension of the card resists the compression of the rubber. Technically this is known as "initial tension and varying elasticities." It is only by this means and the extra energy of the great hoops, layers of steel bands that are contracted upon the jacket in much the same manner as the jacket upon the tube, that the tremendous pressure of the explosion of a gun charge is overcome.

There is no moment in the making of a gun that tests are not applied, and when it is understood that measuring machines capable of indicating the twenty-thousandth of an inch are employed the degree of accuracy which is ordinarily demanded can only be imagined.

The whole process of making these thundering peacemakers is of but recent invention. It was, according to some historical accounts, at Crecy in 1346 that the sturdy English used the first cannon—strange little spitfires that threw a three or four-pound stone ball a hundred yards or so. But even then they dealt a deathblow to knighthood and feudalism. Ordnance in the course of five centuries made some advance, but between the War of 1812 and the Civil War, there was not much change. Gunlocks and shell had been thought out, and rifling and breechloading were slightly employed. But even up to 1877 the standard guns of the navy were the smooth bore, solid cast iron Dahlgrens which the sailors called "beer bottles" and which, burning nine pounds of powder, fired a shot of about ninety pounds. Some of these antiques are actually st. afloat.

Then and Now.

It was only in 1884 that a board sent abroad to examine the gun factories of England, France and Russia made such reports that the establishment of a modern navy gun factory at Washington and an army gun factory at Watervliet, on the Hudson, was secured. Now with the thousands of machines and the shifts of skilled machinists, the United States has something to say as to gunmaking, which is not disclosed to every tourist who enters the yard after leaving his camera at the gate.

In the great quadrangle or gun carriage shop the problem of absorbing a blow of 40,000 foot-tons by the springs of the carriages must be worked out. At every moment in every shop whether the resounding foundry where 5000-pound brass castings shower the air with fire, or the forge shop where seventy-five-ton hammers shake the foundations, or the quiet of the draftsman's rooms, there is always present the aim to perfect, to surpass and to keep quiet in order that peace may be dictated authoritatively.

Including the yokes, the breech mechanisms, the accessories and the spare parts on the average a standard 12-inch gun costs approximately $65,000; an 8-inch gun, $25,000, and a 6-inch gun $13,000, and it has been found that the government with improved machinery can make its guns at one-third the cost paid, under contract, to private firms. And yet with even this reduction the life of a gun is an important question with the navy. The problem of erosion is in all probability the most perplexing difficulty before the minds of gun experts.

Problem of Erosion.

When a gun is fired the chemical and mechanical forces set into action corrode the bore. It is softened, and the rush of the powder gases at the base of the projectile gouge out the lining. It has been proven at the yard that the eroded gun may be bored out and a new barrel inserted, but the process of relining is long and tedious. With the necessity of target practice the question of the number of times a high-powdered large-caliber gun can be fired is an anxious matter. It is now estimated that a 12-inch gun may be fired 300 times without serious injury, and yet, even in peace, the Bureau of Ordnance petitions Congress that the gun factory may be kept busy making reserves. When the big peacemaker is temporarily out of commission there must be in storage successors able to make emphatic utterance. It is for that reason that the lathes are kept turning, and, with the regularity of clockwork, on comes the night shift.

HAIR OIL'S RETURN.

The young man's hair, wnen the barber finished with it, was as smooth and lustrous as a well-brushed silk hat.

"Yes," said the barber complacently, "that is the fashion now—a head as sleek and shiny as plush. You get the effect with brilliantine. Of course brilliantine is hair oil, plain old-fashioned hair oil, under a fancy name.

"The point I want to make is that the revival of hair oil is improving the hair. For nearly a generation men had been brushing their hair dry, keeping oil out of it as though oil were a sin, and that crisp, fluffy hair of theirs fell out in handfuls, and the men soon became bald.

"Our fathers used hair oil profusely. That is why they had tidies on the chair backs in those days. And our fathers had good hair, much better hair than we have.

"But we are now improving. Already, in 75 per cent of my patrons, I have noticed a new life in the scalp, a vigor, a freshness, such as spreads over the fields in the early spring. It is all due to the return of that fine fertilizer—hair oil—brilliantine, or whatever you choose to call it.

"This is the best brand. One and a half for the smal. bottle. Three for the large. The larger? Thank you. James, wrap this up at once."

A GREAT MISTAKE.

"In my country," said a Swedish engineer, "they make a brown cheese of goat's milk. It is a delicious cheese, but to a foreigner its aspect is not inviting. It is made in little bricks.

"In Sweden last summer I sent to some of my San Diego friends a few of these cheeses, along with some Swedish punch and other native delicacies.

"One letter of acknowledgment that I got said:

"'Thanks awfully for the punch and salmon. The soap, too, is very nice, but we find great difficulty in making it lather.'

"The soap, of course was the cheese."

The Mystery.

REMARKABLE ADVENTURES OF THE CRUISER WOLVERINE.

By STEWART EDWARD WHITE and SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS.

PART II—CHAPTER IX.

THE CORROSIVE.

THAT evening I smoked in a splendid isolation while the men whispered apart. I had nothing to do but smoke and to chew my cud, which was bitter. There could be no doubt, however, I may have saved my face, that command had been taken from me by that rascal, Handy Solomon. I was in two minds as to whether or not I should attempt to warn Darrow or the doctor. Yet what could I say? and against whom should I warn them? The men had grumbled, as men always do grumble in idleness, and had perhaps talked a little wildly, but that was nothing.

The only indisputable fact I could adduce was that I had allowed my authority to slip through my fingers. And adequately to excuse that I should have to confess that I was a writer and no handler of men.

I abandoned the unpleasant train of thought with a snort of disgust, but it had led me to another. In the joy and uncertainty of living I had practically lost sight of the reason for my coming. With me it had always been more the adventure than the story; my writing was a by-product, a utilization of what life offered me. I had set sail possessed by the sole idea of ferreting out Dr. Schermerhorn's investigations, but the gradual development of affairs had ended by absorbing my every faculty. Now, cast into an eddy by my change of fortunes, the original idea regained its force. I was out of the active government of affairs, with leisure on my hands, and my thoughts naturally turned with curiosity again to the laboratory in the valley.

Darrow's "devil fires" were again painting the sky. I had noticed them from time to time, always with increasing wonder. The men accepted them easily as only one of the unexplained phenomena of a sailor's experience, but I had not as yet hit on a hypothesis that suited me. They were not allied to the aurora, they differed radically from the ordinary volcanic emanations, and scarcely resembled any electrical displays I had ever seen. The night was cool; the stars bright; I resolved to investigate.

Without further delay I arose to my feet and set off into the darkness. Immediately one of the group detached himself from the fire and joined me.

"Going for a little walk, sir?" asked Handy Solomon sweetly. "That's quite right and proper. Nothin' like a little walk to get you fit and right for your bunk."

He held close to my elbow. We got just as far as the stockade in the bed of the arroyo. The lights we could make out now across the zenith; but owing to the precipitance of the cliffs, and the rise of the arroyo bed, it was impossible to see more. Handy Solomon felt the defences carefully.

"A man would think, sir, it was a cannibal island," he observed. "All so tight and tidy-like here. It would take a ship's guns to batter her down. A man might dig under these here two gate logs, if no one was against him. Like to try it, sir."

"No," I answered gruffly.

From that time on I was virtually a prisoner; yet so carefully was my surveillance accomplished that I could place my finger on nothing definite. Some one always accompanied me on my walks; and in the evening I was herded as closely as any cattle.

Handy Solomon took the direction of affairs off my hands. You may be sure that he set no very heavy tasks. The men cut a little wood, carried up a few pails of water—that was all.

Lacking incentive to stir about, they came to spend most of their time lying on their backs watching the sky. This in turn bred a languor which is the sickest, most soul and temper-destroying affair invented by the devil. They could not muster up energy enough to walk down the beach and back, and yet they were wearied to death of the inaction. After a little they became irritable toward one another. Each suspected the other of doing less than he should. You who know men will realize what this meant.

The atmosphere of our camp became surly. I recognized the precursor of its becoming dangerous. One day on a walk in the hills I came on Thrackles and Pulz lying on their stomachs gazing down fixedly at Dr. Schermerhorn's camp. This was nothing extraordinary, but they started guiltily to their feet when they saw me, and made off, growling under their breaths.

All this that I have told you so briefly, took time. It was the eating through of men's spirits by that worst of corrosives, idleness. I conceive it unnecessary to weary you with the details——

The situation was as yet uneasy, but not alarming. One evening I overheard the beginning of an absurd plot to gain entrance to the valley—that was as far as detail went. I became convinced at last that I should in some way warn Percy Darrow.

That seems a simple enough proposition, does it not? But if you will stop to think one moment of the difficulties of my position, you will see that it was not as easy as at first appears. Darrow still visited us in the evening. The men never allowed me even the chance of private communication while he was with us. One or two took pains to stretch out between us. Twice I arose when the assistant did, resolved to accompany him part way back. Both times men resolutely escorted us, and as resolutely separated us from the opportunity of a single word apart. The crew never threatened me by word or look. But we understood each other.

I was not permitted to row out to the Laughing Lass without escort. Therefore I never attempted to visit her again. The men were not anxious to do so; their awe of the captain made them only too glad to escape his notice. That empty shell of a past reputation was my only hope. It shielded the arms and ammunition.

As I look back on it now, the period seems to me to be one of merely potential trouble. The men had not taken the pains to crystallize their ideas. I really think their compelling emotion was that of curiosity. They wanted to see. It needed a definite impulse to change that desire to one of greed

The impulse came from Percy Darrow and his idle talk of voodoos. As usual he was directing his remarks to the sullen Nigger.

"Voodoos?" he said. "Of course there are. Don't fool yourself for a minute on that. There are good ones and bad ones. You can tame them if you know how, and they will do anything you want them to." Pulz chuckled in his throat. "You don't believe it?" drawled the assistant, turning to him. "Well, it's so. You know that heavy box we are so careful of? Well, that's got a tame voodoo in it."

The others laughed.

"What he like?" asked the Nigger, gravely.

"He's a fine voodoo, with wavery arms and green eyes, and red glows." Watching narrowly its effect he swung off into one of the genuine old crooning voodoo songs, once so common down South, now so rarely heard. No one knows what the words mean—they are generally held to be charm words only—a magic gibberish. But the Nigger sprang across the fire like lightning, his face altered by terror, to seize Darrow by the shoulders.

"Doan you! Doan you!" he gasped, shaking the assistant violently back and forth. "Dat he King Voodoo song! Dat call him all de voodoo—all!"

He stared wildly about in the darkness as though expecting to see the night thronged. There was a moment of confusion. Eager for any chance I hissed under my breath: "Danger! Look out!"

I could not tell whether or not Darrow heard me. He left soon after. The mention of the chest had focussed the men's interest.

"Well," Pulz began, "we've been here on this spot o' hell for a long time."

"A year and five months," reckoned Thrackles.

"A man can do a lot in that time."

"If he's busy."

"They've been busy."

"Yes."

"Wonder what they've done?"

There was no answer to this, and the sea lawyer took a new tack.

"I suppose we're all getting double wages."

"That's so."

"And that's, say, four hunder' for us and Mr. Eagen here. I suppose the Old Man don't let the schooner go for nothing."

"Two hundred and fifty a month," said I, and then would have had the words back.

They cried out in prolonged astonishment.

"Seventeen months," pursued the logician, after a few moments. He scratched with a stub of lead. "That makes over $11,000 since we've been out. How much do you suppose his outfit stands him?" he appealed to me.

"I'm sure I can't tell you," I replied shortly.

"Well, it's a pile of money, anyway."

Nobody said anything for some time.

"Wonder what they've done?" Pulz asked again.

"Something that pays big," Thrackles supplied the desired answer.

"Dat chis'——" suggested Perdosa.

"Voodoo——" muttered the Nigger.

"That's to scare us out," said Handy Solomon, with vast contempt. "That's what makes me sure it is the chest."

Pulz muttered some of the jargon of alchemy.

"That's it," approved Handy Solomon. "If we could get——"

"We wouldn't know how to use it," interrupted Pulz.

"The book"—said Thrackles.

"The book——" asserted Pulz pugnaciously. "How do you know what it will be? It may be the Philosopher's Stone and it may be one of these other things. And then where'd we be?"

It was astounding to hear this nonsense bandied about so seriously. And yet they more than half believed, for they were deep-sea men of the old school, and this was in print. Thrackles voiced approximately the general attitude.

"Philosopher's Stone or not, something's up. The old boy took good care of that box, and he's spending too much money, and he's got hold of too much hell afloat to be doing it for his health."

"You know w'at I t'ink?" smiled Perdosa. "He mak' di'mon's. He say dat."

The Nigger had entered one of his black, brooding from which these men expected oracles.

"Get him ches'," he muttered. "I see him full—full of di'mon's!"

They listened to him with vast respect, and were visibly impressed. So deep was the sense of awe that Handy Solomon unbent enough to whisper to me:

"I don't take any stock in the Nigger's talk ordinarily. He's a hell of a fool nigger. But when his eye looks like that, then you want to listen close. He sees things then. Lots of times he's seen things. Even last year—the Oyama—he told about her three days ahead. That's why we were so ready for her," he chuckled.

CHAPTER X.

Nothing more developed for a long time except a savage fight between Pulz and Perdosa. I hunted sheep, fished, wandered about—always with an escort tired to death before he started. The thought came to me to kill this man and so to escape and make cause with the scientists. My common sense forbade me. I begin to think that common sense is a very foolish deed.

It taught me the obvious—that all this talk was common enough among men of common that it would hardly justify a hardly explain an unwarranted intrusion employed me. How would it look for me to with these words in my mouth:

"The captain has taken to drinking to notony. The crew think you are an making diamonds. Their interest in this me excessive, so I killed one of them, and

"And who are you?" they could ask.

You can see the false difficulties of my not defend my attitude. Undoubtedly a men, like Capt. Selover at his best, would how to act with the proper decision both inception of the first mutiny. At heart I the reality of the crisis.

Even Percy Darrow saw the surliness of attitudes, and with his usual good sense cause.

"You chaps are getting lazy," said he; "why do something? Where's the captain?"

They growled something about there to do, and explained that the captain aboard.

"Don't blame him," said Darrow, "but he us a little of his squeaky company I'll tell you something about seals. The old have long, stiff whiskers—a foot long. Do there's a market for those whiskers? Well, The Chinese mount them in gold and use them ers for their long pipes. Each whisker is worth bits to a dollar and a quarter. Why don't few bull seal for the 'trimmings?'"

"Nothin' to do with a voodoo?" grunted mon.

Darrow laughed amusedly. "No, this is the he assured. "I'll tell you what: I'll give bits apiece for the whisker hairs, and four galls. I expect to sell them at a profit."

Next morning they shook off their lethargy seal hunting.

"Mr. Eagen, don't you want to go hunting?" Eagen, I guess I'll just go along with you to legs," had given way to "We're going fishing; better come along."

I had known for a long time that I had control of them; and that perhaps little. However, my inexperience at handling and the anomalous character of my position extent consoled me. In the filaments brushed face of my understanding I could discover strong as to support an overt act on my part. doubt, that had not the affair come to a focus, have warned the scientists even at the risk of In fact, as I shall have occasion to show you, best. But at the moment, in all policy I could way to little besides acquiescence.

We killed seals by sequestering the bulls, them, and clubbing the mat a certain point head. It was surprising to see how hard and how quickly they succumbed to a blow rected. Then we stripped the mask with its long whiskers, took the gall, and dragged into the surf, where it was devoured by fish. the men, pleased by the novelty, stripped The blubber, often two or three inches in had then to be cut away from the pelt, cube by was a long, an oily and odoriferous job. mightily of seal oil; our garments were shiny the very pores of our skins seemed to ooze it. after the pelt was fairly well cleared, it had tanned. There was novelty in it, isfied the lust for killing. As time went on, grew warier. Then we made expeditions to rocks.

Later Handy Solomon approached me on diplomatic errand.

"The seals is getting shy, sir," said he.

"They are," said I.

"The only way to do is to shoot them," said he.

"Quite like," I agreed.

A pause ensued.

"We've got no cartridges," he insinuated.

"And you've taken charge of my rifle," I out.

"Oh, not a bit, sir," he cried. "Thrackles, it to clean it—you can have it whenever sir."

"I have no cartridges—as you have observed,"

"There's plenty aboard," he suggested.

"And they're in very good hands there,"

He ruminated a moment, polishing the hook against the other arm of his shirt. looked up at me with a humorous

"You're afraid of us!" he accused.

I was silent, not knowing just how to meet so direct an attack.

"No need to be," he continued.

I said nothing.

He looked at me shrewdly; then stood off on another tack.

"Well, sir, I didn't mean just that; I didn't mean you was really scared of us. But we're gettin' to know each other livin' here on this old island, brothers-like. There ain't no officers and men ashore—is there, now, sir? When we get back to the old Laughing Lass, then we drops back into our dooty again all right and proper. You can kiss the book on that. Old Scrubs, he knows that. He don't want no shore in his. He knows enough to stay aboard, where we'd all rather be."

He stopped abruptly, spat, and looked at me. I wondered whither this devious diploma led us.

"Still, in one way, an officer's an officer, and a seaman's a seaman, thinks you, and discipline must be held up among mates ashore or afloat, thinks you. Quite proper, sir. And I can see you think that the arms is for the afterguard except in case of trouble. Quite proper. You can do the shooting and you can keep the cartridges always by you. Just for discipline, sir."

The man's boldness in so fully arming me was astonishing, and his carelessness in allowing me aboard with Capt. Selover astonished me still more. Nevertheless I promised to go for the desired cartridges, fully resolved to make an appeal.

A further consideration of the elements of the game convinced me, however, of the fellow's shrewdness. It was no more dangerous to allow me a rifle—under direct surveillance—for the purposes of hunting, than to leave me my sawed-off revolver, which I still retained. The arguments he had used against my shooting Perdosa were quite as cogent now. As to the second point, I, finding the sun unexpectedly strong, returned from the [illegible] for my hat, and so overheard the following between Thrackles and his leader:

"What's to keep him from staying aboard?" cried Thrackles, protesting.

"Well, he might," acknowledged Handy Solomon, and [illegible] are we the worse off? You ain't going to make a [illegible] attack against Old Scrubs, are you?"

Thrackles hesitated.

"You can kiss the Book on it, you ain't," went on Handy Solomon easily, "nor me, nor Pulz, nor the [illegible], nor the Nigger, nor none of us all together. We've had our dose of that. Well, if he goes aboard and stays, where are we the worse off? I asks you that. But he won't. This is w't's goin' to happen. Says he to Old Scrubs: 'Sir, the men needs you to bash in their [illegible].' 'Bash 'em in yourself,' says he, 'that's w'at you're for.' And if he should come ashore, w'at could he do? I asks you that. We ain't disobeyed no orders duly delivered. We're ready to pull halliards at the word. No, let him go aboard, and if he peaches to the Old Man, why all the better, for it just gets the Old Man down on him."

"How about Old Scrubs——"

"Don't you believe none is luck?" asked Handy Solomon.

"Aye."

"Well, so do I, with w'at that law crimp used to call judicious assistance."

I rowed out to the Laughing Lass very thoughtful, and a little shaken by the plausible argument. Capt. Selover was lying dead drunk across the cabin table. I did my best to waken him, but failed, took a score of cartridges—no more—and departed sadly. Nothing could be gained by staying aboard; every chance might be lost. Besides, an opening to escape in the direction of the laboratory might offer—I, as well as they, believed in luck judiciously assisted.

In the ensuing days I learned much of the habits of seals. We sneaked along the cliff tops until over the rookeries; then lay flat on our stomachs and peered cautiously down on our quarry. The seals had become wary. A slight jar, the fall of a pebble, sometimes even sounds unnoticed by ourselves were enough to send them into the water. There they lined up just outside the surf, their sleek heads glossy with the wet, their [illegible], soft eyes fixed unblinkingly on us.

It was useless to shoot them in the water; they sank [illegible].

When, however, we succeeded in gaining an advantageous position it was necessary to shoot with extreme accuracy. A bullet directly through the back of the head would kill cleanly. A hit anywhere else was practically useless, for even in death the animals seemed to retain enough blind instinctive vitality to flop them into the water. There they were lost.

Each rookery consisted of one tremendous bull who officiated apparently as the standing army; a number of smaller bulls, his direct descendants; the cows and the pups. The big bull held his position by force of arms. Occasionally other, unattached, bulls would come swimming by. On arriving opposite the rookery the stranger would utter a peculiar challenge. It was never refused by the resident champion, who promptly slid into the sea and engaged battle. If he conquered the stranger went on his way. If, however, the stranger won, the big bull immediately struck out to sea, abandoning his rookery, while the newcomer swam in and attempted to make his title good with all the younger bulls. I have seen some fierce combats out there in the blue water. They pushed each other deep.

You can see by this how our hunting was never at an end. On Tuesday we would kill the boss bull of a certain establishment. By Thursday, at latest, another would be installed.

I learned curious facts about seals in those days. The killing did not appeal to me particularly, because it seemed to me useless to kill so large an animal for so small a spoil. Still, it was a means to my all-absorbing end, and I confess that the stalking, the lying belly-down in the sun-warmed grass over the surge and under the clear sky, was extremely pleasant. While awaiting the return of the big bull often we had opportunity to watch the others at their daily affairs, and even the unresponsive Thrackles was struck with their almost human intelligence. Did you know that seals kiss each other and weep tears when grieved?

The men often discussed among themselves the narrow, dry cave. There the animals were practically penned in. They agreed that a great killing could be made there, but the impossibility of distinguishing between the bulls and the cows deterred them. The cave was quite dark.

Immersed in our own affairs thus, the days, weeks and months went by. Events had slipped beyond my control. I had embarked on a journalistic enterprise, and now that purpose was entirely out my reach.

Up the valley Dr. Schermerhorn and his assistant were engaged in some experiment of whose very nature I was still ignorant. Also I was likely to remain so. The precautions taken against interference by the men were equally effective against me. As if that were not enough, any move of investigation on my part would be radically misinterpreted, and to my own danger, by the men. I might as well have been in London.

However, as to my first purpose in this adventure I had evolved another plan, and therefore was content. I made up my mind that on the voyage home, if nothing prevented, I would tell my story to Percy Darrow, and throw myself on his mercy. The results of the experiment would probably by then be ready for the public, and there was no reason, as far as I could see, why I should not get the "scoop" at first hand.

Certainly my sincerity would be without question; and I hoped that two years or more of service such as I had rendered would tickle Dr. Schermerhorn's sense of his own importance. So adequate did this plan seem that I gave up thought on the subject.

My whole life now lay on the shores. I was not again permitted to board the Laughing Lass. Capt. Selover I saw twice at a distance. Both times he seemed to be rather uncertain. The men did not remark it. The days went by. I relapsed into that state so well known to you all, when one seems caught in the meshes of a dream existence which has had no beginning and which is destined never to have an end.

We were to hunt seals, and fish, and pry bivalves from the rocks at low tide, and build fires, and talk, and alternate between suspicion and security, between the danger of sedition and the insanity of men without defined purpose, world without end forever.

An Interrupted Dinner.

A GRIZZLY'S INOPPORTUNE VISIT AT A HUNTING CAMP.

By a Special Contributor.

THE late Baron Alphonse de Rothschild of the world-famous banking house, was a passionate lover of the hunt, and regarded as one of the most daring and skilled nimrods. An expert marksman and of noted coolness and courage, the Baron's favorite sport was the hunting of bears and wolves, which, some years ago, were roaming plentifully in the northern parts of the Carpathian Mountains, in Northern Hungary. Indeed, if the outlook of a hunting expedition into the gorges and recesses of that rocky and only sporadically wooded mountain range was promising, neither season, weather, time of day or night, nor danger and hardships of any kind were of consideration. And when the contests with wild animals of the European brand became perchance, too tame an affair, Baron Rothschild, who was a great admirer of the United States—country as well as the characteristics of its people—came incognito to America to follow the trail of the grizzly.

According to a diary in which his more notable hunting adventures were recorded, Baron Alphonse enjoyed several extended hunting trips in the southwestern part of this country. One of these American sojourns was made especially memorable by a somewhat precarious situation, not without humor, however, in which the hunting party were placed by the wholly unexpected appearance of a huge bear, which made its inopportune visit at the camp just when the tired company was about to partake of a tempting supper and, thereby, interfered effectually with the culinary enjoyments of the astounded nimrods.

Besides Baron Rothschild and his American friend, the hunting party consisted of a regular "trapper" and an excellent Indian guide. Late in the afternoon of a wearisome day the trailers found themselves in the midst of a dreary-looking, inhospitable region, not far from the banks of the Rio Grande. Footsore and worn out, the party resolved to camp for the night upon the plateau of a gentle-rising hill, which extended to the foot of a steep and seemingly inaccessible mountain cliff. Near the latter arose a mighty Mexican oak. The white Spanish moss hung from its widespreading branches, reaching to the dry ground in such dense hanks as to afford cover almost similar to that of a tent. The attractiveness of the spot as a camping ground was further enhanced by a spring of the purest water, which trickled out of the rock. Accordingly the camp was pitched beneath this natural tent, and soon a tempting supper was being prepared in various kettles hung over briskly burning fires. Peacefully gathered around these promising arrangements, the hungry men were about to gratify their inner cravings, when a snarling sound, which quickly thickened into an angry growl, became audible. It seemed to emanate from some elevated spot in the cliff. In an instant the hunters were on their feet, and, seizing their rifles, retreated rather suddenly. Only the Indian guide remained beneath the tree. For a few moments this son of the wilderness stood motionless in a listening attitude, then he threw himself prone to the ground and glided noiselessly, like a serpent, toward the rocky wall. The growl continued in increasing keys, while the hunters, aflame with excitement and rifles ready for use, stood expectant. Soon the Indian appeared again, and pointing toward the rocky slope, whispered: "El oso pardo" (the gray bear.) Following the Indian cautiously, the hunters reached a place whence they enjoyed a full view of the strange scene.

At a height of about ten feet from the ground, and somewhat hidden by overhanging moss and leaves, a narrow crevice in the rocky wall was visible, and in it the head and foreparts of an enormous bear. The animal was a so-called "Silvertip," so named from the grayish hue of its fur, and considered the most powerful and ferocious specimen of the grizzly bear family. On account of their peculiarly-formed [illegible]-inch-long claws, these bears cannot climb trees or rocks. The crevice in which the bear appeared was therefore, evidently the outlet of some sort of a passage through the rock, which, since the rainy season was approaching, the bear had possibly selected for winter quarters. The smoke of the camp fire and the rich odors of the cooking good things had probably induced the animal to approach the opening for investigation. The hunters withdrew again to hold a hasty council of war. To shoot at the bear while visible in the crevice was inexpedient, since it was impossible to follow the animal into the hollow if it should retreat. Besides, the location of the other entrance to the passage was not known. The only way to secure the precious prize was to induce the bear to leave the cavity. Here, too, the Indian proved to be the Deus ex machina. Taking his long and broad sash of scarlet color, together with his bow and arrows, he boldly stepped beneath the bear's stronghold, and waving furiously his glaring cloth, capered a[illegible] in the most ridiculous fashion. Master Bruin growled angrily and put forward one of his mighty paws as if in an effort to catch the flying cloth. Having thus brought the head of the bear to a full view, the Indian seized his weapon and discharged an arrow toward the huge head, wounding its most sensitive part, the nose. The bear uttered a terrific roar, and with bloody and foaming jaws, pressed its body partly through the crevice, hitting about so wildly with his enormous paws that a shower of moss, plants and stones fell to the ground.

Again the Indian resumed his strange dance, waving his cloth, thus infuriating the animal still more. Then he seized his bow again. It seemed to the spellbound hunters as if the bear knew what was threatening, for he tried to retreat into the hole. But the brave redskin was too quick for it. The well-aimed arrow whistled through the air, hit again the nose of the grizzly and penetrated this time so far that it clung to the wound. With a howl of pain and rage, the bear rushed forward, tried in vain to retain his foothold upon the smooth rock and plunged, head over heels, down upon the ground. Despite the excitement of the situation and the scene just witnessed, the hunters were fully prepared for Bruin's reception before he had time to recover from the shock of his involuntary summersault, and arise, not less than seven bullets tore through his skin, two of them, as later examination proved, penetrating his heart. His well-preserved fur, with the powerful head and claws, adorns now the big hall in the magnificent Rothschild castle, at Waldhofen at Ybbs, in Upper Austria, where the late Baron used to point it proudly out to his guests and delighted in recounting the story of its acquisition.

THE GASOLINE WEED BURNER.

How to rid its right of way of weeds so tall, rank and troublesome as to interfere with operation of trains has been solved on the Union Pacific Railroad by the invention of a machine that does the work of 300 men a day. The new gasoline weed burner covers twenty-five miles in twelve hours, while heretofore it has required a gang of sixteen men, working a full day, to cut the weeds from a single mile of track.

The weed burner is built entirely of steel, with regulation trucks. At one end is a gasoline engine, used for propelling the car and pumping the air which forces the gasoline to the burners spreading out near the ground. When at work the weed burner runs three or four miles an hour, but can make a speed of from twelve to fifteen miles, and is handled on the road under regular train orders.

Tanks carried on the car platform contain enough gasoline for a day's run. Through rows of burners spreading well beyond the rails the flaming gasoline is forced downward into the weeds, killing root and branch, while the old process did not stop future growth.

It is not uncommon on western branch lines, sidings and commercial tracks to see weeds from three to seven feet high, which form a great obstruction to train movement, cause slippery rails and make operation difficult. The Union Pacific's weed burner is therefore the solution of a serious railroad problem.—[New York Herald.

The Blue Stone.

PATHETIC LOVE STORY OF FRANCOIS AND LUISITA.

By a Special Contributor.

RAMON was singing in the moonlight beneath a casement barred with roses. His sombrero was heavy with silver braid, his serape was gay and costly, and his fingers thrummed the guitar strings as wooingly as the south wind touches the honeysuckle vines in the night time. But his somber eyes looked sometimes rather more fierce than tender, and though his voice thrilled with riotous emotion, his hot Mexican heart beat once with resentment for every twice with love, for even a patient lover chafes for some token of response from his lady, and Ramon would never have worn the bay from a patience contest.

Behind the fragrant lattice there was another heart more than half full of discontent. Luisita, contrary to the custom of serenaded damsels, was pouting like a naughty little girl who has been denied the luxury of speaking her mind to her elders. But the pout was not unbecoming to the lips that were as ripe and full and sweet as the Jaqueminot rose which peered down at them from behind a small, aristocratic ear; neither did the tiny pucker between the level, dark brows detract an atom from the allurement of her wonderful southern eyes; so, altogether, the tuneful gentleman below was not greatly to be blamed for the hostile sentiments he entertained toward the close-shut screen.

Luisita evinced every symptom of ennui as the song thrilled on in the outer dusk, and under her breath she mockingly sang in reply:

"Go away, Ramon! Vamous pronto! What care I that thy heart's at my feet? Oh, hurry! Begone!"

She dared not fling her saucy inappreciation openly at her suitor, for fussy old Tia Juana was within earshot, and it was only upon Luisita's promise of passively good behavior toward Ramon that Juana had been induced to carry the precious letters of that other one whom the impecunious and crafty old Señor Emilio Garcia refused, with many car-r-r-ambas, to contemplate as a prospective son-in-law.

Poor, pretty Luisita! Her warm, soft eyes filled suddenly with tears at thought of her forlornness. Of what comfort is it that a maid's hair be misty and dark as shadows on purple velvet, or her cheek like a magnolia petal with an oleander at its center, if the eyes, in whose glance alone she holds those beauties dear, be denied the sight of them? That other was doubtless waiting now within the darkness of the pomegranate hedge for Ramon to grow discouraged and go in quest of pulque consolation at the drinking place of José Grande. He would then seek the shadow of the casa and say softly the few words of quaint, broken Spanish Luisita's heart was longing to hear before she should drop the crimson flower from her hair into his outstretched hand. Then he would glide away before Señor Garcia should discover him, and there would be nothing more until—when?

How well she remembered their but recent initial meeting! Tia Juana had taken her for the first time in her dreamy sixteen years to the Plaza in the early twilight, and permitted her to join the other well-duennaed señoritas who were promenading together around the fountain. Promenading in the opposite direction were the flashing-eyed, dashingly-arrayed youths of the town, each fixing with his lustrous gaze the girl who was to him most bewitching, and warm looks were interchanged each time the circling groups passed and repassed. Thus did the romances of the primitive Mexican pueblo of Porfirio have their incipiency, and when the quick equatorial darkness trailed soft fingers through the beads of the fountain, each señorita was summoned by her duenna and led to her home, to be followed distantly by some swarthy swain, who pressed his advances with the ardent aid of an amorous guitar when the lady had been safely housed once more within the parental casa.

On such a night, after such a custom, had Luisita, the convent-bred, first been recognized by the youth of Porfirio as the newest and the fairest débutante. Ramon had caught and held her glance three times in succession as the met in the paseo, and in consequence went curling his mustachio in the complacency of another conquest, when a different face had, all at once, stood forth from the masculine crowd and quicked Luisita's heart beats with the tender humbleness of its look. Ah, it was a face with a soul that shone behind it like an altar candle! The pure paleness of the slender features, lit up with eyes which were plainly not Mexican in their clear guileness, betrayed that he was a foreigner. Enticing mystery! And such sober adoration as his glances spoke!

Ramon was forgotten as completely as if his bold handsomeness had not been, as Luisita, with tropical quickness of response, gave sweet answering glimpses of her mantilla-shaded eyes to the modest, youthful stranger. Yet it was handsome Ramon who followed nearest behind the rebosa-wrapped figures on the homeward way, and it was a very much in earnest Ramon who sang in the star shine under the window afterward. But it was not Ramon who simply stood and gazed upon the closed lattice under the keen-eyed midnight stars as a man stands and prays at the shrine of a saint. It was not Ramon who received the first rose dropped from the casement when the Plaza meeting was a fortnight old.

"Find me who is, Tia mia," coaxed Luisita of old Juana, with tears and kisses. "My heart is sick if you do not!"

"But thy father, Carita! He hath bidden thee to take Ramon for thy lover. Ramon hath lands and herds in plenty, and half the niñas in the town would give their ears for him," that most wrinkled of women expostulated.

"Half the niñas may have him for all of me. I loathe his song. His bold eyes burn my soul. I will not take Ramon when such another loves me!"

And Luisita, distractingly delightful in her wilfulness, brought all her charms to bear upon her aunt, beseeching her to recall her own sunny youth. And love gained the day with Tia Juana, as it does with every old woman whose wrinkles are on her cheek instead of her heart. She came back from the market with the news Luisita had prayed to learn.

"Wrest him from thy thoughts, chiquita," she said, abruptly, to the eager girl. "He is but a poor Frenchman called Francois. He is naught but a barber. Not a peso has he in the world beyond what he shaves from men's faces. He is no husband for Señorita Garcia."

And then, because Luisita's face grew so singularly white, she added, grudgingly: "True, some say he is a gentleman who came from France with money in plenty, and lost it in mad ventures with the mines, as he lost his older companions of travel by the bitter desert thirst, but those same say the losses have made him loco; that he talks always of a turquoise mine which will make him rich again if he can but find the money to travel to it. Meantime does he earn his bread in the shop of Pedro, the barber, where he wears a towel over his arm and dips his fingers in pomade to scent other men's hair, perhaps Ramon's. Take him from thy heart, chiquita."

But Luisita's was a heart not given to yielding its treasured images with readiness. The added mystery, the knowledge that her lover was a shaver of chins not from choice but capricious necessity, the tragic loss of his friends on the treacherous desert, and the romantic fancy of the turquoise mine, acted as a stimulant upon her soft passion, after the rude shock of Juana's first intentionally disillusioning words was past. Then so patiently persistent had become the silent wooing of her boyish cavalier that village rumor brought the tale of it to old Don Emilio, as her father was called, where it was received with red-eyed wrath and garlic-tainted imprecation. No more in her present incarnation should Luisita promenade about the Plaza until she should declare Ramon her accepted suitor.

Thus it was that Luisita pouted and wept behind her lattice while Ramon's voice floated in on the fragrance of the roses.

It was small wonder she was impatient for Ramon to be going. Had not a suddenly-softened Juana today brought her a third letter from her beloved Francois—a letter of vital import, and was she not eager to give her heart's answer with the rose from behind her ear to him who should emerge from the pomegranate shadows when Ramon had departed?

She opened the paper and reread her lover's message, though she had known it line for line within the hour of its arrival. It told her in picturesque French-Spanish that he was going away for perhaps many weeks. But he would return a rich man—ah, muy rich, and then he should claim her, if she would come to him, in spite of her father or Ramon. "Only be true to me, cherie," it reiterated, with pathetic insistence. "I shall live but to return and love thee, my blessed, my heart's most precious. I shall come once more to thy window while thy father still fondly harks to the guitar of Ramon—"

She folded the paper hastily, for silence had at last fallen without. She peered through the lattice. Yes, a shadow detached itself from the umbrage of the low pomegranate trees and swiftly traversed the one tiny stretch of moonlit lawn intervening between the hedge and the deep shade of the casa. Ah, safely beneath her window at last! There was a soft click of the hasp as the window swung apart, then a rose with a twisted bit of paper about its stem fell lightly on the grass. There was no word but a whispered "Adios, alma mia!" and the window latched again. But Francois stood long below the closed casement with a rose pressed to his lips, and when he went away, it was as if the farthest star shone sweetlier for the adoration in his eyes.

. . . .

The good-natured, rather Quixotic American gentleman, el Señor Americano, suspected of being more or less remotely associated with certain big Mexican mining operations, was feeling almost embarrassed by the fervor of Francois's gratitude. Their acquaintance dated back but a few days to the first time he had occupied Francois's chair in the barber shop. He had been interested in spite of himself in the refinement and beauty of the young face reflected above his own in the opposite mirror, and in the settled sadness which colored the barber's infrequent speech.

"Why are you thus, my friend," he asked at last in French. "Are you not fitted for more than this humble trade?"

A sudden wave of red swept over the pale face of the barber, and his hands clasped themselves together closely to stay their trembling. Something told Francois that the hour of fate had struck for him.

"Oh, monsieur," he began eagerly, with a swift glance to right and left and an instinctive lowering of his already low-pitched voice, "could I but tell you my story! Here they scoff always at me and they tell me I am what they call loco, crazy. But it is true what I say. I know of a mine of the turquoise where wealth, great wealth is waiting for the one who shall but bring it away. Fifty dollars, monsieur, only $50 would suffice to purchase the burros and the provision, and in four, six weeks I would come back to repay it many times. I cannot attain the sum here, I earn, ah, so little! But I was not ever poor, monsieur. More money have I lost than these canaille have ever seen!" And he waved his slim hand scornfully in the direction of Pedro the barber, which precarious-tempered individual was fortunately facing the other way. "Listen, monsieur!"

He bent nearer, and in his sibilant mother speech he told convincingly of a strange chart bequeathed him by a dying prospector whom he had befriended during his last hours after a chance meeting on a trail back in the Very Sharp.

LORD SHOLTO DOUGLAS was talking, at a dinner in Detroit, about American business methods.

"Since I have been a bagman—I mean a drummer—for a jewelry firm," said the young man, "I have learned to admire American business methods tremendously. To succeed here, though, one needs to be very sharp and clever. Indeed, the sharpness and cleverness of American buyers is a constant amazement to me.

"The other day I was in a village general store, endeavoring to make a sale of jewelry, when a farmer entered.

"'Give me,' said the farmer, 'a half pound of tobacco, three bars of soap, five yards of blue baby ribbon, and a pair of good suspenders.'

"The articles were brought forth, inspected, approved and wrapped up. They came to 95 cents.

"'Yes,' said the farmer, '95's right. But there's the discount. You advertise a 5-per-cent. discount, don't you?'

"'We do, sir,' said the clerk, 'but only on purchases of $1 or over.'

"On the counter lay a basket of pocket combs marked at 5 cents apiece.

"'Well, I'll just take one of these,' said the farmer. 'That'll make us square.'"

DON MARINO TORLONIA, of the famous ducal family of Torlonia in Rome, praised American cigars at a dinner in New York.

"Our Italian cigars are not so good," he said. "They are made by the government. They are as long and thin as a lead pencil, and they have a straw in the middle; otherwise they would not draw. You light these Italian cigars of ours over a lamp, a specially-made cigar lamp that burns with a strong flame. The lighting requires from three to five minutes. These cigars, for all the trouble they take, are poor. I gave one to an American in Rome one morning. He put it in his pocket and said he would smoke it later.

"I met him again that night at the Café Nazionale, in the Corso.

"'Well,' I said, 'how did you like my cigar?'

"'Oh, it was excellent,' said he. 'I enjoyed it immensely. I had it boiled for my dinner with some corned beef.'"

Triumph.

DR. CHARLES J. BUSHNELL of Washington, D. C., says that America spends $6,000,000,000 a year on crime and pauperism.

"And what do we get for that tremendous expenditure?" said Dr. Bushnell recently. "What have we to show for it? Alas! we have nothing admirable to show, and yet the governing men who spend this money for us look at the result complacently. They think it is a good result. They remind me of the old miser of Mount Vernon.

"This Mount Vernon miser though a millionaire, insisted on wearing the shabbiest clothes. His clothes, in fact, were just about as wretched as are the results that our government gets by the expenditure of those six billions yearly. An old family friend endeavored one day to persuade the miser to dress better.

"'I'm surprised,' he said, 'that you should let yourself become so shabby.'

"'I am not shabby,' said the miser.

"'You are,' said the family friend. 'Remember your father. He was always neatly, even elegantly dressed. His clothes were very handsome.'

"The miser gave a loud laugh.

"'Why,' he shouted triumphantly, 'these clothes I've on now were father's.'"

LOVER, the animal expert and nature writer of the Philadelphia Zoo, was talking the other day about a wolf.

"Yes," said Mr. Lover, "she ate her last litter of cubs. She has eaten, in fact, her last six litters. Yet she is a kind and affectionate wolf. Strange that she should be so unmotherly."

He paused and smiled. "She reminds me of a remark I heard the other day," the famous keeper resumed. "A school teacher came here with a class of little girls, and every now and then he would stop and fire off at the children a few questions—nature questions, you know.

MISS LYDIA CONLEY, a clever Wyandotte girl, is the only Indian woman lawyer in the world. She is a member of the Kansas bar, and at Kansas City, after a recent Indian case that she conducted, she told an interesting legal story.

"I put my man on the stand," she said. "That, if your case is a just one, is always the thing to do. You know the story of the Kansas land claimant?

"Well, out here, many years ago, a man brought suit before the squire to recover some land that had been fraudulently filched from him. His case was a good one, but the other side had doctored its witnesses—had even doctored the plaintiff's witnesses, too—and up to the time when he took the stand himself not a jot or tittle of testimony in his favor had been recorded.

"He, as soon as he was sworn, turned to the justice and said:

"'Squire, I brought this suit, and yet the evidence, excepting my own, is all against me. Now I don't accuse any one of lying, squire, but these witnesses are the most mistaken lot of fellows I ever saw. You know me, squire. Two years ago you sold me a hoss for sound that was as blind as a bat. I made the deal and stuck to it, and this is the first time I have mentioned it. When you used to buy my grain, squire, you stood on the scales when the empty wagon was weighed, but I never said a word. Now do you think I am the kind of a man to kick up a rumpus and sue a fellow unless he has done me a real wrong? Why, squire, if you'll recall that sheep speculation you and me——'

"But at this point the squire, very red in the face, hastily decided the case in the plaintiff's favor.'"

The Unpopular Pump.

"THAT famous temperance reformer, the late Francis Murphy," said a Pittsburgh man, "had many an odd adventure in the course of his very useful life.

"He once told me of a case where a drinking man, with a neat joke, got for the moment a little the better of him in an argument.

"The man was a club man, a bon vivant, famous for his wine cellar; and Mr. Murphy read him a strong lecture on the drink evil.

"But the bon vivant only smiled, shook his head, and said:

"'Well, Mr. Murphy, I have seen many a pleasant party round a table, but I have never seen one round a pump.'"

PETER F. DAILEY is a man of imposing personal dimensions, a fact he once made use of to the disgust of a railroad conductor.

Delayed at a small station, where the through train for New York would not stop for the next twenty-four hours, he wired the superintendent at the station below:

"Will you stop at Lonelyville for large party at 9 p.m.?"

The answer came: "Yes, will stop train." When the express pulled in, Mr. Dailey started to board a car.

"Where is the large party we stopped for?" inquired the conductor.

HARRISON GREY FISKE discussed, at a dinner in New York, the art of acting.

"I believe," said Mr. Fiske, "in subtlety, subtlety and restraint. A nod, a shake of the head, a silent pause—these things are often more effective than the most violent yelling and ranting.

"Life is like that, subtle and silent. What, for instance, could be more expressive than this scene, a scene without a spoken word, that I once witnessed in the country?

Lost and Found.

MUGLER was a butcher. He did all of his own killing, and he attended to his shop himself. Mugler sought long, and finally found a fine thoroughbred bull terrier pup. He needed such a dog, and was training him to a life of usefulness. Mugler was one of the ugliest-looking men that ever lived, albeit he was a good fellow, and very gentle in all of his dealings with mankind. He was big, burly, and always wore a white apron that almost covered him, and it was usually well marked with the blood of beasts. Mugler loved his pup, and was proud of him.

"Mac" Williams knew nothing of Mugler and his pup. One evening, on the corner near Mugler's, "Mac" saw a beautiful bull pup, and watched him playing around the sidewalk, while conversing with several friends. "Mac" says that he was there almost an hour, and that the pup played about his feet all of that time. At last, when the coterie dispersed, "Mac" picked up the pup, took him into the corner saloon, and asked if any one owned the pup, or knew anything about him. Nobody knew, and "Mac" walked away with the pup. He went to a large restaurant for his supper, ordered a supper for the pup, and sat down to enjoy his repast. Having finished his supper and his evening paper, "Mac" called his favorite negro waiter, handed him half a dollar, and told him to take the pup home with him and take care of him for a few days. The waiter was very glad to serve "Mac" not only for that tip, but for the numerous tips that came his way.

In the meantime, Mugler had missed his pup, and was going all over the neighborhood making inquiries about him. He went to that corner saloon about a dozen times, and every time he went there, he took a drink. Inside of a couple of hours, the kind-hearted Mugler was angry; and he looked like a demon.

Two or three days later, "Mac" went to the restaurant for his pup, and the waiter said:

"Fo' de Lawd's sake, Massa 'Mac,' please don't ast me nothin' 'bout dat dawg; an' please don't bring me no mo' dawgs."

"Why, what's the matter," inquired 'Mac.'

Her Way Out of It.

REV. ANNA SHAW, president of the American Woman's Suffrage Association, said in an address in Chicago:

"An excellent cure for false pride is a little college settlement work. By false pride I mean the belief that the poor regard one as noble and fine because one happens to be rich. Servants and dependents have to encourage this false pride in us, but a little settlement work soon undoes the mischief.

"I know a Philadelphia woman. She is proud because her great-grandfather, a carpenter, happened to own land that is now worth millions. In her haughty way she did some settlement work during Lent.

"There was an old woman whom she visited every few days. She carried the old woman jellies, tea, olives and suchlike luxuries. And she was secretly pleased with the attention she attracted as she passed up and down the narrow, squalid street.

"'Your neighbors stare at me a good deal,' she said complaisantly one morning.

"'I'll be bound for that,' said the old woman.

"'I suppose they are very inquisitive, eh?'

"'They certainly are, the busybodies,' the old woman grumbled.

"'No doubt they question you about me a good deal?'

"'Indeed they do, mum.'"

The visitor smiled again.

"'And what do you tell them?' she asked sweetly.

"'Oh,' said the old woman, 'I just say yer me dressmaker, and let it go at that.'"—[Omaha Bee.

Contempt for Poetry.

THE late Lewis Carroll, author of "Alice in Wonderland," used to tell this story to illustrate the average mathematician's contempt for poetry:

"In the course of an argument about poetry with an instructor in trigonometry he gave the instructor Tennyson's 'Charge of the Light Brigade' to read.

"'There, read that,' he said, 'and if you don't find it full of beauty I'll give in.'

"The instructor sneered, looked at the page, and began to read:

"'Half a league, half a league, half a league——'

"Then he threw down the book.

"'If the fool means a league and a half,' he snorted, 'why can't he say so?'"—[New York Tribune.

JUDGE GEORGE GREY of Delaware, at the recent dinner of the Farmer's Club at Senator Cameron's farm near Lancaster, Pa., talked of the former American fondness for titles.

"It is a fondness that has now almost disappeared," said Judge Grey. "We have become a more cultivated people, and we have learned to value titles at their real worth.

"But in the past it was different. Take my own title, the title of judge, for instance. I was traveling in the country in my youth, and one day at a hotel table there sat beside me a man whom everybody addressed as 'judge.'

"When the judge got up and went away, I said to my neighbor on the other side:

Oriental Financiering.

DR. FRANK C. BOSTWICK, official dentist to the Sultan and court of Morocco, said one day during his vacation in Plainfield, N. J.:

"Orientals are queer. I could tell you many a queer story of oriental courts. Here is a story that came from Constantinople to my Gibraltar office via a missionary. It sounds as if it came from Wall street.

"The Sultan was fond of Ibrahim Beg, the rich banker, and Ibrahim was often invited to Yildiz Kiosk for an afternoon's chat.

"Such an invitation came one day, and Ibrahim Beg robed himself in his best burnous of white silk, his best gandoura of gold-embroidered muslin, and his best babouches of lemon-hued antelope skin. Then he set out on a white mule.

"His escort was the Sultan's master of the horse. The escort said, as they were crossing the bridge:

"'Oh, by the way, if the Sultan asks you what funds are selling at today, say 30, will you? In our ignorance we told him 30 this morning, and if he found that we had lied to him——'

"The master of the horse turned pale. He drew his finger, scimitar-fashion, across his throat.

"'I know,' said Ibrahim Beg sympathetically, 'and I'll back you up, old man.'

"'Maybe he won't ask, any way,' said the master of the horse. 'Thanks, Ibrahim, all the same.'

"But the Sultan did ask the banked, and no sooner did he receive his answer than he drew a great bundle of bonds from his bosom.

"'Funds at 30?' he cried joyously. 'Sell these at 30 for me, then, dear banker.'

"Ibrahim Beg took the bonds with trembling hands; he sold them at 12, the market price, and he paid the Sultan at 30. When he tried to recover something of his loss from the master of the horse, he found that the whole thing had been a put-up job, a hoax. The Sultan, being a little short, had engineered the hoax himself."

The House Beautiful—Its Flower Garden and Grounds.

SAWDUST VS. WEEDS.

AN EFFECTIVE MULCH WHEN PROPERLY PREPARED AND USED.

By Ernest Braunton.

THE use of sawdust as a soil mixture or mulch has often been advocated in this department, though such recommendations have been severely criticised from some quarters. It may have resulted in some extreme cases, in absolute injury, but these instances are few indeed and the cause easily explained.

There appears to be in redwood sawdust a considerable amount of tannic acid or something closely akin. This is soon removed or dissipated (in whole or considerable part,) after the sawdust has once thoroughly dried in contact with the atmosphere or has been well soaked with water. The writer has a fernery where the soil is composed of one-fourth sawdust which had lain on the ground for a year and become "cured." The dust (really fine shavings from a planer) was a mixture of pine and redwood, some of it quite coarse and no part of it well rotted. The ferns have made a growth that could hardly be surpassed under any treatment.

But it is as a soil mulch for the retention of moisture and the prevention of weed growth that sawdust or shavings is particularly recommended. For these uses no other material will compare with it in effectiveness. If the material be of redwood it would be well to allow it to season somewhat before using, but that pine shavings may be used with impunity we have ample proof. County Treasurer Hunt is using it on rose beds and E. H. Rust at his nursery in South Pasadena has all sorts of vegetation growing through three or four inches of it—magnolias, pines and a great variety of trees and shrubs, beside palms and much herbaceous stuff. A fine crop of young onions may also be seen, now six inches above the sawdust. With this treatment only about one-tenth the normal supply of water is needed, and not a weed has appeared in months over a whole acre of mixed nursery stock. Not a single plant has shown the slightest injury; on the contrary, all plants have made a better growth than under any other treatment.

PALMS AT CORONADO.

Palms at Coronado.

No more charming group of plants may be found for California gardens than the palms, none give such a tropical luxuriance of foliage or more of grace and dignity. Many private gardens in our southland hold precious collections which money could not buy, but there are but few public parks or resorts where a list may be found of sufficient extent to prove of interest to the plant lover. In the hotel court at Coronado are a goodly number of species that attract and interest all comers for in addition to the number of species is the further recommendation of all being well grown and of large size. The Cocos plumosa is here monarch of all, towering far above the rest, a queen surrounded by her "court" and courtiers.

Practical and Scientific Plant Lore.

Many inquiries come in regarding books of moderate cost pertaining to the different phases of horticulture, but the need most often voiced is for some work of nominal cost giving a key, practical yet scientific, to the identity, nativity, habit, size, etc., of our common trees, shrubs, herbs and vines.

There is but one work that is generally useful and at all comprehensive, and that costs $20—the Cyclopedia of Horticulture. Another work covering the same field is from England—the Dictionary of Gardening, also costing $20. Neither set contains all the plants we grow, but the first aims to list every plant in the American trade, and for that reason is much to be preferred. The English work contains too many plants we never hear of, and for other reasons is too cumbersome; for instance, in the original work of four volumes Asparagus occurs in Vol. I. When Vol. IV was reached others had been found, so they went into the addenda at the latter part of that volume. In 1900 a two-volume supplement was printed, and Vol. V contains the later discoveries. Thus when looking up Asparagus one is compelled to consult three volumes, and much the same use is necessary with all plants. An up-to-date revision of this work would find a ready and extensive sale. The six volumes now cost $30. But we must hark back to the plant fancier who has not $20 or $30 for a cyclopedia nor wishes to be cumbered with much literature for the sake of studying a few garden plants. For such the modern up-to-date general nursery catalogue is recommended. During late years these have undergone a complete revision, and are a fund of information obtainable without cost. The writer has had the pleasure of revising all the most modern in this State which deal with ornamental plants in general, and while none are absolutely correct from a botanical standpoint, the true botanical name of a plant has not been entirely sacrificed, but has been included in brackets after the better-known trade name, thus: "Chamaerops excelsa (Trachycarpus excelsus.) As an example of information, a few paragraphs are given below from the catalogue of the Fancher Creek Nurseries, of Fresno, the best one for scientific information yet published on the Pacific Coast.

Camphora officinalis, "Camphor Tree," China, Japan, 40 feet. A rank-growing, very symmetrical, ornamental tree, thriving in a poor soil; bright green foliage and well adapted for the lawn. To prepare the camphor of commerce, the root, trunk and branches are broken up and treated with water in closed vessels, the volatilized camphor being sublimated on rice straw; no garden is complete without it.

Seaforthia elegans (Archontophoenix Cunninghamii,) Queensland and N. S. W., 60-80 feet. One of the most beautiful of the palm family, and one of the best in cultivation for the conservatory or greenhouse; the pinnate leaves are two to ten feet in length, dark green and perfectly smooth.

Sequoia gigantea, "California Big Tree," 200-350 feet. The famous Big Tree of this State; it makes a handsome pyramid when young; very desirable for lawn decoration; a very attractive evergreen; thrives well in this climate.

Platanus orientalis, "Oriental Plane, Sycamore," S. E. Europe to India, 80 feet. A rapid, erect-growing tree, with bright green foliage; far superior to the common American Sycamore; thrives well, and is a very desirable avenue tree. More extensively used in Southern Europe for avenue and shade purposes than any other variety. A grand tree.

Laurus nobilis, "Sweet Bay." Mediterranean region, 40-60 feet. A very ornamental, upright-growing shrub; with deep, dark green, fragrant leaves, and covered in the fall with berries; if properly pruned, one of the handsomest of decorative plants; the leaves are placed between the layers of the Smyrna figs and impart a peculiar pleasant flavor to the fruit.

The Rice Flower.

We have all too few plants of a beautiful, [illegible] ing, dwarf shrub, commonly known as Rice Flower [illegible] to botanists as Pinelia ferruginea. Strange to [illegible] has been found for sale in California nurseries [illegible] cuisata or P. diosmafolia. The main thing is to [illegible] right plant—then lose the label—plant out your [illegible] Flower in a shady spot, in light soil containing [illegible] mold, if obtainable. Do not attempt to coddle the [illegible] or work up the soil about the roots, or even feed [illegible] manure or other forms of fertilizer, and you [illegible] doubt have a handsome shrub that flowers [illegible] and satisfactorily.

The City Beautiful—Its Avenues, Streets, Parks and Lakes.

TO BEAUTIFY LOS ANGELES.

THE PROBLEM TO BE SOLVED BY CHARLES MULFORD ROBINSON.

LOS ANGELES is to have an awakening regarding the needs of our city in relation to all the phases of improvement necessary to transform it intc the ideal City Beautiful. Charles Mulford Robinson, the famous municipal architect, is soon to be with us and make an exhaustive study and a comprehensive report regarding our needs in the way of civic betterment, to the end that our future upbuilding may be along the lines of a well-defined plan aiming to produce the best possible results.

To those most interested, Mr. Robinson and his work needs no introduction—he is no stranger in California or indeed in Los Angeles. He has just prepared a voluminous report for the city of Oakland in which he has so clearly set forth its many shortcomings that the people have expressed themselves as unanimously in favor of carrying out all his recommendations and to that end are now spending large sums on the preliminary work.

That Mr. Robinson has a serious problem before him no one will deny, for no collective attempt has been made to make Los Angeles a beautiful city. Climate alone is responsible for whatever of beauty we have, for it is all vegetative and exists alone in our parks and gardens. Even there the vegetation is seldom well disposed, but so luxuriantly does all plant life thrive with that the tourist is quite overwhelmed with the wealth to be seen on every hand, the ease with which it is kept in prime condition, and that its low cost seems to put within the reach of the humblest citizen material [illegible] never even dreamed of in less favored climes. As before stated, Mr. Robinson will find plenty of work awaiting him in planning, and we stand in sore need of his services. May this combination of circumstances prove the means of interesting our people in a great uplift and upbuilding in transforming Los Angeles into a truly City Beautiful.

The City Un-beautiful.

The lack of street trees and well-planted grounds is the sign of the city that sleeps. In every center of population the evidences and amount of human life to be seen are generally in fairly strict comparison with the plant life. Enter a town along bare, unplanted streets with dirty, illy-kept front yards, and you will see but few people about and but little business being done. It is even so with private property, the man whose home shows no taste or thrift, generally doesn't "amount to [illegible]." The premises are a pretty fair index to the character of the inhabitants. The recent purchaser must not be harshly judged, but a property tenanted by the owner which from year to year shows no improvement [illegible] own care, is a deterrent to prosperity.

Railroad Gardening.

It is an old, undisputed, and oft-quoted saying that "first impressions are lasting." As the truth of the statement is not in question, we must, with one accord, proclaim that we have urgent need of more railroad gardening. In looking over Charles Mulford Robinson's report on "A Plan of Civic Improvement for the City of Oakland, California," the reader will note that he takes up, with some considerable show of feeling, the question of some embellishment for the approaches to the city by rail.

When Mr. Robinson tackles the Los Angeles report, he will doubtless have much to say on the same question. Even though one on a passenger train first views the manufacturing section of a city, it does not necessarily give him a bad or wrong impression of the place because in such buildings and their surroundings there is much of interest to claim his attention as he is whirled along. But when he stops at a tasty, well-planted station grounds, with similar forethought and care bestowed on the properties immediately surrounding it cannot fail to make and hold a favorable impression. Add to this a continuation of cleanly well-vegetated premises as he journeys to his stopping place and the idea is firmly fixed in his mind that the place is "worth while," that the inhabitants consider themselves "some punkins" and are eager to prove it. First impressions of such a place, in addition to being pleasant, will be much more lasting than of one that makes no appeal or that fills one with loathing. We have little seriously to complain of regarding stations along our local railroads, although all of our lines are far from being leaders in railroad gardening.

School Gardens in Cities.

In foreign countries the school-garden movement has met with the most encouragement and greatest success in the rural districts. In California (and other States as well) the work is largely unknown among the rural population. In our State, where the beauties of a rich native plant life may be seen every day in the year, it would seem we are not in so much need of school gardens in the country.

On the other hand we have found some difficulty in getting the movement on a safe and sure foundation in Los Angeles for the reason that we do not have the closely-packed tenemented districts so common to other States and therefore have not such dire need of a "sprig of green" as is evident where the factory workers live "in rows," much like sardines in a can. Here every child has an opportunity to delve in the soil, to visit foothill, cañon or beach and is hardly satisfied to be cooped even in a spacious school yard. The most interest in school gardens and the greatest success has been found in districts tenanted by Europeans of the lower class. The children of these people are made to work during all their spare time and are free to roam the wilds of the nearby mountains. Wherefore the school garden is a pleasant and welcome change from dreary toil.

Planting Street Trees.

The selection of trees suitable for our streets requires more knowledge and judgment than does the planting of them for not all for sale are in any wise fit for such use. In planting the chief factor that tends to success is a hole of sufficient size so that the tree stands a fair show of growth by reason of water and air reaching the roots. So much of our soil, especially on the street, is so hard packed that neither air, water or roots may permeate it to any distance. This soil should be loosened to the depth and width of three to four feet, and if this is done no fear should be held regarding the future of the trees.

School Gardens Diminish Crime.

School gardens do more than to help educate our children in a formal way—the moral and esthetic side of the child is developed no less than the intellectual side. More civic righteousness has been taught by making children producers and property holders than by any lessons from books, or by all the sermons ever preached. When a garden for the children was located in Weccaco Square, the worst slum in Philadelphia, the residents themselves hooted at the idea of property rights being respected—only one hoe was stolen, however, there was no other loss during the entire season, and the police records show that crime diminished materially in the neighborhood. The children began to ask for books on gardening; this led to quite a little circulating library being arranged for by the teachers, and not a book or magazine disappeared.

Electricity and Street Trees.

It would appear from careful records kept at many far-removed points that the damage to street trees from electricity is very little. No authentic cases are known of an alternating current killing a tree, though an occasional burning of disfigurement has been recorded. High tension currents are dangerous, but injuries may be prevented by proper insulation. Many cases are known of trees being killed by direct current, such as are generally used by street railways and have even been killed by guy wires for such systems. If our city streets in Los Angeles were well planted, we would find that injury from this cause and gas eakage would be considerable, but so few of our older streets are planted that injuries are not many and pass unnoticed. In some eastern cities more street trees are killed by leakage of gas than all other causes combined, and no doubt we will find that with the appointment of a tree warden or forester some of the causes will be ferreted out.

Experiment With Columbines.

If columbines are allowed to go to seed they seldom produce more than one crop of flowers. So soon as they begin to look shabby the whole top may be cut off and a new one will come out at once and flower abundantly. This can be done once more and a third crop produced, all in one summer. How long this treatment may be continued is a matter not yet determined, but three crops have thus far been produced this summer on the same plants.

The Eastern Goldenrod.

Just now the eastern goldenrod, that is the best of the eastern species, and the one most generally cultivated, Solidago Canadensis, is in the height of its glory. The writer has a row of clumps about forty feet long in which the plants are from four to five feet high and in such profusion of bloom as to carry one back, in fancy, to the prairies of the Mississippi -- other valleys farther east. We have several local species, three in this country, but none will at all compare with S. Canadensis. Of our Southern California species one frequents low, wet lands and the banks of streams and ponds while another (very fittingly named S. Californica) prefers the arid clime of dry hillsides.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

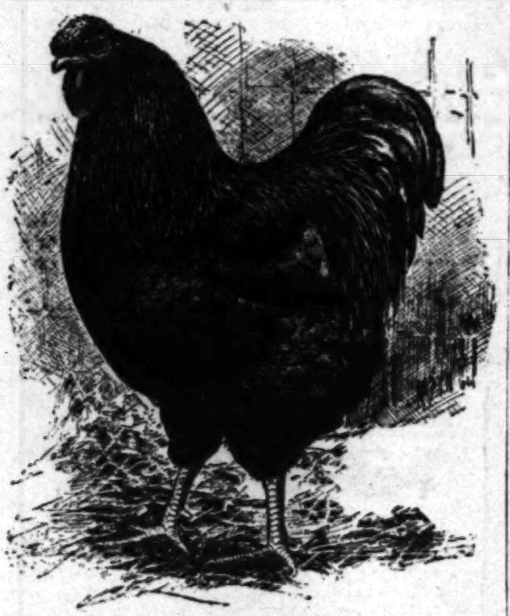
BUFF COLORED POULTRY.

IT HAS A WIDER VOGUE THAN ANY OTHER SHADE OF FEATHER.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

OF all the different colors of the domesticated fowl no single one has had a wider vogue, nor has any other taxed the skill and patience more severely than the bird carrying a buff-colored plumage. All buff breeds being essentially "made" varieties, there is a constant reversion to the parent blood, resulting in black, white, and a mealiness or grain in the plumage that constantly vitiates the purity and evenness of buff color. Then again there are so many shades of buff, veering from a pure lemon yellow to a golden bay and orange red, that scarcely two flocks or strains in the hands of different breeders ever show the same shade of color. The "off" colored feathers usually become black or white, and often both in the same bird. If this does not result, the plumage is often muddy or mealy in appearance, which is often worse, because the entire plumage is quite apt to be bad in a single bird. The aim of the skilful breeder is to produce birds that shall be uniform in degree of buff, on the surface as well as in under color. It makes not so much difference whether the shade be a light or a dark buff, so that it be uniform throughout. This criticism applies to all the buff breeds and varieties, because in every case the breed or variety is the result of crossing. So strong has been the desire or fashion for buff-colored poultry, that nearly all the different classes boast of a buff variety.



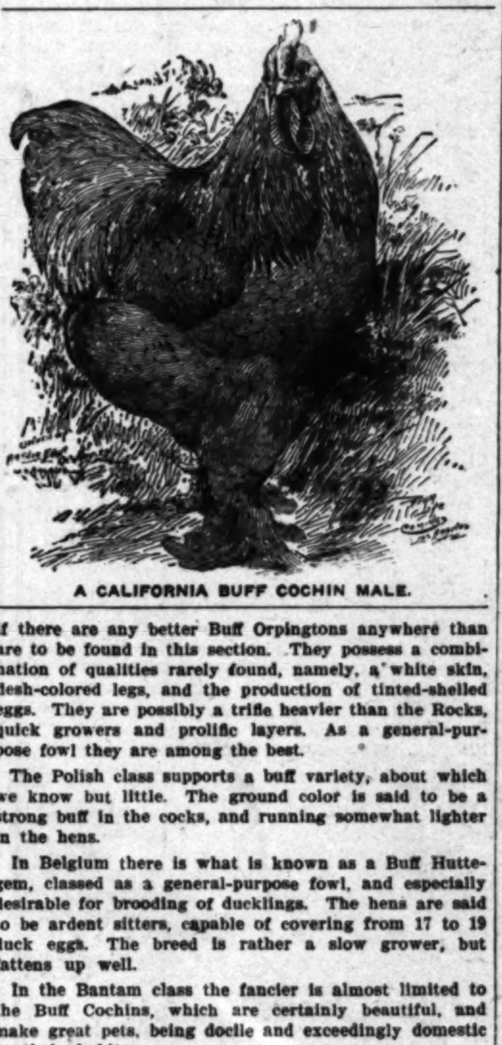
STANDARD BUFF WYANDOTTE COCK.

Among the oldest of the buff sorts must be mentioned the Cochins, which some twelve years ago were bred in perfection in this city by the late Arthur Edward Olshausen, a fancier from the ground up, and who understood this breed better than any other breeder on this Coast. His showing of Buff Cochins was the feature of the early poultry shows in this town. Since his demise the breed has not been so popular, though there are still some fine flocks hereabouts. Being of the Asiatic class they are large and heavily feathered. General appearance strong-bodied, deep of keel and full in front. Back short and broad, rising to the tail, which is small and devoid of sickle feathers; head small and neat; comb single, small in size, and set close to the head; legs and thighs short and widely set apart, and thickly feathered; appearance massive and bold, cocks weighing 10 to 12 pounds, hens 8 to 10. Among the Asiatics there is also a Buff Brahma which is bred but sparingly, possessing the general characteristics and economic value of the Light Brahma; it is, however, difficult to breed true to color, the tendency being to throw black feathers.

In the American class we have Buff Plymouth Rocks and Buff Wyandottes, both of which have been bred sufficiently as to length of time to come reasonably true to color. The writer not long since had the pleasure of going over a flock of the latter of about 150 in the San Gabriel Valley which developed a remarkable evenness of color of a rich golden shade, both surface and under color. From observations covering now fully twenty years, it seems quite well established that the Buff Wyandotte comes truer to color than the Buff Rock. With the latter there is still a tendency to sport black in the plumage. As for practical values there is no difference between the Buffs and the remaining varieties of the two breeds.

In the Mediterranean we have only the Buff Leghorns, which had a great vogue about fifteen years ago. When bred down fine to feather, they seem to lose in size and vitality. The few specimens shown of late years in the exhibition room were certainly under size when compared to the Whites. At their best they are beyond question a handsome bird. Being trim in appearance, with clear yellow beaks and shanks, sprightly and alert in action, they certainly possess elements of beauty calculated to fire the enthusiasm of the poultry fancier.

In the English class we have the most popular buff-colored bird in Southern California, viz., the Buff Orpington. Not only is it the strongest in numbers, but it is also pronounced in quality. Indeed, it is doubtful if there are any better Buff Orpingtons anywhere than are to be found in this section. They possess a combination of qualities rarely found, namely, a white skin, flesh-colored legs, and the production of tinted-shelled eggs. They are possibly a trifle heavier than the Rocks, quick growers and prolific layers. As a general-purpose fowl they are among the best.



A CALIFORNIA BUFF COCHIN MALE.

The Polish class supports a buff variety, about which we know but little. The ground color is said to be a strong buff in the cocks, and running somewhat lighter in the hens.

In Belgium there is what is known as a Buff Huttegem, classed as a general-purpose fowl, and especially desirable for brooding of ducklings. The hens are said to be ardent sitters, capable of covering from 17 to 19 duck eggs. The breed is rather a slow grower, but fattens up well.

In the Bantam class the fancier is almost limited to the Buff Cochins, which are certainly beautiful, and make great pets, being docile and exceedingly domestic in their habits.

A Branch for the Southwest.

As has already been intimated in this department of The Times the breeders and fanciers hereabouts are becoming keenly alive to the importance of establishing a branch of the American Poultry Association to cover at least Southern California and Arizona. This State already enjoys a membership at large in the national body numbering something like thirty names—surely a splendid nucleus for a branch organization. There are at present quite a large number of people who are favorable to the proposition, and it is to be hoped that something substantial will come out of the movement. To be affiliated with the national body will give to the breeders and fanciers hereabouts not only prestige and recognition, but afford the shows held here certain perquisites and advantages which can be gained in no other way. By all means let us have a branch society.

Blown It in the Neck of the Bottle.

The writer has only just inspected an egg-carrying carton holding an even dozen of eggs, that possesses some individuality in its printing. This particular case comes from one of the largest commercial poulterers in Arizona, who is supplying a private trade with fresh hen fruit, composed chiefly of healthseekers and tourists. That he is successful is best attested by the fact that he orders his egg cases or cartons in lots of two and three thousand at a time, and also that he commands 10 to 15 cents per dozen above the market price for his product. These cases are sealed up before leaving his hands. The top bears this inscription: "This carton contains 12 selected eggs from the —— ranch. They are guaranteed to be of the highest quality and are direct from the nest. Laid ——. The —— hens are thoroughbred White Leghorns, kept in perfect health and fed only high-grade feeds. Our aim is the highest obtainable excellence in eggs. For years invalids and particular people have appreciated our goods."

Across one end is this: "The —— guarantee extends only to eggs in our sealed cartons. See that the label is unbroken." And across the other end [illegible] wording: "In a delicatessen way, the —— [illegible] the finest thing obtainable in Arizona. This [illegible] old chick is tender in flesh and of a most [illegible] vor. Broiler season from May to October."

This is certainly a suggestion for some of [illegible] prising breeders in Los Angeles, Pasadena, [illegible] Santa Barbara and other resort towns. It [illegible] line with what The Times has said time and [illegible] the matter of an egg route. The thing is [illegible] ment in proper hands, but a feasible, [illegible] profit-making undertaking. Who will be the [illegible] ing breeder to put it into execution?

An Economic Pleasure.

It goes without saying that the poultry industry [illegible] all it possesses in the way of pure-blooded [illegible] gether with the perfection of new breeds, to the [illegible] who breeds for pleasure. To be sure this may [illegible] pleasure and gratification of winning in the show [illegible] or it may be the enjoyment of breeding for [illegible] points in the perfection of color and type in a [illegible] or variety; and it may be the mere [illegible] best of its kind, much like a Bonner owns [illegible] or a Morgan choice paintings. Others may [illegible] fowls just as an occupation to take up leisure [illegible] afford physical exercise. But in any event, your [illegible] rider in the poultry yard is the person who is [illegible] the beauty and utility of the birds. Every [illegible] ment in fowls on the farm, every effort to [illegible] a flock of mixed breeds and varieties gets its [illegible] tion and incentive from some owner, and [illegible] what in the parlance of the fraternity is [illegible] fancy stock in the hands of some fanciers. The [illegible] of birds from the yards of people who breed [illegible] for the love of them is an influence that has done [illegible] for standard poultry than any other one thing [illegible] we except the teachings of the poultry press. All [illegible] to the fanciers who are constantly striving to [illegible] the eye as well as the pocket-book—and Southern [illegible] fornia has more of them per capita of population [illegible] any other section of Uncle Samuel's farm.

Colored Illustrations in the Standard.

Advices just received from the meeting of the [illegible] ican Poultry Association held at Niagara Falls, [illegible] York, are to the effect that the motion to [illegible] standards to contain colored illustrations was [illegible] favorably. This, from one point of view, shows [illegible] ress, though as pointed out in this department [illegible] weeks ago, the question of colored illustrations is [illegible] to lead to much discussion and a wide divergence [illegible] application in the show room. The manner of [illegible] ing the same is, however, not only open to criticism [illegible] bordering almost onto the impractical. To issue [illegible] vidual standards only on one breed a year, and [illegible] be decided in keeping with the largest number [illegible] dividual specimens exhibited at the shows for [illegible] ticular season is to say the least childish and [illegible] tommyrot. Under such a dispensation it will [illegible] fifty years to complete the list—which is only [illegible] way of killing the undertaking to the solemn [illegible] of show music. To be of any use at all, [illegible] standards covering all the breeds should appear [illegible] taneously. Why should Barred Rock people [illegible] standard of their breed today, and the breeders of [illegible] Cochins say twenty-five years hence, when [illegible] members of the association, and have paid [illegible] dennarius for the honor? Echo answers, Why?

SPEED.

An Englishman, an Irishman and a Scotchman [illegible] one day arguing as to which of the three countries [illegible] sessed the fastest trains.

"Well," said the Englishman, "I've been in [illegible] trains, and the telegraph poles have been like a [illegible]

"I've seen the milestones appear like tombstones [illegible] the Scot.

"Be jabers!" said Pat, "I was one day in a train [illegible] country, and we passed a field of turnips and a [illegible] carrots, also a field of cabbage and parsley, then a [illegible] of water, and we were going that quick I thought [illegible] broth!"—[Tit-Bits.

By a Special Contributor.

THOMAS HUSTON and his charming young wife of South Marmalade avenue were somewhat annoyed by an ailment which the medical fraternity term ennui. For many months she had attended balls, and garden parties and pink teas and receptions, while he was fagged—yes, completely fagged by continually trying to spend the income from an inheritance. Once in a while, as at the present, life seemed a miserable nagging creature from which there was no escape. This fashionable couple had read of the delights of an outing in the mountains, and though they didn't know a sage brush from a pine tree, a horned toad from a buzzard, or a waterfall from a reservoir, they decided to start on a little expedition of their own. The mountains, with shady cañons, trees and running streams, were within easy driving distance.

"It will be perfectly lovely to sleep under the stars all night," Mrs. Huston gurgled delightedly to her husband. "We'll leave this afternoon and stay over Sunday. I'll get things ready right away. I've been told that mountaineering gives one an enormous appetite. I'll order a large beef roast. It will be such fun roasting it on a stick over a camp fire. We can take turns holding the stick, you know. I suppose we can get plenty of lobsters and shrimps up there in the creek, so I'll take along some lettuce, and we'll have a nice fresh salad. I read once that mountaineers eat beans and bacon—sounds awfully vulgar, doesn't it? I'd lots rather have a nice porterhouse steak with mushrooms, or squab on toast. I'll have the grocer send up several dozen eggs. Then we can boil them until they are nice and tender, and roll them in tissue paper and tie them with pink ribbons. And oh, my! I'm so glad it occurred to me in time, my cold cream is all gone. I'll 'phone to Bean's drug store right away.

"Hello! 2207, please. Hello! Is this Bean's drug store? Yes? Well, this is Mrs. Huston, 114 South Marmalade avenue. Mr. Huston and I are contemplating a trip into the mountains—yes, I think we'll have a perfectly lovely time. I wish you would send me a jar of cold cream. I hate freckles and tan; don't you? No, nothing else today, I guess. Oh, yes there is. We might fall over one of those awful precipices I've read about. It makes me shiver to think of it. Please send up a roll of adhesive plaster, and it might also be advisable to carry along a quart of Pond's Extract. Goodness me, I almost forgot the snakes. Send up a hydraulic syringe and some pomegranate of potash. We'd best have a quart of whisky and a pint of carbolic acid. I think it a good idea to have several remedies for snake bite, don't you. You see, we can use them all at once, and be sure. You'd better send up some strychnine. I've heard there are lots of rats in the mountains. I just hate rats, don't you? and—Hello. Hello!! Well, how very inconsiderate of that druggist, he's rung up. I must have some fly paper. I'd just die if a fly should get into my food. They carry hundreds of those horrid germs on the ends of their legs. I'll not patronize that horrid druggist again; so impolite of him. Dear, dear! I'm beginning to feel worn out. I'm so afraid I'll forget something.

"Mercy! I'm so glad I thought of it in time. I heard once of a man being drowned in the mountains. I wish you'd telephone to Rogee's right away for life preservers. We'll wear them all the time, then if we get caught in a water spout or a pool, we'll be able to keep our heads above water, and dearest, don't you think it would be a good idea to order thirty or forty feet of strong rope? We really ought to tie ourselves together, then if we are precipitated over a cliff, there will be less chance of both being injured. I've read that mountaineers always tie themselves together in this way.

"Is the carriage ready so soon? How fine the horses look in that new, gold-mounted harness. George's uniform is extremely becoming and aristocratic-looking isn't it. Did you tell him our intentions were to stay over night? He will probably need his pajamas and tooth brush. Don't forget to take your revolver. One never knows what may happen.

"Now while I dress, please 'phone to Morrow's Express and ask them to call for our things. We must take along a Morris chair and one of the large willow rockers. I have heard that people actually sit on stones or on the ground when they go camping, but that seems so primitive and prehistoric. I just hate to do anything common, don't you? Dishes? To be sure. I'll tell Hannah to pack the Haviland set right away. Do you know, Mrs. Johnson told me they used tin dishes exclusively when they went camping. Bah! I can't conceive of any one eating off a tin plate. Such low habits encourage degeneration of morals.

"Well, I'm ready. Do I look nice? I'm glad you think so. Well, we're really started. Oh, isn't it perfectly grand! Such divine scenery. I always did adore a nice street with elegant homes on either side. Dear me, how fast we are driving. We're getting into a horrid neighborhood. What a lot of shanties. Bungalows? Is that what they're called? Do people really live in those little brown houses? Environment like this can't be conducive to higher intelligence. I must call the attention of the president of the committee on Outdoor Art to these deplorable conditions, and suggest that he place a reform before the minds of these people be[illegible] like their homes.

"Isn't it cute? What a cute place, quite rustic-looking. But, dear me, why don't they cut all these trees? They don't do any good here, and just think what lovely firewood they would make, especially now when fuel is scarce. I just hate to see things go to waste, don't you? I'll speak to the Mayor about it as soon as we return. Gracious! what a steep hill. It leads down into the Arroyo? Oh, I know we shall be hurled to our death. What a horrid, ghastly place. I don't see why, when they burned off those foothills—how nice and brown and clean they are—they didn't finish burning off all the brush. It looks so untidy, disgracefully untidy.

"Why, where are we going? Is this a cañon? Why, it is just like a tunnel heaped with rocks and brush and fallen logs. I just know it is full of spiders and ants and snakes and toads, and what a dreadful odor! Bay trees and sage and greasewood, you say? Horrors! Dear me, what a noise the birds make—a perfect din. I've such a headache. Do, do take me home. It's all so awfully dirty. I'd die if I had to stay here over night. We'll go right back home. How fortunate I didn't send regrets for the cotillion at 'Oak Terrace.' I just love to dance, don't you? Oh, these awful rocks. Do tell George to be careful. I feel as if every bone in my body was being broken. I will be so, so thankful if we ever get out of this frightful place alive."

MRS. RIGGS EXPRESSES AN OPINION OR TWO.

"Come right straight into the kitchen, Miss Smith, till I finish fryin' these doughnuts. Have some, do. Just help yourself," and Mrs. Riggs nodded toward a pan heaped high with fried cakes. "I've done quite a bit of cookin' this mornin'—made pies and rolls, fried a chicken and baked beans. Do you know, Miss Smith, I feel every day in the week like sendin' up a prayer of thanksgivin' to the good Lord, for Sam and me has made a discovery, one we might 'a' made twenty years ago if we'd had sense enough. You want to know what's happened? Well, we go picnickin' once a week; stay over the Sabbath in some woodsy place, where we can rest and listen to Nature's sermons and music the whole day long.

"In the old days, Sam and me used to feel all tuckered out on a Monday mornin', instead of bein' refreshed as we should have been. They do say there's no such thing as discord—that with right-minded folks, everything is harmony—but for the life of me I couldn't get psalms and operas and prayers out of everlastin' dish-washin', mendin', cookin' and scrubbin'. Of course Sam and me loved each other, and that helped a lot, but we did get so out o' sorts once in a while at this see-saw way of livin'. We felt just like gettin' out and hollerin' and swearin' to let off our feelin's. Sunday was always just so. In the mornin' Sam would crawl out of bed as if he had no object in life this side of the grave. I'd get breakfast, clean the dishes, dust, pare vegetables, and fix my meat so's I could get dinner in a hurry after church; then I'd hustle upstairs, take down my crimpin' pins, put on my best gown and bonnet, and off we'd go to meetin' for a bit of religion, but somehow, though the sermon was always fine and full of scriptur' advice, Sam and me didn't feel edified, and sometimes we felt kind of bored. Sam's stiff collars stuck into his chin, his Sunday boots made his corns ache, and I always got fidgety sittin' up stiff and prim in my tight gown and stays, after wearin' calico wrappers all week. We never could have stood the preachin' and prayin' if it hadn't been for the singin'. Somebody said music has power to soothe the savage. Well, it's so. Soon's a hymn was struck up, the devils begin to run out of me and Sam, and we felt sort of soothed and calmed.

"After meetin' there was dinner to get. Seemed's if there was no end of dish washin'. After that, folks dropped in sociable like, you know. They'd most always stay to tea, after which we'd all go to meetin' again. Then it was bedtime, and the next day was wash day.

"One Saturday mornin' I got my dander up, and I told Sam I was sick and tired of eternally spendin' the Sabbath workin' and hurryin' and frettin', and calculated it would be a good idea if he'd hitch up old Tom to the buckboard while I put up some victuals, and we'd go picnickin' and stay over Sunday. You ought to 'a' seen Sam's face. He looked like he thought I was goin' straight to the devil. If I'd told him I was intendin' to join the ballet he couldn't have looked more upset. We had a hot argument. He opinioned that a picnic on Sunday was an awful wicked thing. I told him what Shakespeare said, that there was sermons in stones and good in everythin', and I told him that the Lord had made the hills and trees out of love, and that furthermore, he had nothin' to do with buildin' churches; that folks built them for show and went in debt for them, and that them that went to church either had to pay for their seats, just as they would at a theater, or have a basket stuck under their noses to remind them that it wasn't a free show. Of course I put things pretty strong, but I was set on carryin' my p'int. I told him the Lord had made trees for tired men to sit under, that He had a choir of birds for singin', that He put a sun in the sky for warmth and cheer, that He built the hills without first gettin' a subscription, and planted them to ferns and flowers and trees, and He didn't hire a landscape gardener to boss the job, either.

Though I didn't have signed papers to show for it, I told Sam the Lord had dedicated all this to them that loved Him; that we could go to His meetin'-house without havin' baskets shoved under our noses, and that he could wear his old shirt, and I could wear my calico wrapper, and nobody'd be shocked. At this, Sam began to weaken. He said, what would the parson say, and what would the deacons say? But I argued and argued, and finally Sam started for the barn, and when he done that I knew I'd got him just where I wanted him.

"Well, I hustled round and got things ready, put on my sunbonnet, and was all ready and waitin' by the time Sam drove up. Sam packed the stuff into the wagon, then went into the kitchen for his pipe and a box of matches. When he come out I spied a prayer book and a Sunday-school journal stickin' out of his coat-tail pocket. Well, we started. With the stuff piled up behind, we looked like we might be goin' into the junk business, and some of our neighbors eyed us kind of queer as we jogged along.

"Well, it was just grand to get away. You've seen old hosses turned into green pastures after bein' kept in harness and fed on dry grass for years? Well, Sam and me felt similar. He wouldn't agree that he was enjoyin' himself at first, but I saw the glad look growin' in his eyes, and somethin' of restfulness I hadn't seen there for many a day. The fields was green and velvety, sometimes wavin' with new grain, sometimes bright with buddin' posies and wild grasses. Oh, how good the flowers did smell! I wished I had several noses, and so did Sam. I can smell them wild flowers from memory yet. Meadow larks was everywhere, lettin' out bursts of joyful song as if they wasn't made of nothin' but music. They was just like little fiddles with the sunshine playin' on them.

"The road kept gettin' rougher and rougher and more country-like, and bime-by we went down an awful steep hill into the bed of the Arroyo. My first instinct was to get scared. But the minit I began to get scared I happened to look up and see the mountains and foothills all so grand, and I clear forgot all about gettin' scared till we got to the bottom of the hill, and then there wa'n't nothin' left to be scared about. I couldn't help feelin' bad when I see what fire had done to the lower hills, and I told Sam I'd like to give the miserable scoundrel that set that fire goin' a piece of my mind. All the brush and young trees was burned off clean and slick. There wa'n't a bush left big enough for a jack rabbit to hide behind. They do say that if the timber had never been burnt off these mountains here in Southern California, we'd have heaps of runnin' water, instead of havin' to store it in reservoirs, and pay for it like it was so much molasses.

"Oh, how good the woodsy things did smell! I sniffed and sniffed at the sage and greasewood. We kept on goin' and goin' toward the mountain, till we drove right plumb into it. It seemed as if the good Lord had left the gate wide open, a-purpose for Sam and me. The trees was just beginnin' to leaf out. They looked so clean and honest and industrious and smilin'. But what took me most was the stream. As it ran singin' down the green lane, I felt just like joinin' in the chorus, but I was 'fraid my old cracked voice would spoil the tune, so I just kept quiet and let my heart sing.

"There was hundreds of birds flittin' here and there, busy with their nest buildin', and it seemed sometimes as if they would choke, their throats was so full of song. Banks was covered with ferns and mosses. It seemed for a spell's if I'd burst with happiness I felt's if I'd escaped from the devil's ante-room, and was sproutin' wings. There wasn't a responsibility big as a pin head hangin' to me. Sam and me found a nice sandy place by the stream, with trees archin' over like a roof.

"I unpacked the victuals while Sam was gettin' some dry brush to build a fire. When Sam set the fire goin' I then balanced my pot and skillet on some rocks over the blaze, and started cookin' supper. Sam said things tasted lickin' good. I was afraid he'd kill himself eatin'.

Sam and me set by the fire till long after dark. The flames made a circle of gold like a halo round us, while the trees on the edge of the light seemed to be chantin' low, prayerful psalms, sort of shadow tunes. From way up the cañon came the round rich tones of the winds, like music from organ pipes, now risin' and now fallin', first muffled and kind of tender, then roarin' as if demons was poundin' on the keyboard. The stream made me think of the piano playin' I used to hear at the county fairs when I was a little tot—ripple, ripple, ripple, eager and sweet and lovin' and gentle. Durin' late years, after listenin' to ragtime bangin', I've kind of got to regard pianos as pests, but the playin' of this stream on its keyboard of pebbles and moss banks set my heart a-flutterin' and beatin', just as it fluttered and beat forty years ago, when just a tiny toddler in sunbonnet and pinafore, I had peeked from my ma's petticoats at the fellow who run his fingers up and down, up and down, over the white keys, makin' that piano sing and purr and laugh and sigh as if 'twas a livin' bein'.

"Sam was powerful quiet, but I could see that his face was lit up by somethin' besides burnin' logs. It seemed as if God was trimmin' and lightin' new lamps in our souls. We sat by the fire till the logs broke and tumbled into coals, then Sam and me spread our quilts on the sand and went to bed. We could look through the tree branches, straight up to heaven, where stars was shinin' and blinkin' like angels watchin over us. Pretty soon it began to get lighter. The moon was risin'. All the trees was tipped with silver, then they got silver all over as if they'd been dipped in a big jeweler's vat. How they did sparkle! and when winds shook them, silver seemed to be drippin' from every leaf and twig.

"Here at home Sam always winds up the alarm clock before goin' to bed, but we didn't take it when we went on that picnic. Seems's if it'd insult the Lord to take one of those buzzin' things into His territory. We didn't have a hotel clerk poundin' on our door to wake us up, either. The birds come patterin' and singin' round us, then the sun laughed loud from the crest of the hills, and sifted bits of gold through the treetops till we was drifted over with sunbeams. Well, all day me and Sam had the quietest, restfullest, prayerfulest time there in God's meetin'-house, and when, just at dusk, we hitched up old Tom and started for home, we was happy and hopeful, sort of calmed down, with the feelin' that nothin' could rile us, not even the hay crop gettin' wet, or Mandy Brown's dog killin' my best Leghorn."

HELEN LUKENS GAUT.

THEY ALL KNOCKED HIM.

"Papa," said little James, "what do they call a man who writes comic operas? A composer?"

"No, my son," the old man answered; "he is usually called a plagarist."

Farming in California—The Land and Its Products.

CONDUCTED BY J. W. JEFFREY, AGRICULTURAL EDITOR.

Florida Scale Disappears.

I HAVE a report before me written sixteen years ago giving an account of the inspection of the nurseries of Los Angeles city. Every nursery examined was infested with the Florida red scale, and the report says this pest was so prevalent that special directions for its extermination became necessary. This is most interesting reading in consideration of the fact that new pests have to be guarded against now as carefully as was necessary years ago. It is reassuring to know that the Florida red scale so prevalent here in 1890, has altogether disappeared as far as my observation shows. It appears occasionally upon a fresh importation of palms from the islands or elsewhere, but may now be considered out of the list of pestiferous scales.

Roosevelt the Second.

F. D. COBURN is becoming a national character. He is the Secretary of the Kansas State Board of Agriculture, a menial position officially considered, but one found in this case to abound in opportunities as it already radiates great influence. A month ago Coburn was being boomed for Governor of the State. The boom traveled like a native cyclone and spread over the State like a cloud of grasshoppers. But Coburn had not been consulted. He told the people in his unmistakable English that he did not want the nomination, did not want to be Governor, would not have the nomination and would not serve if elected. Coburn is one of the rare fellows who cannot be allured from his chosen work. He has been shown that more than half the people wish to give him the highest office within their power, and he realizes that he would sweep the State if he would only say the word. Honors and duties—he chooses the greatest honor of all—duty.

Moth Parasites.

DR. L. O. Howard, chief entomologist of the Department of Agriculture, has returned from his third quest for Gypsy Moth parasites. This trip was extended to Russia and witnesses a new departure in the importation of beneficial insects. Instead of bringing in a few parasites he had hundreds of thousands of parisitized moth collected and shipped to the infected districts of Massachusetts. Upon receipt of the moth there they will be placed in cages, the parasites emerging to attack the pests on American soil. While in Russia Dr. Howard discovered an enemy of the moth which breeds very rapidly, and it is among the importations. If this is the $25,000 "animal" George Compere knew about it will be brought in at no expense, the entomologists of Russia offering to gather and ship the parasited moth free of charge. Dr. Howard says the Russians do not consider the Gypsy Moth a pest for the reason that its natural enemies hold it in check at all points.

White Fly Absent.

IT will be a consolation for the fruit growers to learn that the general search for the white fly in Los Angeles county has, so far, resulted in finding no infection whatever. Scores of infections of other Aleyrodes have been located, but in no case has the Aleyrodes citri found a habitation. To be sure that no mistake in species has been made every infection has been identified by experts. It is true the real pest may be discovered any day, but the inspectors have covered all the premises where importations of plants are known and found nothing suspicious. Every day's work makes less the danger of infections being found. Growers have responded fully in making their own investigations and this, with the commissioners' and inspectors' work is reassuring. Now if the quarantine measure can be enforced in every county the danger of letting this pest get a hold will be lessened.

Our Foreign Fruit Trade.

TWENTY years ago the United States imported twenty million dollars' worth of fruits and nuts, and exported less than three million dollars' worth. From 1887 to 1907 imports of fruits and nuts have increased in 80 per cent. and our exports 540 per cent. The increase in imports was composed most largely of bananas, figs, cocoanuts and almonds—fruits and nuts we do not pretend to grow in quantities sufficient for the home demand. The average trade shows most conclusively the self-dependence of our country for oranges. Twenty years ago, with a comparatively small demand for oranges the United States imported nearly three million dollars' worth; in 1907 the imports of oranges were less than one-half a million. Of the foreign-grown fruits consumed in this country bananas supply over one-third the quantity used.

Apple Crop.

IN reading exchanges from the great apple districts of the United States I have estimated in a rough way the probable falling off of the yield this season compared with the last crop. It is certainly indication of a deficiency of one-third in quantity and some deterioration in quality. If these multitudinous reports are correct the coming apple crop will not go above 20,000,000 barrels. No one predicts cheap apples anywhere, at any time in the markets of the country. Our people know what this means to the orange trade. For three years beginning in 1901 the apple crop averaged over 40 million barrels each year. With only half that quantity, the country larger and the prosperity of the people assured, there should be money in the orange business equal to or better than that of the last two years.

Fig Souring.

H. J. W., West Adams street, writes as follows: "A large fig tree in my grounds fruits every year. The fruit is round, green and, at maturity as large as a hen's egg. When the figs are as large as walnuts they fall, except in two years out of ten when about two dozen ripened each of the two years and proved its quality. I have given the tree some water and some years it had only the winter's rain."

"Fig sour" is a common trouble with the very juicy varieties. It may occur from over-irrigation or from any cause that may reduce the vitality of the tree. No one has yet determined conclusively the cause of fermentation in maturing figs. So many varieties have been planted and they grow so readily from cuttings that the tree in question may be of a poor kind. If it is a fig sort that requires dry air, Los Angeles is not its natural situation, and it is admitted that the fig is subject to fermentation more frequently in some localities than in others. While the cause and remedy for fig souring remains unknown, the most immune only should be planted, and this must be determined by observation. The conditions at Fresno seem to be nearest those of the fig's native requirements. Another than climatic features is caprification. Figs of the true Smyrna type cast their fruit prematurely unless fertilized, or at least fail to produce perfect fruit. Many of the oldest and finest trees in the State bear no crops. Other types do not require artificial fertilization, yet they all need cultivation that will maintain good vitality in the trees and give them as far as possible the even conditions found in the dryer localities of which they are native.

Phosphate Rock.

L. B., of this city, wishes to know if raw rock phosphate can be used economically in fertilizing an orange grove. This is a question I do not think can be answered by any one. A good fertilizer concern could give the cost here of a ton of phosphate rock. But no one knows how long it would be till the phosphate would become available if applied in its raw state, and in a climate where soil assimilation proceeds but slowly. If it were all available a ton of the best rock would contain about 50 pounds of phosphorus. The rock is worth $8 per ton delivered to points within a few hundred miles from the mines, Tennessee, but California is almost a few thousand miles from the centers of this production. We are also as far from the centers of bone meal production, a ton of this meal having also about 50 pounds of phosphorus.

Generally speaking, and outside the cost of transportation, it does not pay to use raw fertilizers in California. There is so little organic matter in our soils ordinarily that the mineral elements of any fertilizer are made soluble very slowly. It may pay an eastern farmer near the phosphate beds and with a soil in which nature reduces the elements quickly, to use the raw rock phosphate for he can purchase a ton of phosphorus in the raw state for less than one-half what it would cost acidulated. In answer to another point raised by Mr. B., there would be no danger in applying a hundred tons of phosphate rock to the acre, as it is exactly what is in the soils from which all crops are grown. It is nature's preparation of one essential of plant food and is broken down and used as the needs of the plant require, or at least not available in harmful quantities such as is provided by organic manure. But there will not be enough of this rock obtainable here to bring into question its harmfulness. In fact it is getting rather scarce in Tennessee, Florida and South Carolina.

Alkali and Shrubbery.

MRS. H. G. W., who lives in the Indio portion of the submarine delta, writes of the difficulties she has experienced in getting yard plants started on account of the salt or alkali contained in the soil. She has tried morning glory, grape vines, chrysanthemums and flowering beans without any success whatsoever, but the cottonwood and palm grow well in surrounding territory. It is difficult to give advice in such cases as this, for one does not know the strength of the alkaline deposit or the depth to which it permeates the soil on that particular lot. The section from which Mrs. W. writes is proving one of the most fertile and productive of that famous artesian belt, yet there are spots which from unknown causes have received such a high percentage of alkaline deposits that they are useless. If the deposit on this lot is shallow, though very strong, it may be, very deep spading to bury the alkaline crust may give a top soil in which the plants may find root.

I have seen the same land Mrs. W. owns, and five years ago the vegetation along the ditches grew rankly because of the leaching out by the ditch water. If there is good drainage this process might be successful upon a larger scale and the yard in question freed from poisonous elements by copious irrigation. It is more difficult to start annuals than trees in alkaline soils. Two-year-old trees are more easily established than younger trees, on account of the resistant qualities of the older roots. Usually the alkaline deposit [illegible] the surface, in some of our worst lands within [illegible] three inches from the top. It may be [illegible] that land plaster or gypsum may be used without [illegible] culty. Try gypsum at the rate of about two [illegible] acre. This with a previously heavy flooding [illegible] of great assistance in establishing plants where a [illegible] deposit of alkaline salts exists.

Greek Hay.

J. G. C., Santa Paula, writes as follows: "I [illegible] an inquiry in a late number of The Times [illegible] of fenugreek. I visited the Limoneira Company's [illegible] chards and packing-houses and they were [illegible] a great quantity of fenugreek seed for their [illegible] and for sale. I ascertained that they got the [illegible] abroad several years ago and had since used [illegible] green manuring in their lemon orchards. They [illegible] 50 cents a pound for the seed and now have it [illegible] at 10 cents per pound in 100-pound quantities. [illegible] Limoneira Company are growers of lemons and [illegible] nuts and also grow Lima beans between the [illegible] trees. These orchards are large, 400 acres of [illegible] 450 acres of walnuts and about 100 acres of [illegible] The office of the company is at Santa Paula."

Fenugreek seed comes to maturity in four [illegible] months from planting. I do not know that the [illegible] of this plant has been used in this country for [illegible] medicine, but it forms one of the main ingredients [illegible] condition powders and gives those mixtures their [illegible] known odor. Fenugreek hay might be used for [illegible] both as a nutrient and corrective. It is proving [illegible] able as a green manuring plant. Mrs. G. W. [illegible] Oakland, another inquirer, will find the address [illegible] Santa Paula people in this item, from whom [illegible] get the seed.

Sulphurous Criticisms.

THE CALIFORNIA FRUIT GROWER says: "It [illegible] appear that the State Horticultural Commission [illegible] is the proper authority to be conducting experiments [illegible] in sulphuring (fruit) and handling the negotiations [illegible] tween our fruit growers and the pure food authorities. [illegible] The State officials seem to have overlooked this [illegible] entirely." I have a letter before me which [illegible] State Commissioner's office received the magnificent [illegible] sum of $7500 for use outside the three salaried [illegible] ficials. Then there is a less sum available from [illegible] sources. With this sum must be maintained the [illegible] antine division at San Francisco, the State [illegible] and several faithful men to patrol the State [illegible] Carnes and his helpers are now doing. The law [illegible] erning the office of the State Horticultural Commis[illegible] sioner contemplates the unifying of the work of [illegible] office with the work of each county Horticultural [illegible] mission, and to forward this end, makes the State [illegible] missioner a member ex-officio of every county [illegible] sion. Then there are a hundred avenues clearly [illegible] the jurisdiction of the office in which action is [illegible] for every year, and all drawing upon a fund that [illegible] comes depleted every year from the drain of [illegible] imperative work. There should be some [illegible] through which to voice the interests of the [illegible] a contest such as that now before them upon [illegible] phuring. The University people have made [illegible] strong statements in late bulletins on the [illegible] eradication, claiming that the work should be [illegible] by scientific methods, whatever that may mean. [illegible] is a large range for scientific work in determining [illegible] sulphurous acid content of cured fruits. The [illegible] the Fruit Grower is right in stirring up some [illegible] ible party in the fruit sulphuring controversy, [illegible] should remember that the State Horticultural Commis[illegible] sioner's office has never been supplied with [illegible] money outside its stipulated duties to equip [illegible] cubator.

The Coming American Horse.

AN INTERESTING experiment in horse [illegible] under way in Colorado under the direction [illegible] Government Department of Agriculture. It is [illegible] that Colorado was selected as the location [illegible] special adaptability of soil and climate, but it is [illegible] likely that it was chosen because the man who [illegible] the plan is a resident of that State. The idea [illegible] veloping the American types of live stock under [illegible] ernment supervision originated with Hon. [illegible] of Carbondale, Col., who, with other agricultural [illegible] terests of the State, succeeded in securing the co[illegible] tion of the United States Department of Agriculture. [illegible] start has been made with a number of breeding [illegible] of the best type of American stock and [illegible] Carmon. The idea is to breed a new and [illegible] satisfactory type of American carriage horse, [illegible] ing speed, great style and high quality, [illegible] stance to look well in heavy harness, and [illegible] to go long distances in little time and with [illegible] amount of fatigue.

The work in Colorado is supplemented by [illegible] quite as interesting to farmers in the attempt [illegible] interest in the Morgan breed in co-operation [illegible] Vermont Experiment Station. A four [illegible] farm at Waybridge, Vt., is being used as a [illegible] for development of the Morgan horse, and [illegible] did all round type of horse is revived and [illegible] creased in numbers, the effort will be of [illegible] manent value.—American Cultivator.

Gardening in California—Flower and Vegetable.

Poppy Variations.

IN ANSWER to a letter from a poppy grower of the San Gabriel Valley I will state that the variations seen by the roadside near Alhambra are no doubt but varieties of the common wild poppy, the Eschscholzia Californica. There are several species of this plant usually known by their horticultural names. They are usually perennial but succeed better only grown as an annual. No plant native of this State attracts so much attention as the California poppy. Nothing in the plant line exceeds it in attractiveness of color; it is distinctively ours and flourishes where flowers are not so plentiful and beautiful as to detract from this lovely bloom. It is thought by some that this plant does not color so well under cultivation as it does upon its native mesa, but this may be owing to the time the cultivated poppies bloom. There is as great a variation in the color of the rose here at different seasons. I have seen very high-colored flowers in the yard. It is possible that the lemon colored bloom, which is not very attractive, may be a variation true to the seed. Certain it is that this plant gives us about the richest color extent where it blooms at the right time, or in its proper location. There is little need of getting the various shades, which run from deep orange to almost pure white, for the gold of the wild plants is not capable of improvement.

The Golden Rod.

ONE of my acquaintances recently presented to an invalid woman a magnificent stem of golden rod grown from roots sent to California from the Mississippi valley. It is probably the Solidago rugosa. There are many nursery varieties offered to the trade in the east where this plant grows wild and becomes one of the most beautiful as well as the most common of their roadside perennials. The old-gold color is very attractive and when the plant matures in a few great stems it is really one of the best of the autumn flowers. A species of the golden rod is very abundant upon some of the high cienega lands of the local canyons, but it is smaller and not so attractive as the large eastern and neither graceful in its florescence nor fine in coloring. Some of our local fanciers are now growing the eastern kinds in their yards. The plant is one of the best for transplanting; it presents a fine variation from a given strain and a large collection may be obtained from a single clump by dividing in the early spring or fall. To produce a great and graceful stem the shoots of the early summer should be removed to one strong stem, which will expand to a glorious bunch of bloom four feet high and two feet in diameter under ordinary care. There are about 100 species of this plant only a few of which are found upon this coast.

A Strawberry Legend.

WHERE Eperies, the picturesque Hungarian town, is now surrounded by beautiful gardens and tilled fields there was at the time of King Bela II. nothing but thick wilderness. Once this blind and unhappy sovereign was traveling in his realm. It was a warm, hot, sultry day, and while searching for a shady spot in which to rest he became lost. Deadly tired in consequence of his long wandering, he asks his attendants for a drink of water. They seated him on the soft green grass in the cool shade of big old trees, and then the cavaliers separated to hunt for a refreshing spring. Meanwhile, the king wanted to find out more about his resting place and began to grope about him with his hands. Thus he discovered strawberries growing all about him. He ate them; so, partly quenching his thirst he waited quietly for his gentlemen. After a while they returned, some with empty cups, some [illegible] early spring water. The king then said to his attendants: "Have the trees cut down around this place where I found the refreshing strawberries. Here shall be a town called Eperies (strawberry) in remembrance of this day, for all time." As the king commanded, so it was. The wilderness was cleared, and in its place a town whose arms carry the strawberry even today.

A Horticultural Humbug.

THAT old impostor, the irresponsible fruit-tree agent, is the subject of these comments by Dr. W. L. Howard, in Missouri Agricultural College "Farmer:" "As I go about the State from time to time, I find the trail of these persons, with improperly named or worthless varieties, together with disappointment and a general suspicion of all reputable dealers, in the wake. These fakirs not only do not sell what they claim to in the way of well-known varieties of the different fruits, but they often make absurd and impossible claim for what their plants will do. There was the "whole root" fake, the "budded-stock-better-than-grafted-stock" fake, and lastly, the "seedless-apple" fake, is abroad in the land. It is not so much the direct loss that results from what the people pay these traveling agents, as it is the indirect injury to the industry that results from their lack of confidence in the nurseryman. If a man plants a few apple trees, for example, and they are found to be not true to name and perhaps unadapted to his soil or locality, he becomes discouraged and may persistently refuse to ever place another order even with a well-established reputable dealer.

Happily, these traveling fakers have had their day in many localities, and the many reputable nurserymen in the State are advertising so extensively that the people are learning to place their first orders direct, and better satisfaction, of course, has resulted. The farmers' institute lecturers have been the means of doing untold good in exposing conscienceless fruit-tree agents.

How Michigan Celery Is Sold.

MICHIGAN methods may interest California growers, who are operating under an association and shipping to their chosen agents in Chicago. Most of the celery is averaging about 50c a box. Some of the very early celery brought as high as 75c a box, while some boxes containing exceptionally small stalks only brought 40c a box. This price would have been above the average at this time last year, but considering the lateness of the season and the fact that very little celery has been shipped as yet, this being practically the first of the crop, farmers expected higher prices.

Most of the growers are still shipping in the old-size box, 20 inches long by 12 inches wide and about 4 inches deep. The new boxes, which are much larger, will soon be put into use.

At the present time the growers are packing about four dozen stalks to the box. Usually about this time they can pack only about 40 stalks to the box. The late spring has delayed the growth of the celery considerably, and although the warm weather during the past two months has made the stalks shoot up rapidly, it could not compensate for the late beginning. Some of the growers, who are working on poor or worn-out land, are forced to pack five dozen stalks to the box. This grade of celery brings a much lower price than the large-stalked variety.—[Rural Press.

Fair Attractions.

AT the California State Fair there will be a demonstration of some of the phases of work of the agricultural department of the State University, especially in cereal and viticultural lines. This disposition to use fairs as a means of showing people what they are doing is a growing way with our educational institutions. For instance, the Pardue University will have quite an undertaking at the Indiana State Fair. The institution will have a building of its own in which it will conduct a working dairy and will make exhibits from the soil, crop, animal husbandry, and horticultural departments. To supplement this work and exhibit, lectures will be given in the auditorium adjoining the exhibit rooms, on all popular phases of agricultural and domestic science. The lectures, which will occupy about twenty minutes each, will be illustrated with stereopticon views. These will be given every day of the fair, and will include the following subjects: Treatment of soils for wheat and corn; methods of eradicating the San José scale; selection of feeders; harvesting and storing seed corn; improvement of dairy herds; and domestic science demonstrations. Our experience would indicate that the demonstrations and working exhibits would be popular and the lectures otherwise. People go to fairs to be shown things. Quiet discussion goes better at institutes and other similar meetings with no fair connections.—[Rural Press.

Forest Planting.

A FEW figures readily show the value of forest planting from a commercial standpoint. In Pawnee county, Nebraska, a 16-year old catalpa plantation gave a net return of $152.17 per acre at the time the plantation was cut, or an annual profit of $6.24 per acre. A 10-year-old plantation of the same species in Kansas showed a net value of $197.55 per acre. Still another plantation, in Nebraska, gave a net income of $170.50 per acre when 14 years old, which amounts to an annual income of $8.69 per acre. Osage orange has been known to produce as high as 2640 first-class posts and 2272 second-class posts per acre. Land producing such a forest as this could hardly be put to a better use, since timber is the easiest of all crops to raise and will never go begging for a market. It does not take a lifetime to get results. Catalpa often reaches a post size in from eight to ten years. Eucalyptus makes a heavy yield of fuel in seven years, and the crop should nearly always be cut before ten years. From the manner in which our natural timber has been cut it is clear that each region will have to be made as nearly self-supporting in timber growth as possible. The lesson of the past is that the right forest trees grown in the right way will bring a big profit.—[Rural World.

Denatured Alcohol Regulations.

AMENDED denatured alcohol regulations have been issued by the commissioner of internal revenue at Washington, to take the place on Sept. 1 of the regulations heretofore issued. They are made necessary by the act passed by the last Congress.

Under the new regulations, in addition to denaturing warehouses on distillery premises, central denaturing warehouses may be constructed at such points as business interests may require, and alcohol may be transferred from denaturing warehouses by means of tanks or tank cars to consumers.

Manufacturers using completely denatured alcohol are not required to swear to an application for a permit, and a permit when secured continues in force until revoked; and retail dealers in denatured alcohol are not required to keep a record of any kind.

Industrial or farm distilleries may produce alcohol from anything that contains fermentable matter. At these distilleries one room may be used as a combined cistern, distillery warehouse and denaturing warehouse.

Industrial distilleries are divided into two classes. In the first class are placed distilleries of a surveyed capacity of 50 proof gallons or less of spirits in 24 hours. At such distilleries storekeeper gaugers are not regularly assigned unless the collector certifies that in his opinion the presence of an officer at a particular distillery is necessary.

Distilleries of the second class are those that produce more than 50 gallons and less than 100 gallons of distilled spirits daily. At distilleries of this class an officer will be regularly assigned, unless the collector shall certify that the distillery can safely operate without one.

Manufacturers using specially denatured alcohol are, under the new regulations, relieved from keeping a record of the goods in the manufacture of which denatured alcohol is used.

Proprietors of industrial distilleries and manufacturers recovering alcohol in manufacturing process where but a very small quantity of alcohol is denatured are not required to provide themselves with denaturing material rooms or to have the denaturants either from central denaturing warehouses or from distilleries at which regular denaturing warehouses are established

The Potato.

THE potato is a native of South America. It now grows wild in Peru, Chili and on many islands. It holds a position of valuable importance in the West Indies and is said to be indigenous to the soil and climate of the Isle of Pines. We have no reliable statistics as to its yield on that much-praised island, but are assured that it is enormous. Two crops are raised annually and the quality is very much superior to the northern product, yet in order to sustain this superiority, seed should be carried from our own "Minnesota or some other northern region" each year. It is said that a potato farm there, or anywhere in the West Indies would bring a sure fortune to any enterprising American. It takes four or five months to bring it to perfection from the time of planting. The natives use potatoes not only for food, but make a drink out of them that they call maiz, which is said to be very wholesome.

When Columbus first landed on our islands in 1492 he found this edible used as a common luxury, at that time it grew wild in the woods and the natives also cultivated it in a rude way. At a very early date its existence was known in Spain, where it was raised in large quantities as an article of food for man and also used in feeding pigs. It is believed to have been introduced into Spain from Quito. The Spaniards are thought to have taken it to Virginia. In 1856 Sir Walter Raleigh carried the tuber in his ships from "Old Dominion" to England. It was taken from Spain to Italy and Holland in 1588. In the old world the potato does not have the delicious flavor and quality that it does in its native islands where it grows in perfection. Consequently its cultivation and use on the continent advanced very slowly. It is only about a hundred years ago that it first began to be commonly planted in Ireland. It is now as we all know, a staple article of food for the Sons of Erin and has derived from that beautiful island its modern name.

A LACONIC MESSENGER.

Few reminiscences of the Civil War have been written in as entertaining a manner as those contributed to McClure's by the late Carl Schurz. The following extract from "The Battle of Missionary Ridge," in the September number, tells how Gen. Schurz and his staff officers learned of the result of this great battle:

"The great victory of Missionary Ridge was announced to us in an almost casual way. There was immediately behind my line of battle a little dilapidated negro cabin in which our headquarter orderlies had constructed, out of planks found lying around, something like a table with a bench on each side. There I sat down with my staff officers to 'supper'—coffee, hardtack, and, perhaps, a slice of bacon. We had hardly begun our repast, when my division surgeon dismounted outside, came in, and joined the revelers. He was a somewhat monosyllabic gentleman, and gave us only a 'good evening.' After a while I asked him: 'Where do you come from, Doctor?'

" 'Just from Chattanooga, sir.'

" 'Looked for medical stores, I suppose?'

" 'Yes, sir.'

" 'There was a tremendous noise around there. What was it?'

" 'Fighting, sir.'

" 'Fighting—where?'

" 'On the hillside, sir. Boys went up nicely.'

" 'What hillside?'

" 'They call it Missionary Ridge, I believe, sir.'

" 'What? Our boys went up Missionary Ridge? Did they get to the top? Now be a little more lively, Doctor!'

" 'Yes, sir; we could see them climb up there, and there was much waving of hats and cheering.'

" 'What? Got to the top? And the rebels ran away?'

" 'I heard some officers say so at headquarters.'

" 'By Jove! then we have won the battle.'

" 'I guess so, sir,' said the Doctor quietly."

On Catalina Island.

FOR those who are so fortunate as to be able to take several vacations during the year, it is of comparatively little importance where or how they spend their leisure time. When, however, a man is only able to take once a year the regulation two weeks, it becomes of great importance that he should put in the time to the best advantage. For many people a vacation is more of a drawback than otherwise. Doctors testify that the summer vacation season brings them much extra business.

A main rule to observe is to get as much of a change as possible from the ordinary surroundings and occupations. Leave your business cares behind you when you go on a vacation. Otherwise, you might almost as well stay at home. If you are in the habit of reading much, when at home, cut down your reading to the smallest proportions, and let that be of the lightest kind.

The editor recently asked the manager of Catalina Island where he spent his vacation. He said he went out on the desert. A sensible idea—going from a place where there is lots of society and lots of water to a place where there is neither.

Perhaps, as a rule, it would be better for Los Angeles people to go to the mountains, rather than to the seashore, because the atmosphere of Los Angeles is modified sea air, the city being not more than fifteen miles from the ocean in a direct line. There is, however, one seaside place where you may combine mountains and seashore—that is, if you are fond of walking. This is Catalina Island, where the editor this year spent his vacation, occupying a tent in the "Canvas City." These tents are comfortable, with board floors. They are made of thick striped material, and are shaded by the magnificent sugar and blue gums, which have made a marvelous growth during the fourteen years since they were planted.

Those who seek absolute rest and quiet will find the tent city a little noisy in the evening, "after the ball is over," when the young folks do their flirting and giggling. For such people, it would be better to select one of the cotttages, on a hillside, where you may be as quiet as you please.

In regard to sea bathing, a few words of caution are necessary. This practice may easily be overdone, and so do more harm than good. Many people go into the ocean, not because they like it, but because they think it does them good, just as they eat breakfast foods. You should never bathe in the ocean unless you feel inclined to go into the water, and then don't stay in too long. Also, it is well to have a robe to put on, when you have to go some distance to dress. For many a hot salt-water bath followed by a cold splash, would be better than the ocean bathing. Many women bathe without wetting the head. This is a bad practice. It must necessarily be injurious to stay for a considerable time in cold water, with the sun beating down on your head. Another thing: Always put cotton in your ears. Doctors can testify that they have many cases of temporary deafness following the bathing season. This is more likely to happen where there are breakers. There are none at Avalon.

One encounters many quaint and curious things on Catalina Island. Until they become accustomed to it, visitors are surprised at the free and easy manner in which people of both sexes perambulate along the leading thoroughfares, in scanty bathing costumes. This is another example of the fact, heretofore referred to in these columns, that the matter of much or little clothing is simply a matter not of morals, but of custom and habit. If a person should attempt to walk down Spring street attired as hundreds walk up and down Crescent avenue, in Avalon, there would be an immediate call for the "hurry-up" wagon. One dainty creature was noticed by the editor attired in a stunning black bathing suit, trimmed with red, the skirt four inches above the knees. She also wore white lisle thread gloves, a flower picture hat, and high-heeled shoes.

The delicacy stores are a great feature of Catalina Island, and a great convenience to campers. People carry home hot soup in a paper bag—that is to say, in a cardboard receptacle. In one of the saloons beer is sold by the pound. There is also a long-distance laundry, and a soft-water dairy—or something of that kind.

Apropos of water, fresh water is a scarce article on the island, so that the unfortunate flies insist on drowning themselves in your wash basin. The water that is pumped from a well back of town is very hard—too hard even to wash in, with satisfaction. Consequently the company imports water from Wilmington, in a tank barge, fitted up for the purpose, and sells it, in five-gallon demijohns, at a price just about sufficient to cover the cost of handling. It is an excellent soft water similar to that supplied to Long Beach, from the Bixby wells. The brown tinge is caused by peat beds through which the water is drawn.

Altogether, Catalina Island is a delightful place in which to spend a vacation. Notwithstanding the fact that they now have a wireless station there, one feels cut off from the world, with its multitudinous worries.

Strength and Health not Indentical.

LIKE the boom in breakfast foods, there has been a falling off in the physical culture boom. We don't so often see in the high-priced magazines reproductions of magnificent figures, with the intimation that, even if you are a tottering invalid, you may soon duplicate such a figure, by simply joining Prof. Strongarm's correspondence school, the cost of a course in which is only $30—in advance.

Here is an extract from a series of articles by an English teacher of physical culture, that have been appearing in the sporting sheet of the Sunday Times. It is worthy of reproduction, here, as it may have escaped the eyes of many readers of this department:

"Opposed to these virile workers in type, we have the athlete of big muscles; he may be a weight lifter and poser, a herculean gymnast, a wrestler, and, rarely, if ever, a boxer. The work and training of the boxer is so near to nature that he invariably proves an excellent laborer. The very stamina he requires in his contests is just what the big muscle men can never have. Eugene Sandow off the boards is an indolent person, with not enough energy to ride a wheel properly. When not on tour he gets fat and lazy and becomes the despair of the capitalists who run his schools, magazine and appliances, including a postal instruction course.

"Apollo, the famous Scotch athlete who walks off the stage doing a dance with a 280-pound sack of flour on his back, which he lifts from the level stage without aid, while stretched at full length face downward, once tried to do a day's work in Canada for a wager, unloading pig iron from a schooner. After four hours' poor toil he collapsed and was laid up three days. He tells the story frankly, and laughs when he thinks of the horrible show he made. Much the same thing happened to Charles Bexley Vansittart, the aristocratic English strong man, who has the largest arm in the world: biceps contracted, 19 inches, who bends half-inch pit nails and horse shoes with his fingers. He once met a scallawag chopping down trees in the Northwest Territory, and got a challenge from him to try and beat him at the game. Vansittart got through one trunk, then lay down and groaned with the pain in the small of his back, while the scallawag threw down his pipe and howled with delight. I know them all, and will swear that there is not one of them good enough to do half a day's labor, not even those who did toil before they took to the professional strong man's career.

"Thus we are forced to conclude that the big muscle of the stage athlete is not what we need. Sandowism has made a craze for this sort of thing. In England alone it has produced thousands of wonderful muscular specimens, but in nine cases out of ten all they are good for is posing and lifting weights. What we must have is the kind of exercises that will develop not only health and physique, but that long, tireless vitality that will carry the worker—whether his occupation be mental or physical—through the heaviest day."

Some time before the end of this year, the editor of this department hopes to find room for a comprehensive article, which he has prepared, on the use and abuse of physical culture. Meantime, remember that strength is by no means synonymous with health. On the contrary, the development of big muscles is accomplished at the expense of the general vitality. It is an incontrovertible fact which carries its own lesson, that few great athletes live to advanced age.

File Your "Care of the Body."

A SAN DIEGO correspondent writes:

"I am enjoying your fine articles in the Care of the Body very much. Would it be possible to print it on both sides of one leaf, as I would like to cut that leaf out and put them together like a book and keep it as a treasure more valuable than a Bible?"

This is not practicable. The business office has something to say. Without a business office, to look out for the financial end, you would have no "Care of the Body." Selected, and more or less hygienic advertisements, are run on the pages, for which advertisers are glad to pay special rates.

Thereis, however, nothing to prevent readers from having the department bound, with a dozen pages of blank paper in the front, and indexing it. This makes a book of over 300 pages, valuable for reference.

Disease Is a Blessing.

HERE are more sensible remarks by Sir William Treves, one of the King of England's physicians, whose statement that drugging will soon be a thing of the past was recently published here:

"Sir William Treves, in an address to the Philosophical Society in Edinburgh declared that if it were not for disease the human race would be extinct. Disease, he said, instead of being malignant, is benevolent, or what is known as disease is a manifestation of cure. He declared that peritonitis is a surgeon's best friend, that coughs and colds are manifestations of cures; that by coughing one dislodges countless germs from the nasal passages and windpipe, while tuberculosis is a manifestation of effort on the part of the body to oppose armies of bacterium."

Care of the Body.

This is just what the editor has been saying, over and over again, in these columns, for nearly ten years. In view of this incontrovertible fact—that disease is an effort of nature to cast out impurities from the system —the doctors continue to do all in their power to check the healing process of nature, by giving the patient poisonous drugs, that paralyze him and stop the eliminating process, thus driving the morbid matter back into the blood, and producing what is called a "cure," which only means that the disease will soon break out again, perhaps in a more aggravated form.

The swallowing of poisonous drugs, and the injection of poisonous matter into the blood are undoubtedly the cause of a great majority of deaths, that are falsely attributed to disease, which, as Sir William Treves correctly states, is benevolent. What we should do is to assist nature, when it sets to work, in the shape of disease, while at the same time we should avoid the causes that have produced these symptoms. When will the medical fraternity and the people learn that the mere suppression of symptoms of disease is not in any sense of the word a "cure?" Take, for instance, smallpox. It has become much less frequent of late years. On the other hand, dipththeria, a disease that was comparatively unknown fifty years ago, is now most alarmingly prevalent. Morbid matter in the blood must find an outlet in some way or other. Wise engineers are not in the habit of sitting on a safety valve.

"As a Man Eateth."

Our "New Thought" friends are fond of saying: "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." This, to a certain extent, is true, but a more important fact is: "As a man digesteth in his stomach so is he," for no man who does not eat right can think well. Napoleon declared that armies marched upon their stomachs. It may also be said that society is based on food, in more ways than one. We could not long exist without food, and we cannot live well without the right kind and quantity of food, eaten in the right way.

Hence, the overwhelming importance of the subject of food. No amount of right thinking will help you so long as you eat wrong.

• • •

About Foods.

In "A Stuffed Club" Dr. Tilden—who is not a vegetarian—writes as follows:

"Albumin never enters the circulation as albumin. Foods are compounds, and before they enter the circulation they are changed, broken up. Cooked and manufactured foods are devitalized. Animal foods are more complex—more highly compounded—hence less stable—more liable to take on retrogression—decomposition. Because of the ease with which they take on retrograde changes they should be used with care. Instead of eating meat three times a day it would be better to limit it simply to three times a week."

• • •

Limitation of Offspring.

A CORRESPONDENT who signs herself "A Mother of Five—No More," writes:

"The whys and wherefores of our supposed race suicide have been written up pretty thoroughly by men and women without children. As long as they can't furnish children it seems uncharitable of them to criticise those who do. If they could pass through the nine months of misery and hours of agony that every mother has to endure for every soul on earth the explanation would be clear to them, without any discussion on the subject.

"Experience and study have taught us in late years that women have to bear children as fast as nature can produce them. Consequently they are limited, to the best of their knowledge.

"There is no immediate need of worry about the earth being depopulated. Better turn your minds to helping the babies born to parents who have more than they can care for, and those mothers whose health is so broken by continued child-bearing as to unfit them to care for themselves."

When proper precautions are taken, as to diet, etc., during pregnancy, the pangs of childbirth may be avoided, or reduced to a minimum.

As the editor has said, there is no harmless method of preventing conception, except continence.

To beget children that are not assured of physical, mental and moral care is a crime, far worse than any method of prevention. When people cannot see their way to provide such care, they should not marry, for the begetting of children is the only thing that distinguishes marriage from concubinage.

A Medical Standard Wanted.

The following is from the Pathfinder of Washington, D. C.:

"Dr. George M. Gould, editor of American Medicine, proposes the quite revolutionizing plan proposed by Dr. [illegible] laid before the legislative council of the American Medical Association, that the examining boards omit therapeutics from their tests for the admission of new physicians. Dr. Gould thinks this would do away with the double and triple boards, 'which really serve to keep up distinctions between practitioners which are only nominal.' He says there is no quarrel between the various schools except on the question of dogmatic therapy, and it is well known that some of the irregulars have such good instruction in the other branches that they pass the State boards with flying colors. Dr. Gould's idea is that if a candidate is properly grounded in anatomy, physiology and pathology, with obstetrics and surgery, he can be considered 'competent to judge for himself what is proper to do for a patient,' and that it is 'no concern of ours what his dogmas are.' His particular school or group need not even be known to the examiners. Editor Gould says that this might 'end the whole campaign of osteopaths and other uneducated men for a license to practice.' The disappearance of legalized quackery would follow and the medical profession would become truly united."

"Osteopaths and other uneducated men" is rather rich. As a fact, the members of the osteopathic fraternity compare favorably, in regard to education, with those of any other school of medicine.

Strictly from Profs.

THE following skit on "bugophobia" is from the Woman's Home Companion:

The Antiseptic Baby and the Prophylactic Pup
Were playing in the garden when the Bunny gambled up;
They looked upon the Creature with a loathing undisguised—
It wasn't Disinfected and it wasn't Sterilized.

They said it was a Microbe and a Hotbed of Disease;
They steamed it in a vapor of a thousand-odd degrees;
They froze it in a freezer that was cold as Banished Hope,
And washed it in permanganate with carbolated soap.
In sulphuretted hydrogen they steeped its wiggly ears;
They trimmed its frisky whiskers with a pair of hard-boiled shears;
They donned their rubber mittens and they took it by the hand
And 'lected it a member of the Fumigated Band.

There's not a Micrococcus in the garden where they play;
They swim in pure iodoform a dozen times a day;
And each imbibes his rations from a Hygienic Cup—
The Bunny and the Baby and the Prophylactic Pup.

What's Your Pet Vice?

IN the London Mirror, in an article on overeating, C. W. Saleeby, M. D., F.F.S. (Edin.) says:

"Those who protest against the evils of drink are often and rightly reminded of the evils of overeating, and there is some truth in the assertion, perhaps, that those who take no alcohol are especially liable to this error."

This is in accordance with the editor's experience. Those who use neither alcohol nor tobacco—especially those who also use neither tea nor coffee—almost always gorge. Also, they are usually uncharitable, in trying to force others to do as they do. It seems as if poor humanity must have some pet vice. Beware of the man who declares he has none. The truth is not in him.

Following, from "A Stuffed Club," is good—and true: "The swapping of one bad habit for another will continue, so long as disease is recognized as something besides bad habits—wrong life."

What's your favorite vice?

European Winter Resorts.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX says:

"When an American says he is going abroad to escape the cold American winters, he is talking nonsense. There is no climate in Europe, Egypt or Asia which compares with the climate of Florida or Southern California for winter comfort.

"If one wishes to combine historical research or study of foreign custom and manners with travel, then, of course, there is a reason and an object in going away from America.

"But merely to find an agreeable winter climate is not a sensible reason to give for such a journey. . . .

"And if you do not travel for any purpose save to find a warm winter climate, stay in America.

"For there you will find a better, warmer climate, better, warmer hotels, better food and at less expense."

As observant travelers know, Mrs. Wilcox is right.

Light and Life.

IF you want to be healthy, let plenty of sunshine into your house. The sun should shine into every room, for several hours daily. That will discourage bugs of all kinds, large and small. Noxious germs cannot withstand sunshine. Sunshine is the only real disinfectant. Frost comes next.

Carpets and drapery? Yes, of course it will fade them. If you value your house furnishing more than the health of yourself and family, then by all means keep the sun out,—and save up money for the doctor bill.

Following is from an article by Dr. M. J. Rodermund of Milwaukee in a book called "Vitality," recently reviewed here:

"All of our epidemics of diseases are absolutely due to the existing effect of the impure, slow and inactive condition of the air upon ourselves and local conditions, and this impure air is due to the lack of sufficient rays of the sun, for without the electric and magnetic influence of the sun upon the air, and especially upon the earth, the condition called pure air cannot exist. . . .

"If you want to live in good health in your homes, keep the air continually moving and charged with the rays of the sun, and I care not if the dirt on the floors and walls is a half-inch thick. You will be healthier than those who are so careful to have everything about and in the house scrupulously clean, but neglect this most important thing of all, moving air and the rays of this king of all celestial bodies, the sun. Then, the result must be disease."

There has been of late renewed discussion in the press of the theory of the effects of sunlight, propounded by

Maj. Charles E. Woodruff, surgeon in the United States army, who has seen service in the Philippines, and is now stationed at Plattsburg Barracks, New York. Maj. Woodruff's book, "Effects of Tropical Light on White Men," was reviewed in these columns over a year ago. It is an interesting book (published by the Rebman Co., No. 10 West 3rd street, New York,) showing a vast amount of diligent study and research on part of the author. As the editor said, in reviewing the book, while there is undoubtedly a foundation of fact for Maj. Woodruff's theory, he goes too far, and endeavors to prove too much. According to his theory, the only considerable portions of the North American continent that are well adapted for habitation by the blond races are the Puget Sound country and Alaska.

Some newspaper writers have misunderstood the arguments made by Maj. Woodruff. His arguments, by the way, are based upon the theory announced by Von Schmaedel, in a paper read before the Anthropological Society of Munich in 1895, in which the scientist took the ground that skin pigmentation was evolved for the purpose of excluding the dangerous actinic or short rays of light, which destroy life protoplasms. Maj. Woodruff's conclusions may be briefly summed up as follows:

"Sunlight destroys protoplasm, which is the same in animals as in plants.

"All life came from the sea, where it was protected from strong light.

"All animal cells outside the lung are marine, and can live only in a salt solution. 'They arose in the oceans, protected from light, and must be protected from light forever.'

"In man, the pigment of the skin has been evolved for protection against the dangerous invisible actinic rays beyond the violet end of the spectrum, which would otherwise penetrate the body and destroy the protoplasmic cells.

"The darker the pigment, the greater the amount of sunlight that can be endured.

"Sunlight is not necessary to health, as is shown by the vigor of miners who spend their days underground.

"Sunlight is a valuable stimulant, dangerous in excess, even in the temperate zone.

"The nervousness of Americans is due to the stimulant of sunshine; the phlegm of people in cloudy countries is due to their not being so much exposed to this stimulant."

As the editor said, in reviewing the book, he believes that Maj. Woodruff does not attach sufficient importance to the adaptability of man to changed conditions. Did the human race not possess this wonderful adaptability, it would have been swept off the face of the earth millions of years ago. As to pigmentation of the skin, nature soon provides that. Often one day's exposure to a warm sun will effect a remarkable change in the skin, and the complexion of an old southwestern prospector could scarcely be distinguished from that of an Indian. True, as Maj. Woodruff says, the pigmentation of the eye is not changed, but then the eye is usually shaded from the light by a head covering of some kind.

Maj. Woodruff is strongly in favor of the planting and preservation of trees. In this he is undoubtedly correct. Man's ancestors who belonged to the family of anthropoid apes, lived in the leafy branches of trees, to which sunlight penetrated in a modified form. The nearer a man can get to this, the more healthy he is likely to be. On the other hand, we know that sunlight is the most powerful of germicides.

It is absolutely essential to health and vigor. Light is life, darkness is death. It has been proved, in a Russian hospital, that a much larger percentage of cases recover on the sunny than on the shady side of a ward. A cellar, to which the sun never penetrates, is the home of creeping and crawling things. The potato shoot can get no pigmentation until it is exposed to the sun. The ghastly pallor of prisoners is proverbial. If you don't let the sun directly upon you, in your rooms, at least you should always permit it to shine freely into every room for an hour or two every day, when you are not there—that is to say, unless, as previously stated, you value your carpets and hangings more than you do your health and your life. Also occasionally take a sun bath, with the head protected.

When Dr. Woodruff declares that children should not be exposed to excessive light, he is right. The editor has commented upon the criminal folly of mothers, who tote around infants in the semi-tropic sunshine of Southern California, with nothing on their heads but a piece of open network. Remember that the skull of the infant is exceedingly thin.

Varicocele.

A CORRESPONDENT asks about treatment of a case of varicocele, of many years' standing. In his "Hydropathic Encyclopedia," reviewed here a few weeks ago, Prof. Trall writes as follows, in regard to this ailment:

"A varicose dilation of the veins of the scrotum and spermatic cord is called indiscriminately by these terms. When the spermatic veins are affected, the tumor is soft, knotty, doughy, unequal, and compressible, increasing from below upward. The disease requires no special attention, save a careful regard to hygienic habits, occasional sitz baths, or the ascending douche, with the use of a suspensory bandage."

Cancer.

THERE is no doubt that a cancer may be removed by means of a poultice, for there are many people in this city who can testify to the fact. It should, however, as the editor has said, be remembered that, if you continue the wrong way of living that has produced the cancer, it will surely return. After it is removed, you should be careful of your diet, eating moderately of clean, non-stimulating food. The dietary consists largely of fresh fruits and salad plants. If you eat meat don't eat more than a little once a day. Cancer is said to be unknown among vegetarian races. It is also said that orthodox Jews, who avoid pork, never suffer from cancer.

As to the knife, which the regular school of medicine always recommends, it is obviously utterly impossible to eradicate every little rootlet of the cancer by the knife. Or even if that could be done, to avoid infecting some of the healthy tissue, during the operation. Therefore, even if you survive an operation for cancer, the cancer almost invariably returns.

"Sexual Neurasthenia."

THIS is one of a series of medical classics, published by a New York firm. The subject is an important one, as there are hundreds of thousands of sufferers from this disease, which is far more prevalent in America than in any other country. The author is the late George M. Beard, M.D., the work being edited, with notes and additions, by Dr. A. D. Rockwell, this being the sixth edition.

Unfortunately, patients suffering from this ailment, who are naturally very susceptible and anxious are usually left to the tender mercies of scoundrelly advertising quacks, who prey upon the misfortunes of humanity and ruin men financially and physically, being neither able to effect cures nor willing to do so, as long as the patient has any money to spend. The author says:

"Neurasthenia may exist entirely independent of anaemia. Its subjects are often exceptionally physically strong, and, with all their nervous weaknesses and pains, may be capable of severe muscular toil and endurance. It may, however, be complicated with anaemia and also with various organic diseases, of which it is sometimes the result, though but rarely the cause."

Here are interesting statements in regard to this little understood ailment, which, as above stated, is particularly American: "While neurasthenia makes life painful and irritating, it does not of necessity shorten life, nor does it always destroy its usefulness. Much of the world's best work has been done by neurasthenics. George Eliot, Darwin, Heine, Spencer, Edwards, Kant, Bacon, Montaigne, Joubert, Rousseau, Schiller, illustrate the possibility of not only living, but of doing original work on a small capital of reserve force.

"The Indian squaw, sitting in front of her wigwam, keeps almost all of her force in reserve. The slow and easy drudgery of the savage domestic life in the open air, unblessed and uncursed by the exhausting sentiment of love; without reading or writing or calculating; without past or future, and only a dull present, never calls for the full quota of her available force; the larger part is always lying on its arms.

"The sensitive white woman, prëeminently the American woman, with small endowment of force; living indoors; torn and crossed by happy or unhappy love; subsisting on fiction, journals, receptions; waylaid at all hours by the cruellest of robbers, worry and ambition, that seize the last unit of her force, can never hold a powerful reserve, but must live and does live, in a physical sense, from hand to mouth, giving out quite as fast as she takes in—much faster oftentimes—and needing long periods of rest before and after any important campaign, yet living as long as her Indian sister—much longer, it may be—and bearing age far better and carrying the affections and the feeling of youth into the decline of life."

Again, the author writes:

"Neurasthenia is as jealous as woman. It allows no rival when it has obtained possession. When it is thoroughly entrenched in any constitution, it succeeds in holding its position against all attacks of rival diseases. He who has this disease finds it hard to have anything else; hence the sufferers from it look so young and live so long; diseases that kill cannot gain entrance. Neurasthenia, in short, illustrates in its course and history the truth of the maxim I have elsewhere laid down, that diseases prevent diseases, diseases cure diseases, diseases are antidotes to diseases."

The author pays tribute to the importance of mental suggestion. After describing experiments of this kind, made by him, he says:

"In these experiments were proved absolutely and beyond all question, that it was possible to relieve in this way, not only imaginary functional troubles, but also genuine and organic diseases, although the results were more certain and more permanent in functional than in organic disease. It had previously been denied by physicians that organic diseases could be affected through the mind.

"What astonished me most was the permanency of the cures in many of the cases. They not only got better, but they kept better, and, in some instances, recovered entirely. I call this treatment mental therapeutics."

Later, however, he says: "Judging from my own experience and experiments it would seem that almost all forms of functional nervous diseases are more amenable to mental influence than these cases of sexual exhaustion."

Dr. Beard truthfully remarks:

"The strong, the phlegmatic, the healthy, the well-balanced temperaments—those who live outdoors and work with the muscle more than with the mind—are not tormented with sexual desire to the same degree or in the same way as the hysterical, the sensitive, the nervous—those who live indoors and use mind much and muscle very little."

Care of the Body.

An important point made by the author in regard to a trouble that often causes unnecessary alarm on part of young people—and older people also—is the following:

"Seminal emissions are the effects as well as the causes of disease, and should be so considered."

Further commenting on such cases, the author says:

"Self-treatment in these cases is to be avoided. In this disease, of all others, one needs a medical adviser, in whom perfect confidence is placed. The worst results come when patients treat themselves, and all the time read and worry about the disease. Better far no treatment at all than such kind of treatment; better let the disease take its own course, and trust to time and nature and marriage for a cure."

In this the editor cannot agree with Dr. Beard. This is in line with the old hackneyed proposition that nothing at all must be done—not even to take a cup of herb tea, or a cold bath—except "under the direction of a physician." This, of course, is very satisfactory—very profitable—to the medical fraternity, but, as the editor thinks, is very absurd and very unnecessary, because any intelligent person may easily, in a few weeks, learn the rudiments of the natural cure for disease—which is the only cure—and may treat himself as well or better than a physician can treat him because his own feelings must necessarily be better understood by himself than by another.

The author also says, in regard to the children of sexual neurasthenics, that he had never seen healthier children than those who had for one of their parents a sexual neurasthenic. Yet, he admits it is possible that in the future, by the law of inheritance, at a corresponding period of life, these same children shall manifest a nerve weakness in the same direction as the parent, or in a different direction. True enough. Inherited traits and tendencies to disease rarely manifest themselves in infancy. The editor would certainly not recommend a person suffering from this disease to contract marriage until he has got himself into good condition, by natural treatment, and following the laws of nature, which he has broken.

The chapter, of seventy-five pages, is devoted to a number of interesting cases, male and female, but chiefly male, treated by Dr. Beard.

When it comes to treatment of sexual neurasthenia, Dr. Beard divides such treatment into three sections. First, general or constitutional treatment. Second, local or medical treatment. Third, operative or surgical treatment. On investigation, however, we find that the treatment consists entirely in the administration of drugs—drugs, and then more drugs—trying first one and then another, after the "regular" method—also electricity in various forms. Not a word about anything in the shape of such natural means as water applications, breathing, etc., and correction of eye strain, which are so important in this, and other ailments. He also says the treatment must be changed from time to time. Why so, if the treatment is correct?

As to the all-important subject of diet, Dr. Beard's views on this subject are so radically and remarkably wrong that they can but excite special wonder on the part of any one who has made even a superficial study in an impartial manner, of food values, and diet in general. In brief, Dr. Beard's theory is that the best food for man is that which is just below him, or nearest to him in the scale of development. He then points out the physique enjoyed by cannibals. Further reference to this extraordinary theory will be made later in a separate article. According to this a man should eat the man who graduates next below him in college.

The author also states that for many, if not for most [illegible] "the best stimulants are coffee, tea, brandy and [illegible]" In the opinion of the editor, the idea of recommending people who suffer from that severest and most trying form of nervousness known as sexual neurasthenia such a stimulating food as the flesh of animals—eaten in large quantities, often exclusively—together with such irritating liquid stimulants as brandy and [illegible] not only displays a gross ignorance of which a country doctor, not to speak of an eminent medical practitioner, should be ashamed, but it is even criminal. The apparent recoveries in such cases, by the administration of drugs, and electricity, and the adoption of such [illegible], can only be temporary and misleading. In this [illegible] the natural cure—plain, non-stimulating diet, [illegible], breathing, rest and mild exercise—will be found particularly efficacious. It is, however, often difficult to get such patients to summon up sufficient determination and perseverance, so to enable them to become healthy and strong, for those suffering from such troubles are, as mignt be expected, sadly deficient in will power.

Apart from the question of diet, and the dispensing of drugs, this book is interesting and valuable, and should be read by all who are afflicted with nervousness in any form. The cases given in the book and the suggestions of the author in regard to the condition of his [illegible] patients are both interesting and useful. It is, [illegible] astonishing that a man of Dr. Beard's evident intelligence and keen perceptive powers could have permitted himself to have been led away to such a most [illegible] and unnatural theory in regard to diet. [illegible] as we know, that is a subject upon which the medical colleges are almost, if not entirely silent, so that young doctors go out into the world prepared to take up any extraordinary or misleading theory in regard to food.

INSECT MUSICIANS.

LOVE'S OLD SWEET SONG AS FIDDLED BY THE BUGS IN THE DYING DAYS OF SUMMER.

By a Special Contributor.

When summer begins to wane—say along about the middle of September—and all the little bugs of the treetops and grasses are preparing to vanish with the holidays, just attune your ear to nature's orchestra, and you will hear a mighty fiddling. From grandfather bug to baby bug the entire family have out their fiddles and bows, and are sending forth Love's Old Sweet Song and lullabies and farewells which are just as tuneful as the airs produced by a human orchestra.

There is scarcely an insect of the field or forest that does not possess its fiddle and bow, and, by means of their violin strings, certain insects call upon their mates, give signals, communicate intelligence and, perhaps, give expression to their own little emotions.

They do not confine themselves to one tune. In the daytime their trill is full of spirit and joy; at night it takes on a tinge of melancholy and somberness. Even their songs change from sprightliness to one of sorrow.

Upon the tunes produced by the little musicians depends the domestic happiness of the insects. The male alone fiddles, and if his love tune be true his chance of winning a noiseless bride are much better. Should his fiddle be out of tune or his song be poor, he is liable to remain a disconsolate bachelor.

The long-horned grasshopper, or true locust, and the common cricket are probably the best known of all stridulating or fiddling insects. Of the long-horned grasshopper, the katydid is a characteristic representation. This little musician is supplied with two sets of wings. The outer and heavier ones are used for flying, while the inner pair make up the bow and fiddle.

Near the base of these inner wings is located a set of strong veins. By bringing the veins on each wing into contact and rubbing them together, the song of the locust is produced.

A talented musician of the orchestra variety is the common little grasshopper. His fiddle is attached to one wing, and he uses his hind leg for a bow. On this leg is a line of little bead-like prominences, from each of which grows a number of fine hairs. When the grasshopper draws this leg back and forth over the violin arrangement on his wing, his love songs swell out on the air.

The female grasshopper tries to imitate her musical mate, and fiddles away with vigor, but for all that she is unable to produce a single sound.

A natural musician too is the little cricket, and his tune is generally louder and more lively than that of the locust. It is said that the fiddling efforts of some of these little chaps have been heard at least a mile from the place where they were so industriously working.

One by day and another by night is the programme of the cricket. He has even been known to change the tune when the sun has been temporarily obscured by clouds. When approached he will cease his musical strains. Sometimes, however, he has been fooled, and has permitted observing scientists to get close to him and watch him conducting his one-instrument orchestra.

Fiddling, however, is not the only means by which these musical insects serenade their loved ones.

The seventeen-year locust, for instance, puts the melody of his soul into the reverberations of two abdominal drums.

These drumheads are tight. To each is attached a strong muscle, which the insect can tighten or relax at will. The method of operation is similar to that of pressing upon the bottom of a tin pan. The most simple noise of all insects is that of the death-watch beetle. This bug gets its name from the superstition that some one who hears its noise is soon to die. It is fond of burrowing into old wood, and for that reason is often found in old buildings, about which more or less superstition is apt to cling. The tapping noise it makes is supposed to resemble the tolling of bells.

The longicorn beetle produces a sharp sound by the fricton of the scaly covering about its neck.

All these insects are provided with musical arrangements that more or less resemble fiddles. In fact, the fiddles of man, no doubt, were first suggested by these little orchestrians of nature.

One can imagine the different members of a congenial family of crickets, katydids or locusts getting together of an evening with their fiddles all tuned and holding a delightful open-air concert. Indeed these concerts are half the charm of a summer or early fall night to the nature lover. In the cooler climates the chorus is fullest and strongest just before frost sends the musicians to their winter quarters, for then the families are largest.

No matter how many of these winged orchestras strike up within hearing distance of each other, all playing different tunes, the whole is harmonious melody. Silence these fiddlers, and the hush and sadness of approaching winter falls upon the earth. They are jolly, happy little musicians for the main part, sending forth their sweet strains from the sheer joy in life, and one at least has won its way to man's heart through its fiddle; the cheerful little cricket is a welcome visitor at every fireside.

The Blue Stone.

Juana had unconventionally, but with blessed consideration, left them alone for a little while, "querido, I fear to have you go. I fear—that you will not return."

She shivered and let him draw her nearer as he sought to reassure her with the old, old answer that love makes to argument.

"We love, and naught can part us," he murmured with his lips against her cheek, and he was fain to be comforted by the sheer strength of his faith. But when he had taken her rose and gone, Tia Juana had to lead her to her chamber, where she wept long and passionately before the image of Our Lady of the Angels as she kissed the blue stone which was the symbol of their mutual truth.

The next day he started forth again, alone as at first, but with more burros and with good humored cheers from the now respectful populace. It was remarked that night among the habitués of José's pulque place that Ramon, too, had taken his soured face from their midst for the first time since the new moon had swung her silver crescent above the mountain. It was a week later that Ramon returned from a trip to one of his haciendos, as he said, where it had been necessary for him to inspect the tobacco crop. He had ridden, too, he told with much frankness, up into the mountains just beyond to see if his herders were minding well his choicest flocks.

"And will you believe me," he demanded naively, "as I rode along a narrow trail I descried the Señor de Mules and his pack train coming toward me? He looked up, he saw me and waved his hand, when—Madre de Dios! he lost his footing and slipped over the precipice, where he surely drowned in the river at the bottom of the cañon. Is it not sad for the Señorita? And the good chart of the rich mine gone into the river with him."

His companions laughed at his tale, one even going so far as to say:

"If the Señor Francois lost his footing, how did you manage to let go of him in time to save yourself?"

But when the burros strayed back to the pueblo and six, seven, eight weeks went past with no sign from Francois, even the Señor Americano gave up hope, for they could gain no clew as to the trail Francois had taken since the cautious Ramon had kept so busy visiting his various ranchos and haciendos that he never appeared in town any more.

Don Emilio raged himself into an apoplexy which mercifully removed him from a disappointing world, and the Señor Americano wished earnestly to take Tia Juana and Luisita back to the States with him, but Luisita steadily refused to leave the casa which had always been home.

"He said he would back to me, Señor," she explained with heart-breaking simplicity, "and he must find me waiting."

So that is why, when the youths and maidens of the somnolent little town of Porfirio promenade around the Plaza, pink with myrtles and oleanders in the witching Mexican twilight, Luisita, with a white rose replacing the red behind her small oval ear, kneels behind her closed lattice and kisses a blue stone as she waits for a slender figure to emerge from the shadow of the pomegranate trees.

NEETA MARQUIS.

THE ANTS LIVE LONG.

Ants are really very long-lived, considering their minuteness. A naturalist had two queens under observation for ten years and one of Sir John Lubbock's ant pets lived into her fifteenth year. Ants are very tenacious of life after severe injury. Following loss of the entire abdomen they sometimes live two weeks, and in one case a headless ant, carefully decapitated by asceptic surgery, lived fifty-one days. A carpenter ant after being submerged eight days in distilled water came to life upon being dried, so that they are practically proof against drowning. They can live long periods without food; in one case the fast lasted nearly nine months.—[Duluth News-Tribune.

NOT ON DUTY.

"How's this?" asked a casual pedestrian, as he caught a small boy speeding past him. "All the messenger boys I have seen this morning are hurrying along at a pace I never saw them set before."

"Dat's easy," grinned the boy. "We're on strike."—[Baltimore American.
